Resolved, That the exercises appropriate to the reception and acceptance from the State of Missouri of the statues of Thomas H. Benton and Francis P. Blair, erected in the old Hall of the House of Representatives, be made the special order for Saturday, February 4, at 3 o'clock.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the Clerk to read the following letter from the executive of the State of Missouri.

The Clerk read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: In the year 1805, the general assembly of the State of Missouri passed an act making an appropriation to have statues made of Thomas H. Benton and Francis P. Blair, to be placed in Statuary Hall, in the Capitol, at Washington. In the act referred to, William J. Stone, Odin Guitar, Peter L. Foy, B. B. Cahoon, O. H. Spencer, and James H. Birch were constituted a commission to have the statues made and properly placed. I am now informed by the commissioners that the statues are completed and ready to be presented to Congress.

I have the honor, therefore, as governor of Missouri, to present to the Government of the United States through the Congress, the statues of the distinguished statesmen named and to ask that they may be assigned a place in the hall dedicated to such uses at the Capitol.

Very respectfully,

LON V. STEPHENS, Governor.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri offers the following resolution, which will be read by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the thanks of Congress be presented to the State of Missouri for providing and furnishing statues of Thomas Hart Benton, a deceased person, who has been a citizen thereof and illustrious for his historic renown and for distinguished civic services, and of Francis Preston Blair, a deceased person, who has been a citizen thereof, and illustrious for his historic renown and for distinguished civic and military services.

Resolved, That the statues be accepted and placed in the National Statuary Hall in the Capitol, and that a copy of these resolutions duly authenticated be transmitted to the governor of the State of Missouri.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, there are some gentlemen present, and others absent, who wish to print remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the resolution, and I therefore ask unanimous consent of the House that they have leave to do so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that members may be allowed to print in the RECORD remarks on the subject of the resolution. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, Congress having by the act of July 2, 1864, invited each of the States to present statues, not exceeding two in number, in marble or bronze, of deceased persons who have been distinguished citizens, and who, on account of civil or military services, are deemed worthy of national commemoration in Statuary Hall in the National Capitol, the State of Missouri, in the fullness of time, has availed herself of the invitation, and has presented the two marble statues which we to-day formally accept on behalf of the Federal Government.

Various other States of the Union have already presented, from time to time, statues of their distinguished departed sons: Virginia, one, of George Washington; Massachusetts, two, of Samuel Adams and John Winthrop; Connecticut, of Roger Sherman and Jonathan Trumbull; Rhode Island, of Nathanael Greene and Roger Williams; Vermont, of Ethan Allen and Jacob Collamer; New Hampshire, of Daniel Webster and John Stark; Maine, of William King; New York, of George Clinton and Robert R. Livingston; Pennsylvania, of John P. Mulhenburg and Robert Fulton; New Jersey, of Richard Stockton and Philip Kearny; Ohio, of James A. Garfield and William Allen; Illinois, of James Shields; Michigan, of Lewis Cass, and Wisconsin, of Père James Marquette.

By the act of the legislature of Missouri, approved April 8, 1895, a fund was appropriated and a commission constituted, comprising Governor William J. Stone, chairman; Peter L. Foy, esq., of the city of St. Louis; Gen. Odon Guitar, of Boone County; Judge O. M. Spencer, of Buchanan; Hon. B. B. Cahoon, of St. François, and Col. James H. Birch, of Clinton, who were directed to have executed statues of Thomas H. Benton and Francis P. Blair. That commission discharged their functions with care and complete success, and under their painstaking supervision models were selected and the sculptures executed in marble by the artist, Mr. Alexander Doyle, of New York City.

Mr. Speaker, it is with special pride that Missouri contributes to our national pantheon these memorials of two of her most illustrious sons, Benton and Blair. Their names and their deeds not only have wrought especial blessing and reflected lasting renown upon their own imperial Commonwealth, but they are the heritage of the whole country as well; and as such, their marble images worthily find a place in yonder hall, side by side with those of others of the nation's noblest children—pioneers, warriors, statesman, inventors, benefactors—heroes all.

Both Benton and Blair rendered most distinguished service in the National Legislature—Benton for five terms in the Senate and one term in the House, and Blair for parts of four terms in the House and part of a term in the Senate; so that with peculiar fitness their sculptured images will stand yonder and be viewed by generations to come, hard by the scenes of their legislative struggles and triumphs.

In Benton we behold the mightiest son of the early West—the most colossal figure in the march of trans-Mississippi development, striding onward head and shoulders above all his contemporaries. It was not my good fortune to have known him, or my privilege ever to have seen him; but his grand, manly character, his splendid achievements in public life, and his princely qualities as a private citizen, as I have learned them from the lips of others and as I find them chronicled in our history, command my unstinted admiration. Himself a pioneer, I take him to have been the recognized exponent of the great pioneer class, hardy, enterprising, irresistible; the ablest expounder of their views, and the most typical representative of their aspirations. In his day and generation he was the greatest champion of the West and its interests, and the most zealous advocate of every movement for the extension of the western boundaries of the Republic, beholding with clearer vision than most of his fellows, through the mist of coming years, something of the later grandeur and glory which the nation has attained.

And yet, despite the strength of his local and sectional predispositions, his aggressive patriotism was national and all-embracing; the love of his great heart comprehended alike the North, the South, the East, and the West. He gloried in the American Union, and his marvelous endowments were always freely offered to the service of his whole country. His teachings, in their effect upon the people of his own State, did perhaps as much as any other agency to keep Missouri still within the sisterhood of the Union when her Southern neighbors left it: they formed the groundwork upon which Blair afterwards so brilliantly operated to hold the State fast to her old moorings.

There were giants in those days, and Benton was one of them, towering amid the greatest of his colleagues—Webster, Clay, and Calhoun. When it is remembered that, from the time of Monroe down to the time of Buchanan, he exercised a controlling sway over Western politics such as few statesmen ever did, it is not surprising that he should have left behind him such ineffaceable and monumental marks of his greatness. During his service in the Senate that body was admittedly the most influential legislative body in the world: the nation's greatest political chiefs were members of it; and in it, from the time of Jackson, Benton stood forth continuously a commanding figure and the most eminent representative of Jacksonian Democracy.

The Republic has never produced a statesman more valiantly loyal and true to his convictions than Benton. His faculties always responded to the call of a great emergency. His metal on such an occasion always rang true and clear. He grew steadily wiser as he proceeded in his career. With his developing maturity he became better equipped for the performance of yeoman service to the public, and it has been said of him that, during the last period of his life—the heroic period—he rendered greater service to the nation than any of his fellow-Senators.

In addition to his herculean achievements in statecraft, his attainments in other directions attested his amazing industry, versatility, and liberal culture. Daniel Webster once remarked that Benton knew more political facts than any other man he ever met, and possessed a wonderful fund of general knowledge. He not only left his powerful impress upon the events in which he was an actor during his thirty-two years' service in Congress, but he left to posterity two veritable monuments attesting his ceaseless activity and study—his two great literary productions, the Thirty Years' View and his Abridgment of the Debates of Congress from 1789 to 1850—both of them acknowledged to be indispensable to the student of American political and governmental history.

Most happily has the sculptor modeled forth his physical lineaments and suggested the qualities that characterized the man. From a study of the artist's handiwork we can the better understand what good sturdy stuff Benton was made of—his magnificent physique, his tireless energy, his masterful intellect, his indomitable will. From a contemplation of that marble figure we can fancy his aggressive courage, his stern sincerity, his earnestness, tenacity, and uprightness; we can picture in our minds what a proud, resolute, fearless, self-reliant hero he must have been in life, and we can join in humbly doing him honor for the immeasurable good he wrought for his country, in his own generation and for all the generations after him.

Mr. Speaker, in a most remarkable way the life work of Benton and of Blair merged together, to the incalculable benefit of our common State: the achievements of the younger of the two linked themselves with and supplemented those of the elder. When Benton died in 1858, the tide of Southern sentiment was rising like a flood, and but for the living influence of the veteran statesman then still in death, Missouri would probably have been overwhelmed by that tide. And notwithstanding that potent influence, it would yet have been overwhelmed, had not Blair, courageous and preternaturally energetic, intervened at the right moment and with the sagacity of genius to direct and utilize that influence. His lofty patriotism, spirit, and capacity saved the State to the Union, and left her free at the close of the civil strife to march onward without interruption in the paths of progress.

To have accomplished this was in itself an extraordinary achievement for any man. But Blair rested not there. He plunged with knightly ardor into the Titanic struggle then beginning, and ere long became a major-general of volunteers and a corps commander of high efficiency. He was the most illustrious soldier that Missouri gave to the Union; indeed, he was regarded as one of the most successful of all the chiefs of the volunteer army.

Meanwhile he served also with distinction in Congress; and in the Thirty-seventh Congress, as chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, he reported and pressed those essential measures that equipped and maintained the Union armies in the field.

He was a hero in council, in the camp, and on the field of battle. And after the war, voluntarily renouncing the grateful political rewards that would have freely come to him from his own political party, he devoted his energies to the heroic and magnanimous but unpopular task of protecting his late enemies from injustice at the hands of his own triumphant and intolerant partisans. In that work of self-abnegation, viewed calmly after this lapse of time, the moral grandeur of the hero shines forth with dazzling luster. A hero in the tribulations of war, he became ten times a hero in the tribulations of returning peace. In the face of frenzied calumny, furious partisanship, and mob violence, his manly heart demanded justice for his beaten foes; and with undaunted personal courage, with coolness and bravery almost unexampled, he espoused the cause of the weak, the disfranchised, the taxridden, and the downtrodden, and sought by practical means to bind up and heal the wounds of the recent strife.

Like others of the proscribed class who witnessed his intrepid conduct in behalf of my oppressed people on the most trying occasions, I may say that, in adding this humble tribute to his fame, it is not prompted by a mere formal or perfunctory impulse, but by a sentiment of sincere personal affection. The political and civic honors that would have come to him immediately following the war, but which he denied to himself, and the later political success which he would doubtless have attained had his life been spared, are more than compensated by the fervent love which all the people of Missouri cherish for his memory. [Loud applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I desire to append to my remarks and to incorporate in the RECORD a beautiful tribute to the memory of Benton and Blair, written by Hon. J. H. Birch, of Plattsburg, Mo., one of the State commissioners, and transmitted to me for that purpose. It reads:

"It is deemed proper that the only native-born Missourian on the commission, who knew both of these distinguished citizens during their lives, should be heard on this interesting occasion. I shall speak, therefore, from personal knowledge. Sixty years ago Colonel Benton and my father were friendly associates. Our home, in the village where we lived, was occasionally honored by his visits. Sitting and listening to his conversation, I wondered that I was permitted to exist in such a presence. In after years, when grown to manhood, and bitter personal enmity had arisen between them, I recognized the fact that Baneton—for it was thus he pronounced his name—was the most powerful political factor in the great West.

"No one favored him in appearance, manners, or personal characteristics, and but few ever reached his level in intellectual power, information, or influence. His was an isolated personality. He had but few, if any, confidants. He recognized but two conditions in public life between men—leadership and followers. He knew his own fitness to rule, and demanded that others obey. He sought no advice, and permitted no dissent; and criticism of his political infallibility resulted in personal and political ostracism. If he ever forgot or forgave an intended injury, only his Creator knew it. If he ever had an emotion in connection with his ambition, it was kept as hidden as the thoughts of a Hindoo's god. Had he lived in the days of the Cæsars, there would have been another Brutus. Had he commanded the Roman armies when Palmyra fell, he might have spared Zenobia in recognition of her great prowess and character, but she would never have been carried through the streets of Rome, attached to his triumphal car, for in such a pageantry Benton deemed the presence of no one necessary—if Benton was there.

"His courage was equal to every emergency, and was always under the most perfect control; but it was as cold and as merciless as the heart of a matadore. In its use he made but one mistake, when by it he forced his enemies to conspire to kill him, that they might live. To accomplish his political destruction they contrived to have passed through the general assembly of Missouri during the winter of 1848-49 the celebrated Jackson resolutions, instructing him how to vote on the great question of that day then pending in the Senate—the resolutions of Mr. Calhoun. They knew he would not obey them, because, first, of the disunion doctrine contained in them, and, second, of personal resentment at the audacity of attempting to instruct Benton on such a subject.

"As was expected, Benton defied the general assembly of Missouri, charging it with misrepresenting the people of the State; and, issuing his appeal to the people, came home in May, 1849, and opened a campaign in person, which never closed until he was defeated for governor in 1856. Although quite 75 years of age, yet he canvassed the State until election day in a carriage, making speeches every day. If he ever suffered mental anguish at the waning of his political fortunes, he hid it beneath that iron face with the stoicism of a martyr. Old as he was, he carried with him on the stump that imperial presence which, in his younger days, had awed multitudes into silence, and neither discomfort nor pain brought complaint from his lips.

"If anybody doubts the accuracy of the photograph thus drawn, let him look at that statue. The sculptor, as if by inspiration, caught the secret force of his individuality and drew it in its strongest lines, representing him in the strength of his matured manhood, at the zenith of his political power, and clothing him with that air of arrogance which, like the waves of the sea breaking upon the rock-bound shore, forbade the approach of those who sought to cower at his feet.

"Had the sculptor failed in this respect, the spirit of Benton would have haunted him forever; for it can be said of Benton that his life was as devoid of hypocrisy and of pretense as it was of love-making to gain popular favor. Like Cromwell, his wish was to be painted as he was—to be seen and known among men as a man of indomitable will, of great force of character, with a steady and strong purpose in life, guided by a brain and aided by an intellect which enabled him to scale the highest peaks in the great range of human possibilities.

"During the last years of his life, secluded from the world, he took the most ample revenge upon his enemies, for he left behind him the greatest political history of the century, his Thirty Years' View.

"And now, nearly fifty years after the people of Missouri had driven him from his seat in the highest councils of the nation, which for thirty years he had adorned with his great character, with fidelity to his State and his country, they order, without a single dissenting voice, that his name and his memory be forever perpetuated in marble, in the Capitol of his country, in the very building where he won his enduring fame.

"Gen. Francis Preston Blair, who is associated with Colonel Benton in this memorial dedication, was his great friend and youthful associate. At his feet he learned those lessons which guided his political conduct in after life. In personal characteristics, action, and manners they were as different as they were in appearance. I knew General Blair well. He was my elder, but our ages enabled us to fraternize with ease. In early life, he being a follower of Benton, we naturally separated; but, as the years advanced, the great political controversies which overwhelmed the country brought us close together, and, becoming the warmest of friends, our lines of life ran close together.

"We were comrades during the war with Mexico. He was a private, and I was a corporal. We were comrades during the 'war between the States.' He was a major-general, and I a simple colonel. In the great political struggle which swept over Missouri in 1870—the sole issue being the reenfranchisement of the people, and which led to the overthrow of the Republicans in the State—we were comrades again, and that winter found us both members of the general assembly of Missouri.

"In the Senatorial caucus which followed a most exciting and bitterly-contested ballot, I moved and carried the proposition to make his nomination unanimous. Before the vote was counted and announced, and in the joint session of the two houses, my name coming first on the Senate roll, I had the honor of casting the first vote for him for United States Senator.

By a singular coincidence, being in Jefferson City three years ago, the distinguished chairman of the committee on ways and means, now representing his country as consul-general at Montreal, honored me with the request that I draft the bill which he introduced and passed through the general assembly, and under the commands whereof these statues were executed. Being named as one of the commissioners, I am proud of the privilege which enables me thus to garland Blair's statue with a wreath, which at least is embalmed with the perfume of personal friendship.

"General Blair needs no eulogy. That statue is the embodiment of the will of the people of Missouri, and is the most perfect representation of a man I ever saw in marble. He was a Cœur de Léon in courage and knightly manner. No one in his presence ever acknowledged a wrong done him but it was accepted with a princely graciousness that instantly dissolved the self-abasement that was in the act. His courage was part of his soul, and, filling his body, came at his call like an electric spirit, borne on the great blood-waves of his heart; and the necessity for its use having passed, it went back with his blood, leaving no rankling thorns behind.

"Such a spirit naturally drew around him as bold and as determined a following as ever marched beneath a Highland banner, and, as a consequence, a host of enemies equally bold and resolute; and as a result, the political battlefields of Missouri after the war rivaled in many respects, except the clash of arms, the real battlefields which preceded them. Blair was the master spirit in those campaigns, and victory came as the result of his leadership. Yet so bravely did he lead that the fierce spirit of personal antagonism passed away with the settlement of the question. His selection for the honors of this day was equally unanimous with Benton's.

"It was not in consequence of the absence of great men in Missouri that Blair was thus honored. There has been no time when her voice has been silent during the progress of the great controversies which have arisen since her admission into the Union. There sleep within her borders many men who had but few peers, whether on the battlefield or in the halls of Congress, any one of whom Missouri would proudly honor; but it was the life and later services of Blair which evoked such a combination of public sentiment that all other claims were merged in his; and to-day Missouri presents the statues of two of her citizens who laid down the duties of this life only in obedience to the bugle call from the other shore.

"It was a grand and patriotic conception which led to the dedication of that hall as the pantheon of so many American heroes. It had been hallowed by the presence of the great spirits who cemented the foundations of American liberty, and it is proper that the unborn generations who shall tread its sacred floor may read the history of the past in the silent statues gathered there. No other spot would have been so appropriate, and no less a tribute to its historic memories would have been proper.

"And now we leave these statues there, to remain forever, sheltered by that historic roof, and protected by that flag which has grown to be the emblem of the power of the greatest people of the earth."

[Mr. CARMACK addressed the House. See Appendix.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, when Governor B. Gratz Brown, one of the most brilliant of all Missouri statesmen, on a historic occasion said, "Missouri is a grand State and deserves to be grandly governed," he uttered an immortal truth. He might have added with equal veracity: "She deserves to be grandly represented in the Congress of the United States," and she has been in the main, particularly in the Senate, where paucity of members and length of tenure more surely fix a man in the public eye than service in the House.

First and last, Missouri has commissioned twenty-one different men to represent her at the other end of the Capitol, in the less numerous branch of the National Legislature, in the Chamber of the Conscript Fathers, in "the upper House of Congress," improperly so called, or, as Senator MORGAN of Alabama would have it, as "ambassadors of a sovereign State" to the Federal Government. Beginning with David Barton and Thomas Hart Benton, her pioneer Senators, who at once attracted general attention and challenged universal admiration by reason of their commanding talents, down to this very hour, when in the persons of FRANCIS MARION COCKRELL and GEORGE GRAHAM VEST she holds such an enviable position in that conspicuous arena, Missouri has taken second place to none of her sister States.

These twenty-one Senators naturally divide themselves into two classes—the Barton line and the Benton line, fifteen in the former and only six in the latter.

In the Barton line are Barton himself, Alexander Buckner, Lewis F. Linn, David R. Atchison, James S. Green, Waldo P. Johnson, Robert Wilson, B. Gratz Brown, Charles D. Drake, Daniel F. Jewett, Frank P. Blair, Lewis V. Bogy, David H. Armstrong, James Shields, and GEORGE G. VEST.

In the Benton line are Benton himself, Henry S. Geyer, Trusten Polk, John B. Henderson, Carl Schurz, and FRANCIS MARION COCKRELL.

Lucky the man who gets into Barton's seat; luckier, far luckier, the man who secures that of Thomas H. Benton, as the precedents indicate a longer public life for him.

An examination of the dates at which Missourians entered and left the Senate will disclose two curious facts in Missouri history. She is the only State that ever elected two men for five full consecutive terms to the Senate of the United States—"six Roman lustrums," as Benton was wont to boast in his pompous way. These were Benton and COCKRELL. She was the first State that had only one Senator for any considerable length of time through failure to elect another. By reason of the unrelenting warfare between the Bentonites and the anti-Bentonites the legislature chosen in 1854 never could and never did elect a Senator, as it was in duty bound to do, so that for two entire years Henry S. Geyer was Missouri's sole Senator.

What is more, the governor did not appoint or attempt to appoint anyone to fill the vacancy, nobody then dreaming that the governor had such power. But in these later days several States have followed Missouri's example in failing to elect Senators, and, strange to say, divers governors have insisted on the right to fill vacancies by appointment under similar circumstances, until finally the Senate, after lengthy and ponderous debate, solemnly vindicated the wisdom and knowledge of constitutional law possessed by the governor of Missouri in 1855 and 1856, Sterling Price, by declaring that a governor has no right to make such ad interim appointment.

Of Missouri's 21 Senators there were 14 Democrats, 1 Whig, and 6 Republicans. Of 156 years of Senatorial representation to which she has been entitled, 2 were not used, 6 fell to Whigs, 32 to Republicans, and 126 to Democrats.

This roster of Missouri Senators is an array of names of which the nation, no less than the State, may well be proud. There are many great men—scarcely a small one—in the list.

Missouri is proud of her immensurable physical resources, which will one day make her facile princeps among her sisters; but there is something else of which she is prouder still, and that is her splendid citizenship, consisting at this day of nearly 4,000,000 industrious, intelligent, patriotic, progressive, law-abiding, God-fearing people.

When questioned as to her riches she could with propriety imitate the example and quote the words of Cornelia, the mother of the heroic Gracchi, and, pointing to her children, say truthfully and pridefully, "These are my jewels."

In sending Thomas Hart Benton and the younger Francis Preston Blair to forever represent her in the great American Valhalla, where the effigies of a nation's immortal worthies do congregate, Missouri made a most happy and a most fitting selection from among a host of her distinguished sons. These two men complement each other to an extraordinary degree. Really their lives formed but one career—a great career—a career of vast import to the State and nation. Both were Southerners by birth; both were soldiers of the Republic; both members of this House; both Senators of the United States; both added largely to American renown; both left spotless reputations as a heritage to their countrymen.

The dominant passion of these two Missouri Titans was an absorbing love of the Union. To its preservation they devoted their great energies of mind and heart and body. To that end they were not only theoretically willing to spend and be spent, but were actually and literally spent. In that warfare they sacrificed all those things which most men hold dear. In that cause Benton went to his political death, and Frank Blair rendered himself a physical wreck. In their vocabulary there were no such word as "concession" or as "compromise." In very truth, they took their lives in their hands and fought the battle to the bitter end.

Under the law each State has the right to place the statues of two—and only two—illustrious American citizens in Statuary Hall; but in this regard Missouri has been more fortunate than most of her sister States, for, while she can place only two there herself, three of her soldier-statesmen stand there in bronze and marble as perpetual reminders of her glory. In addition to Benton and Blair, through the action of Illinois there stands Gen. James Shields, that illustrious Irish-American, a hero of two wars, and the only man that ever did, or in all human probability ever will, represent three States of the Union in the Senate of the United States.

Upon the base of his statue in yonder hall are blazoned the coats of arms of Illinois, Minnesota, and Missouri, in whose service he spent his life; but as he wrought for the whole country in the Senate and in the field, his fame belongs to the whole country, in whose cause he freely shed his blood.

Either Benton or Blair is a sufficient, a noble theme for any orator.

I shall confine my remarks, in the main, to the latter, with only incidental reference to the former, leaving the great contemporary of Webster, Clay, and Calhoun to my colleagues.

In this era of good feeling it may seem ungracious to talk much about the civil war and may appear like "sweet bells jangled, out of tune;" but this is a historic occasion, Frank Blair is a historic personage, and the truth should be told about him. All his deeds with which history will concern itself are those which he performed in matters pertaining to that unhappy period—either before, during, or after. A speech about him and without mention of these things would be like the play of Hamlet with the Prince of Denmark left out.

HIS BIRTHPLACE.

Born in the lovely blue grass region of Kentucky, reared in Washington City, in the excitement and swirl of national politics, spending his manhood's days in St. Louis, the great city of the Iron Crown, his opportunities for growth were of the best, and he developed according to the expectations of his most sanguine friends.

Within a radius of 75 miles of Lexington, Ky., where Frank Blair first looked forth upon this glorious world, more orators of renown were born or have exercised their lungs and tongues than upon any other plat of rural ground of the same size upon the habitable globe.

Whether the inspiring cause is the climate, the soil, the water, the limestone, or the whisky, I do not know, but the fact remains.

Within that circle are the counties of Franklin, Woodford, Scott, Fayette, Mercer, Bourbon, Nelson, Washington, Anderson, Owen, Shelby, Marion, Madison, Jessamine, Montgomery, Clark, and Boyle.

Henry Clay, John J. Crittenden, the Marshalls, the Breckinridges, the Prestons, the Shelbys, the McAfees, the Browns, the Blairs, the Buckners, the Deshas, the Houstons, Old Bob Letcher, the Harlans, the Wickliffs, Old Ben Hardin, Leslie Coombs, John Rowan, the Thompsons, the Davises, the Turners, Richard H. Menifee, the Goodloes, the Hansons, Henry Bascom, John Pope, the Johnstons, Chief Justice Robertson, Cassius M. Clay, and his brother Brutus Junius, Joe Blackburn, George Graham Vest, Henry Watterson, J. Proctor Knott, Jim McKenzie, and a host of choice spirits have roused the multitude and made the welkin ring. If such a delineator of character as William Makepeace Thackeray could have known the men who first and last have been around Lexington, and given us his impressions of them, or such a biographer as James Boswell could have followed lovingly at their heels to record their sayings, we would have the most entrancing book that human eye ever gazed upon.

Philosophers may say what they please, but man is largely a creature of environment, and with his surroundings from infancy, it was inevitable that Frank Blair would devote his life to politics.

RISE OF THE BLAIRS.

The rise of the Blairs, father and sons, to great political eminence and power forms a most curious and interesting chapter in our history.

The foundation of their career was laid by an anonymous article written by Francis P. Blair, sr., for mental recreation purely, and printed in the Frankfort (Ky.) Argus, in the incipient stage of the war of extermination waged by Andrew Jackson against the old Bank of the United States, which article luckily fell under Jackson's eagle eye and attracted his attention. It may be doubted whether any other anonymous communication to any newspaper in any country since Guttenberg invented movable types was ever productive of so many and such far-reaching consequences.

In that elder day, while the American newspaper was still in its infancy, every Administration had an "organ" at the seat of government, supported in the main by public pap and by subscriptions from Federal officials. Subscribe, resign, or be kicked out were the alternatives presented to all holders of governmental positions, from Secretary of State down to the spittoon cleaners. So that to edit the organ was, in the popular parlance of this day, to have a decidedly soft snap.

Until his quarrel with John C. Calhoun, a quarrel which wrecked more lives and was more prolific of calamities than the Trojan war, Jackson's organ was the United States Telegraph, owned and edited by Gen. Duff Green. As long as he was faithful to his irascible and exacting chief, he lived in tall clover.

But early in that historic feud Duff began to show signs of ratting to Calhoun, whereupon Jackson, with characteristic promptitude, began looking for another organist, and he found him accidently, in the most unlikely person and most unexpected place—certainly the greatest, the fiercest, the most courageous, the most loyal to his chief, the most puissant organist President ever had, Francis Preston Blair, sr., author of the anonymous article aforesaid, clerk of a court at Frankfort, Ky., the neighbor, relative, and quondam supporter of Henry Clay, "the great commoner." To lay on and spare not the enemies of Andrew Jackson, personal or political, to smite them hip and thigh, to draw, quarter, and break them on the wheel, to scalp and tomahawk them, to flay them alive inch by inch, to roast them at the stake, to gibbet them before high heaven was a labor of love to that brave, brainy, but modest Kentuckian.

Recreant Democrats were the pet aversions—the bêtes noir—of this man whose pen was dipped in aqua fortis. For them he had no bowels of compassion; toward them he was absolutely merciless. According to his logic, desertion of Jackson was high treason to the country. For all such the penalty was death without benefit of clergy. When even so illustrious a personage as Col. William R. King, of Alabama, subsequently Vice-President, once begged him to soften a savage attack upon an erring Democrat, Blair sternly replied: "No; let it tear his heart out!"

Blair was essentially and incorrigibly a hero worshiper; but it must be confessed that he had a hero worthy of the passionate love of all friends of human liberty, the matchless soldier who at New Orleans, with a handful of raw militia, in one glorious, rapturous hour slaughtered 2,600 Englishmen, defeated the picked veterans of the Peninsula who had snatched the iron crown of Charlemagne from the brazen brow of Napoleon and lowered to the dust the towering pride of that mighty monarchy upon whose dominion the sun never sets and whose morning drumbeat encircles the globe.

No such popularity as Andrew Jackson's has been vouchsafed to an American President since George Washington was laid to rest on the banks of the Potomac, a popularity which abides to this day and which will continue until our race has run its course and until the wide firmament is gathered up as a scroll.

For twenty years all of the most serious and learned arguments of Whig statesmen were triumphantly and successfully answered by "Hurrah for Jackson!" and assuredly since the morning stars first sang together no man has better deserved being hurrahed for than Old Hickory. The intense love which his followers bore him has always reminded me of the pathetic enthusiasm of the French soldier, sorely wounded, who, as Napoleon swept by at the head of the Old Guard, tore his shattered arm from his shoulder and waving it above his head shouted "Vive l'Empereur!"

Blair completely won the generous heart of Andrew Jackson, which in itself was a greater honor than could have been conferred by any patent of nobility. The insignia of the Order of the Thistle or of the Star and Garter, or of any other order or of all others ever devised by the ingenuity of man or bestowed by the hand of any king, emperor, prince, czar, or potentate, it seems to me, would not give an American as much pride and pleasure as to be able to say truthfully, "I was beloved of Andrew Jackson." If Blair loved Jackson, the iron soldier repaid that love in Scripture measure, heaped up, pressed down, and running over. Almost the last letter he ever wrote was to Blair, at a time when the Polk Administration was endeavoring to force him to sell them the Globe under the penalty of their starting an opposition paper. I here quote part of it, so highly honorable to both the writer and the recipient and so characteristic of the former. Even at this distant day one can scarcely read the closing sentence with dry eyes.

How loathsome—

Wrote Jackson—

It is to me to see an old friend laid aside, principles of justice and friendship forgotten, and all for the sake of policy, and the great Democratic party divided or endangered for policy. I can not reflect upon it with any calmness. Every point of it, upon scrutiny, turns to harm and disunion, and not one beneficial result can be expected from it. I will be anxious to know the result. If harmony is restored, and the Globe the organ, I will rejoice; if sold, to whom, and for what? Have, if you sell, the purchase money well secured. This may be the last letter I may be able to write you, but, live or die, I am your friend (and never deserted one from policy), and leave my papers and reputation in your keeping.

The parenthesis in that sentence explains the secret of Jackson's wondrous power over the minds and hearts of men. "Never deserted a friend from policy"—those be golden words. He might with exactest truth have enlarged the statement so as to read: "I never deserted either a friend or a principle from policy or for any other reason whatsoever."

The original of that letter is carefully preserved in a glass case in the Congressional Library and should be regarded as one of the precious treasures of the archives of the Republic.

But this man, who swooped down upon Jackson's enemies with cruel beak and bloody talons to rend and tear them—this man, who in his capacity of editor was so masterful, inexorable, and so dreaded, who killed off a Senator, a Cabinet officer, a minister plenipotentiary and envoy extraordinary, or even an aspirant for the Presidency as ruthlessly as he would have impaled a fly—was in private life bashful in deportment, a fond husband, a doting father, a kindly and obliging friend.

SOLDIER.

Frank Blair was a soldier of two wars. He received his "baptism of fire" during our brief but glorious conflict with Mexico, being a lieutenant in that small, heroic band of Missourians who, under Col. Alexander W. Doniphan, made the astounding march to Santa Fe, Chihuahua, Sacramento, and Monterey—an achievement which added an empire to the Union and which threw into the shade that far-famed performance of Xenophon and his ten thousand which has been acclaimed by the historians of twenty centuries.

In the civil war he began as a colonel, fought his way to a major-generalcy, and was pronounced by General Grant to be one of the two best volunteer officers in the service, John A. Logan, "the Black Eagle of Illinois," who married a Missouri wife, being the other. In Sherman's famous march to the sea Blair commanded a corps, and was considered the Marshal Ney of that army.

THE FIGHT FOR MISSOURI.

Early impressions are never effaced; and it may be, who knows? that the fact that when a child he sat upon the knee of Andrew Jackson, received the kiss of hereditary friendship from his lips, and heard words of patriotism fall burning from his tongue determined his course in the awful days of '61, for Jackson himself, could he have returned to earth in the prime of life, could not have acted a sterner or more heroic part than did his foster son.

The fact that Andrew Jackson, Thomas Hart Benton, and the elder Francis Preston Blair were sworn friends most probably caused young Frank to settle in St. Louis, a performance which, though little noted at the time, in all human probability kept Missouri in the Union and thereby defeated the efforts of the Southern people for independence; for had it not been for Blair's cool courage, clear head, unquailing spirit, indefatigable industry, commanding influence, and rare foresight, the Southern sympathizers in Missouri would have succeeded in taking her into the Confederacy.

There never was in this world a struggle in which time was more the essence of things than in the fight for Missouri. The people were divided into something like three equal parts—one for the Union, another for secession, while the minds of the third were not made up, but were in a plastic condition. This halting, wavering third became decisive of the contest. To control it Blair and his opponents waged a battle royal. If, in the beginning, Blair could have aroused the Federal Government to a realization of the vast strategic importance of Missouri and to the necessity for early action, his task would have been easy. If, in the beginning, his antagonists could have aroused the Missouri legislature to a comprehension of the situation and could have induced the State authorities to seize the United States arsenal at St. Louis before Gen. Nathaniel Lyon was placed in command, their task would have been easy; but when Lyon appeared upon the scene, their one golden opportunity was gone.

It was a colossal stake for which this master spirit played; nevertheless, understanding clearly the gravity of the game, he played it to the end with superb audacity and with nerves of steel—no hesitation, no equivocation, no mental reservation, no repining, no doubting, no backward glance on his part.

Without leave or license from anybody he organized and drilled in secret four regiments, mostly Germans, arming them with guns which he purchased with money begged by him from Unionists in the North, so that when Governor Jackson peremptorily declined to furnish the four regiments which constituted Missouri's quota under President Lincoln's first call for 75,000 volunteers, Blair promptly tendered by telegraph his four regiments which he had been for months secretly recruiting in St. Louis and had them mustered into the service. Not only that, but he tendered six more regiments, which were also accepted.

The Government offered him a brigadier's commission as commander of that brigade, which he gracefully and firmly declined in favor of Lyon—an act of generosity and self-abnegation unusual among men.

Time fought for Blair in this strange contest for possession of a State, for the preservation of the Republic.

Those who most effectually tied the hands of the secessionists and who unwittingly but most largely played into Blair's were the advocates of "armed neutrality"—certainly the most preposterous theory ever hatched in the brain of man. Who was its father can not now be definitely ascertained, as nobody is anxious to claim the dubious honor of its paternity. What it really meant may be shown by an incident that happened in the great historic county of Pike, where I now reside—a county which furnished 1 brigadier-general and 5 colonels to the Union Army and 3 colonels to the Confederate, with a full complement of officers and men.

Early in 1861 a great "neutrality meeting" was held at Bowling Green, the county seat. Hon. William L. Gatewood, a prominent lawyer, a Virginian or Kentuckian by birth, an ardent Southern sympathizer, subsequently a State senator, was elected chairman. The Pike County orators were out in full force, but chief among them was Hon. George W. Anderson, also a prominent lawyer, an East Tennesseean by nativity, afterwards a colonel in the Union Army, State senator, and for four years a member of Congress. Eloquence was on tap and flowed freely. Men of all shades of opinion fraternized; they passed strong and ringing resolutions in favor of "armed neutrality," and "all went merry as a marriage bell."

Chairman Gatewood was somewhat mystified and not altogether satisfied by the harmonious proceedings; so, after adjournment sine die, he took Anderson out under a convenient tree and in his shrill tenor nervously inquired, "George, what does 'armed neutrality' mean, anyhow?" Anderson, in his deep bass, growled, "It means guns for the Union men and none for the rebels!"—the truth and wisdom of which remark are now perfectly apparent. [Laughter.] So it was, verily. Anderson had hit the bull's-eye, and no mistake. If he had orated for an entire month, he could not have stated the case more luminously or more comprehensively. He had exhausted the subject. Before the moon had waxed and waned again the leaders of that "neutrality" love feast were hurrying to and fro, beating up for volunteers in every nook and corner of the county—some for service in the Union, others for service in the Confederate, army.

But it is proverbial that "hindsight is better than foresight." Men must be judged by their own knowledge at the time they acted, not by ours; by the circumstances with which they were surrounded, and not by those which environ us. What may appear unfathomable problems to the wise men of one generation may be clear as crystal to even the dullest of the succeeding generation. However ridiculous "armed neutrality," judged by the hard logic of events, may appear in the retrospect, however untenable we now know it to have been, the fact nevertheless remains that it was honestly believed in and enthusiastically advocated by thousands of capable, brave, and honest men all over Kentucky and Missouri, many of whom afterwards won laurels on the battlefield and laid down their lives in one army or the other in defense of what they deemed right.

When we consider the men who were against Blair it is astounding that he succeeded. To say nothing of scores, then unknown to fame, who were conspicuous soldiers in the Confederate army and who have since held high political position, arrayed against him were the governor of the State, Claiborne F. Jackson; the lieutenant-governor, Thomas C. Reynolds; ex-United States Senator and ex-Vice-President David R. Atchison; United States Senators Trusten Polk and James S. Green, the latter of whom had no superior in intellect or as a debater upon this continent; Waldo P. Johnson, elected to succeed Green in March, 1861, and the well-beloved ex-governor and ex-brigadier-general in the Mexican war, Sterling Price, by long odds the most popular man in the State.

No man between the two oceans drew his sword with more reluctance or used it with more valor than "Old Pap Price." The statement is not too extravagant or fanciful for belief that had he been the sole and absolute commander of the Confederates who won the battle of Wilson's Creek, he would have rescued Missouri from the Unionists.

The thing that enabled Blair to succeed was his settled conviction from the first that there would be war—a war of coercion. While others were hoping against hope that war could be averted or, at least, that Missouri could be kept out of it, even if it did come—while others were making constitutional arguments, while others were temporizing and dallying—he acted. Believing that the questions at issue could be settled only by the sword, and also believing in Napoleon's maxim that "God fights on the side of the heaviest battalions," he grimly made ready for the part which he intended to play in the bloody drama.

"THE ARDUOUS GREATNESS OF THINGS DONE."

Blair was 5 feet 11 in height, straight as an Indian, of slender, wiry frame, hazel eyes, auburn hair, ruddy complexion, and aquiline nose. He was of what the phrenologists denominate the sanguine-nervous temperament. He was an optimist by nature and had unbounded confidence in himself and in Missourians, with whose capabilities, characteristics, sentiments, and prejudices he was as well acquainted as any man that ever lived.

On the 30th of May, 1861, in urging the President to authorize the enlistment of a large number of Missourians, he wrote these words, which, in the light of what happened in the succeeding four years, appear amazing:

> We are well able—
> He said—
> to take care of ourselves in this State, without assistance from elsewhere, if authorized to raise a sufficient force within the State; and after that work is done we can take care of the secessionists from the Arkansas line to the Gulf, along the west shore of the Mississippi.

The most spectacular feature of the great Chicago national Republican convention of 1880 was Conkling's speech nominating Grant. That masterful oration will be read with rapture by millions yet unborn. It contained a single sentence which alone made it worthy of remembrance. In describing Grant, Conkling said:

> His fame was born not alone of things written and said, but of the arduous greatness of things done.

The phrase "the arduous greatness of things done" was original with the brilliant New Yorker, and constitutes a rich and permanent addition to our literature. It sticks to the memory like a burr. It fills a long-felt want. It applies to Frank Blair as well as to the great captain in whose presence the whole world uncovered, for Blair's fame rests also largely on "the arduous greatness of things done."

Col. Thomas L. Snead, who was Price's chief of ordnance as well as adjutant-general of the State Guard, who wrote The Fight for Missouri, one of the very best books about the civil war, in speaking of the battle of Boonville, pays this splendid and ungrudging tribute to Blair:

> Insignificant as was this engagement in a military aspect, it was in fact a stunning blow to the Southern-rights people of the State, and one which did incalculable and unending injury to the Confederates. It was indeed the consummation of Blair's statesmanlike scheme to make it impossible for Missouri to secede or out of her great resources to contribute abundantly of men and material to the Southern cause, as she would surely have done had her people been left free to do as they pleased.
> It was also the crowning achievement of Lyon's well-conceived campaign. The capture of Camp Jackson had disarmed the State and compelled the loyalty of St. Louis and all the adjacent counties. The advance upon Jefferson City had put the State government to flight and taken away from it that prestige which gives force to established authority. The dispersion of the volunteers who had rushed to Boonville to fight under Price for Missouri and the South extended Lyon's conquest over all that country lying between the Missouri and the State of Iowa, closed all the avenues by which the Southern men of that part of Missouri could make their way to Price, made the Missouri an unobstructed Federal highway from its source to its mouth, and rendered it impossible for Price to hold the rich, populous, and friendly counties in the vicinity of Lexington. Price had indeed no alternative now but to retreat in all haste to the southwestern corner of the State, there to organize his army under the protection of the force which the Confederate government was mustering in northwestern Arkansas under General McCulloch for the protection of that State and the Indian Territory.

Again, in summing up the achievements of Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, who was Blair's sworn friend and ally, carrying out Blair's general plan, Colonel Snead says:

> By capturing the State militia at Camp Jackson and driving the governor from the capital and all his troops into the uttermost corner of the State, and by holding Price and McCulloch at bay, he had given the Union men of Missouri time, opportunity, and courage to bring their State convention together again, and had given the convention an excuse and the power to depose Governor Jackson and Lieutenant-Governor Reynolds, to vacate the seats of the members of the general assembly, and to establish a State government which was loyal to the Union and which would use the whole organized power of the State, its treasury, its credit, its militia, and all its great resources, to sustain the Union and crush the South.

A few incidents out of a multitude which might be cited will show the character of political warfare in Missouri in the days when Blair was on the boards.

Before the war he went to Hannibal to make an emancipation speech. A mob gathered to break up the meeting. While he was speaking some one hit him squarely in the forehead with an egg. He wiped it off with his finger, flipped it on the ground, and imperturbably proceeded, making not the slightest allusion to the incident. His marvelous nerve charmed his audience, hostile though it was, and those who had come to stone him remained to applaud.

In the outskirts of Louisiana, Mo., stand four immense sugar trees, which, if the Druidical religion were in vogue in the Mississippi Valley, would be set aside as objects of worship by Democrats. They form the corners of a rectangle about large enough for a speaker's platform. Beneath their grateful shadow, with the Father of Waters behind him, the eternal hills in front of him, the blue sky above his head, in the presence of a great and curious concourse of people, Frank Blair made the first Democratic speech delivered in Missouri after the close of the civil war. Excitement was intense. Armed men of all shades of opinion abounded on every hand. When Blair arose to speak he unbuckled his pistol belt and coolly laid two navy revolvers on the table. He prefaced his remarks as follows:

Fellow citizens, I understand that I am to be killed here to-day. I have just come out of four years of that sort of business. If there is to be any of it here, it had better be attended to before the speaking begins.

That calm but pregnant exordium has perhaps no counterpart in the entire range of oratory.

There was silence deep as death;
And the boldest held his breath
For a time.

He then proceeded with his speech, but had not been going more than five minutes until a man of gigantic proportions started toward him, shaking his huge fist and shouting, "He's an arrant rebel! Take him out! Take him out!" Blair stopped, looked the man in the face, crooked his finger at him, and said, "You come and take me out!" which put an end to that episode, for the man who was yelling "Take him out!" suddenly realized that Blair's index finger which was beckoning him on would soon be pressing the trigger of one of those pistols if he did go on, and he prudently declined Blair's cordial invitation.

He got through that day without bloodshed; but when he spoke at Warrensburg, a little later, he had not proceeded a quarter of an hour before a prominent citizen sitting on the speaker's stand started toward Blair, with a pistol in his hand and with a mighty oath, yelling: "That statement is a lie!" which instantly precipitated a free fight, in which one man was killed and several severely wounded. Blair went on with his speech amid ceaseless interruptions. I know a venerable, mild-mannered, Christian statesman, now in this very Capitol, who for two mortal hours of that pandemonium stood with his hand upon his revolver ready to shoot down any man that assaulted Blair.

Afterwards Blair was advertised to speak at Marshall, in Saline County. On the day of his arrival an armed mob was organized to prevent him from speaking, and an armed body of Democrats swore he should. A collision occurred, resulting in a regular pitched battle, in which several men lost their lives and others were badly injured. But Blair made his speech.

One night he was speaking in Lucas Market Place, in St. Louis, when a man in the crowd, not 20 feet from the stand, pointed a revolver directly at him. Friendly hands interposed to turn the aim skyward. "Let him shoot, if he dares," said Blair, gazing coolly at his would-be murderer; "if I am wrong, I ought to be shot, but this man is not the proper executioner." The fellow was hustled from the audience.

Amid such scenes he toured the State from the Des Moines River to the Arkansas line and from the Mississippi to the mouth of the raging Kaw. The man who did that had a lion's heart in his breast.

A LEADER.

The old Latin dictum runs: "Poeta nascitur, non fit." The same is true of the leader of men—he is born, not made.

What constitutes the quality of leadership, Mr. Speaker? You do not know. I do not know. None of us knows. No man can tell.

Talent, genius, learning, courage, eloquence, greatness in many fields we may define with something approximating exactness; but who can inform us as to the constituent elements of leadership? We all recognize the leader the moment we behold him, but what entitles him to that distinction is and perhaps must forever remain one of the unsolved mysteries of psychology.

Talent, even genius, does not make a man a leader, for some men of the profoundest talents, others of the most dazzling genius, have been servile followers and have debased their rich gifts from God to the flattery of despots. Most notable among those was Lord Bacon, the father of the inductive philosophy, who possessed the most exquisite intellect ever housed in a human skull, and whose spirit was so abject and so groveling that he was not unjustly described in that blistering, scornful couplet by Alexander Pope:

If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shin'd,
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind!

Courage is not synonymous with the quality of leadership, though necessary to it, for some of the bravest soldiers that ever met Death upon the battlefield and defied him to his face were amazingly lacking in that regard.

Learning does not render a man a leader, for some of the greatest scholars of whom history tells were wholly without influence over their fellow-men. Eloquence does not make a leader, for some of the world's greatest orators, among them Cicero, have been the veriest cravens; and no craven can lead men.

Indeed, learning, eloquence, courage, talents, and genius altogether do not make a leader.

But whatever the quality is, people recognize it instinctively, and inevitably follow the man who possesses it.

Frank Blair was a natural leader.

Yet during his career there were finer scholars in Missouri than he, though he was an excellent scholar, a graduate from Princeton; there were more splendid orators, though he ranked with the most convincing and persuasive; there were profounder lawyers, though he stood high at the bar; there were better mixers, though he was of cordial and winning manners; there were men, perhaps, of stronger mental force, though he was amply endowed with brains, so good a judge of human nature as Abraham Lincoln saying of him, "He has abundant talents;" there were men as brave, though he was of the bravest; but as a leader he overtopped them all.

Believing sincerely that human slavery was wrong per se and that it was of most evil to the States where it existed, he fought it tooth and nail, not from sympathy for the negroes so much as from affection for the whites, and created the Republican party in Missouri before the civil war—a most hazardous performance in that day and latitude. At its close, when, in his judgment, his party associates had become the oppressors of the people and the enemies of liberty, he left them, and lifting in his mighty arms the Democracy, which lay bleeding and swooning in the dust, he breathed into its nostrils the breath of life—another performance of extraordinary hazard.

This man was of the stuff out of which martyrs are made, and he would have gone grimly, undauntedly, unflinchingly, and defiantly to the block, the scaffold, or the stake in defense of any cause which he considered just. Though he was imperious, tempestuous, dogmatic, and impetuous, though no danger could swerve him from the path of duty, though he gave tremendous blows to his antagonists and received many of the same kind, he had infinite compassion for the helpless and the weak, and to the end his heart remained tender as a little child's.

When he came out of the Army, with his splendid military and civil record, it may be doubted whether there was any official position however exalted beyond his reach if he had remained with the Republicans. I have always believed, and do now believe, that by severing his connection with them he probably threw away the Vice-Presidency—possibly the Presidency itself—a position for which most statesmen pant even as the hart panteth for the water brook. During his long, stormy, and vicissitudinous career he always unhesitatingly did what he thought was right for right's sake, leaving the consequences to take care of themselves. That he was ambitious of political preferment there can be no question; but office had no charms for him if it involved sacrifice of principle or compromise of conscience.

This great man, for great he was beyond even the shadow of a doubt, enjoyed the distinction unique among statesmen of being hated and loved in turn by all Missourians, of changing his political affiliations violently twice long after he had passed the formative and effervescent period of youth, and, while spending nearly his entir life in the hurly-burly of politics, of dying at last mourned by every man and woman in the State whose good opinion was worth possessing. In that respect his career is without a parallel. Born a Democrat, he served in this House as a Republican, in the Senate as a Democrat, and died, finally, in the political faith of his fathers.

Change of party affiliations by a man of mature age is nearly always a painful performance—generally injurious to his fame; but Blair's two complete changes of base appear to have increased the respect in which men held him, and the secret of this anomaly is that in each instance he quit a triumphant and arrogant majority with which he was a prime favorite to link his fortunes with a feeble and hopeless minority—proof conclusive of his rectitude of purpose, whereas if he had abandoned a minority to join a majority his honesty of motive might have well been impugned.

Benton's scorn of his opponents was so lofty and so galling, the excoriations he inflicted—aye, lavished—upon them bred such rancor in their hearts, the lash with which he scourged them left such festering wounds, that they never forgave him until they knew he was dead—dead as Julius Cæsar—dead beyond all cavil. Then they put on sackcloth and ashes and gave him the most magnificent funeral ever seen west of the Mississippi. [Laughter and applause.]

Blair's was a happier fate than that of his illustrious prototype and exemplar. While from the day of his return from the Mexican war to the hour of his retirement from the Senate he was in the forefront of every political battle in Missouri—and nowhere on earth were political wars waged with more ungovernable fury—such were his endearing qualities that the closing years of his life were placid as a summer evening, and he died amid the lamentations of a mighty people. Republicans seemed to remember only the good he had done them, forgetting the injuries, while Democrats forgot the injuries he had inflicted upon them and remembered only the invaluable service he had rendered. Union veterans named a Grand Army post for him; Confederates proudly call their boys Frank Blair, and his fellow-citizens, without regard to creed or party, erected his statue of heroic size in Forest Park to perpetuate his fame to coming generations.

THE BORDER STATES DURING THE WAR.

Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman once said, "War is hell!" Those who lived in "the border States" during our civil war and who are old enough to remember the tragic events of that bloody but heroic epoch in our annals will with one accord indorse his idea, if not his sulphurous language.

It was easy to be a Union man in Massachusetts. It was not profitable to be anything else. It was easy to be a Confederate in South Carolina. It was not safe to be anything else. But in Kentucky, Missouri, and the other border States, it was perilous to be the one thing or the other. Indeed, it was dangerous to be neither and to sit on the fence. [Laughter.]

I was a child when Sumter was fired on, living in Washington County, Kentucky. I remember an old fellow from whom the Union raiders took one horse and the Confederate raiders another. So when a third party of soldiers met him in the road and inquired whether he were a Union man or a rebel, being dubious as to their army affiliations, he answered diplomatically: "I am neither one nor the other and very little of that," and thereby lost his third and last horse to Confederates disguised in blue uniforms. [Laughter and applause.]

The Kentuckians are a peculiar people—the most hospitable, the most emotional, the kindest hearted under the sun; but they are born warriors. A genuine son of "the Dark and Bloody Ground" is in his normal condition only when fighting. It seems to me that somebody must have sown that rich land with dragon's teeth in the early days. To use a sentence indigenous to the soil: "A Kentuckian will fight at the drop of a hat and drop it himself." So the war was his golden opportunity. He went to death as to a festival. Nearly every able-bodied man in the State—and a great many not able-bodied—not only of military age but of any age, young enough or old enough to squeeze in, took up arms on one side or the other and sometimes on both.

Neighbor against neighbor, father against son, brother against brother, slave against master, and frequently wife against husband; the fierce contention entered even into theology, rent congregations in twain, severed the ties of blood, and blotted out the friendships of a lifetime.

Men who were born and reared on adjoining farms, who had attended the same schools, played the same games, courted the same girls, danced in the same sets, belonged to the same lodges, and worshiped in the same churches, suddenly went gunning for each other as remorselessly as red Indians—only they had a clearer vision and a surer aim. From the mouth of the Big Sandy to the mouth of the Tennessee, there was not a square mile in which some awful act of violence did not take place.

Kentucky has always been celebrated for and cursed by its bloody feuds—feuds which cause the Italian vendetta to appear a holiday performance in comparison. Of course the war was the evening-up time, and many a man became a violent Unionist because the ancient enemies of his house were Southern sympathizers, and vice versa. Some of them could have given pointers to Fra Diavolo himself.

As all the evil passions of men were aroused and all restraints of propriety as well as all fear of law were removed, every latent tendency toward crime was warmed into life. The land swarmed with cutthroats, robbers, thieves, firebugs, and malefactors of every degree and kind, who preyed upon the old, the infirm, the helpless, and committed thousands of brutal and heinous crimes—in the name of the Union or the Southern Confederacy.

Missouri, prior to the war, was more a Kentucky colony than anything else, with the Kentucky characteristics, feuds and all, reproduced in stronger and larger form in her amazingly fertile soil. So all that goes before applies to Missouri as well as to Kentucky.

From the first Missouri has been the stormy petrel of American politics. The richest, the most imperial Commonwealth in the Union, her geographical location always placed her in the thick of the fight. She was a slave peninsula jutting out into a free-soil sea.

The first serious trouble on the slavery question came with her admission into the Union, and the second over the admission of California—a Missouri colony. Most people date hostilities from Sumter, April, 1861. As a matter of fact, Missouri and Kansas had been carrying on a civil war on their own hook for five or six years before the first gun was fired in Charleston Harbor.

If Sir Walter Scott had lived in that day he could have found enough material for fifty novels descriptive of border warfare in the forays and exploits of the Missourians and Kansans before the first soldier was legally mustered into the service of either army.

Out on a Kansas prairie stands a monument to old John Brown, reciting the fact, inter alia, that he commanded "at the battle of Ossawatomie on the 30th day of August, 1856."

Whether the opposing commander has a monument I do not know.

I witnessed only one battle during the civil war. A line in Gen. Basil W. Duke's entertaining book, Morgan and His Men, is all that is vouchsafed to it in the literature of the war; but surely it was the most astounding martial caper ever cut since Nimrod invented the military art, and it fully illustrates the Kentuckian's inherent and ineradicable love of fighting.

I saw seven home guards charge the whole of Morgan's cavalry—the very flower of Kentucky chivalry.

I was working as a farm hand for one John Call, who was the proud owner of several fine horses of the famous "copper-bottom" breed.

Morgan had, perhaps, as good an eye for a "saddler" as was ever set in a human head, and during those troublous days his mind was sadly mixed on the meum and tuum when it came to equines—a remark applicable to many others besides Morgan, on both sides at that.

Call, hearing that Morgan was coming, and knowing his penchant for the noblest of quadrupeds, ordered me to mount "in hot haste" and "take the horses to the woods."

Just as I had climbed upon a magnificent chestnut sorrel, fit for a king's charger, and was rounding up the others, I looked up and in the level rays of the setting summer sun saw Morgan's cavalry in "all the pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war" riding up the broad gravel road on the backbone of a long, high ridge, half a mile to the south. Fascinated by the glittering array, boylike, I forgot Call and the peril of his horses and watched the gay cavalcade.

Suddenly I saw seven horsemen emerge from the little village of Mackville and ride furiously down the turnpike to within easy pistol range of the Confederates and open fire. I could hear the crack of the revolvers and see the flash and smoke, and when Morgan's advance guard fell back on the main body, I observed that one riderless horse went back with them and that only six home guards rode back to Mackville in lieu of the seven who had ridden forth to battle.

Morgan's command halted, deployed in battle line, and rode slowly up the hill, while I rode a great deal faster to the woods.

The home guards had shot one man out of his saddle and captured him, and Morgan had captured one of them. Next morning the home guards, from their forest fastness, sent in a flag of truce and regularly negotiated an exchange of prisoners according to the rules in such cases made and provided.

Of course Morgan would have paid no attention to the seven men, but he supposed that even his own native Kentucky never nurtured seven dare-devils so reckless as to do a thing like that unless they had an army back of them.

I have often thought of that matchless deed of daring, and can say in the language of the Frenchman who witnessed the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava: "It is magnificent, but not war."

Years afterwards one of the seven was sending his children to school to me. After I became well acquainted with him, one day I said to him, "Gibson, I have always wanted to know what made you seven fellows charge Morgan." "Oh," he replied, "we were all full of fighting whisky"—an explanation which explained not only that fight, but thousands more. [Laughter.]

If that splendid feat of arms had been performed in New England by New Englanders, the world could scarcely contain the books which would have been written about it. It would have been chronicled in history and chanted in song as an inexhaustible theme.

It is generally assumed by the wiseacres who write the histories that in the border States the old, wealthy, prominent slave-holding families all adhered to the Confederacy, and that only the poor, the obscure natives and the immigrants from the North stood by the old flag. This is a serious mistake. The great historic dominant family connections divided, thereby making confusion worse confounded. Prominent people wore the Confederate gray. Others just as prominent wore the Union blue.

Dr. Robert J. Breckinridge, the great theologian, with a decided and incurable bias for politics, who presided over the Republican national convention of 1864, which nominated Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson, was a stanch Union man. Two of his sons achieved high rank in the Confederate armies and two others in the Union armies.

His illustrious cousin, John C. Breckinridge, resigned his seat in the United States Senate to become a lieutenant-general in the Southern army, while James S. Jackson, Representative from the Green River district, resigned his seat in the House to become a brigadier in the Union Army and died a hero's death, leading his division on the hard-fought field of Perryville.

Rodger Hanson, the eloquent, became a Confederate general and fell on the field of his glory at Stone River, while his brother won distinction on the other side as general of brigade.

John J. Crittenden—the best beloved of Kentucky statesmen—unflinchingly stood by the Union, while one of his sons wore the double stars of a Union major-general, another achieving similar rank in the Confederate army.

The Henry Clay branch of the great Clay family espoused the Confederate cause, while the Cassius M. Clay branch fought with the traditional courage of their race for the solidarity of the Union.

John Marshall Harlan—now Mr. Justice Harlan, of the Supreme Court—with a pedigree running back to the cavaliers of Jamestown—won renown on many a bloody field, fighting under "Old Pap" Thomas—"the Rock of Chickamauga."

In the same army were Lovell H. Rousseau, the ideal soldier and princely gentleman, and Benjamin H. Bristow, who missed the Presidency only by a scratch and through lack of organization of his forces.

I had two schoolmates, older than myself, named Dickinson, beardless boys and brothers, one of whom enlisted with Morgan as a private and the other in the same capacity in brave old Frank Wolford's famous First Kentucky Union Cavalry. The strange fortunes of civil war brought these brothers face to face in the great Indiana-Ohio raid—the greatest ride ever taken since horses were first broken to bit and rein—and when Morgan was captured, the Confederate Dickinson surrendered to his Union brother.

In Missouri, Thomas Hart Benton, "the great Senator," a North Carolinian by birth and a Tennesseean by training, lost his curule chair in 1851 on the slavery question, and so long as he lived his vast influence was for the Union; and it was his political pupil—Frank P. Blair, a Kentuckian and a slaveholder—who more than any other held Missouri to the Union, while his cousin, Gen. Jo Shelby, was the beau sabreur of the trans-Mississippi Confederates.

To the same class belonged James O. Broadhead, John B. Henderson, Edward Bates, Hamilton R. Gamble, Willard P. Hall, John D. Stevenson, Thomas C. Fletcher, Thomas T. Crittenden, Samuel T. Glover, John F. Phillips, B. Gratz Brown, John D. S. Dryden, James S. Rollins—the most brilliant orator and one of the largest slave owners in the State—and a large minority, if not a positive majority, of the leading Unionists of Missouri.

So far as I know, only one Virginian of the first rank fought for the Union—Gen. George H. Thomas—but he was a host within himself, the greatest soldier on the Federal side, for that will be the verdict of posterity after the sleight-of-hand performers have done juggling the facts of history for political effect.

Indeed, it is safe to say that had none of the aristocratic families—wrongfully so called—none of the great families, none of the slaveholders stood for the Union, Kentucky, Missouri, and Maryland would have seceded, and if they had gone with the South unanimously the Confederacy would have achieved its independence; but if those States had been solidly for the Union; if the house had not been hopelessly divided against itself in all that region, the war would not have lasted half so long and William H. Seward's optimistic prophecy of a "ninety days' picnic" would have been fulfilled.

This brings me to the central idea of this speech—the main fact—of which I never think without anger and resentment, for I believe that justice should be done, even in writing history, though the heavens fall, and it is this:

Population considered, Kentucky and Missouri sent more soldiers to the civil war than any other State and receive less credit for it.

They were splendid soldiers, too. Theodore Roosevelt says that by actual measurement the Kentucky Union soldiers were the finest specimens of physical manhood who were in the Federal armies; and when Jefferson Davis, himself a renowned soldier, reviewed the army at Corinth, he declared Cockrell's Missouri brigade to be the most magnificent soldiers his trained military eye had ever gazed upon.

Nevertheless it is difficult to induce extreme Southerners to admit that the Kentucky and Missouri Confederates were good Confederates, though the Kentuckians and Missourians made a four years' war possible. It is even more difficult to induce extreme Northerners, whose skins and homes and property were all safe during the war, to admit that the Unionists of Kentucky and Missouri deserve any credit, when as a matter of fact they prevented secession from succeeding.

If Lovell H. Rousseau had never recruited his Louisville Legion; if old Frank Wolford and Thomas E. Bramlette had never established Camp Dick Robinson, Kentucky would have seceded and the Ohio River would have been an impassable barrier to the invading armies.

If Frank Blair had never captured Camp Jackson—for it was Blair who conceived and carried out that great strategic movement, and not Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, of New England, as the Northern war books say—Missouri would have joined the Confederacy under the lead of Governor Claiborne F. Jackson and Gen. Sterling Price, the peerless soldier, and with her vast resources to command, Lee's soldiers would not have been starved and frozen into a surrender.

If the Government built monuments to soldiers in proportion to what they really accomplished for the Union cause, Frank Blair's would tower proudly among the loftiest. Camp Jackson is slurred over with an occasional paragraph in the history books, but it was the turning point in the war west of the Mississippi, and it was the work of Frank Blair, the Kentuckian, the Missourian, the slave owner, the patrician, the leonine soldier, the patriotic statesman.

Some day a Tacitus, Sismondi, or Macaulay will write a truthful history of our civil war—the bloodiest chapter in the book of time—and when it is written the Kentucky and Missouri heroes, both Union and Confederate, will be enrobed in immortal glory.

It is said that figures will not lie, and here they are: To the Union armies Missouri contributed 109,111 soldiers; Kentucky, 75,760; Maryland, 46,638; Tennessee, 31,092, and West Virginia, 32,068—making a grand total of 294,669.

Now, suppose a case. Suppose that as the sun was setting on the gory field of Shiloh, when Albert Sidney Johnston died, all the Kentuckians, Missourians, and Tennesseeans had been suddenly subtracted from the Union Army and transferred to the Confederate side. Can any sane man doubt what would have happened? As certain as fate Ulysses Simpson Grant and the remnants of his army would have been captured or driven into the Tennessee and Beauregard would have fattened his famished soldiers on the fertile prairies of Illinois and Indiana. All the Buells and Nelsons in Christendom could not have saved the silent soldier had it not been for the Kentuckians, Missourians, and Tennesseeans fighting for their country there; and without Grant's bulldog tenacity the history of Vicksburg, Missionary Ridge, Cold Harbor, the Wilderness, and Appomattox never would have been written, for the all-sufficient reason that there would not have been any to write.

Suppose another case. Suppose that George H. Thomas had gone with his State, as all his brothers in arms from Virginia did, and that when Pickett made his spectacular charge at Gettysburg, Thomas had in the nick of time reenforced him with the 294,669 veteran Kentuckians, Missourians, Marylanders, West Virginians, and Tennesseeans then fighting in the Union armies, can any human being fail to understand what would have been the result? Meade's grand army would have been ground to powder, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Harrisburg, Washington, New York would have been taken, the nations of Europe would have run races with each other to recognize the independence of the Confederacy, and more aid than he needed would have been freely tendered Jefferson Davis to enable him to realize the aspirations of the South for a separate government.

In taking a retrospect of the conduct of the border States during the war and of how the slaveholders therein fought valiantly for their own undoing, I am forced to the conclusion that when Abraham Lincoln said in his first inaugural address—

> I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I have no inclination to do so—he did more for the preservation of the Union than was done by all the speeches, great and small, delivered since the confusion of tongues at the Tower of Babel, for that one declaration held hundreds of thousands in the border States faithful to the Union who otherwise and naturally would have gone with the South. The Kentuckians and Missourians belong to that class who, having put their hands to the plow, do not look back, and they fought on after the emancipation proclamation as bravely and doggedly as before.

It may be that the fact that Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis were both Kentuckians, born within a few miles of each other, added fuel to the flames throughout Kentucky and Missouri and wherever the Kentuckians had settled in large numbers. The accident of their birth in the same vicinity contributed to the awful tragedy the element of feud, inherent in the Kentucky character.

At any rate, Lincoln understood the Kentuckians and Missourians better than any other Republican President, and to the day of his death they had a warm place in his sympathetic heart.

More than all this, the border State men fought, whatever their rank.

The only instance on record during the entire war of one field officer killing another in battle was at Mill Spring, when Gen. Speed Smith Fry, of Kentucky, a Union soldier, shot and killed General Zollicoffer, commanding a brigade of Tennessee Confederates. The only parallel to this sanguinary performance in all our military annals was the killing of Tecumseh, at the battle of the river Thames, by Col. Richard M. Johnson, another Kentuckian, popularly called "Old Dick."

Ed Porter Thompson, of Kentucky, a Confederate captain, hobbled into the battle of Murfreesboro on his crutches, and for two days fought side by side with those possessing the soundest and most stalwart legs, thereby rivaling the far-resounding feats of Charles XII of Sweden at Pultowa and Gen. Joseph Wheeler at Santiago of being carried into battle upon a stretcher.

One of my own constituents, P. Wells, is the only soldier, living or dead, so far as history tells, that ever had a wooden leg shot off in battle, for the reason, perhaps, that he is the only soldier that ever went into battle with a wooden leg. He survived his wound to become a wealthy and enthusiastic Populist.

In Missouri the war was waged with unspeakable bitterness, sometimes with inhuman cruelty. It was fought by men in single combat, in squads, in companies, in regiments, in great armies, in the open, in fortified towns, and in ambush, under the Stars and Stripes, under the Stars and Bars, and under the black flag. The arch fiend himself seems to have been on the field in person, inspiring, directing, commanding. Up in north Missouri Gen. John McNeil took 12 innocent men out and shot them in cold blood, because it was supposed that some bushwhacker had killed a Union man. That is known in local history as "the Palmyra massacre," and has "damned" John McNeil "to everlasting fame." It turned out afterwards that the Union man was still alive, and so the 12 men had died in vain—even according to the hard rule of lex talionis.

At Centralia one day a Wabash train containing more than 30 Union soldiers was captured by Bill Anderson, a guerrilla chief, who had sustained some grievous personal injury at the hands of the Unionists, and whose blood some subtle mental alchemy had converted into gall. He deliberately took them out and shot them every one, as though they had been so many wolves.

Having completed that gory job, he marched out to a skirt of timber, about a mile from town, and camped at the foot of a long, gentle prairie slope. Shortly after a certain Colonel Johnson, with a body of Union cavalry, followed him and took position on the ridge of the prairie. The sight of them made Anderson wild with delight and whetted his appetite for blood; so he mounted his 80 men, the most superb horsemen in the world, who, with bridle reins between their teeth and a navy revolver in each hand, rode up on Johnson's 160 men, whom he had foolishly dismounted, and, firing to right and left, killed 143 of them, and would have killed the other 17 if they could have been caught. Only 1 man was taken alive, and he badly wounded, the legend in the neighborhood being that he saved himself by giving the Masonic sign of distress.

Such are samples of the civil war in Missouri and Kentucky.

The survivors of those cruel days, Union and Confederate, are now living side by side, cultivating assiduously the arts of peace in the imperial Commonwealth of Missouri—the most delectable place for human habitation beneath the stars.

A PIONEER PEACEMAKER.

Lately we have heard a vast deal of eloquence about a reunited country. Thirty-two years after Appomattox men are accounted orators, statesmen, and philanthropists because they grandiloquently declare that at last the time has arrived to bury the animosities of the civil war in a grave upon whose headstone shall be inscribed, "No resurrection." I would not detract even in the estimation of a hair from the fame of these eleventh-hour pacificators. I humbly and fervently thank Almighty God that the country is reunited.

When I look into the faces of my little children, my heart swells with ineffable pride to think that they are citizens of this great Republic, one and indivisible, which is destined not for a day, but for all time, and which will be the crowning glory and dominating influence of all the centuries yet to be. But if we applaud these ex post facto peacemakers and shed tears of joy over their belated pathos, what shall be our meed of praise, the measure of our gratitude, the manifestation of our admiration, the expression of our love for Frank Blair, the magnificent Missourian, the splendid American, who, with his military laurels fresh upon him, within a few days after Lee surrendered, returned to his State, which had been ravaged by fire and sword, holding aloft the olive branch, proclaiming to the world that there were no rebels any more, that his fellow-citizens who had fought for the South were entitled to equal respect and equal rights with other citizens, and that real peace must "tinkle on the shepherd's bells and sing among the reapers" of Missouri? He took the ragged and defeated Confederates by the hand and, in the words of Abraham to Lot, said, "We be brethren."

The truly brave,
When they behold the brave oppressed with odds,
Are touched with a desire to shield and save.

[Applause.]

It seems to me that the very angels in heaven, looking down with approving eyes upon his magnanimous conduct, must have sung, in full chorus, the song of nineteen hundred years ago, "On earth, peace; good will toward men."

King Solomon says:

To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven: A time to kill, and a time to heal.

In the time for killing, Frank Blair was one of the most persistent fighters. When the time for healing came, he was one of the first to pour the balm of consolation into bruised hearts and to bind up the nation's wounds.

In the Army he was one of the favorite lieutenants of Ulysses Simpson Grant, who with knightly honor resolutely and courageously kept his plighted faith to Lee, thereby preventing an aftermath of death at the very thought of which the world grows pale.

In the fierce and all-pervading light of history, which beats not upon thrones alone, but upon all high places as well, Blair will stand side by side with the invincible soldier who said, "Let us have peace"—the noblest words that ever fell from martial lips. [Loud applause.]

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, Missouri presents to-day to the Congress of the United States statues of two of her honored dead and asks that they may be received and placed in Statuary Hall, in this Capitol, as a permanent memorial not only of her devotion to their memory, but in recognition of the fact that few men have accomplished more for this nation than they have done.

The cold marble, fashioned through skill and energy to represent the body of the living or the dead, is one of the wonderful achievements of the ages. Two excellent evidences of perfection in this art are presented here to-day. It was never my privilege to see either of the extraordinary characters thus shown in statuary form, but the names of Benton and Blair are household words in Missouri, and are recognized anywhere as the names of prominent characters in national history.

It is claimed by those who should know that these statues are lifelike; but, sir, these inanimate representations, perfect as they may be, have not the vital force of the living being, and but serve to show the weakness of man in his efforts to reproduce that from which the providence of God has withdrawn the breath of life.

Among the great men of this nation who have had part in its achievements, who have secured place in the hearts of their countrymen, and who have left indelible impress for good, few have ever been entitled to greater honor and respect than Thomas H. Benton and Francis P. Blair, jr.

Missouri does not present these emblems in stone simply as matter of form—that it may have the honor of representation in yonder Statuary Hall, once the National House of Representatives—but that it may discharge a duty in showing appreciation of its honored dead. It would teach its youth to cherish the memory of those who have built up its institutions and given the State such high place. It would remind them to look with admiration upon the good deeds of its great men, and to ever show respect to the dead whose lives were spent in successful achievement for their country's honor and development.

It is not my purpose to contrast the characters of Blair and Benton. I have not one word to say in disparagement of either, but it is understood that my remarks shall be directed mainly to the statue of Colonel Benton, as others will pay the tribute to General Blair which his distinguished services and personal character so richly deserve.

Thomas Hart Benton was born in the last year of that eventful period in national history, the Revolutionary war, within two months of the birth of Daniel Webster. His birthplace was near Hillsboro, in Orange County, N. C. His ancestors were among the leaders of the Revolution of 1775, and contributed largely in every way to the service of their country. Col. Jesse Benton, his father, was a gentleman of excellent character and a lawyer of recognized ability. His mother was Ann Gooch, of the Gooch family of Virginia. A lady of strong and resolute character, she possessed unusual mental endowment, and her literary acquirements were good for the period. At the age of 8 years it was Mr. Benton's misfortune to lose his father, he being the eldest of several children left in the care of the mother. While he obtained his education, in the most part, in private schools, he also spent some time at the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, though he did not graduate from the institution.

But few years elapsed after his father's death until his mother, with her children, moved to Tennessee and lived upon a large landed estate which had been left by her husband. She succeeded well in the development of the estate and in the acquisition of property, considering the fact that they were on the frontier, or nearly so, of civilization. He studied law, but in the meantime taught in a small school on Duck Creek, near Franklin, in that State. He was admitted to the bar at Franklin, the home of the present distinguished Representative from that district [Mr. COX], and there began the practice of his profession. Shortly afterwards he was elected to the legislature of that State and distinguished himself in his efforts to secure the passage of two bills, one for the reform of the judicial system and the other in which the same right of trial by jury was given to slaves as to white men.

At the close of this service he moved to Nashville, the beautiful capital of that State, near the attractive home of his friend and admirer, Gen. Andrew Jackson, afterwards President Jackson. This home, known as the Hermitage, is carefully preserved up to the present time and is about 12 miles distant from Nashville. General Jackson took an active interest in Mr. Benton and assisted him very greatly in securing position at the bar.

From Foote's Bench and Bar of the South and Southwest we learn that Mr. Benton formed a partnership for the practice of the law at Nashville with the late O. B. Hayes, a native of Massachusetts, of liberal education and more than ordinary ability.

In the war of 1812 young Benton was General Jackson's aid-de-camp for a short time. He also raised a regiment of volunteers, but had no opportunity to engage in actual warfare. But no one doubts his courage or his ability, if opportunity had come to him, to meet an enemy on the field of battle. In 1813 he was appointed a lieutenant-colonel in the United States Army by President Madison. He at once started to Canada, but on his way learned that peace had been declared, and returning, he resigned his commission. Thus ended a short but willing service, for no man of his day was more patriotic, and none braver could be found. The laurels which come from victorious conflict could not be claimed for him, but his devotion to his country is fully shown by his voluntary offer to assist it.

In 1815 he took up his residence in St. Louis and began the practice of law. On account of his integrity, legal knowledge, energy, and devotion to the cause of his clients, he soon built up a good practice. He became connected during that time with a newspaper at St. Louis, which gave him opportunity to reach the people. He advocated vigorously such matters as he believed were for the interests of the growing West. He made a strong fight in favor of the admission of Missouri to the Union notwithstanding her slavery constitution. The stand taken in this matter had more to do t an any one thing, perhaps, in giving him the prominence which secured him the distinguished honor of being one of the first two Senators elected by that State in the year 1820.

Sir, we now approach the greater work of Colonel Benton—that broad field of labor in which he wrought so mightily for mankind. The results achieved here will live in American history long after the enduring statue shall have become clouded with age. I have not the time to elaborate on his great service as a public servant, and can only, in a very general way, refer to his labors and to a few of the vital questions which engaged his attention. He went into the Senate as a representative of the West and Western sentiment. He could hardly be classed as belonging to either the North or the South at any period in his history, for while he was himself a slave owner he was an ardent Union man, and was chiefly concerned that the flag of his country should ever wave over a united people. He condemned the Hartford convention in its disunion sentiment, and ever regarded his country as more important than any part of it.

Colonel Benton was fully imbued with the political teachings of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic school of statesmanship, and was the very impersonation of the genius of the West, where these theories had taken their deepest root. He knew better than any one who preceded him its needs, its capabilities, and its destinies. He devoted himself with all of his unusual powers of body and mind to the important duty of supplying these wants, showing its capabilities, and in preparing the way for its future development. He sought to expose to public gaze the vicious legislation that so hampered its growth and chained its giant energies.

This unfortunate condition resulted in part from ignorance and largely from that local, selfish class interest which fixes itself upon every object from which it may draw strength. He insisted that the prosperity of the West would be shared by every other section. He demanded the repeal of those laws by which her lands were withheld from cultivation and settlement that they might be purchased and controlled by speculators; by which her mines and saline lands were leased out to rich syndicates without gain to anyone, and by which the necessaries of life were taxed to pay bounties to some losing trade in another section. He believed in the fundamental doctrine of equality before the law. He resolved to attack and overthrow these monsters of evil because they were in opposition to that basic principle of the Republic.

The cultivation of the soil is the source of all national prosperity; it gives comfort and independence to the people, and is that upon which the nation must draw for its revenue, strength, and stability. At the time of Colonel Benton's entry into politics the minimum price for public lands was $2 per acre; but none could be bought at that sum until it had first been exposed at public sales to the highest bidder and rejected. The result naturally was that speculators bought the best lands and held them up for higher prices, and none but refuse lands could be bought by the actual settlers at the minimum Government price.

No one could go on public lands before sale, for he was then treated as a trespasser and was likely to be ejected by military authority. The mineral and saline lands were held by monopolists, so that the poor and struggling pioneer had but little chance in the race of life. No scheme could have been devised better calculated to keep the growth of the country in check or to prevent the settlement and cultivation of it.

Colonel Benton, the first great statesman of the West—the only one of his time west of the Mississippi River—who was classed with Webster, Clay, and Calhoun, championed early in his eventful career the cause of the people, and sought the enactment of such laws as would secure the development of the country whose oppression he deplored and whose interests were his own. He believed that preemption, graduation, and homestead would cause this neglected portion of the vast domain to be dotted over with homes of useful, industrious, and happy people, who would bring to the bar of their country's wealth the fruits of the possibilities of that matchless region, and that soon after its adoption the whole nation would be astonished at its rapid development, and would rejoice in its unexpected achievement.

He accordingly introduced a bill which provided for the right of preemption to the actual settler at the minimum price, the reduction of the price of the land, the graduation of the prices of refuse lands in proportion to the time they had been in the market, and the donation of homesteads to impoverished but industrious persons who would cultivate the land for a given period. He began this battle for the emancipation of the farmer and laborer of that section almost alone. He renewed his bills for these purposes with each succeeding Congress, and developed the whole subject by throwing upon it the calcium light of truth with that unequaled industry and energy for which he was distinguished above all public men.

He reproduced these speeches in the newspaper and upon the rostrum, calling the people's attention to the importance of the proposed legislation and hoping that they would compel Congress to adopt his measures. The contest was long and arduous; it was met with the most determined opposition. His plans were thwarted from time to time by schemes for the distribution of the lands or the proceeds of their sale among the States, which held out a glittering argument of greed and gain as a pecuniary incentive to deny these great measures of justice to the undeveloped West. But defeat and delay left him undaunted, and with greater determination and earnestness he pressed the battle, gaining strength for his cause with each successive engagement. A single quotation from one of his speeches will serve to show the scope of his reasoning:

> The example of all nations, ancient and modern, republican and monarchical, is in favor of giving lands in parcels suitable to their wants to meritorious cultivators. There is not an instance upon earth, except that of our own Federal Government, which made merchandise of land to its own citizens, exacted the highest price it could obtain, and refused to suffer the country to be settled until it was paid for. The promised land was divided among the children of Israel. All the Atlantic States, when British colonies, were settled upon gratuitous donations or nominal sales.
> Kentucky and Tennessee were chiefly settled in the same way. The two Floridas and Upper and Lower Louisiana were gratuitously distributed by the Kings of Spain to settlers, in quantities adapted to their means of cultivation, and with the whole vacant domain to select from, according to their pleasure. Mr. Burke, in his great argument in the British Parliament upon the sale of the Crown lands, said he considered the revenue derived from the sale of such lands as a trifle of no account compared to the amount of revenue derivable from the same lands through their settlement and cultivation.

Colonel Benton's advanced and statesmanlike views finally took hold upon the country. They were adopted by other public men, who took up the cause and assisted in its work, while the people rallied to his support. General Jackson and Mr. Van Buren, in their messages to Congress on these questions, embodied his ideas in recommendations. Many of the States embraced his measures, and in many ways public interest was aroused until their passage was secured. The great West, in its development of this age, is the monument to the enactment of that and other beneficent measures in which he took prominent part. He who holds his farm by preemption right to-day, or through the graduation laws, or has been enabled to make a happy home for himself and family through the homestead enactments, should accord to Colonel Benton the meed of praise for securing these legal rights. It is no exaggerated eulogy to attribute to him the first place among those who wrought so well as to make possible the development of the West and to show its colossal greatness.

Conspicuous among these efforts at reform and legislation for the masses was the overthrow of the salt tax. This article, so vital to our well-being, almost as necessary as the water we drink, was enormously taxed in order to pay a bounty to an unimportant interest in New England. When once these class interests have secured footing their tenacity is so great that it becomes almost impossible to make them release their hold. This tax was onerous and distressing to the whole country, but especially so to the West. Colonel Benton made war upon it. It was a monopoly, seizing an object of universal necessity and taxing it for the benefit of the few. As such, he hated it; he wrote and spoke against it until the whole country was aroused. He portrayed what would be the result of class legislation in an alarming manner; but little, however, did he realize, with all his gifted forethought, what influence monopoly, trusts, and classes would have upon the vital energies of the country he loved so well at the close of the nineteenth century.

His power in speech was now universally recognized. In Bungay's Offhand Takings of Noticeable Men of Our Age he said of Colonel Benton:

> As a speaker he is more argumentative than eloquent, more philosophical than poetical; Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Benton, and Cass were to the United States Senate what the five senses are to the human system.

In Bateman's Biographies of Distinguished National Men it is said:

> Mr. Benton was distinguished by great learning, an iron will, practical mind, and strong memory. His speeches when written were firmly fixed in his mind, so that he could repeat them accurately in public without the manuscript. He was industrious, determined, and unyielding, with pockets overflowing with statistics, and his head full of historical lore.

In biographical sketches found in the United States Democratic Review for the year 1858 one of Colonel Benton's associates in the Senate relates an incident which shows the effects of his speeches in a very forceful way.

A subject of some interest had been under discussion for several days. At the commencement of the debate Mr. Clay had spoken against the measure. Prior to the taking of the vote Mr. Benton got the floor and spoke with unusual effect for more than an hour, his argument being mainly a reply to the speech of Mr. Clay. To the surprise of the whole Senate, when the vote was taken Mr. Clay voted for the bill, and thus secured its passage. Mr. Clay explained the reason of this apparent inconsistency between his speech and vote by saying that he "could not help it;" that Colonel Benton had convinced him that the view he had taken was wrong, not so much from his reasoning as from something connected with his speech, but what that something was he could not explain. It is said that Mr. Clay did not stand alone in this singularity, for Mr. Webster had made a like remark as to the effect of Benton's speeches upon himself.

His efforts to overthrow bank paper was the climax, perhaps, of his energy and ability. The speeches he made on that subject were the best and strongest he ever made. He was President Jackson's support in that great contest which liberated the Government of the people from the thraldom of the bank. He was the mouthpiece of the people and the Administration. Pitted against him were Webster and Clay, whose eloquence always swayed the Senate and the nation. Accordingly the success of Colonel Benton's cause, when we consider the charm of their oratory and the beauty and power of expression which characterized all that fell from the lips of these illustrious men, can hardly be accounted for except through his own power of speech and the righteousness of the cause which he so clearly demonstrated and so ably upheld.

Colonel Benton was impressed with the idea that the possessions of the Government should extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. He gloried in the genius of Jefferson in securing the acquisition of what was known as the Louisiana purchase. When Texas was exchanged for Florida by the treaty of 1819 and the joint occupation of Oregon was conceded to Great Britain in 1820, Colonel Benton raised his voice against it, and though others could not see the necessity for these regions, Colonel Benton's prophetic vision already saw them peopled with vast cities, marking the highway of the world's commerce. He condemned the statesmen who were thus willing to set a limit to the boundaries of the country because they could not foresee the future which would fill them with a teeming population, and in that connection used these remarkable words:

> The magnificent valley of the Mississippi is ours, with all its fountain springs and floods, and woe to the statesman who shall undertake to surrender one drop of its water or one inch of its soil to any foreign power.

He renounced the treaty for the joint occupation of Oregon with the British and urged the policy of planting it with an American colony. He made himself familiar with all that country lying between the Mississippi and the Pacific Ocean. The hunters and trappers, fur traders, Indian agents, Army officers, and others who visited the great West made their headquarters and place of outfit at St. Louis. He talked with all these, entertained them at his home, and was their friend. He knew more of the country than those who had spent years in it, because he sought to know everything that was known by all who had been there.

He and his colleague, Dr. Linn, constantly urged the planting of an American colony in the place of that founded by John Jacob Astor. They sought to induce colonists, by donations of land and military protection on the route and in the Territory, to settle in the then far-off land. These measures finally rewarded their efforts; the colony was planted, the joint occupation by the British terminated by treaty, the route to the distant Oregon explored by scientific officers, and the results have been promulgated. Lieutenant Frémont, at that time an officer of engineers in the United States Army, a son-in-law of Colonel Benton, had much to do with these explorations and in the additions made to science and geographical knowledge. Lieutenant Frémont for years traveled over the West, and the intimate relation existing between him and Colonel Benton was such that the early settlers of all the Western country learned to feel that their chief advocate at the national capital was Colonel Benton.

There are a number of other matters in Colonel Benton's official career to which I should refer did not limited time prevent. I wish, however, to call attention to his views on the slavery question. It was his belief that there was a settled plan and determination on the part of certain eminent leaders to bring about a separation of the States. He repeatedly expressed this belief, and in the contest in 1850, when he was a candidate for the sixth time for the position which he had filled with so much credit, his views on the slavery question was an element in the campaign, and was the cause, as most persons believe, of his defeat. The bitter experience of that deadly strife, of which his rejection for the Senate was one of the opening scenes, may well remind us of the warning he uttered in vain, and of the sacrifices he made of himself to save his State and country.

Even those to whom his fiery zeal in defense of the endangered Union gave offense will not now fail to honor the noble magnanimity and lofty patriotism which prompted him to make the contest. Personal feeling ran high at that time in Missouri. After his defeat the people of his adopted city elected him to the House of Representatives, and when some of his friends were rejoicing over his victory in this contest he used these words, "Exaltation, my friend, is natural, but moderation is the ornament of victory." There never was a time when he was not devoted to his country. He was anxious that futurity should find it united and the States harmoniously living for the development of their common interests.

He served but one term in the House of Representatives; he was defeated for reelection. In 1856 he was a candidate for governor. On account of division in his own party he was defeated. From the time he went out of Congress until his death he devoted himself to literary work, preparing a very valuable publication known as "Thirty Years in Congress," which covered the period from 1820 to 1850. He presented in this work a connected narrative of the time from Adams to Pierce, and dealt largely with the secret political history of that period. He then undertook the task of abridging the debates of Congress from the foundation of the Government. This work he was just completing when death came to him. It has since been published, and is a very valuable compilation of about fifteen volumes.

While Colonel Benton was a man of exalted patriotism, he was a man of great passion as well. Indeed, his animosities showed him unrelenting, though later in life he became forgiving. Mr. Webster is reported in Harvey's Reminiscences and Anecdotes to have said that Colonel Benton and he never spoke to each other for several years, but that he came to him one day and told him, with tears in his eyes, of being on board the Princeton in the very best position to see the experiment of discharging her guns.

Some one in the midst of the great throng touched him and caused him to move his position. Shortly after the explosion came, and the man was killed who stood where he had. Colonel Benton said that it seemed to him that the touch was the hand of the Almighty stretched down to draw him away from the place of instantaneous death. This circumstance changed the whole current of his life. He was now a different man and wanted to be at peace with everyone, and for that purpose he visited Webster. He said, "Let us bury the hatchet." Webster accepted the offer, and they were ever afterwards the best of friends.

Mr. Webster relates another incident, which is found in the same book, peculiarly interesting and illustrative of Colonel Benton's relenting spirit. John Wilson, of St. Louis, came to see Mr. Webster on a matter of business at his home in Washington. Mr. Wilson was a lawyer of extensive practice and of good talent, a man of violent prejudices and temper, who was ever in open opposition to the course of Colonel Benton. It was notorious in St. Louis that when Colonel Benton went on the stump John Wilson would be there to meet him and to abuse him in the strongest terms; Mr. Benton would return the fire.

Mr. Webster had not seen Mr. Wilson for many years, but he came to him now prematurely old, with fortune wrecked, and told him of his desire to emigrate to California for his family's sake. As far as he was concerned, poverty mattered not, but on account of those dear to him he wished to try and mend his fortunes. He therefore desired a letter to some one in California which would say that Webster knew him to be a respectable person worthy of confidence. Webster said he knew no one in California.

Mr. Wilson insisted that this would make no difference, as everybody would know him and that therefore a certificate from him would be the most valuable testimonial he could have. Webster said he would write one with pleasure, but suggested that Colonel Benton, who almost owns California, could give a letter to Frémont and others that would be of great benefit to him. Wilson looked at Webster in astonishment and said he would not speak to Benton; "no, not if it were to save the life of every member of my family;" that the thought of it made him shudder; that he felt indignant at its mention since Webster knew that they were unfriendly. Mr. Webster replied that he understood the situation and, turning to his desk, wrote the following note to Mr. Benton:

DEAR SIR: I am well aware of the disputes personal and political which have taken place between yourself and the bearer of this note, Mr. John Wilson. But he is now old, and is going to California and needs a letter of recommendation. You know everybody, and a letter from you would do him good. I have assured Mr. Wilson that it would give you more pleasure to forget what has passed between you and him and to give him a letter that will do him good than it will him to receive it. I am going to persuade him to carry you this note.

Webster then read the note to Wilson, who promptly refused to carry it. After long and determined persistence on Webster's part, Wilson softened down and agreed to leave the letter at the door. He told Webster afterwards that he took the note and delivered it, with his card, to Benton's servant at the door, and rushed to his apartments. To his great astonishment, in a very few moments a note arrived from Colonel Benton acknowledging the receipt of the card and note, and stating that Mrs. Benton and he would have much pleasure in receiving Mr. Wilson at breakfast at 9 o'clock next morning. They would wait breakfast for him and no answer was expected. Wilson told Webster afterwards that it so worried him that he lay awake that night thinking of it, and in the morning felt as a man with sentence of death passed upon him, who had been called by the turnkey to his last breakfast.

Making his toilet, with great hesitation he went to Colonel Benton's house. He rang the doorbell, but instead of the servant the Colonel himself came to the door. Taking Wilson cordially by both hands, he said: "Wilson, I am delighted to see you; this is the happiest meeting I have had for twenty years. Webster has done the kindest thing he ever did in his life." Proceeding at once to the dining room, he was presented to Mrs. Benton, and after a few kind words, Benton remarked: "You and I, Wilson, have been quarreling on the stump for twenty-five years. We have been calling each other hard names, but really with no want of mutual respect and confidence. It has been a foolish political fight and let's wipe it out of m nd. Everything that I have said about you I ask pardon for." Wilson said they both cried, he asked Benton's pardon, and they were good friends. Colonel Benton had meantime prepared a number of letters to persons whom he knew in California, in which he commanded them to show Mr. Wilson every favor within their power.

It is not my purpose to refer to acts which the friends of Colonel Benton would blot from memory nor to deeds which could bring the tinge of remorse. I would cover his imperfections with the mantle of charity, but would imprint in burning letters, if I could, his patriotism, energy, industry, honesty, and devotion to the right as qualities worthy of emulation. Nor would my remarks be complete did I not refer to that greatest of his virtues, which showed itself in the devotion and affection he exhibited toward his family.

In 1844 his wife suffered a stroke of paralysis, from which she never fully recovered. From that time Colonel Benton was never known to go to any place of festivity or amusement, but devoted his leisure hours to trying to make comfortable, pleasant, and happy the loved one so sorely afflicted. No man, it is said, ever regarded his family with more tender solicitude than did he. In this are evinced, perhaps, the true qualities of the man as much as in anything occurring in the days of his eventful history. Mrs. Benton, in the language of another, "was the pride and glory of his young ambition, the sweet ornament of his mature fame, and the best love of his ripened age." These are the completing qualities which enable us to know him who was—

Lofty and sour to them that loved him not,
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

Colonel Benton died April 10, 1858, leaving as his last audible words "I am comfortable and content." On the day of his burial all business in St. Louis was suspended, every court adjourned, and it is said that 40,000 people were present and sought to pay their last tribute of respect. Before the adjournment of the United States circuit court for the district of Missouri on that day, at the announcement of the burial of Colonel Benton, Judge Wells, of that court, said:

I have heard with great sensibility of the death of Colonel Benton, one of the oldest members of this bar. He was a man who devoted nearly all his life to the service of this State. Colonel Benton and myself became acquainted about forty years ago, and through all that time there was an undeviating friendship between us. It is a great mistake to suppose that a difference of opinion would disturb the friendship entered into by Colonel Benton. It was only when he supposed that he received a personal affront, or that such was intended, that he ever deviated from it.

He was a man of great talents, great energy, and indomitable will. He devoted all those great qualities not to his own interest, but to the interest of the Union and to this State. I have it from the highest authority that, to remain in this State and to devote his services to her interests, he refused the highest gifts in the power of the United States Government to bestow. He refused the office of Chief Justice of the United States; he refused being put in nomination for Vice-President and other high offices, all through a desire to serve this State. As a father, as a husband, and in all the domestic relations, he was a model. This I know personally, as I was intimate in his family for several months. His private and domestic ties were only second to his public duties. He was devoted to the prosperity of this State and to the glory and perpetuity of our Union.

The following eloquent tribute to Colonel Benton is taken from the issue of one of the St. Louis papers on the day of the interment:

Greatness is ended,
An unsubstantial pageant all;
Droop o'er the scene the funeral pall.

Weave the cypress for the bier of the departed; gather the burial cortege to lay his body within its final home; summon fitting words of eulogy to voice the sorrow of those who knew him in life and mourn him in death.

For this day, amid the drooping of banners, the low wail of martial music, and the multitudinous concourse of our citizens, the solemn words "dust to dust, and ashes to ashes" will be spoken over the remains of Thomas H. Benton, a statesman without peer, a patriot without price. Let us deal gently with his errors, remember his labor, and embalm his virtues. In his public services and in his private attachments, in his arduous labor and in his majestic death, he had earned an abiding place in the memory of the American people, whilst his name will be emblazoned more in the future than in the present as one of the most illustrious of those who gave so much of renown to the deliberations of our National Council.

Missouri is proud of her honored dead. She rejoices in the achievements of her sons. Many of her names are written high on the mount of fame. These two are not alone the object of her admiration. In statesmanship many others are registered near the top of the scroll of honor; in legal attainment she ranks well in the sisterhood of States; in educational advantages she is seldom surpassed, and in natural resources is without a peer.

Aside from these advantages, the chief glory of the Missourian is in the honor and integrity of his citizenship. Charged with being border ruffian by those who do not understand the character of her people, with being outlaws by those who have no knowledge of their morality, with being uncouth and illiterate by those who have not learned of the education and refinement of her sons and daughters, she stands without a superior in the galaxy of States in the rectitude of her intentions. This great State brings to you to-day all that she has the power to do in honoring the dead and humbly asks that these chiseled emblems, representing her sons, shall find suitable place in that apartment fixed by law for that purpose, that, as the years roll on, it will be observed that she is not forgetful in cherishing the memory of those who have wrought so nobly for her welfare. [Loud applause.]

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CONNOLLY). The question is on agreeing to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BLAND].

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Pending the motion, the Speaker announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 4070. An act to amend an act granting to the St. Louis, Oklahoma and Southern Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma, and for other purposes.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

The Clerk read the following recommendation for change of reference of House Document No. 110, a letter from the Secretary of War on the report of progress on deep waterways board:

Respectfully returned with the recommendation of the Committee on Railways and Canals that so much of House Document No. 110 as refers to an appropriation for completing the works under the charge of the board of engineers on deep waterways be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and that the Committee on Railways and Canals be discharged from the consideration of said portion of document named.

Respectfully,
HUGH R. BELKNAP,
For the Committee on Railways and Canals.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. STOKES for ten days, on account of important business.

The motion of Mr. BLAND was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 46 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, February 6, at 12 o'clock noon.

Senate joint memorial No. 2.

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives of the legislative assembly of Oregon concurring).

To the Congress of the United States:

We, your memorialists, respectfully represent that—

Whereas we learn with a sense of great disappointment and deep regret that no appropriation is provided in the appropriation bill as reported by the committee for the continuance of improvements to Yaquina Bay Harbor, or for the carrying out of the terms of the contract which has been duly let for such improvements as have been outlined and recommended by the Board of United States Engineers; and

Whereas we realize that it is of vital importance to the State of Oregon that such improvements be continued and that such contract be carried out: Therefore,

The legislature of the State of Oregon memorializes and pray the Congress of the United States to provide an appropriation for the continuance of such improvements to said Yaquina Bay Harbor and the carrying out of said contract;

And for this purpose your memorialists will ever pray; and be it

Further resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to forward a copy of this memorial to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with the request that they use every honorable means to secure the appropriation herein asked.

Adopted by the senate January 26, 1899.

T. C. TAYLOR,
President of the Senate.

Concurred in by the house January 26, 1899.

E. V. CARTER,
Speaker of the House.

Senate joint memorial No. 2.
Filed January 31, 1899.

S. L. MOORHEAD, Chief Clerk.
F. I. DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Salem, Oreg., January 31, 1899.

I, F. I. Dunbar, do hereby certify that I am the secretary of state of the State of Oregon and custodian of the seal of said State; that the foregoing transcript of senate joint memorial No. 2, urging Congress to provide an appropriation for the continuance of improvements to Yaquina Bay Harbor, etc., has been by me compared with the original copy of the said senate joint memorial No. 2, now on file in this office, and that it is a true and correct transcript thereof, and the whole of said original as appears on file in my office and custody.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon.

Done at the capitol, at Salem, Oreg., this 31st day of January, A. D. 1899.

F. I DUNBAR, Secretary of State.

Mr. SIMON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Oakville, Oreg., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States defining legal marriage and providing for the enactment of uniform laws throughout the country on the subjects of marriage and divorce, and also for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Mr. President, I submit for the information of the Senate a resolution adopted by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, instructing the Senators from that State to use their influence and to vote for the ratification of the peace treaty.

I do not stop to comment upon the question as how far, if at all, a State legislature may go in instructing its Senators with respect to their votes upon this floor. I will only say that the instructions of the legislature of my State are quite in harmony with my own purpose and my own desire.

I ask that the resolution be printed in the RECORD and laid on the table.

The resolution was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution No. 2.

Whereas the United States has lately been engaged in war with Spain; and

Whereas a treaty of peace has been signed by the representatives of the Government of Spain at Paris is now before the Senate of the United States for ratification: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That we instruct the Hon. DAVID TURPIE and the Hon. CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS to use their influence and to vote for the ratification of said treaty.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the said Hon. DAVID TURPIE and the Hon. CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

We, the undersigned, secretary of the senate and principal clerk of the house of representatives of the Sixty-first General Assembly of the State of Indiana, now in session, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and complete copy of concurrent senate resolution No. 2, duly adopted by said general assembly on the 20th day of January, 1899.

Mr. ALLEN. I present a resolution adopted by the house of representatives of Nebraska, favoring the ratification of the treaty of peace, which I ask may be read and lie on the table.

There being no objection, the resolution was read, and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TWENTY-SIXTH SESSION,
Lincoln, Nebr., February 3, 1899.

Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution:

Whereas the Government of the United Sitates and the Government of Spain have, after long and careful negotiatons, agreed upon a treaty of peace, and the terms of that treaty are, in all of its substantial features, in accord with the terms proposed by the United States; and

Whereas a failure to ratify the treaty by the Senate of the United States would place the Government of the United States in a ridiculous position before the world in failing to ratify what it had itself proposed; and

Whereas the ratification of the treaty in no manner commits this Government to the so-called policy of expansion or imperialism, but simply puts an end to the war and permits the nation to assume and perform the duties imposed upon it by the results of the Spanish-American war: Therefore,

Resolved, That the house of representatives hereby respectfully requests Senators ALLEN and THURSTON to vote for the ratification of said treaty of peace.

J. H. EVANS.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of a resolution introduced and passed by the house of representatives on this the 3d day of February, A. D. 1899.

JOHN WALL,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.
PAUL F. CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

He also presented a petition of the Ladies' Library Association of Iowa, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Agricultural appropriation bill proposing to appropriate $10,000 to be expended for investigation and reports on the best methods and appliances for the preparation of food, with a view to advancing the interests of domestic science; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ROSS presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Derby Line, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented petitions of the Congregational Society and Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Derby Line and of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the First Congregational Church of St. Albans, all in the State of Vermont, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the interstate transmission of lottery messages and other gambling matter by telegraph; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I present a concurrent resolution of the legislature of North Dakota, praying for the ratification of the treaty of Paris, which I ask may be read and lie on the table.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was read, and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Be it resolved by the house of representatives of the State of North Dakota (the senate concurring therein), That the war between the United States and the Kingdom of Spain having terminated, and commissioners representing each of the Governments having concluded a treaty of peace renouncing the sovereignty of the Kingdom of Spain over the island of Cuba and ceding to the Government of the United States the islands of Porto Rico and the group of islands known as the Philippines, and it being necessary before said treaty can take effect that it be ratified by the United States Senate; and the legislative assembly of this State being in favor of the ratification of the treaty of peace aforesaid and of the Government of the United States assuming control and exercising sovereignty over the territory ceded by the treaty of peace: Therefore, to that end be it

Resolved, That the Hon. HENRY C. HANSBROUGH and WILLIAM N. ROACH, United States Senators from North Dakota, be, and they are hereby, respectfully petitioned and requested to vote in favor of the ratification of the treaty of peace now pending in the United States Senate.

Resolved, That an engrossed copy of this resolution be forwarded to each of the Senators above named.

THOMAS BAKER,
Speaker of the House.
J. M. DEVINE,
President of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for the purchase of the Le Clear portrait of Ulysses S. Grant, now in the Executive Mansion, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Library, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for continuing the improvement of the harbor at Lynn, Mass., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

MONUMENT TO GEORGE HENRY ELLIS.

Mr. CHANDLER. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the naval appropriation bill, which I ask may be read in full and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The amendment was read, referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to erect at some suitable place on public grounds, or in the cemetery, a monument to George Henry Ellis, yeoman, killed on the United States cruiser Brooklyn in the battle off Santiago, on July 3, 1898, he being the only person killed in battle in the naval engagements which resulted in the total destruction of the two principal Spanish fleets in Manila Bay and off Santiago de Cuba, $5,000.

PERSONNEL OF NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10403) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

POLICY REGARDING THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. McENERY. I offer a resolution and ask that it be read, and that an hour be fixed before 3 o'clock when the vote shall be taken on it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States; nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States; but it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. McENERY. I ask that a vote be taken on this resolution to-day prior to going into executive session.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the request of the Senator from Louisiana to be for unanimous consent that there may be a vote taken to-day on his resolution prior to the vote to be taken on the treaty of Paris.

Mr. BACON. I could not gather from the reading of the resolution whether it is a joint or a Senate resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair supposes it to be a simple Senate resolution or a concurrent resolution.

Mr. BACON. The Secretary did not read a resolving clause which would indicate it to be a concurrent resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be read again in full.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is requested to state by the introducer of the resolution that he introduced it as a simple Senate resolution, but he wishes to change it into a joint resolution.

Mr. FRYE. And he asks unanimous consent that a vote may be taken on it to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution now before the Senate, introduced by the Senator from Louisiana, is intended to be a joint resolution. It will be read by title.

The joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana asks that a vote be taken upon the joint resolution this afternoon. Is there objection.

Mr. ALLEN. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate requesting the President of the United States to return to the Senate the bill (S. 569) to increase the pension of Clarinda S. Hillman.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 11142) granting to the mayor of the city of Victor, in the county of El Paso and State of Colorado, the right to enter certain lands therein described for city purposes; and

A bill (H. R. 11717) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900.

The message also announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution extending the thanks of Congress to the State of Missouri for providing and furnishing statues of Thomas Hart Benton and Francis Preston Blair, and accepting the same, to be placed in Statuary Hall, in the Capitol; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 4070) to amend an act granting to the St. Louis, Oklahoma and Southern Railway Company a right of way through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

ARREARAGES OF TAXES.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4700) entitled "A bill to receive arrearages of taxes due the District of Columbia to July 1, 1896, at 6 per cent interest per annum, in lieu of penalties and costs," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the first amendment of the House, and agree to the same amended as follows: In lieu of "ninety-eight" read "ninety-seven;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the second amendment of the House, and agree to the same amended as follows: Instead of the date "January, 1900," read "July, 1899;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House relative to the title, and agree to the same amended so as to read: "A bill to receive arrearages of taxes due the District of Columbia to July 1, 1897, at 6 per cent per annum, in lieu of penalties and costs;" and the Senate agree to the same.

JAMES McMILLAN,
CHARLES J. FAULKNER.
Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOHN J. JENKINS,
CHARLES F. SPRAGUE.
JAMES D. RICHARDSON.
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 11142) granting to the mayor of the city of Victor, in the county of El Paso and State of Colorado, the right to enter certain lands, therein described, for city purposes was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The bill (H. R. 11717) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

RELATIONS WITH PORTO RICO AND THE PHILIPPINES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], which comes over from a previous day. It will be read.

The resolution submitted on the 4th instant by Mr. ALLEN was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate of the United States, in ratifying and confirming the treaty of Paris, does not commit itself or the Government to the doctrine that the islands acquired by virtue of the war with Spain are to be annexed to or become a part of the United States, and that the difference in the language of said treaty as respects the island of Cuba and its inhabitants and the island of Porto Rico and Philippine Islands and their inhabitants shall not be construed or be held to be a difference in effect, but that it is the intention and purpose of the Senate in ratifying said treaty to place the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico in exactly the same position as respects their relations to the United States as are the inhabitants of Cuba.

Mr. ALLEN. Let the resolution be passed over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be passed over.

ACQUISITION OF TERRITORY.

Mr. ALLEN. I ask that the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] be laid before the Senate and read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays the joint resolution before the Senate.

The Secretary read as follows:

A joint resolution (S. R. 191) declaring that under the Constitution of the United States no power is given to the Federal Government to acquire territory to be held and governed permanently as colonies.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That under the Constitution of the United States no power is given to the Federal Government to acquire territory to be held and governed permanently as colonies.

The colonial system of European nations can not be established under our present Constitution, but all territory acquired by the Government, except such small amount as may be necessary for coaling stations, correction of boundaries, and similar governmental purposes, must be acquired and governed with the purpose of ultimately organizing such territory into States suitable for admission into the Union.

Mr. ALLEN. I also ask that the resolution just introduced by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] be laid before the Senate and read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays the joint resolution before the Senate.

A joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States. But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, no attempt will be made by me this morning to discuss the question of national expansion at any length. I will confine myself to referring to that subject in general language, but before I conclude I shall attempt to distinguish between necessary and natural territorial expansion and what may be called Napoleonic imperialism.

I shall, at another time and when my friends on this side of the Chamber are not so pressed for time that they are compelled to refuse ordinary Senatorial courtesy in extending the hours of a session to enable a full and complete discussion of the question, endeavor to point out to the Senate and the country the evils and dangers of imperialism as they appear to me.

I shall vote to ratify the treaty of peace with Spain, and in doing so I must not be regarded as representing the views of anyone but those of my constituents and myself. I have necessarily been absent from the Chamber for some days, and I have not had the full benefit of all the speeches that have been made during that time, but I have read sufficiently on the subject to satisfy my mind as to what course I should pursue. I think, however, that I ought now to set at rest, as far as I am capable of doing so, a suggestion of the Sunday morning Washington Times, in which it is said:

If Senator ALLEN makes good his promise to enlighten the Senate and the country as to the motives that control Senator GORMAN in committing his party in the Senate to a cause directly opposite to that recommended by William J. Bryan, * * * and if all other things happen that it was said yesterday would happen, then the three hours of the Senate's session preceding the vote on the peace treaty will indeed be dramatic and exciting.

Mr. President, if there is anything I dislike, it is to be patted on the back and coddled and nursed like an infant by a newspaper. I have the greatest respect for that kind of journalism that is cast on a high plane and takes a lofty view of public questions, but I have not the slightest regard for that kind that would deal with the prejudices of men or that would appeal to any real or supposed vanity that I might possess to influence my conduct regarding a public question. The statement of that paper is gratuitous. It is wholly inexcusable, for I have at no time "promised to enlighten the Senate and the country as to the motives that control the action of Senator GORMAN." Nor do I know what his motives are or what he intends doing, nor am I concerned in knowing.

The distinguished senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] and I are friends. Our relations have never been clouded by a doubt or suspicion as to the sincerity of purpose of either, so far as I know; certainly they have not on my part. I regard the Senator as a patriotic and sincere statesman, as all the world knows him to be an able, clear-headed, and courageous man. Mr. President, I entertain views of public questions which that Senator repudiates and he entertains views of a public nature that I could never be induced to accept, and much as I respect him and believe in his sincerity and patriotism, and cheerfully as I pay tribute to his great ability and statesmanship, there are no circumstances under which I could be induced to follow his leadership on public questions, the adoption of which would, in my judgment, bring in their train nothing but want and misery and distress to my country.

Mr. President, I am not the keeper of the conscience or of the opinions of Colonel Bryan. I know no more of his wishes or opinions than I gather from his public utterances, a means of information open to all. I do not presume to represent him here or elsewhere, and assertions frequently made that I am doing so are utterly unfounded, sinister, and insincere. I am proud to admit that I at least regard myself as the personal, as I trust I am also his political friend, and I may be permitted to say, Mr. President, in this presence, without intending to reflect in the slightest degree on any other gentleman in public life, that I regard him as easily the superior in point of knowledge and capacity for public duty of any living American statesman, and I do this not because I am his debtor for political or other favors, as he is not my debtor. Whatever may betide him, I am clearly of the opinion that the impartial historian who may write in the calm of another age will rank him with Webster and Clay and that he will be regarded by future generations as one of the greatest statesmen our country has produced. I look upon him as a comet that has appeared in the political heavens, as those great statesmen appeared, that is seen upon the political horizon of our country once in a generation only.

Mr. President, if there is a man in this world who is absolutely sincere in the doctrines he advocates, that man is Mr. Bryan. He is not a demagogue, as the groundlings and tumblebugs of politics would have the world believe. The sincerity of his political convictions no man who knows him can question. They partake more of religion to him than anything else. To him his duty and pathway are clear. He is not seeking personal advantage, and his convictions on public questions are dearer than the office of President of the United States.

In another article in the Washington Sunday Times it is said:

The same gossips who have associated Senator QUAY's name with a possible bolt on the treaty are also referring to Senator ALLEN of Nebraska as one desiring some favors of the Administration. It seems to be a fairly well-established fact that in the early part of the debate on the treaty Senator ALLEN announced himself in favor of its ratification, and before going to Nebraska, about three weeks ago, he was paired with a Senator who would vote in opposition. After Senator ALLEN returned from Nebraska he was quick to announce that he was going to vote against the treaty, and shortly after the Senate convened yesterday he offered a resolution more sweeping in its provisions than any of those now pending introduced by Senator VEST, Senator BACON, and Senator SULLIVAN. Mr. ALLEN goes further than the others. He is not willing to accept Porto Rico as one of the spoils of war, but wants to give the people of that island, as well as the Filipinos, an independent government, the same as is promised for Cuba.

It has been intimated that Senator ALLEN would not object if the Administration would so exercise its influence on the Nebraska legislature as to have the Republicans join with the Populists and reelect him for another term. It is not known that Senator ALLEN would change his position on the treaty if this were done, but it is argued in political circles that this might not be bad politics from an Administration point of view.

It is very difficult, Mr. President, to meet and refute a gratuitous and unwarranted assertion of this kind. No man has ever had the slightest occasion to doubt where I stood in respect to the ratification of the treaty. I have never occupied doubtful ground. From the time the treaty came to this Chamber and was laid before us, aye, at a time when I knew through the press what its provisions were, important as they are and as divergent as they are from my own views, I announced my purpose to vote for its ratification.

I am not seeking favors at the hands of this Administration. There is no favor President McKinley could confer upon me that would change my opinion in the slightest degree. I am an American citizen, having all the convictions and intensity of purpose of an American citizen. I am not prepared to surrender my views for favors to be shown. I would rather take my station among the humblest of my kind than to surrender an honest conviction, that is always dear to a self-respecting man.

Mr. President, there has been no purpose upon the part of this Administration, so far as I know, of extending to me any favor. Indeed, I do not know what favor could be extended to me; nor has there been the slightest intention on my part to invite the Republicans to assist me to a reelection. I do not want a reelection that badly. I would not now, if the Republican party of this great nation would tender me their services in the struggle going on in the legislature of Nebraska, accept it.

I have not seen nor talked with the correspondent of a newspaper since my return to this city from my home in Nebraska, and no man has a right to attribute, and if he was a self-respecting man he would not attribute to me opinions and purposes and motives I have not entertained.

Now, Mr. President, because I shall vote for the treaty it does not follow that I am in favor of annexation. I do it for the simple reason that in my judgment the Government of the United States can not afford to open up negotiations with the Spanish dynasty again. We have the whole question within our jurisdiction and within our power, and here and by us alone it should be settled. If by amending the treaty we send it back for further consideration by the commissioners, or to new commissioners to be appointed; if we open up the subject-matter of the treaty, we will, in my judgment, especially in the light of very recent events, incur the danger of European interference and European complications.

Sir, it is because we will have the power, when the treaty is ratified, of determining the form of government to be set up in the Philippine Islands and in the other possessions that have come to us as a result of the war, without incurring any danger from abroad, that I shall vote for the ratification of the treaty.

If I had been a member of the commission I would not have assented to many of its provisions. I would have insisted that the same provision which applies to Cuba should apply to the Philippines and to Porto Rico. Otherwise I would not have been brought to sign the treaty or the report favorably recommending it. But, sir, the treaty is here, and it must be disposed of by the American Senate without further delay.

I am not in favor and I shall not vote for the joint resolution of the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. If passed by Congress and signed by the President, it would simply become a statute that may be repealed by another Congress. It is not expressive of the conviction of this body, which is the constitutional tribunal that must pass upon the treaty and construe and give it force. It would not, in my judgment, possess the force of an ordinary Senate resolution expressing the views of the Senate.

Nor, Mr. President, will I vote for any amendment, not that I would not do so under ordinary circumstances, not that I do not believe the treaty would be better for the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], but because to vote for it and amend it would open the whole controversy to further negotiations and invite the danger which I fear would come.

Mr. President, it has been asserted in this Chamber by a number of Senators that the Constitution of the United States does not ex proprio vigore extend to newly acquired territory. I desire in my own way to combat that proposition. I am surprised to hear any Senator announce that the Constitution, so far as the privileges and immunities of citizenship are concerned, does not of its own force extend to all territory within our jurisdiction and to the inhabitants thereof.

I have devoted some time to searching the history for precedents and in endeavoring to come to a point where my own judgment would be safely anchored on the question whether the Constitution extends to newly acquired territory at the time of its acquisition and whether the rights of the inhabitants of such territory are protected by its provisions, or whether they possess only such rights as Congress may see fit to give them or as may be exercised by a practically unrestrained military government.

History, so far as it throws any light on this subject, has been fully presented by Senators who have spoken, and there is little to be said that has not already been quoted and analyzed. Executive and Congressional precedents have been fully exposed, and every deduction that could be made therefrom has been fully and exhaustively presented. Senators have vied with one another in calling attention to the acquisition of territory, beginning with that of Louisiana in 1803 and ending with the Hawaiian Islands in 1898. Expressions of learned judges made by way of arguendo, because the courts must recognize the political boundaries and sovereignty of the nation as marked by the political branch of the Government, have been repeatedly referred to, but they are none the less interesting from the fact that they do not have the force of law, as they necessarily have deep significance to one searching for the solid ground of truth.

The field of learning seems to have been entirely covered so far as the history of the case is concerned, and also so far as reasonable deductions can be made therefrom. There have been in the entire history of our Government, from the formation of the Constitution and the distribution of its respective powers, two schools of constitutional thought; the one holding tenaciously to the doctrine that the Government possesses and can exercise authority, so far as its foreign policy is concerned, consistent only with the primary purpose of maintaining a government for certain well-defined territories and well-defined inhabitants thereof and their posterity. This school is known as strict constructionists. They hold that the Government is one of delegated powers alone, and that a power does not exist unless expressly granted or necessarily or at least conveniently implied to carry out a granted power.

The other school is perhaps best known as the Hamiltonian theorists, that have from time to time held that the Constitution created a government national in character and possessing, as respects its external relations, not only an express but an implied authority necessary to be exercised with foreign countries as completely and as fully as any nation of the world. Arguments have been brought forth from time to time by these different schools in advocacy of their respective views, and conflicts of a very sharp and important nature have been the result.

Every constitutional expression, clause, and sentence has been examined with a resolute purpose of ascertaining its true meaning, not only in the light of original discussion and as presenting a question of first instance and greatest importance, but also in the light of history and of the spirit and atmosphere of the period of constitutional formation. The temper, habits, and thought, as well as the known intention, of the framers and their unswerving desire of erecting a government that should exist for all time, under whose flag and sovereignty the mightiest nation of the earth would be carried forward to a dreamless and endless destiny, have been considered.

Mr. President, I have been impressed, since the acquisition of this new territory as a result of the war with Spain, with the overshadowing necessity of considering the question with faultless accuracy. What we may do is not to be the work of an hour, nor can it be undone by subsequent legislation or executive order, but it is to stand for all time and involves for final weal or woe the present inhabitants of the United States and those of the new territory, as well as those of countless generations to succeed. If, unfortunately, we shall authoritatively express a conclusion that would cause our country to be overrun by a horde of alien peoples in no manner capable of using or enjoying the blessings and privileges of self-government, or of maintaining them when won by others, whose presence and influence would deteriorate or injure the nation, ultimately wrecking the Constitution and destroying our political institutions, a horde of people unassimilable by reason of turbid and passionate natures, the consequences would be fearful to the happiness and progress of the world, and we would be justly chargeable with inexcusable incompetency to deal with the question.

The Government of the United States was erected for all ages. It was established through the agitation, struggle, and bloodshed of those who had been seeking for generations the formation of political institutions where individual independence, action, and thought would have the largest field of operation. The doctrine of the divine right of kings to rule was for the first time in the history of the world ignored and set aside, after a revolution lasting over seven years and prosecuted under discouraging circumstances, but which, aided by Divine Providence, eventually resulted in the dismemberment of that people from the mother country and from her political institutions. For the first time in all history the right of every human being, by virtue of his birth, to govern himself and indirectly exercise sovereignty in the conduct of the affairs of his Government, helping to shape its policies and to mold its institutions, was announced.

Europe, horrified at this declaration, expressed free and frequent opinions that a government by the people could not long exist, and that, amid warring factions, turbulent multitudes, and the incompetency of those intrusted with the immediate exercise of sovereignty, it would fall and be succeeded by an aristocracy, an oligarchy, or even monarchy itself. Mr. President, it has been the pride of every American citizen that the political institutions erected by the fathers of the Republic for the benefit of themselves and their posterity have survived, and that by the exercise of a high degree of intelligence and deliberation, caution, patriotism, and moderation, it will be within the power of the people to reorganize the authority of the Republic on higher and broader principles and place it in a position where the least restraint shall be exercised over the people consistent with public peace, good order, and safety.

We should not, in discussing the questions presented by these resolutions, forget these facts, and nothing should be done that would in the slightest degree militate against or imperil our institutions.

But the first question presented for consideration is one of naked constitutional power of acquiring territory and the extension thereover of the provisions of the Constitution to the inhabitants at the moment of its acquisition. Mr. President, I must admit, although familiar in a general way with the history of the formation and great purpose of the Constitution, that when I first began examining this question and the policy and course of the Government I found myself, as I supposed, unalterably arrayed against it.

I had held, as I think all will agree, that this being a government of enumerated powers, written and implied, the doctrine of limitation extends to our foreign relations as well as to our domestic institutions, and that a power not classified with one or the other of these does not exist, and I am inclined to think that this was the earlier opinion of those who participated directly in laying the foundation of the Republic. But I am now convinced that I was wrong in so far as the exercise of constitutional power with foreign nations, or in the acquisition of additional territory is concerned. Whether or not the great lawyers, patriots, and statesmen who drafted and adopted the Declaration of Independence, and those who submitted the Constitution of the United States, as well as many of its amendments to the people, clearly understood the power that was being granted to the nation, so far as its foreign relations are concerned, it must, I think, be admitted that express grants were made that gave the United States as full and perfect sovereignty in our relations with foreign countries and foreign people as would or could be possessed or exercised by the most absolute kingdom or monarchy of earth.

Doubtless it was not believed by many in the early history of the Government and during the period covered by the promulgation of the Declaration of Independence, the formation of the Articles of Confederation, and the Constitution, that we would ever extend our jurisdiction over the entire Temperate Zone of America, and few dreamed that a powerful and compact nation with limitless commerce and agriculture and with complex industries would eventually extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

There may have been those who hoped for that time, and therefore it is consonant with the truth to say that it may have been anticipated, if such an event should happen, that Congress should have power to admit new States "into this Union," and "dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory and all other property belonging to the United States."

Mr. President, it seems to me that it can not, in the light of the amendments to the Constitution, be denied that the United States possesses this power. There was a time in the history of this Government when the status of an American citizen was uncertain; there was a time when the question was mooted whether there could be a citizen of the United States separate and distinct from his citizenship of a State. I say the question was at least unsettled. There were jurists of national reputation, high in authority, who held that every man acquired his citizenship of the United States by and through the fact that he was a citizen of some State, while, on the other hand, there were those equally high in authority, and whose opinions were of equal weight, who held that the Constitution, regardless of the amendments, created the distinct character of a citizen of the United States independently of the State or Territory in which the individual resided.

Mr. President, in the light of amendments to the Constitution, I think there can be no longer any question respecting the status of a citizen; but I desire to refer to and read section 3, Article IV, of the Constitution, which says:

> New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The words of that section are general. "New States," so it says, "may be admitted by the Congress into this Union;" and then the section immediately limits the general language employed, providing "but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction or two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress."

From what territory, Mr. President, was it anticipated that new States should be formed? The colonies had certain possessions at the time of the formation of the Constitution. If new States could not be erected out of the States already in existence or by the consolidation of States or parts of States without their consent, and without the consent of Congress, where was the Government to look for the territory it could admit as new States into the Union? I can not and do not believe it was in the minds of the great men who framed this great charter of our liberty that the territorial dominion and jurisdiction of this Government should be limited to the thirteen States east of the Allegheny Mountains. Sir, I believe that Washington and his compatriots looked west of the Alleghenies and across this continent to the Pacific Ocean, and that the great men who penned this immortal instrument had it in their minds that this Government would grow to a point where it would be necessary and proper to annex new territory and to admit new States.

If I am to be called a latitudinarian because I believe this, I must submit to the classification. And yet all my life I have given my unhesitating devotion to the doctrine that the Constitution called into existence a government which did not exist before; that that government is one of delegated or enumerated powers, and that it does not possess a power not granted or not necessarily, or at least conveniently, implied to carry into execution some granted power. I give my adhesion to that doctrine now. Sir, I have no more doubt that such was the belief of those who framed, promulgated, and adopted the Constitution than I have of my own existence; and yet I can understand quite well how, with all the caution exercised by the fathers of the Republic and the members of the Constitutional Convention, powers may be discovered couched in the Constitution that they themselves were not fully cognizant of at the time.

Then, Mr. President, I turn briefly to paragraph 2 of this same section of the Constitution:

> The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.

What territory was meant by this provision of the Constitution? Was it intended that Congress should have power to make rules and regulations for governing the territory embraced in the States? Certainly not. Each of the States had a perfect government of its own, exercising every conceivable power an independent government could exercise, except in those cases where the States granted power to the General Government, and where by the adoption of the Constitution they had restrained themselves from the exercise of power; in other words, when the Government of the United States was created, the thirteen original States carved out of their otherwise unrestricted sovereignty certain powers which they conferred on the General Government, and restrained themselves from the exercise of certain other powers, and with those exceptions each State to-day can exercise all the power of the most independent and absolute government of earth.

And who is bold enough to deny that the inhabitants of newly acquired territory fall within the language and purpose of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution, which declares that "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside?" If the Philippine Islands are to be annexed to the United States, would not their inhabitants "be subject to the jurisdiction thereof" and consequently "citizens of the United States," and as such entitled to all "the privileges and immunities thereof?"

Mr. President, the hour when the Senate under its unanimous-consent agreement is to pass into executive session to vote on the treaty is rapidly drawing near. Other Senators desire to speak upon this question before that hour, and I must necessarily be brief in the remarks I am to make; but I can not resist the temptation of calling attention to a remarkable statement of the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] in his speech the other day, when he declared that the Declaration of Independence was simply a bill of complaint, or a bill enumerating certain grievances against the British Crown.

Mr. President, I am not too old to learn; I learn daily; and I hope during the years that may be allotted to me on earth I may never grow so old and inattentive to duty as not to learn hour by hour; and yet I have supposed throughout all the years of my life that the Declaration of Independence is the first great charter of American liberty. It was not the beginning of government; it was the first crystallization in the form of a written document of certain well-known and generally accepted doctrines held in this country in colonial days; it was the first defiance that was hurled in the face of England and Continental Europe by the colonists who inhabited this country. It was not and is not simply a bill of complaint against the English Government. Let me read a paragraph from it. Said the Continental Congress:

> We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

Mr. President, that does not sound like a mere bill of complaint against the English Government. It was the announcement of principles that are as deathless as the sun and as eternal as the rock-ribbed earth. I say in this splendid presence this day that I hold to the doctrine that every human being is born with the right to rule and control himself, if capable. I can not understand how, through the ages that have passed, any man could be found of such indifferent or weak intellect that he could have reached a different belief.

Mr. President, it is as much the right of a Filipino to govern himself, if he is capable of doing so, as it is the right of an American citizen to do so. This doctrine is not confined to the people of the United States. It extends, according to the language, to all men, wherever found; yet the Senator from Ohio would have this great document mean no more than a mere bill of complaint against the English Crown!

Nor, sir, can I agree with the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], who announced the startling doctrine in this Chamber that it was the right of "some of the governed" to participate in the government. I do not quote his exact language, but the substance of what he said. That, too, is a novel and startling proposition. Where is the line of demarkation to be drawn? Our ancesters said it was the inalienable right of all men to participate in their government. Sir, there was no restriction, no limitation. All, so they said, were entitled to this blessing; and yet in the Senate of the United States the monstrous doctrine is advanced that a few men alone are entitled to participate in the government. Where, I ask again, is the line of demarkation to be drawn? Is it to be placed on religious, on political, on personal, or on educational ground? No, Mr. President, the doctrine was monstrous in its conception and it would be disastrous in its consequences if applied.

Mr. President, I desire to call attention to a remark of the distinguished senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], made on Saturday last, presenting an argument with which I can not agree and in which I do not concur. That Senator said that the power to acquire territory exists as incident to the war-making power, which is correct, and then he said territory could be acquired by treaty and by cession. There are but two ways to acquire territory under the Constitution—one as an incident of the war-making power and the other by virtue of the treaty-making power. What is a cession but a treaty? It is, as the law books say, a treaty of cession, just as we speak of a treaty of commerce or a treaty of amity and peace. There is no way known among men, under a Government like ours, of acquiring territory except as an incident of the power to make war and by virtue of the power to make treaties with foreign nations.

The distinguished Senator said the difference between a treaty and a cession was this: That a treaty carried with it certain interdependent obligations binding upon both parties, while a cession was no more than a deed of quittance or a release to the party receiving it. Sir, that is like the impossible distinction made by some law writers between a bilateral and a unilateral contract. You can scarcely open a law book that treats on the subject of contracts that you will not find refinements and distinctions between a bilateral and a unilateral contract; and yet, in my judgment, there is not the slightest distinction between such contracts, for every contract, whether it be signed, every contract, whether it be partly in writing or rests partly in parole, is a contract that carries with it obligations and duties on the part of the respective parties. So, Mr. President, I assert again that the sole power possessed by this Government to acquire territory is by virtue of the war-making power and the treaty-making power.

I have no doubt, Mr. President, as declared by the resolutions under consideration, that in permanently acquiring territory we would do so with the view of incorporating its inhabitants into our population as citizens. All through the history of our acquisition of territory, beginning with Louisiana in 1803 and ending with the Hawaiian Islands, our ancestors have understood, and we, too, that we hold the acquired territory in trust for statehood. So our law writers and so our jurists have declared from time to time. We have no power, in my judgment, to hold the Filipinos as vassals. We have no right to deprive them, whatever they may be, of the right of self-government if they desire it. It would be ruinous, in my judgment, if we sought to do so.

Sir, we are confronted to-day in our own country with a great race problem, that must be solved soon if it is not to bring us trouble. We have conditions existing in certain sections of the Union that can not always continue. It will be the part of wise and conservative statesmanship for the American statesmen to deal with this problem in a few years. Are we now prepared, under these circumstances, to take within our population 12,000,000 people alien in race, alien in language and in purposes to a great popular government like ours? I challenge any gentleman on this floor on either side of the Chamber, I care not who he may be, to point out the authority this Government would have, when the Philippines are annexed to the United States, to restrict the expatriation of those people and their immigration here. Sir, there is no power to prevent it. The moment we permanently annex those islands to this country and they become a district or a Territory of the United States; that moment we extend our jurisdiction over them and over the people, and those people will have as much right to come into the District of Columbia or to settle in any State of this Union as I have to pass from Nebraska to Iowa or any other part of our common country.

It may be, sir, that there is a sinister motive in this; it may be that there are those who contemplate the rapid approach of the time when this debased population can be brought here and thrown in deadly contact with the laboring men of our country. I ask the Republicans of this Chamber what will become of your tariff laws under such circumstances? You have said to the laboring man of this country for more than a quarter of a century that a protective tariff is a blessing to him. You have made many of them believe it. Of course it was never intended to benefit the manufacturer, according to your argument. The manufacturer, the man who reaps the benefit from a protective tariff, has been sedulously excluded from the argument; but the tariff was to reach its strong arms around the laboring men and protect them and their families.

You said to them in 1896 that you wanted this country protected from the pauper laborer of Europe and the manufactured articles of pauper labor, and yet by annexation you will open wide the door to an endless horde of nondescript population that can come to your very doors in spite of all you can do, in deadly contact with the laborer of this country, debasing the civilization of himself and his family. You will simply move the factory from the United States to Manila and the Hawaiian Islands. And what, too, will become of the Chinese-exclusion acts? They will be swept away and a resistless tide of cheap labor admitted.

Mr. President, there has never been a moment in my life since I have been old enough to understand anything about the political institutions of this nation that I have not been devoted to the welfare of my country. There will never come a time in my life when this country will not have whatever strength and influence I can give it. I may not approve of some of its policies, as I do not. I may disagree with the distinguished gentleman who is at the head of this Government at the present time, as I do. But, sir, I do it honestly, because I believe many of his policies are wrong. I am not to be driven from my position because some portion of my constituency may not approve of my views. I would rather take my station in the obscurest community of my State and devote the remainder of my life to eking out an existence by the most onerous manual labor than to surrender to any man, high or low, or to any organization or party, an honest, conscientious conviction of duty.

But, Mr. President, we must not shut our eyes to the dangers that confront us. Let it be once understood that we are to abandon the domestic policy that has been ours throughout the years of our national existence and embark on the uncertain sea of imperialism, to become "a power," whatever that may be, of the world, and our institutions that have been held dear for more than a century and a quarter, our flag that has floated in triumph over every foot of our common country and that has ridden the storms of the sea in triumph and in glory will be hauled down not only in Manila, but in this country as well. Can we afford to take the risk? Can we afford to incur the danger?

Sir, I hold that the foreign policy to be pursued by this Government must inevitably be a policy incident to and in aid of a strong domestic government. Such was the declaration of Hamilton himself. It was said in one of his articles in the Federalist that in the very nature of things a republic can never have an aggressive foreign policy. He said its safety was to be found in its isolation and in its compactness, for, said that great man further, in a Republic like the United States, where the Administration is changing every four years, a policy that is aggressive, that believes in the forcible colonization of other lands, may, by the election of a Chief Magistrate holding different views, be overturned and changed.

Mr. President, the news has come to us within the last few hours of a conflict between the American Army and Navy and the Filipinos. To my own State has fallen much of the loss of life and limb. Ten out of twenty of the young men who lost their lives in the battle that has been fought in the last forty-eight hours were members of the First Nebraska Infantry. There is mourning in Nebraska to-day; there will be weeping at the hearthstone of many a Nebraska home to-night. Mr. President, this ought to be a warning to us. I can not condemn too severely the assault, the treacherous assault, made on our troops. We were dealing with savages as bloodthirsty and incapable of being reconciled as the Ogallala Sioux. They precipitated this conflict of their own volition.

I uphold the general and the commander of the Navy in repelling the attack. We are in the Philippine Islands as a conquering military power. We hold them to-day by virtue of the power to make war, and in no other sense, and there those islands and those people must remain respecting the law, respecting the dignity and the sovereignty and the flag of this nation until their status among the nations of the earth shall be defined by Congress, the sole power to deal with the question. They must be taught as long as we deal with them that submission to the constituted authority is the first duty of the citizen and the inhabitant. But, sir, if we are to hold them, if in time they are to come completely within our jurisdiction, we must not refuse them the ordinary privileges and immunities of an American citizen.

If prayer be a sincere desire of the human heart, I fervently pray that this great danger may be averted and this complex question may be solved in justice and in honor to our nation and in justice and in honor to the conquered. Those islands and those people must not be surrendered to Spain. Spain has lost her jurisdiction over them and over the islands of the Western Hemisphere forever. God grant the day may speedily come when Spain, unless she changes her civilization, shall be blotted from the map of nations. God grant the day when the Filipinos and the inhabitants of Porto Rico and Cuba may rise to a true conception of the duties and obligations of citizenship; when they too, with the encouragement of this great and powerful Republic, shall take their station among the civilized republics and peoples of the earth.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. President, I shall not occupy more than seven or eight minutes of the time of the Senate.

At 3 o'clock this evening each Senator will be called upon to cast his vote for or against the ratification of this treaty. I deem it just to myself and my constituency to briefly explain the reasons that lead me to the course I shall pursue when that hour arrives. Before I proceed to do this, I will say when a boy I linked my fortunes with the Democratic party. I have followed the standard bearers of that party in defeat and victory with a loyalty and devotion that no one has ever questioned.

It is always pleasant to me to agree with a majority of my colleagues on this side of the Chamber. I do not question the motives, Democracy, or patriotism of those who do not agree with me. I owe it to my State and my country to have and express an opinion of my own. That opinion has been formed after the most mature reflection and my duty to my country I will pursue, as I see it, regardless of the consequences.

It is well to confer and reason together, but I would despise myself if I were governed by the influence of friends and associates against my conscience and judgment.

At the last session of Congress I cast my vote against the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands. I am now unalterably opposed to the annexation and permanent retention of the Philippine Islands. I hold in my hand the resolution of the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], also the resolution of my colleague [Mr. BACON], also the resolution of the junior Senator from Kansas [Mr. HARRIS], and the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], also the amendment to the treaty offered by the senior Senator from Missouri. For each of these I shall cast my vote if given an opportunity. I prefer, first, the resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts; next, the resolution of my colleague; and if these are voted down then I will vote for either of the other resolutions. I will never cast my vote in favor of the Sullivan resolution, for in my opinion it is a mere shadow without any substance. These resolutions provide for an independent government for the people of those islands. I ask that each be inserted as a part of my remarks.

The resolutions referred to are as follows:

[Senate resolution No. 464, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session.]

In the Senate of the United States. January 14, 1899, ordered to be printed. Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the people of the Philippine Islands of right ought to be free and independent; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the Spanish Crown, and that all political connection between them and Spain is and ought to be totally dissolved, and that they have, therefore, full power to do all acts and things which independent states may of right do; that it is their right to institute a new government for themselves, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness; and that with these rights the people of the United States do not propose to interfere.

[Senate resolution 211, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session.]

In the Senate of the United States. January 11, 1899. Mr. BACON introduced the following joint resolution; which was read twice, and ordered to lie on the table. January, 18, 1899, amended. January 30, 1899, modified and ordered to be reprinted as modified.

Joint resolution relative to the acquisition of foreign territory.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, First. That the Government and people of the United States have not waged the recent war with Spain for conquest and for the acquisition of foreign territory, but solely for the purposes set forth in the resolutions of Congress making the declaration of said war, the acquisition of such small tracts of land or harbors as may be necessary for governmental purposes being not deemed inconsistent with the same.

Second. That in demanding and in receiving the cession of the Philippine Islands it is not the purpose of the Government of the United States to secure and maintain permanent dominion over the same as a part of the territory of the United States, or to incorporate the inhabitants thereof as citizens of the United States, or to hold said inhabitants as vassals or subjects of this Government.

Third. That whereas, at the time of the declaration of war by the United States against Spain, and prior thereto, the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands were actively engaged in a war with Spain to achieve their independence; and whereas said purpose and the military operations thereunder have not been abandoned, but are still being actively prosecuted thereunder, therefore, in recognition of and in obedience to the vital principle announced in the great Declaration that governments derive "their just powers from the consent of the governed," the Government of the United States recognizes that the people of the Philippine Islands of a right ought to be free and independent; that with this view, and to give effect to the same, the Government of the United States has required the Government of Spain to relinquish its authority and government in the Philippine Islands and to withdraw its land and naval forces from the Philippine Islands and from the waters thereof.

Fourth. That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise permanent sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said islands, and assert their determination, when a stable and independent government shall have been erected therein entitled to recognition as such, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights secured under the cession by Spain, and to thereupon leave the government and control of the islands to their people.

In the Senate of the United States. February 3, 1899, ordered to lie on the table. Mr. HARRIS submitted the following resolution:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States of America, That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise permanent sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over the Philippine Islands, and assert their determination, when a stable and independent government shall have been erected therein entitled to recognition as such, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights secured under the cession by Spain, and to thereupon leave the government and control of the islands to their people.

[Senate resolution 236, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session.]

In the Senate of the United States, February 3, 1899. Mr. LINDSAY introduced the following joint resolution; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed:

Joint resolution respecting the acquisition of foreign and non-American territory.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the acquisition by the United States, through conquest, treaty, or otherwise, of territory carries with it no constitutional obligation to admit said territory, or any portion thereof, into the Federal Union as a State or States.

SEC. 2. That it is against the policy, traditions, and interests of the American people to admit States erected out of other than North American territory into our Union of American States.

SEC. 3. That the United States accept from Spain the cession of the Philippine Islands with the hope that the people of those islands will demonstrate their capacity to establish and maintain a stable government, capable of enforcing law and order at home and of discharging the international obligations resting on separate and independent States, and with no expectation of permanently holding those islands as colonies or provinces after they shall demonstrate their capacity for self-government, the United States to be the judge of such capacity.

In the Senate of the United States, January 27, 1899. Ordered to lie on the table and be printed. Mr. SULLIVAN submitted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain shall in no wise determine the policy to be pursued by the United States in regard to the Philippines, nor shall it commit this Government to a colonial policy; nor is it intended to embarrass the establishment of a stable, independent government by the people of those islands whenever conditions make such a proceeding hopeful of successful and desirable results.

Mr. CLAY. I shall vote now and at all other times hereafter when I have an opportunity against the permanent retention of those islands and against our Government undertaking to establish a colonial government against the will of the people of those islands. But I say now, duty to myself, to my State and country, as I see it, will not permit me to go further and cast my vote against the ratification of the peace treaty. If I thought my country would be benefited by such action, how I would rejoice to agree with a majority of my party associates.

I have sometimes wished that reflection would lead me to agree with them, but no process of reasoning or logic has led me to reach any such results. When Schley sank the Spanish fleet at Santiago, Spain, realizing her prostrate and helpless condition, immediately sued for peace. The American people rejoiced that American arms had been successful and that the war was over. Peace commissioners were appointed by the two nations to negotiate terms of peace. The two nations, through their representatives, have agreed upon terms of peace, and we are now called upon to ratify or reject this peace agreement.

What does the ratification of the treaty mean? It would at once unconditionally end the war. It would end at once the sovereignty of Spain over the Philippine Islands, and the great problems growing out of the war can be settled much more satisfactorily after peace is agreed upon than we can by continuing war. I prefer now a declaration of policy against the permanent retention of the Philippine Islands, but if I can not get it I will not go backward. Where does the rejection of the peace treaty leave us? Just exactly where we were when negotiations began. Spain could say, We agreed to your terms of peace and you rejected them: further negotiations must be had or the war must continue. No man can tell what complications might arise. We would have to treat further with Spain or hostilities would necessarily be renewed, and no one can tell what serious results might follow. It is a great and difficult task to settle differences between two nations engaged in war, and when such settlement is brought about it should not be disturbed, unless we can hope for good results from such disturbance.

It has been said that if we reject this treaty an extra session of Congress can be called, and that then the ratification will take place; but during this time the unsettled condition of affairs, in my judgment, will not benefit the business interests of the country. I do not believe any possible good can grow out of the temporary rejection of the treaty. I think the sooner the war is ended, the terms of peace definitely fixed, the better it will be for the country. I feel that when I give my vote and voice in favor of a declaration of policy looking to the independence and self-government of those people I have discharged my duty, and the responsibility for their future government will rest with the Republican party, now in charge of all three branches of this Government.

The great Democratic party, to which I belong, I do not believe will cease its labors to establish a stable and independent government in those islands, one that will give to the people their freedom and independence and that will finally relieve this Government from any responsibility there. Should the Republican party, in charge of all three branches of the Government, pursue a different policy and undertake to force upon those people, through our Army and Navy, a government against their will, and undertake to govern them as an American province, the great Democratic party will go to the American people on such an issue, and the patriotism, wisdom, and intelligence of the people will drive from power the political party that attempts to fasten upon the American people this new departure.

But, Mr. President, I insist that those of us who have stood here opposed to such a policy and have endeavored to obtain a declaration setting forth plainly and unmistakably the course to be pursued by our Government have discharged our duty and have cast the responsibility for the future action of our country upon the political party in charge of the Government. I believe that the resolutions that have been introduced ought to be voted on. Objections to a vote on them ought to be withdrawn and let every Senator have a right to go to the country on the record he makes on this all-important occasion. The American Senate is the tribunal to pass upon this treaty, and each American Senator should be allowed to vote on the issues made as his conscience and best thought lead him to believe is right.

Another word before I conclude. While I favor the ultimate independence of both Cuba and the Philippine Islands, I repudiate the idea that this Government must pay Spain $20,000,000 for the Philippine Islands and then give to them an independent government without this sum being paid back to us. I repudiate the idea that we shall give to the people of the island of Cuba independence and self-government and pay the enormous expenses of the war out of the pockets of the taxpayers of this country. When we grant to the Filipinos their independence, arrangements should be made for them to pay to us every dollar we shall have paid to Spain for the purchase of those islands, both principal and interest.

When we grant to the Cubans the same condition of affairs as we have promised them, why should not the Cuban people be required to gradually pay to our Government the expenses of the war fought to free them from Spanish rule. Would it be just and right to sell four hundred millions of bonds and to pass war-revenue measures to raise funds to pay our soldiers to fight the battles of these people? If we are just to the American people, while we are giving liberty and independence to the people of these islands we will see to it that justice is done our own citizens. I can not conscientiously vote to reject the treaty, because I know and realize that these great problems must sooner or later be settled by the action of an American Congress. I believe to reject the treaty would be to make the complications more serious, the responsibilities greater; and the sooner we reach that condition of affairs where peace is definitely agreed upon between the two nations, the problems growing out of the war can be more satisfactorily solved.

With these problems staring me in the face, I can see no good to come to my country by casting my vote against the ratification of the treaty. I wish that reflection had led me to do otherwise, but to be faithful to my judgment, faithful to my conscience in the discharge of the duty that I owe to my State and to my country, I am bound to vote in favor of its ratification.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I have not consumed much of the time of the Senate in the discussion of the pending resolutions. I have had no intention of doing so, and would not now but for the occurrences of the last two days in this Chamber. The remarks of the distinguished Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], who addressed the Senate this morning in connection with the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], seem to make it necessary that I should say one word before we shall have entered upon the real consideration of the treaty in secret session.

It has grown to be an unfortunate custom, Mr. President, that the newspaper criticisms of public men find ready conduits in this body, so that their utterances may be recorded here upon our records. No matter how severe the criticism, how unjust the comment, it seems that at times they are to find their way into this body and to be repeated by honorable members of the Senate.

My attitude upon this treaty was well defined in a public utterance before the treaty was negotiated so far as it refers to the acquisition of the Philippine Islands. My opinion upon that question was known and freely expressed by me to one of the commissioners who negotiated the treaty before he left this country for Paris. I have had no cause to change the opinions then expressed publicly and privately. They were opinions formed after mature deliberation; opinions that I believed were in the best interests of my country; opinions to be maintained by me, no matter what the influence may be upon the other side.

In my course in public life, Mr. President, Presidents of the United States and their Cabinets have had no terrors for me. I have opposed them when they were of my own political faith, when I believed that the measures presented were too extreme and would put in jeopardy the business interests of the American people. I oppose this treaty in the form in which it comes to us, and under which we are to acquire the sovereignty of the Philippine Archipelago, filled with people who never can assimilate with us, because I believe its adoption and the acquisition of the territory would be more disastrous to my country than any other measure which has come before the Congress of the United States or the Senate of the United States from the formation of the Government to this hour.

But, Mr. President, when a question as grave as this, which divides statesmen without regard to their political opinions, comes here for consideration and for final action, what do we find? I say final action, because it depends upon the Senate to-day at 3 o'clock whether we are to enter upon this new scheme which I think is fraught with so much disaster to the American people, for I care not for the Filipinos. I speak as I understand it in the interest of the American people alone When that great question is to be determined we find that it is sought to influence the votes upon the question by small personalities.

I thank the Senator from Nebraska for naming me. It is a manly and a courageous thing for him to do. It is more manly to do it in that way than to do it by insinuation, as has been done heretofore. I thank him for stating, also, that his and my views upon public questions are as far apart as the poles. I belong to the conservative Democracy, that can never entertain an opinion or advocate an action which will destroy the industries of my country by legislation affecting the country itself, and I will always stand against a measure that I believe would involve my country in untold woes for any number of years to come. He and I differ, widely differ. I respect his manhood; I respect his views; I acknowledge that he has the right, as I have, to express them in a manly fashion.

But, Mr. President, this question will not be settled, and it ought not to be dwarfed, by personal considerations. Who in this country cares for myself or for any other man in the Democratic party or for any man in the Republican party if his aspirations and his interests are against the welfare of the common country?

Yet the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], in his carefully prepared speech, as I take it, after having described the conditions attending the consideration of the treaty, said (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, February 4):

> Bar England, there is not a country in Europe that is not hostile to us. During all this war they stood in sullen hate, hoping for our defeat and that disaster might come to us; and to-day they wait with eager and rapacious gaze, hoping that some event may yet prevent our reaping the fruits of the treaty which has been agreed upon by the commissioners of the two countries. Yet, while this critical condition of affairs exists, it has become evident within the last few days that certain political leaders in this Chamber believe that a new issue should be brought before the American people to be determined at the next Presidential election. They intend that the American people shall be called to pass on the questions arising out of the war, and that this shall be the issue of the next campaign.
> For one I believe that issue a fair one, and I am ready, as all good citizens ought to be, to meet the views of the whole American people upon the question of the conduct of the war, of its achievements, and of the policy this country should pursue at its close. But it is deplorable, Mr. President, that in formulating such an issue and in pursuit of such a policy those leaders should find it necessary to seek to dishonor this Government and the Administration which has guided us so wisely through the troubled sea of international complications and brought us to the threshold of an honorable peace; that they should seek to degrade us in the face of the nations of the world; and that they should attempt to bring about some fancied political advantage by an effort to defeat the ratification of a treaty which, if unratified, must bring back a condition of war as it existed before the report of the commissioners, passive it may be, Mr. President, but full of uncertainty and full of disaster to the interests and the welfare of our country.

I suppose that a fair judgment and a charitable judgment would enable me to say that the Senator from Colorado alone, of all the Senators in this body, is the only one capable of such an utterance when we are considering such a great question.

Mr. President, aspirations of public men amount to but little. That the political desire for preferment of any man would control his vote upon this treaty is inconceivable to me, and he who entertains such an idea is on a very low plane in the consideration of a measure so grave.

I, Mr. President, believe in parties. I believe in my party, because I believe that the interests of the people will be best served in the end by its promotion to power and its control of governmental affairs. I adhered to it when some of its doctrines were very far from meeting with my approval, because I have believed that in the main the interests of the country would be better subserved through it.

I have known gentlemen who float between parties, who have been strong advocates of public questions and yet support a party antagonistic to them. I have seen statesmen who were wild with the thought of the free coinage of silver, and yet who on every occasion found strength and a resting place in the Republican party, which believes in a single standard of another metal.

But I want to disabuse the Senator's mind, and those who have followed him, of their false impressions.

Mr. President, on the 3d day of March next, if I shall be spared so long, I will have served on this floor eighteen years. During that whole term I do not believe that I have ever uttered a word that wounded the feelings of a brother Senator. I do not believe that I could have been capable at any time of attempting to affect public questions by criticism of the personal conduct or views of any Senator who has occupied a seat upon this floor. I think I am incapable of doing so now; and hence the moderation of the language I have used in response to that which has been uttered.

One thing more, Mr. President. Now is the best and the only opportunity, probably, I shall ever have for stating it in a way that no man may misunderstand me. I have never had but one aspiration, and that measure has been filled by the people of Maryland, among whom I was born and bred, by honoring me with three terms in this body. That has been, and that is, the height of my ambition, and I leave this Chamber by their decree, and another who differs with me in political sentiment will succeed me on March 4. It is not in the mouth of any man truthfully to say that I have sought to obtain any other or higher favors by any act of mine. Had I desired alone political promotion, had I desired to advance myself against the interests of my country, I could have followed the example of others and bent—

> The pregnant hinges of the knee
> Where thrift may follow fawning—

when my party was in power. I did not do it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair calls the attention of the Senate to the fact that the hour of 2 o'clock has arrived, and it is his duty to lay before the Senate the unfinished business.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Maryland may proceed.

Mr. FAULKNER. It was the unanimous-consent agreement which was given originally that when a Senator had the floor at 2 o'clock he should continue to complete his speech.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Maryland will proceed.

Mr. GORMAN. I shall detain the Senate only a few moments longer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The unfinished business, being Senate bill 1575, will be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, away beyond office, away beyond personal desire of promotion of any sort, stands the great question we are facing. On yesterday, Sunday, the cable flashed the news that because of the attitude of the American Republic in their determination, in their effort, in their threat to take possession of a people who did not desire to become a part of the nation the blood of American citizens had flowed. Those natives, fighting for their liberty as they understand it, made an attack upon the American Army.

Who, Mr. President, believes for a moment that if there was a provision in the pending treaty like the one relating to Cuba that our occupation would be only temporary, that it is only intended to aid them to form a better government to control their own affairs, that there would have been a single life lost? They would have submitted as Gomez has submitted, and turned their army as allies and supporters of the American flag, which would, under that condition, give them liberty and freedom.

Mr. President, I believe that if the pending treaty is ratified and we obtain a cession of the sovereignty of those islands, it will be only the beginning of a war that will cost us hundreds, yes, thousands, of lives of our splendid specimens of intelligent young manhood and millions and millions of money, and that when we shall have, as we will, driven them at the point of the bayonet to submit to the authority of the American nation, with all the accompanying destruction of property and lives, the whole archipelago will then be a pest to the American Union. I believe that it will open the door for a flow from the Chinese Empire and from the islands themselves of a host of men, untold in numbers, who will not assimilate with, but will tend to degrade, the American people.

Do you remember, Mr. President—I do—that it was but ten years ago that this great American nation, with all its power, when two great political parties were lining up in the Presidential battle of 1888, was compelled by the working people, the men who are engaged in trades, the men who are engaged in labor, to abrogate a treaty with China which permitted the Chinese to come in? Only a few hundred thousand had come in on the Pacific coast, yet the feeling against them was so intense that both political parties were forced to declare against their further entry. I think it the most remarkable chapter in the history of the country and the only instance of the abrogation of a treaty by statute. While we were negotiating with China, a friendly nation, with which we were at peace, for a modification of the treaty negotiated by Mr. Seward in 1868, both parties were absolutely driven, so powerful was the feeling of the laboring people of the country, to pass an act of Congress which abrogated the treaty without giving the friendly nation an opportunity for consideration.

We made that restriction and destroyed our trade with China. They submitted to it as no other nation on the earth would have submitted to it. Our trade, however, melted away until it has run down to almost nothing as compared with that of Great Britain, France, and Germany. And now ten years after that act we propose to take islands that are in front of the China Sea. No nation on earth can guard them. No power is strong enough to prevent the Chinese from going over and obtaining a lodgment; and then it is a stepping-stone by which they will come to the United States, because when the islands are annexed the inhabitants become American citizens. You can not keep the Chinese out to-day with all the police power of the Government. You can not prevent their entry from Canada and from Mexico. It will not, in my judgment, be four years, if this treaty is ratified, before the American people will act as they did in 1888. I am not an alarmist, nor have I a desire to throw out a suggestion of disorder, but, judging from the past, our people will resent it.

I assume it is believed by the authors of this measure that the people will resent it; and hence you propose to provide for it by increasing the Army to be kept at home a hundred thousand men, at a cost of $100,000,000 a year, not alone to take care of our affairs in those distant islands, but as a police force to help to control the American people.

Mr. President, this is possibly the last time I may address the Senate upon this subject, and I now enter my solemn protest against it. I want to see this great Government march on for all time, as it has in the past, relying upon the good will and good sense of the American people to support and protect their Government without the aid of armies.

Mr. President, I fear armies at home. I witnessed the great struggle of the war between the States which closed in 1865. Since its close I have seen a great army used in part to control the sovereign States of the Union. I also witnessed the patriotic and manly efforts of the great captain of our armies, General Grant, and of that fearless volunteer soldier, Gen. John A. Logan, of Illinois, and of Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, both members of the House, who raised their voices, as all statesmen had done in the past, and favored the reduction of the Army to 30,000 men, when their own country, one-third of it, was in a state of unrest. I want to follow in their lead—a lead which makes it impossible to govern the American people by bayonets.

The spectacle has just been presented of the President of the United States, kindly, manly, partisan as he has always been, in his tour through the Southern country, preaching good will and kindness to all who inhabit that section of our common land, giving them full credit for their patriotism in this war, as he ought to have done, and making the kindly suggestion that the time had passed when there should be any distinction between the care of the graves of the Confederate dead and those of the Union soldiers. His sentiments are noble and magnanimous. But when you couple with them his other insistence, both public and private, that we must have 100,000 soldiers and a navy as large as France or Germany, how can his suggestion—honestly made, I admit—to the Southern people that the Government take care of the graves of their ancestors be otherwise interpreted than also meaning, "You must give me 100,000 men to keep in order their descendants who are living?"

Mr. President, from the whole transaction I shrink; from the whole transaction, in the interest of the people of the American Union, as I see their interests, I protest; for, I repeat, I believe the absorption of the inhabitants of these islands would be more disastrous than the war from 1861 to 1865 so far as the material interests of the country are concerned. I think it would be more disastrous than the picture drawn by the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL] of the great misfortune which came to us by the injection into our body politic of the slave, against the protest of Virginia, and because of which the whole land was deluged in blood and brother turned against brother.

To Virginia, Mr. President, this country owes a debt of gratitude. From the days of Patrick Henry until the speech of the distinguished Senator from Virginia on my left, Virginia has always voiced the true American sentiment, which, if adhered to, will bring prosperity and glory to our common country.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. DAVIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may have five minutes to answer some personal allusions to myself made by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN].

Mr. DAVIS. I am very sorry, but under the unanimous-consent rule adopted I feel constrained to object to the request made by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope the Senator will allow me.

Mr. DAVIS. I can not.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I only ask for five minutes, Mr. President.

Mr. GEAR. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Colorado may be permitted to proceed.

Mr. DAVIS. I am constrained to object, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to the request made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT]. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS], that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and ten minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 4th instant approved and signed the following acts:

S. 5191. An act to authorize the construction of certain bridges over the waters of Lake Champlain.

CLARINDA S. HILLMAN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate of the United States:

In compliance with a resolution of the Senate (the House concurring), I return herewith Senate bill No. 569, entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Clarinda S. Hillman."

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 6, 1899.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the bill and accompanying message be referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

POLICY REGARDING THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution introduced this morning by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY].

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Rhode Island moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands, introduced by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] this morning.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let the joint resolution be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read for information before the motion is put.

The Secretary read as follows:

A joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States. But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the motion?

Mr. PETTUS. I move to amend the joint resolution by striking out the word "pending" before "treaty."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution is not yet before the Senate. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands.

Mr. FRYE. It is necessary to make two or three amendments to the joint resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the joint resolution be read, and then amendments can be offered to it.

The joint resolution was again read.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the joint resolution by inserting, after the words "the inhabitants of said islands," the words "with the consent of the people thereof."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the joint resolution be read, so as to show where the amendment is to be inserted. Let us see how it will read as proposed to be amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the joint resolution as it will be read when amended.

The SECRETARY. Insert after the word "islands" the words "with the consent of the people thereof;" so as to read, if amended:

That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands, with the consent of the people thereof——

Mr. GRAY. That is not the place where the amendment should be inserted.

Mr. HOAR. No; it is to establish a government with the consent of the people thereof.

The Secretary read as follows:

That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands——

Mr. HOAR. The words "said islands," where I move my amendment, occur in the sixth line from the bottom, so as to read "in said islands with the consent of the people thereof."

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to lay the amendment upon the table.

Mr. COCKRELL. The amendment has not yet been read. Let it be pending.

Mr. ALDRICH. Of course; I will let it be pending.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the joint resolution so as to read——

Mr. TELLER. I should like to hear what the amendment is. I do not want to vote for any declaration that we want to annex the islands, even with their consent.

Mr. CHILTON. That is my case. I think myself that the amendment will weaken the force of the joint resolution.

Mr. TELLER. I think so, too. I do not want to annex those people, even if they want to come in.

Mr. HOAR. The place where the Secretary paused is not the point where the amendment comes in. It is where it is declared that it is the purpose of the United States to establish upon said islands a government. I wish to have the attention of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. I move to amend by inserting "with the consent of the people thereof," so that the government which we intend to establish shall be a government with the consent of the people thereof.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will now read the amendment as proposed in connection with the text.

The SECRETARY. If amended, the joint resolution will read:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States. But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands, with the consent of the people thereof, a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President——

Mr. ALDRICH. I renew my motion to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. HOAR. Am I not entitled, under the custom of the Senate, to the floor on my amendment?

Mr. ALDRICH. I was recognized once and made the motion.

Mr. HOAR. I addressed the Chair on the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts offered the amendment.

Mr. HOAR. And I desire to take the floor upon it.

Mr. ALDRICH. Then thereafter I was recognized by the Chair and made the motion. The suggestion was made that the amendment must be pending before it could be laid on the table.

Mr. CHANDLER. I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will withdraw the motion and allow the Senator from Massachusetts to proceed.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Rhode Island can take his own course about the matter.

Mr. ALDRICH. I have no objection to the Senator from Massachusetts explaining his amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Rhode Island withdraws his motion to lay on the table, and the Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I congratulate the Senate and I congratulate myself upon the changes of mind which have taken place. A good many Senators who have urged that we ought not to state in advance any purpose or policy of the people of the United States or of the Congress of the United States for the future have changed their minds, and they agree with me and with those who have opposed the treaty that this is a fitting occasion for a legislative declaration. If they had come to that conclusion a week ago, or three days ago, it would have saved much bloodshed and many precious lives. If it had been announced that it was not the purpose of the United States for its advantage to force upon those people a government against their will, but that in our dealing with them we stood upon our time-honored policy of self-government for every people everywhere, the deplorable occurrences of yesterday and the day before would, in my judgment, have been prevented. But better late than never.

If the joint resolution can now make a clear, unquestioned, unhesitating affirmation of the great American doctrine of self-government and the doctrine that no people are bound to submit or ought to submit to a government depending upon other men's understanding of their interests and not upon their own, certainly this transaction will not be attended with unmitigated evil, and it will be disarmed largely of the dangers which so many of us think it is full of for the Republic and for the future.

I hope that the amendment will be adopted, and on it I demand the yeas and nays. The amendment comes in where it is said that it is the intention of the United States to establish a government there at some time in the future. I desire to have the joint resolution declare that it is a government to be established by the consent of the governed.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, it is a sufficient answer to the statement made by the Senator from Massachusetts to say that if it had not been for objections on the part of the opponents of the treaty this resolution, or some resolution of equal terms, would have been adopted by the Senate three days ago. I now renew my motion to lay the amendment on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] moves to lay the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] on the table.

Mr. HOAR. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BACON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. WETMORE], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and vote "nay."

Mr. MALLORY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SHOUP (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Utah [Mr. CANNON] and vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 45, nays 34; as follows:

YEAS—45.

Aldrich,	Foraker,	McEnery,	Sewell,
Allison,	Frye,	McMillan,	Shoup,
Baker,	Gallinger,	Mantle,	Simon,
Burrows,	Gear,	Morgan,	Spooner,
Carter,	Gray,	Nelson,	Stewart,
Chandler,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Teller,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Pettus,	Thurston,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Platt, Conn.	Warren,
Davis,	Kenney,	Platt, N. Y.	Wolcott.
Deboe,	Lindsay,	Pritchard,
Elkins,	Lodge,	Quay,
Fairbanks,	McBride,	Ross,

NAYS—34.

Allen,	Daniel,	Martin,	Roach,
Bacon,	Gorman,	Mason,	Smith,
Bate,	Hale,	Mills,	Tillman,
Berry,	Harris,	Mitchell,	Turley,
Butler,	Heitfeld,	Money,	Turner,
Caffery,	Hoar,	Murphy,	Vest,
Chilton,	Jones, Ark.	Perkins,	Wellington.
Clay,	Jones, Nev.	Pettigrew,
Cockrell,	McLaurin,	Rawlins,

NOT VOTING—11.

Cannon,	Mallory,	Sullivan,	White,
Faulkner,	Pasco,	Turpie,	Wilson.
Kyle,	Proctor,	Wetmore,

So the motion to lay Mr. HOAR's amendment on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the resolution by inserting after the words "United States" the words "or to force a government upon them against their will."

Mr. ALDRICH, Mr. SPOONER, and others. That is the same thing.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Chair have the amendment stated from the desk?

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to lay the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts on the table.

Mr. COCKRELL. I make the point of order that the amendment is not yet pending. Let it be stated from the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed, after the words "United States," where they occur the second time in the joint resolution, to insert "or to force a government upon them against their will;" so as to read:

Resolved, etc., That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of said islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States or to force a government upon them against their will, etc.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to lay the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts on the table.

Mr. HOAR. On that motion I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CLAY. I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will not insist on his motion to lay upon the table, but will let Senators vote directly on the amendment.

Mr. FRYE (to Mr. CLAY). Then you will have us here all evening.

Mr. ALDRICH. We will have a discussion which will go on forever.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays have been ordered on the motion to lay the amendment on the table, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MALLORY (when his name was called). I again announce a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Washington [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BACON. I simply again announce the transfer of my pair from the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. WETMORE] to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], and I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 30; as follows:

YEAS—46.

Aldrich,	Elkins,	Lodge,	Quay,
Allen,	Fairbanks,	McBride,	Ross,
Allison,	Foraker,	McEnery,	Sewell,
Baker,	Frye,	McMillan,	Simon,
Burrows,	Gallinger,	Mantle,	Spooner,
Butler,	Gear,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Carter,	Gray,	Nelson,	Teller,
Chandler,	Hanna,	Penrose,	Thurston,
Clark,	Hansbrough,	Pettus,	Warren,
Cullom,	Hawley,	Platt, Conn.	Wolcott.
Davis,	Kenney,	Platt, N. Y.

NAYS—30.

Bacon,	Harris,	Mills,	Smith,
Bate,	Heitfeld,	Mitchell,	Tillman,
Berry,	Hoar,	Money,	Turley,
Caffery,	Jones, Ark.	Murphy,	Turner,
Clay,	Jones, Nev.	Perkins,	Vest,
Cockrell,	McLaurin,	Pettigrew,	Wellington.
Gorman,	Martin,	Rawlins,
Hale,	Mason,	Roach,

NOT VOTING—14.

Cannon,	Kyle,	Shoup,	White,
Chilton,	Mallory,	Sullivan,	Wilson.
Daniel,	Pasco,	Turpie,
Faulkner,	Proctor,	Wetmore,

So the motion to lay Mr. HOAR's amendment on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to amend the joint resolution by inserting the words "the Philippine" in place of the word "said" in the third line.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend in line 3 by striking out the word "said" before "islands" and inserting "the Philippine."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us see how the resolution would then read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That by the ratification of the pending treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the amendment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes, Mr. President, I object to the amendment. If it included also Porto Rico I should have no objection to it; but I object to the annexation of either of these islands or any of them, and therefore I object to the amendment and ask for a vote upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to further amend by striking out the word "pending," in line 1, before the word "treaty."

Mr. GRAY and Mr. COCKRELL. How will it read then?

The SECRETARY. If amended as proposed, the joint resolution will read:

That by ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BACON. I offer an amendment to the resolution, and ask that it be read by the Secretary, the amendment which I propose to come in as an additional resolve. I desire before the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] has the opportunity to move to lay the amendment on the table to be heard upon it after it shall have been read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia has the floor, and the amendment submitted by him will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the joint resolution the following:

Resolved further, That the United States hereby disclaim any disposition or intention to exercise permanent sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said islands, and assert their determination, when a stable and independent government shall have been erected therein entitled, in the judgment of the Government of the United States, to recognition as such, to transfer to said government, upon terms which shall be reasonable and just, all rights secured under the cession by Spain, and to thereupon leave the government and control of the islands to their people.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, the great issue here may be stated under two heads: In the first place, that we do not intend unnecessarily to complicate ourselves with this distant territory either by way of annexation or by permanent control of any kind; the second proposition is, that we do not intend in anything which we do to deny those people the right of self-government.

I do not think, Mr. President, that the resolutions as they stand before the Senate with the amendments which have been offered by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], accomplish either of those desired results. There is a statement that we do not intend to incorporate those islands as a part of the integral territory of the United States. That might be accepted as a satisfaction of a portion of the proposition, but it goes on to expressly provide, in an indefinite way, for the continued control of the islands for an indefinite time, and for the use of the power of this Government to erect a government which shall be suitable to the United States in those islands, regardless of the wish of the people of those islands.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], which to a certain extent would have cured that defect, has been, by the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island to lay upon the table and by the action of the Senate thereupon, practically defeated.

I think the time has come, Mr. President, when Senators who have spoken to us within the past three weeks of what they were willing to do when this treaty was ratified should speak in no uncertain terms. This is not a moment which calls for indefinite language or which will be satisfied by uncertain terms. Senators upon the other side who have supported this treaty have in the weeks of debate which have passed asseverated most solemnly that they were opposed to annexation; that they were opposed to the continued control of those islands by the United States Government. Mr. President, I call upon them now to make those words good, and not by an indefinite and uncertain declaration, but by one which can not be misunderstood.

I am glad to see even a partial advance in this direction by some Senators who have not heretofore made this explicit declaration; but I am not satisfied with Senators who have stood here and said they were opposed to this policy and that after the treaty of peace was ratified they would join with us to see to it not only that there should be no permanent annexation of those islands, but that the affairs of this country should not be disturbed, that we should not be put to unnecessary expense of money, that we should not have to incur great loss of life by reason of an unnecessary and protracted connection between this Government and the complications in the Philippine Islands. I desire to have from those Senators now a more explicit declaration than is contained in this resolution.

Mr. President, I want to ask the Senate this question: If it be true that it is the purpose of this Government not to exercise permanent dominion in the Philippine Islands, ought we not to say so in the plainest of language? I want to ask the Senate this further question: If it be true that it is not the purpose of this Government to deny to the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands the right of self-government, ought we not to say so, and ought we, in ambiguous language, to leave this matter in uncertainty?

There is more reason than one why we should speak definitely to-day. The reasons which have existed in the past were sufficient to my mind in order that those of us who were called upon to vote on this treaty might know the particular ground upon which we would stand, but we are fronting a condition to-day across the sea which calls for language of no uncertain sound.

Mr. President, do we wish further effusion of blood? Is there a Senator here who doubts the fact that, now that this treaty is ratified, there will be a further effusion of blood in the Philippine Islands unless we solemnly declare in language which can not be misunderstood that we do not intend to enforce a government by arms upon an unwilling people?

There is nothing in this amendment which I have offered except that simple declaration, and if there is an absence of plainness in it I shall be glad for Senators to offer any amendment they wish which will correct it. All I want is that this declaration shall carry to our own people and to the Philippine Islands the assertion in language which can not be misunderstood, the assertion in language which will not call for construction, but in language so plain that it will construe itself, that we do not intend to permanently annex those islands and that we do not intend to deny to those people the right of self-government.

If there is anything in those resolutions excepting those two ideas, I am willing for the suggestion to be made for them to be modified so that they will be confined simply to those two elements. I wish simply that we shall declare two things—one, that we will not exercise permanent dominion in those islands, and the other that in the disposition or control of a temporary character which we shall make we do not propose to deny to those people practically the right of self-government.

Mr. President, I know, of course, that when I have finished the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] is going to move to lay the amendment upon the table. I presume, at least, from the course which has been pursued, that he will do so. I think the appeal of my colleague [Mr. CLAY] is a reasonable one. He has voted with the Senator from Rhode Island, and he desires to express himself, and I say he and others who stand in the same position desire to express themselves upon those resolutions, not by a vote to lay upon the table, but upon the merits directly, yes or no.

Of course, it would be bootless now to discuss the question as to what has been the cause of the effusion of blood which has already been had in the Philippine Islands. It is not bootless that we should attempt to-day to make such an utterance that there will not be further conflict in those islands. Does any man doubt, Mr. President, that if we were to adopt the resolution which is contained in this amendment, if we say to those people that we do not intend to retain them permanently, and if we say to them in the direction which shall be hereafter given there shall be an acknowledgment of their right to be heard, to be consulted, and that we will not deny to them the right of self-government, there would be an absolute cessation of hostilities in those islands?

It is for these reasons that I have offered the amendment, which I trust the Senate will adopt.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, since the matter of these resolutions in relation to the ratification of the treaty with Spain has been mooted I have always been willing to vote for resolutions such as those framed by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] and offered a while ago by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH]. I may be at some time in the future, if it come within my term in the Senate of the United States, willing to vote for a more explicit declaration, but I conceive that at the present time and in the present unhappy condition existing in those islands, as it comes to us across the sea in the news of yesterday and to-day, we have done our whole duty and have been true to ourselves, to the traditions of American liberty, and to all those great maxims of American government which should animate and control the Senate of the United States and the Congress of the United States. The resolution as it now stands is as follows. Allow me to read it again:

Resolved, That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States, but it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands and prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interest of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. President, it seems to me that in the language just read we have accomplished everything that the Senator from Georgia could wish to accomplish without complicating the United States or committing the United States or its Government at this important juncture of affairs in those islands to a policy or to a course of conduct which might embarrass us and not profit them.

Mr. VEST. May I ask my friend the Senator from Delaware a question?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. VEST. Does not the resolution exclude the idea that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed? Does it not assert that the people of the United States are to determine when the people of the Philippines are capable of self-government, and does not that destroy the idea that each people for themselves shall determine upon their own government?

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, we went to war with Spain upon a declaration so well known that it need not be repeated. By the fortunes of war those distant islands have fallen into our hands. It is admitted on all sides and by nearly everyone who has been opposed to the ratification of the treaty that we must drive Spain out of the control of those islands, and necessarily we must take that control for the time being upon ourselves. An insurrection in those islands which had died down, which had almost entirely subsided, was again fanned into a flame by the presence of Admiral Dewey's fleet in Manila Bay in May last, and the valor of our sailors and our armies has made it possible for the first time in all the centuries that those islands have been known to the civilized world for their inhabitants to look hopefully forward to some measure of free, enlightened, and decent government.

We are now rightfully there. The treaty of peace with Spain has just been ratified, by which we are put in a position of actually helping those people to attain a degree of prosperity, order, and good government which a few months ago was not within the horoscope of the most enlightened people of those islands. Yet we are asked to go further than this resolution, so consistent with American ideas, so generous, so magnanimous, and to make a specific promise to rebels in arms against the United States, to men who day before yesterday were shooting American soldiers, to men who show so little of the qualities that ought to obtain in a people fit for self-government that while this treaty of peace was pending in the Senate they attacked the very forces that had come to their relief and made it possible for them ever to hope in the future, however distant, for a measure of self-government and of decent, orderly liberty governed by law.

Mr. President, people of that kind have no right to demand at this hour and at this moment a more explicit promise than we already make in this resolution as proposed by the Senator from Louisiana, if we shall adopt it. I am not in favor of going to those people upon our knees after we have liberated them from the thraldom of Spain, after we have not only driven out Spain, but are prepared to drive out anarchy and misrule in the islands, and given them a hopeful look into the future.

I am not in favor now of making any concessions to them while they are shooting down on their own soil Americans who have stood by them and have given them the hope for this great boon of liberty and of decent, orderly government there. I think we would stultify ourselves if we went further and made an explicit promise that we would do this or that at once or at any time fixed in the near future; that we would turn the islands over to them before the Congress of the United States, representing the people of the United States and the public opinion of the United States, said that it was for the best interest not only of the people of the Philippine Islands, but of the masses of the people of this great country of ours, that we should hand the government over to them.

I do not propose by my vote to surrender to Tagals whose guns are pointed at General Otis's army and whose cannon within thirty-six hours have destroyed life on the decks of American men-of-war. Let us wait a little until the smoke of this contest has passed away, until some measure of calm and some measure of decency obtain there and the leaders of the so-called rebellion or of the insurrection come to their senses and appreciate the condition in which they find themselves and the great boon that the Government of the United States has brought to them by its sacrifice of blood and treasure.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. President, it seems that those opposed to the ratification of the treaty rested their opposition upon the ground that the Filipinos were not put upon a footing equally as favorable as that we have conceded to the people of Cuba. Now, I submit whether if this resolution be adopted without amendment the Filipinos, so far as it is enforcable at all, will not have every pledge from the American Congress that the people of Cuba take under the treaty which we have just ratified? Reading the treaty of peace in connection with the resolutions adopted at the outbreak of the war with Spain, we find that we are to withdraw our troops from Cuba when a stable government shall have been established. We are to be the judges of when that stable government has been established. In carrying out that resolution in spirit and in carrying out the treaty in spirit the Cubans have no more been consulted by the United States than we propose by the resolution to consult the Filipinos.

If in Cuba we are to be the judge of when our troops shall be withdrawn because a stable government shall have been established there capable of maintaining peace in Cuba and discharging the international obligations which Cuba as an independent government will assume, why shall we not be the judge of the time when the Filipinos shall be entitled to free government, and why shall we not exercise the same agency in bringing about that stable government that we are to exercise in the island of Cuba?

Mr. BACON. If the Senator from Kentucky will permit me, the amendment which I have offered specifically prescribes that we shall do that very thing. It specifically says that, while we do not intend to exercise permanent dominion, control, jurisdiction, and sovereignty of the Philippine Islands, when there has been a stable and independent government established there to the satisfaction of the United States Government we will withdraw and leave them to the control of their own affairs. The exact thing as to which the Senator asks why it should not be is the thing which is, and the exact purpose which we have in reference to Cuba is the one that this amendment provides shall be the controlling purpose with reference to the Philippine Islands.

Mr. LINDSAY. The Senator from Georgia will pardon me. The point I make is that this resolution, if adopted by the two Houses of Congress and signed by the President, so far as it can commit the Federal Government, will commit the Federal Government to do for the Filipinos all that it is now under obligation to do for the Cuban people.

Why shall we make promises to the Filipinos, who are shooting down our soldiers to-day, which we did not make and have not made and have not been asked to make to the Cubans, who have been our friends all the while? We pledged ourselves not to maintain the military occupation of Cuba after a stable government shall be established. This resolution provides that when a stable government, such as is approved by the Government of the United States, shall have been established in the Philippines, like results shall follow those which are to follow in the island of Cuba.

Why should we make greater overtures to these people than we make to the people who have always been our friends and who have submitted to indignities at the hands of our soldiers without resentment? I do not see any reason why we should go further.

Mr. BACON. Is the Senator willing to go as far?

Mr. LINDSAY. I am willing.

Mr. BACON. Then change it in that way.

Mr. LINDSAY. But I maintain that the resolution goes as far as we have gone for Cuba, and it does not, in my opinion, comport with the dignity of the United States at this particular juncture to promise more to the Filipinos than we have promised to our neighbors, who lie almost at our feet.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, the resolution introduced by my colleague [Mr. MCENERY] provides for nothing more than a protectorate coupled with sovereignty on the part of the United States over these islands, with the reservation to dispose of them just as the United States chooses. The first proposition is that it is not the intention of the United States to incorporate the people of the Philippine Islands into the Union or to annex the territory of the Philippine Islands as an integral part of our Union; and then follows—

But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them—

Not for self-government, but—for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. President, we not only decline to incorporate these people, and thereby make them citizens of the United States, but we decline to do anything more than to establish a local self-government, and after that to dispose of the islands in any way we see proper. That gives us the power to alienate them, to sell them, to dispose of them in any manner, shape, or form that suits the prevailing majority in the Congress of the United States.

In other words, it is a despotic protectorate, without any guaranty of independent self-government whatever upon the part of the United States toward these people. They are only to be educated up to what we are pleased to term local self-government, and in due time we are to make such disposition of them as will best promote, first, the interests of the citizens of the United States, and then the people of the Philippine Islands—our interests primary, paramount all the time, without any consideration whatever of the wishes of those people. Not a line of this amendment gives to those people any sort of authority or right or jurisdiction over their own affairs; but we fix it all; we prescribe what sort of a government is a local self-government, and then we hold the power and the jurisdiction to make an absolute alienation of it. We bought them, and now we propose to hold the power to sell them, according to the resolution.

Mr. President, a good deal has been said in regard to the ingratitude of these people. Sir, they are the most ungrateful people in the world, it appears. They are ungrateful because, in their humble ideas of self-government, they choose to array themselves in arms to achieve it. They were not so ungrateful when they were called upon as allies of the forces of the United States to wrest those islands from Spain. They were noble patriots when they were helping us to fight, and because, under the strained relations existing between those people and the United States, brought about by a proclamation to benevolently assimilate them, to swallow them, to annihilate them, an encounter takes place between the armed forces of the United States and the armed Filipinos, therefore it is that they are to be trampled under foot, they are to be called bloodthirsty cutthroats.

Every people upon earth have done the same thing. When the revolutionary rebels were told by Pitcairn to disband, they were cutthroats, and every people who dare assert their liberty, according to the doctrines we have heard on this floor, are cutthroats. It is an unhappy occurrence that the hot blood of these people rushed them into this conflict with the United States, but what were we to expect when we had brought about the conditions whereby these people in the first instance took up arms as an ally of the United States and afterwards had the hardihood to take up arms to assert their own independence?

I do not see that the blood that flowed yesterday lies entirely upon the heads of those people. I see, if any fault lies anywhere, that it is a joint fault, and lies as well at the doors of the United States as upon the heads of the Filipinos.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Louisiana recognizes the fact, does he not, that hostilities were precipitated by the Filipinos?

Mr. CAFFERY. All that I see in the press is that certain Filipinos, I believe three in number, undertook to run our guard——

Mr. ALLEN. They had tried it before.

Mr. CAFFERY. And they were shot in pursuance of military discipline and law.

Mr. ALLEN. They had tried it a second time, as I understand.

Mr. SPOONER. The third time.

Mr. ALLEN. The third time.

Mr. CAFFERY. Very well. I say that on account of the relations that have existed between these people and the United States such occurrence, although deplorable, was likely to happen. We were there as conquerors. We did not bear the message of peace and kindness to these people. We bore the message of subjugation to those people.

Mr. ALLEN. We were there by right, by law——

Mr. CAFFERY. The fact is that we did not bear a message of peace to them.

Mr. ALLEN. That is a question.

Mr. CAFFERY. We bore a message of subjugation to them; and is it not in human nature, even in Filipino nature, to assert the rights of freemen?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not want to interrupt the Senator without his consent, and will not.

Mr. CAFFERY. I yield.

Mr. ALLEN. I beg to call his attention to the fact that our troops there were doing no more than occupying the zone that was surrendered to them by the Spanish Government. They were not aggressive; they were not hostile. Pending that situation, the question of the disposition of these islands was before Congress. Now, does the Senator see any fault in our repelling the assault of the Filipinos under such circumstances, and does the Senator believe it would be wise at this particular critical juncture of affairs to go any further than the resolution offered by his colleague?

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, I have stated that in pursuance of military discipline it was necessary to maintain the guard. In answer to the other inquiry, I will state that I think it is eminently proper that the resolution be amended by the resolutions of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON].

I reiterate his statement that now is the time to formulate in unmistakable terms the statements of Senators upon the other side who said they meditated nothing but the ultimate independence of these people; and those resolutions fitly and properly express that idea. I can see no objection whatever to incorporating the amendment of the Senator from Georgia into the resolution of my colleague.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to have the Senator from Louisiana inform me and the Senate what makes him think any Senator upon this floor has called the Filipinos cutthroats, or has used any but the kindest language toward them. The Senator has made that statement. It seems to me it ought not to go uncontradicted. These people are misguided and have been led into hostilities with the United States troops, but nothing unkind has been said about them on the floor of the Senate to my knowledge, and why does the Senator undertake to put us in the attitude of calling them cutthroats when it is a mistaken assertion?

Mr. CAFFERY. I stand corrected as to the term. I do not know anybody who applied that term to them.

Mr. CHANDLER. Why does the Senator aggravate the existing situation by translating the feelings and views of Senators, whatever they may be, into the opprobrious term "cutthroats," to be used as an excuse for their fighting against the armies of the United States?

Mr. CAFFERY. I am entirely responsible for my language, and I have not a word of apology to make for my language. That was the sentiment expressed in vigorous language, not in terms——

Mr. CHANDLER. What was it?

Mr. CAFFERY. I do not choose to be catechised in this sort of style.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. CAFFERY. I do not.

Mr. CHANDLER. All right.

Mr. CAFFERY. I do not yield now. I answered the Senator's question, and I do not propose to be catechised with such interruptions.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator one more question, if he will allow me.

Mr. CAFFERY. I decline to yield.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Louisiana will proceed.

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, to answer substantially the question, the fault of this unhappy occurrence, if any fault there is, is not entirely at the door of those people. It springs out of our attitude there, and I say that our attitude there from the very commencement was a false attitude.

Against whom did we wage war, Mr. President? Against the Kingdom of Spain. When we sunk the Spanish fleet in Manila Harbor and broke the power of Spain to do us any harm or injury, why did we remain there, I want to know? What purpose could it effect after the destruction of the Spanish power or authority? Her navy was gone. Her troops were penned up in Manila. They were beleaguered on the land side by the natives, and our fleet held the water. How could they have hurt us? The fatal error lay in maintaining our fleet in those waters. After that was done and those people were called in as allies, and after we had effected, through their aid, the virtual destruction of the Spanish army, I should like to know how it is that those people, who were then our allies, should, because in a moment of exasperation and anger they were guilty of the folly of assailing the United States troops, be now treated in the manner in which it is proposed to treat them.

As a matter of course, after the ratification of this treaty the armies of the United States, at whatever cost, at whatever hazard, must maintain and secure the jurisdiction of the United States plenary and full over every inch of those islands. What I am discussing is not the obligation of the United States now to assume full military control of those islands, but the obligation of the United States to declare its policy now; the obligation of the United States to put in language unmistakable the principle of self government which all Senators, or nearly all, say they are willing to accord to those people.

Some Senators did not know when these people would be capable of self-government, no time was fixed; but the principle was asserted and the principle was advocated that no one, not one of the proponents or advocates of the treaty, desired any other than a future self-government for those people. That is what I want to see incorporated into this resolution. The resolution gives the United States in the future complete control over those islands, and I want to see that these people, as far as we can by declaration secure it, have the right at some future time, which of course would be indefinite, to establish a government of their own.

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator allow me, before he takes his seat? I wish to make the remark in his hearing. The forces of the United States have been holding the city, bay, and harbor of Manila by virtue of the armistice or truce, as it is sometimes called, that was the result of the protocol of August 12 last. They have been there ever since as loyal, highly disciplined soldiers of this great country, maintaining its honor and maintaining the reputation of its arms. They have committed no outrage upon anybody.

We are still technically at war with Spain, against whom the Filipinos have been struggling and against whom they profess to be rebelling, and we are there as their allies. Yet, pending the treaty of peace which was to end that war and make hopeful the beginning of a new future for those people, they had the hardihood to attack their allies and kill and wound something like 170 of them, if the news that comes over the wires is to be relied upon. But what are we to think of those people to whom we are asked to make still more specific promises than are contained in the McEnery resolution and who were kept out of Manila because they demanded the right to come in upon the capitulation and loot the city?

Mr. CAFFERY. I know nothing about the demand of the Filipinos to loot the city of Manila. I take that as the Senator states it. But the Filipinos have acted perhaps foolishly and wrongly——

Mr. GRAY. Only perhaps?

Mr. CAFFERY. In attempting to run our guards. But, Mr. President, behind all that was the proclamation of the President of the United States to take those people in without the right of self-government and to benevolently assimilate them, that assimilation to be after the manner of the anaconda that swallows its victim.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to ask the Senator from Louisiana a question, and I should like to know what is the answer of the Senator from Delaware to it also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHANDLER in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. CAFFERY. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. Do not the people of the Philippine Islands hold the rest of the island except the small territory occupied by us by a right as good as that by which we hold Manila?

Mr. CAFFERY. I think so; by the right of armed occupation.

Mr. HOAR. And a further right, besides armed occupation, growing out of the fact that it is their country and nobody's else.

Mr. CAFFERY. We have heard a great deal about the technical war between Spain and the United States, and that these people are technically rebels. Mr. President, those terms do not obscure the fact. These people were our friends, they were our allies, and if by reason of acts upon our part they have turned to be our enemies are they so much to be blamed? They are struggling for independence such as they conceive their independence ought to be. I see nothing but human nature, I see nothing but the aspiration of a people to be free, in this military occupancy upon the part of the Filipinos of their own home, of their own land, fighting for their own vine and fig tree, fighting for their firesides and hearths. We are strangers upon that soil, Mr. President. We say that we are not conquerors. Are we not doing the acts of conquerors? And are not our acts belying our words?

Mr. SPOONER. What acts?

Mr. CAFFERY. In taking forced control and military jurisdiction over those people who claim their independence. It is a matter of force, Mr. President.

Mr. GALLINGER. We have not done it.

Mr. GRAY. Force was used to drive out Spain.

Mr. CAFFERY. If it had not been for the Filipinos, perhaps you would not have had a Manila City now.

Mr. TELLER and Mr. GALLINGER. Nonsense.

Mr. CULLOM. It is worse than nonsense.

Mr. CAFFERY. Everything is nonsense that does not suit the views of gentlemen who want to gobble up the Philippines.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to say to the Senator, if he will give me leave to say it, that our officer in command declared that they rendered no substantial aid to us at all. General Merritt said so.

Mr. CAFFERY. The evidence is both ways on that point. It is stated, I believe, by General Otis that they are much better soldiers and much more entitled to independence than the Cubans.

Mr. BACON. I wish to suggest, with the permission of the Senator from Louisiana, that the services they rendered were rendered before General Merritt got to the islands. So he knew nothing about it except from what Commodore Dewey said.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will let me interrupt him, I will say that that was a mistake. They rendered no practical service whatever, and when the city of Manila was taken they took no part in it except to stand by and look on.

Mr. CAFFERY. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. That is the report of our officers.

Mr. CAFFERY. I do not think these resolutions amount to anything more than giving the United States a free hand in control, without any regard to any self-government or any other government upon the part of the Filipinos of an independent nature to do as they please.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is just what we ought to have.

Mr. CAFFERY. If we ought to have it, then the declarations that we go there with the intent to civilize, Christianize, and elevate them, and fit them for self-government are belied.

I shall offer, at the proper time, if the amendments of the Senator from Georgia are defeated, an amendment looking toward some security for self-government upon the part of the Filipinos.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I shall take but a moment. I sincerely hope the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia will be voted down.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY] says that if the resolution offered by his colleague is adopted, it must be upon the theory that we have acquired and own the Philippine Archipelago. That is the theory, Mr. President, upon which the treaty has been ratified. There could by no possibility be any other theory. Spain could not cede the Philippine Archipelago to us, exacted from her at the end of a war triumphant upon our part, except upon the theory on our part that she owned it and that by her cession we acquired it.

There ought to be no attempt now, Mr. President, to mystify or obscure that situation. We go forward from to-day upon the theory that by this treaty and the acceptance of this cession the United States has succeeded to the title of Spain and the sovereignty of Spain over the Philippine Archipelago.

The Senate has voted down, or rather laid upon the table, the proposition which attempted to make it a practical condition of its cession, and our acceptance of it that we ask the consent of the people of those islands.

Something has been said by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] about the effusion of blood at Manila being in defense of the right of self-government, being by way of resistance, says my friend from Louisiana [Mr. CAFFERY], whom I respect and admire, of invasion.

Nothing, Mr. President, can be further from the fact than the suggestion that any blood has been shed at Manila in defense of the right of self-government or in resistance of invasion.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. There is no man who can maintain anywhere the proposition that this Government is not of right, under the rules of war and international law, in possession of Manila.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. The Senator from Wisconsin certainly did not listen to what I said.

Mr. SPOONER. I was referring last to what the Senator from Louisiana said.

Mr. BACON. The Senator distinctly said I had said that blood had been shed in Manila in defense of the right of self-government.

Mr. SPOONER. Very well. Did not the Senator say so?

Mr. BACON. I did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. SPOONER. Then I withdraw the reference. There was confusion in the Chamber.

Mr. BACON. The RECORD will not show that I said it.

Mr. SPOONER. I withdraw the reference to the Senator from Georgia and transfer it without any cession to my friend from Louisiana.

Mr. BACON. That is another matter.

Mr. SPOONER. I misunderstood the Senator from Georgia. I thought he said that.

Mr. BACON. No, sir.

Mr. SPOONER. I rather think he will find when he looks at his remarks that he did.

Mr. BACON. I deny it.

Mr. SPOONER. But that is no matter. I say that no person can gainsay our right to occupy Manila. We are in Manila to-day not simply because we captured the city by force of arms, and we are there by agreement with Spain under the protocol.

Does anyone claim here that the insurgents ever controlled Manila? When we went into Manila with our troops Spain with her forces went out of Manila. Whatever may be said about this mystical government which somewhere outside of Manila is alleged to have a capital, no man can deny that the insurgents never had any claim to power or sovereignty in that city.

It is said that Aguinaldo and his associates helped us to capture Manila. I do not stop to discuss the question whether that is true or not, or if true how far it is true. It is quite certain they did not help our Navy to destroy the fleet of Spain; and if they did help us to capture Manila, it only intensifies the wantonness and the willfulness of their present attitude. We are there, the Senator says, by their assistance. We are there by right. We had not moved our troops beyond the limits implied or indicated by the protocol. We were there purely upon the defensive, and this attack upon the American Army in Manila is, as I said before, as wanton, as willful, as gross a violation of every principle of right and of every rule of law as ever was known in the history of war.

Now, Mr. President, I do not know what motive led to that attack. That it was premeditated and general no man, so far as I know now, can dispute. It is said——

Mr. HOAR. Or can affirm.

Mr. SPOONER. No; can affirm or dispute. I will take that back. From the information we now have I affirm that it was premeditated and wanton, and I believe solely with reference to its effect or possible effect upon the action of the Senate in ratifying or acting upon the treaty.

It is said, and I do not know who is at liberty to deny it, that three Philippine soldiers sought, moving swiftly, to pass the American sentinel. They were challenged and retired. They tried it again and were challenged and retired. They tried it again and got what they sought, Mr. President, a shot from the American Army, and a cause, from the standpoint of the Filipinos, for a general attack on the American troops in Manila.

It is my own belief that the instigation of it all came from the city of Washington. It is my own belief that the ulterior purpose of it all was an effect or supposed effect upon the action of this body. It is very significant. Some men may be able to explain it. I have not been able upon any other hypothesis.

Yesterday morning, Mr. President, until a cablegram was received from Manila neither the President nor anyone in this country had the least suspicion, so far as I know, of any purpose over there to attack Manila, to attack our outposts, to bring on an engagement with our troops. Saturday night, many hours before we learned of the attack at Manila, Agoncillo and his associate, who have been spending some time in the city of Washington, whom our Departments have properly refused to recognize, "folded their tents like the Arabs, and silently stole away" to Canada. Some one may be able to find some satisfactory explanation of that consistent with the theory that Agoncillo did not know of this proposed attack, but I have not been able to do so.

No, Mr. President, we have a right to be in Manila. If the treaty had been rejected, we would have had a right to be in Manila as against the Filipinos. We are not in Manila as an enemy of the Filipinos. We are there succeeding, first by capture, although in violation of the armistice, afterwards by agreement with Spain, to hold that place pending this treaty.

Mr. President, the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Louisiana is not offered upon the theory of a pledge to the Filipinos. If it is voted for in the Senate, it will not be voted for upon the theory that it is a pledge by this Government to the Filipinos. It is offered and will be voted upon, upon the theory that it is in the interest of our people, and we are here to study and to subserve their interest first, Mr. President, first, always.

Having accepted this treaty, we go there claiming sovereignty; we go there claiming a title; we go there upon the theory that we have a right to go there, and we must go there, if we go at all, in a manly way, with the power of this Government and this people behind us.

I am not in favor of complicating this situation. It is no time to do it, Mr. President, by public pledges to the Filipinos. We will do our way with the Filipinos. No man can reasonably doubt that we will be just to them. But, Mr. President, to be here pottering over technicalities, pottering over resolutions, sending messages across that distant sea to that misguided and, perhaps, half-civilized people, messages liable to mislead them, messages liable, indeed calculated, to handicap this Government, to put it in a false position, to give weakness hereafter to the arm of the Executive, is, it seems to me, neither patriotic nor wise.

The treaty has been ratified. Every Senator has taken his position upon it. I criticise no man for his view upon it, but I do say, Mr. President, that while our boys over there, your brothers and mine, are fighting for life against a wanton and willful attack upon the part of the Filipinos, it is not for us to send messages of comfort to their enemies.

The Senator from Louisiana refers to the language of the President in a proclamation, "benevolent assimilation." I do not know whether assimilation is possible. If it be possible, it will be benevolent. No man has a right to criticise the President for using that language. We were among a people there who did not know us and with whom we were not familiar.

It was the duty of our Commander in Chief, clothed, Mr. President, in war with all the power which war gives under international law, to hold out the olive branch to that people. It was his duty, and he wisely exercised it by a proclamation, to indicate to them that our purpose was not an unfriendly or a hostile or a selfish purpose so far as they are concerned. Perhaps Senators here might have chosen happier language. I find nothing, however, in the language which the President used which ought here to be criticised.

We must move ahead. I repeat, Mr. President, if a resolution is to be adopted here declaring that it is not the policy of the United States to maintain permanent dominion in that archipelago it is not to conciliate the people over there; it is not as a pledge to them; it is not as a prayer by the United States Senate to them to stop firing on our men. It is in the interest of our people; it is to subserve what Senators think is the policy of our people, and nothing else.

I give no pledges, Mr. President, to any man with a revolver at my breast. This Government can not afford, and no Senator can ask it, to give a pledge to that people indefinite in its terms, however right it may be as a matter of abstract right, while they are training their guns, partly furnished by us, on American soldiers and seeking their destruction.

I am not in favor, as I stated the other day, of the permanent dominion of the United States in the Philippine Archipelago, but I hope that we will move forward upon the undisputed basis now, for it is adjudicated here that we have derived title to that archipelago; that we have won it from Spain in war, whether you call it conquest or indemnity; that we are from this time out the titular sovereign of those islands, and that we have under our Constitution the power to do there what we will within the limitations which all of the people of the United States recognize and which none of the people of the United States will ever permit to be transcended.

I see nothing in such debate here, Mr. President, but mischief. I can not forbear the utterance, for I believe it, that much of the trouble, much of the bloodshed which has come to our men on the other side of the Pacific is due to the presence here of an emissary from that people and to utterances which have been made here in the Capitol of this Republic. I wish that all of our debate upon this subject had been in secret session instead of in the open, where the contention of every Senator, however honestly and and eloquently made, could not have been cabled to a people over yonder to be misunderstood by them, incapable in their experience of government of understanding it. Let us not continue this mistake.

I would not vote for the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Louisiana but for the peculiar situation here. If absolutely free, I would not vote for it, because I believe that in our present circumstances (we can not bind the Government anyway) Congress ought not to declare what shall or shall not be done. Such a declaration is calculated to make us great trouble among a people whom we do not know, who do not know us, very far from the boundaries of our continent.

This resolution offered by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY], as was justly said by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], does not differ much from that adopted by us as to Cuba. We will establish a government there. It is declared here that it is not our policy to make that territory permanently an integral part of this country. What more can be asked? What more can we safely say at this time?

I have spoken longer than I intended, Mr. President.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. SPOONER. Of course.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to ask the Senator a question as to the meaning of the resolution. Does the Senator understand that the phraseology that we do not propose to make the Philippines a permanent and integral part of the United States is intended to mean that we do not mean to keep the islands forever under the dominion of the United States, or only to mean that the persons there shall not have the right either of being erected into States or be given the constitutional rights of citizens in ordinary Territories? That is, is this resolution intended as a limitation or an exclusion of the Filipinos, after this is consummated, from any possible constitutional rights whatever, or is it intended as a declaration that we do not mean to keep them permanently under our dominion? I should like to have the Senator answer that.

Mr. SPOONER. I think, as I said the other day, so far as their rights are concerned, they are fixed, and properly fixed, under the Constitution by the treaty; and I think the rights, as fixed by the treaty, so far as civil and political rights are concerned, remain as fixed by the treaty until Congress shall change them. I understand this to be a general declaration of the policy of the United States that it is not intended to permanently incorporate those islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States. The resolution reads:

> But it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands, to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr HOAR. Does my honorable friend understand that there is anything in these resolutions which prevents our governing and controlling those people for all national purposes—not speaking of local self-government like we have in the District of Columbia, or had formerly, but for all national purposes—forever if we think it is for our interest to do it?

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, it is not my function to expound this resolution. It has not yet been adopted, and it speaks for itself.

Mr. HOAR. But I think, if the Senator will pardon me, that in determining whether we shall vote for it the opinion of so eminent a constitutional lawyer as the Senator, who is a most zealous advocate of the views he has just stated, is very important to the rest of us, and it will be very important to the country hereafter to know what we have done. Contemporanea expositio est fortissima in lege.

Mr. SPOONER. It takes more than one man out of ninety to make a contemporaneous exposition of anything. My opinion, while I would be perfectly willing to give it to the Senator, would only be my opinion after all. I have no doubt nor can the Senator have any doubt that if we find the people over there after a while capable of self-government this Government will accord to them self-government.

Mr. HOAR. I do not know about saying that I have no doubt of it, but I want to know whether the Senator finds in that resolution anything inconsistent with our retaining permanent control there?

Mr. SPOONER. No, Mr. President. I do not find in that resolution any such thing; and if I did, I would not vote for anything which would prevent the United States from holding the decision of that proposition in its own power. It is not for the Filipinos to decide, under the circumstances, when they have a government which they think or a condition which they think qualifies them for self-government, but it is for us to decide under this resolution when they have a government or a condition which we think entitles them to self-government.

Mr. HOAR. I hate to interrupt the Senator, and I will endeavor not to do it again, but I do not quite get his attention to the point. It is not whether we are to decide that question alone. What I want to know is whether, supposing the people of the United States hereafter think those people are fitted for self-government, for independent national existence, and they want it, there is anything in the resolution which prevents the people of the United States from saying, "It is for our interest that you shall not have it, and we will not give it to you?"

Mr. SPOONER. I have a very clear opinion upon that subject.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will give me that, I should like it.

Mr. SPOONER. I will, privately.

Mr. HOAR. Oh!

Mr. SPOONER. I will send no message, so far as I am concerned, across the sea to the Filipinos, who have their guns trained on American soldiers.

Mr. GRAY. That is right.

Mr. HOAR. Is not this resolution which you pass a message to the Filipinos? What I want to understand is this: You are declaring your constitutional purposes and your sense of constitutional duty to somebody, whether to the Filipinos or to your own people, to mankind—no matter to whom.

Now, my inquiry is whether, in making that declaration, for whatever purpose or reason you make it, if you believe that these men may hereafter be fit for self-government, for independent national existence, you wish to say you will then let them enjoy it, or whether there is anything in this resolution which prevents you, if you think it is for your interest, without regard to them, to deny it to them?

Now, my honorable friend, who is making a public declaration of his opinions and purposes, is willing to vote for what is in that resolution; but he says, if I understand him, that as to that which is the essential part of the whole thing he is only going to give his opinion upon it in private.

Mr. SPOONER. I will say, Mr. President, that the resolution speaks for itself. I do not know of any man in the United States who is better able to understand it than the Senator from Massachusetts. I do not know any man in the United States who is in less need of any opinion from me as to its proper construction than the Senator from Massachusetts. I do understand it to reserve to this Government the determination of the question whether a condition has arisen over there which will entitle that people to self-government. The resolution is elastic, and if it were less so it ought unanimously to be voted down. I do not like to vote for any declaration upon the subject. I have said all I care to say about it.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, when I was upon the floor some hour or so ago I said that it was bootless to inquire what had been the cause of the effusion of blood in Manila. In that sentence I waived any contention as to whether those who had occupied the side of the question upon which I have been aligned were in any manner responsible by reason of what had been said, and I also waived it as to the other side; but now the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] directly charges that the effusion of blood in Manila has been due to what has been said upon this floor by those of us who were opposed to the treaty. The Senator from Wisconsin shakes his head. Of course I am ready to be corrected, but that is the way I understood him. If the Senator says he did not say it, I will not pursue the line upon which I was going; but it does seem to me, according to my recollection, that that was in substance what the Senator said. If I am in error, I shall be very glad if the Senator will correct me before I proceed further.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not undertake to repeat precisely what I said; but I will precisely say now that, in my judgment, in the condition of affairs over in the Philippine Archipelago, the debate in the Senate has had a tendency to bring about what has recently happened at Manila.

Mr. BACON. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. SPOONER. That is only my opinion.

Mr. BACON. That does not go so far as I had attributed to the Senator.

Mr. SPOONER. That is as far, I think, as I have gone.

Mr. BACON. Of course, we all understand from the side the Senator occupies in this debate which are the particular utterances which he thinks were productive of such an unfortunate result. I want to say two things in reply. In the first place, if I were to sit silent, and all others were to sit silent who had occupied the positions we have, it might be to some extent an admission of the possibility of the correctness of the Senator's conclusion; and as that issue is raised, I desire to say that, in my opinion, it is impossible that the advocacy of those opinions which would impose nothing upon the Philippine Islands and upon the Filipinos could have resulted in stirring up hostility among them, and that the utterances on this floor which were calculated to stir up hostility, whether they did so or not, were the utterances which advocated the imposition upon those people of a government to which they were not willing to submit.

I want to say further, Mr. President, that the utterances upon this floor by those who were opposed to the treaty were almost entirely confined to the question as to whether or not annexation was the proper thing. Nine-tenths of all that has been said in the various speeches was taken up in the advocacy of the proposition that it was not to our interest to annex those islands. In that connection I desire to say that of all the speeches which were made here there was no one which more eloquently portrayed the evil of the annexation of those islands than that which fell from the lips of the learned and distinguished Senator from Wisconsin, and if time permitted I should like to read a page or two from his speech. So, if the suggestion of the Senator carries anything with it, he invites condemnation upon himself as well as fastens it upon others.

I quite agree with the Senator from Wisconsin that the main consideration here for us is, What is to the interest of our own people? I have understood the Senator from Wisconsin to be extreme in the proposition, to stand in the front rank of those who believe that it is utterly against the interests of the people of America that we should have any annexation of the Philippine Islands, or that we should remain for a long time in control of them, and yet I am sorry to see this afternoon among the foremost of those who are now advocating that which will result in it is the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, the Senator certainly is mistaken. I think I know—possibly I am wrong about it—that the acceptance of cession is annexation; and I spoke against permanent dominion of the United States in the Philippine Archipelago. I favored the ratification of the treaty.

Mr. BACON. Let me read the Senator a sentence or two from his speech, and possibly he will recognize it. In the speech to which I have alluded—and it was certainly a very learned and able and eloquent speech, one which excited pride in the breasts of all of us that it should have been delivered by a Senator of the United States—the learned Senator used this language. I can read only a very little of it. I read from page 1581 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

> Every argument which has been made in support of this doctrine of territorial expansion—and by "territorial expansion" I mean permanent territorial expansion—seems to me to be superficial, some of them sentimental, and some of them fantastic.
> The jingle of words which we read every day about "hauling down the flag" does not in the least either thrill me or impress me. Our flag has been hauled down before, Mr. President. It will be hauled down again.

If there was anything uttered in this debate which was calculated—if the suggestion of the Senator is correct, that the utterances here were so calculated—to excite that people to hostile action, it was the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin that the flag of the United States might be hauled down. Of course I know what the Senator meant, but the Senator was speaking about things which were inspired from Washington; and when the Senator standing in his place here spoke and advocated the hauling down of the flag at Manila, he certainly gave as much encouragement to hostile action as was given by any utterance of any other Senator. He said further:

> We have been growing rapidly in our trade without territorial expansion. To acquire distant, nonassimilable peoples in order, through permanent dominion, to force our trade upon them seems to me to be the poorest imaginable national policy. How far will that be carried? We want the trade of the world, and we intend to have our share of it. Are we, therefore, to obtain it by carrying this doctrine of expansion to the uttermost parts of the earth? If territorial expansion means national trade, if it be necessary to national trade, where are we to stop?

I fully and entirely agree with the Senator in all that suggestion and in all that part of his speech, and I do not criticise it; but I do say that if the suggestion made by him that the discussion here was calculated to excite hostility over there, so far as it related to opposition to expansion, the Senator has his full share of the responsibility.

Mr. President, one other word. The Senator knows the vantage ground on which he stands, and none is quicker to take advantage of it than he when he appeals to the pride of nationality and speaks of the fact that the amendments which are offered here are in the interest of the Filipinos, who have guns pointed at the breasts of our soldiers. I wish simply to remind the Senator of one thing, and that is, that throughout this discussion the contention of those who have stood with him has been that the armed forces of the Filipinos in the Philippine Islands constitute but an insignificant fraction, an almost imperceptible element in those islands.

The amendments which we have offered have not been in the interest of that particular very small fraction, but have been in the interest of the 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 people of all of those islands; and it is not consistent with the suggestion which they have made as to the small number of those who are opposed to the control of the American Government to now reply, whenever anything is said in favor of the rights of those people to self-government, that no concession should be made to them, because, forsooth, they have guns pointed at the breasts of our own soldiers.

I quite agree with the Senator from Wisconsin that if it were true that those people constituted the population of the entire islands we could say nothing in their favor until this condition of war had been superseded by peace; but when they constitute, as it is said here, an insignificant, insurrectionary fraction of the population, amounting to nothing more than a mere band of outlaws, their hostility to this Government is no reason why all rights should be denied to the 10,000,000 people of those islands.

I do not desire, Mr. President, to detain the Senate longer.

Mr. TILLMAN obtained the floor.

Mr. WARREN. Will the Senator from South Carolina yield to me a moment?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. WARREN. Thanking the Senator for his courtesy, I wish to have read, and a record made thereof, a telegram from the legislature of Wyoming sent through the governor of that State to me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested, in the absence of objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

CHEYENNE, WYO., February 6, 1899.

Hon. F. E. WARREN:

The legislature this day, by unanimous vote, has passed resolution urging you to use all honorable means to secure the immediate ratification of the treaty with Spain, and request me to wire their action to you. Enrolled resolution will follow by mail.

DE FOREST RICHARDS, Governor.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, if this matter can be postponed and a date agreed upon by the Senate, or some time fixed when this resolution may come up again, I will now yield the floor; otherwise I should like to go on.

Mr. ALDRICH. Can not we agree to fix a time to take a vote on the pending resolution and amendments? I would suggest that we take a vote on the resolution and amendments at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Several SENATORS. Take it now.

Mr. ALDRICH. Well, take it now.

Mr. BACON. No; the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] has the floor.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the resolution can be concluded this evening.

Mr. TILLMAN. I have agreed to yield the floor if the resolution shall go over, so that I may have the floor when it is again taken up. As to a vote, I do not care about that after I get through. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that we agree to vote at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope there will not be any more unanimous-consent agreements asked for about resolutions relating to the treaty. I feel disposed to object to any such suggestion that may be made.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I agree with the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am tired of unanimous-consent agreements.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to give notice that to-morrow I shall ask the Senate to consider the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] has the floor.

Mr. ELKINS. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. TILLMAN. You can not take me off the floor to make that motion.

Mr. ELKINS. I thought the Senator wanted an adjournment.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do; but I want to have an understanding, when this resolution comes up again, that I shall have the right to speak on it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina has the right to speak on it now.

Mr. PASCO. The resolution comes up to-morrow at 2 o'clock as the unfinished business, and the Senator can then proceed with his speech. It has displaced the previous unfinished business.

Mr. CULLOM. There is an order of unfinished business already pending.

Mr. PASCO. The resolution which has been under consideration was taken up by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. I understood the anti-scalping bill was to remain as the unfinished business.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There is no such understanding.

Mr. HOAR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts rises to a parliamentary inquiry, which he will state.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to ask the Chair if the pending resolution did not displace the unfinished business when it was taken up by a vote of the Senate without any reservation? Does not the resolution, therefore, come up at 2 o'clock to-morrow? I ask further, that being the case, whether a simple majority vote of the Senate can not at any time displace it and put back the other order as the unfinished business?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the parliamentary situation to be that the pending resolution, when it goes over to-day, takes its place upon the Calendar. The unfinished business is the bill laid aside to-day by unanimous consent.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to call the attention of the Chair to the precise proposition. This was not a resolution taken up in the morning hour, to which what the Chair said would be applicable and true; but it was taken up after 4 o'clock by an ordinary vote to proceed to its consideration, just as if it had been the Nicaragua Canal bill or any other bill. That, as I claim, displaces the unfinished business and makes the resolution the unfinished business at 2 o'clock to-morrow. I make the point with great respect to the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair reminds the Senator from Massachusetts that the resolution which has been under discussion was introduced to-day, and is really under a unanimous-consent agreement. It was taken up by a vote of the Senate, it is true.

Mr. HOAR. But was not introduced in the morning hour or under the morning business. The Senate voted to proceed to its consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the opinion of the Chair, the resolution is in the same condition as other morning business.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to say a word. There has been an understanding with reference to the bill against ticket brokerage that it should not be accidentally displaced, and that if it were accidentally displaced it should be again restored. If it were deliberately displaced by a vote of the Senate, that would be another thing. That has been the understanding all along between the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] and myself, in order to avoid the necessity of keeping watch all the time upon that bill.

Mr. HOAR. Is that your understanding?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. HOAR. I never heard of it.

Mr. CULLOM. There was a general understanding that the anti-scalping bill should not be displaced by any question connected with the treaty; and that has been stated in open Senate time and again.

Mr. CHANDLER. Or accidentally displaced at all.

Mr. CULLOM. So, as the Vice-President has stated, there was no occasion for any concern about it, because the unanimous-consent arrangement would keep it as the unfinished business.

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw the point of order on that statement. I was not aware and had never heard of that arrangement. It probably was made while I was not here.

Mr. TILLMAN. I have been asked by a good many Senators to put off the debate until another time, when we will be less tired and under less mental strain and excitement than we are now. I therefore give notice that I will call up the joint resolution in the morning, immediately after the conclusion of the morning business, and will submit a few remarks thereon.

Mr. ALDRICH. I give notice that I will endeavor to have the joint resolution disposed of during the morning hour.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to give notice that at an early hour to-morrow I shall call up the Indian appropriation bill.

TICKET BROKERAGE.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by title.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1575) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce."

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 7, 1899, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 6, 1899.

Lizzie Vaupel, to be postmaster at Morganfield, in the county of Union and State of Kentucky.

John S. Miller, to be postmaster at Greenville, in the county of Muhlenburg and State of Kentucky.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 6, 1899.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of Saturday's proceedings was read and approved.

RECALL OF A BILL.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President be requested to return to the Senate the bill of the Senate No. 569, granting an increase of pension to Clarinda S. Hillman.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit for the concurrence of the House the resolution just received from the Senate.

The resolution was taken up, read, and agreed to.

ADMISSION OF COSTA RICAN STUDENT TO NAVAL ACADEMY.

Mr. HILBORN. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 218) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Ricardo Yglesias, of of Costa Rica.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to permit Ricardo Yglesias, of Costa Rica, to receive instruction at the Naval Academy, at Annapolis: Provided, That no expense shall be caused to the United States thereby: And provided further, Tha in the case of the said Ricardo Yglesias the Secretary of the Navy may modify or dispense with any provisions of the rules and regulations of the said Academy which circumstances may, in his opinion, render necessary or desirable.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. Speaker, the representative of the Government of Costa Rica has made on behalf of his Government the request with which this resolution proposes compliance, and the Secretary of the Navy recommends that the joint resolution be passed.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to consider the joint resolution; which was read three times, and passed.

ADMISSION OF STUDENT FROM COLOMBIA TO NAVAL ACADEMY.

Mr. HILBORN. There is another resolution of similar character to the one just passed, and I ask its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 219) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Alberto Valenzuela Montoya, of Colombia.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive for instruction at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Alberto Valenzuela Montoya, of Colombia: Provided, That no expense shall thereby accrue to the United States: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy may, in the case of the said Montoya, modify or dispense with any provisions of the rules and regulations of the said Academy which circumstances may, in his opinion, render necessary or desirable.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I suggest to the gentleman from California [Mr. HILBORN] that it seems to me, without any special knowledge on the subject, not to be a wise procedure on the part of our Government to allow almost every other government the privilege of educating young men of their nation at our Academy, thus familiarizing them with our ships and our methods. It is to be hoped that we shall never have a misunderstanding, much less a collision, with our neighbors to the south of us, but if we should, almost every one of those South American countries will have in its service men who have been educated at our Military or Naval Academy and who will be familiar with the secrets, if secrets there be, of our modes of warfare.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. Speaker, this is a privilege which we have frequently granted heretofore, and it would attract attention if we should now refuse the request which has been made on behalf of this South American Government by its representative.

Mr. BAILEY. I simply desired to know whether the committee had taken into consideration the view of the case which I have suggested. It may be that there are no secrets that these students at the Military and Naval Academies learn; I am not informed as to that. But if there are special facts that come to the knowledge of students there, it is not wise to communicate them to people of foreign nations. I realize that it might now seem like an act of discourtesy——

Mr. HILBORN. That is it.

Mr. BAILEY (continuing). To refuse this request when similar requests have been granted. But does not the gentleman realize that when we have permitted young men from two or three foreign nations to enjoy this privilege it becomes an act of discourtesy to deny it to anybody? So that as the result of this policy we must ultimately have at our Naval and Military Academies young men from almost every nation on earth educated there in a knowledge of our secrets.

Mr. HILBORN. I do not think that the students——

Mr. GAINES. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. HILBORN. Certainly.

Mr. GAINES. If we admit this young man as an act of courtesy, must we not, as the gentleman from Texas has well said, admit young men from every other nation that may make a similar request? Does the gentleman from California believe that that would be desirable or wise?

Mr. HILBORN. Oh, well, we have always done this whenever a request of this kind has been made; and I do not think we are likely to carry the thing to any dangerous extent.

Mr. GAINES. If we have always done wrong that is no reason why we should continue to do so. I object to any such bill.

Mr. HILBORN. I hope the gentleman will not insist on the objection.

Mr. GAINES. Well, I withdraw my objection in this case; but I give notice now that hereafter I shall not consent to teaching foreigners in our military schools in order, in effect, that they may know better how to fight us in the future.

Mr. HILBORN. I do not think the representatives of Colombia will be dangerous.

Mr. GAINES. We have permitted one man to obtain a patent for armor plate, and he has gone off and sold it to foreigners, and they have used it on their war ships, and they have thereby become better fighters. Such a thing is a disgraceful act and an outrage; and I think no loyal American would do it. [Applause.]

There being no objection, the House proceeded to consider the joint resolution; which was read three times, and passed.

Mr. HILBORN. I move to reconsider the votes by which these two joint resolutions have been passed, and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

INDEBTEDNESS ALBUQUERQUE, N. MEX.

Mr. FERGUSSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8694) to enable the city of Albuquerque, N. Mex., to create certain indebtedness, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Albuquerque, in the county of Bernalillo and Territory of New Mexico, is hereby authorized and empowered to issue bonds of the said city in a sum not to exceed $65,000 in all, in such denominations and at such rate of interest as the municipal government of said city shall provide, notwithstanding the act of Congress approved July 30, 1886, entitled "An act to prohibit the passage of local or special laws in the Territories of the United States, to limit Territorial indebtedness, and for other purposes." And any and all bonds of the said city issued in pursuance of the terms of this act shall be valid and binding obligations of said city, notwithstanding the same or any part thereof may be in excess of the limit of municipal indebtedness fixed by said act of Congress approved July 30, 1886.

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

The Committee on the Territories recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

In line 6, page 2, after the word "six," insert the following proviso:

"Provided, That the bonds issued by virtue of this act shall be issued only for the purpose of funding the warrants of said city outstanding on the 1st day of January, 1898. Such bonds shall not be disposed of for less than their par value, and shall not bear a greater rate of interest than 6 per cent per annum."

Mr. COX. Before consent is given——

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration?

Mr. COX. I was desirous, Mr. Speaker, of making inquiry of the gentleman before consent is given.

Mr. PAYNE. Reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. COX. It was my purpose to reserve the right.

Mr. PAYNE. What is the limit to which the city can issue bonds at this time?

Mr. FERGUSSON. Sixty-five thousand dollars is the total amount authorized by the pending bill.

Mr. PAYNE. But this is an authorization beyond the limit of the present law, as I understand the bill. Now, what is the law, and what is the outstanding indebtedness?

Mr. PERKINS. Four per cent on the assessed valuation of the property in the city. And this originated in this manner—if the gentleman from New York will permit me:

The shrinkage in the value of the assessments caught the city with many of its warrants outstanding, and for which provision is here made as to their payment. That is to say, warrants for the expenses of the water service, the fire department, and other branches of the city government. Under the provisions of an act of the legislative assembly, which is now the law of the Territory, all the floating indebtedness was required to be refunded in interest-bearing bonds of the city, and prohibiting any expenditure or the issuance of any bonds beyond the actual current income of the city; so that the city was caught on the 1st day of January, 1898, with this floating indebtedness of about $65,000, which could not be paid except from the current revenues of the city; and, as I have said, the shrinkage in values prevented its payment in this manner.

It is a just debt and ought to be paid. The Committee on Territories exhaustively went into the matter, examined carefully every question connected with it, held it under advisement for a long time, and finally recommended the adoption of the bill which I have just asked to have passed.

Mr. PAYNE. How much is 4 per cent on the present liability of the city?

Mr. FERGUSSON. I have not the amount at hand.

Mr. PAYNE. To what extent is the city bonded?

Mr. FERGUSSON. Only up to 4 per cent of the value of the assessment.

Mr. PAYNE. But how much does that involve?

Mr. FERGUSSON. I do not remember exactly. The report, however, sets out the whole amount.

Mr. PAYNE. Do you know what the percentage is on the assessed valuation of the property?

Mr. FERGUSSON. I do not. But there is no provision except by an act of Congress for meeting this liability now.

Mr. BAILEY. The debt was already incurred, I will say to the gentleman from New York. This limitation was placed on the issue of warrants on the 1st day of January, 1898, the legislature having prohibited the payment in any other way after the debt was incurred.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BAILEY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. GROW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent of the House to introduce the resolution I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of both Houses concurring), That the following article be proposed to the legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of said legislatures, shall be valid, to all intents and purposes, as a part of said Constitution, namely: "The President, as Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy of the United States, shall have power to negotiate treaties of peace in order to terminate hostilities in any war in which the United States may be engaged: Provided, That a majority of the Senators present ratify such treaty."

Mr. GROW. I ask unanimous consent of the House for one minute before moving to refer the resolution to the appropriate committee.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I do not understand what this is. Is it a motion to suspend the rules, or a request for unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to address the House on the resolution.

Mr. GROW. For about a minute only.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GROW. Mr. Speaker, it is a singular provision in our Constitution that a majority can make war, but can not make peace. This simply provides that a majority may do that. I move the reference of this resolution to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the resolution be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. Without objection, that reference will be made.

There was no objection.

JAMES AND EMMA S. CAMERON.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1478) for the relief of James and Emma S. Cameron for occupation of property and for fuel taken and used by the United States Army during the war.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay the sum of $10,000, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Emma S. Cameron, in full satisfaction and payment for occupation of her separate property and for fuel taken therefrom and used by Gen. W. S. Rosecrans's army while at Chattanooga, Tenn., from September, 1863, until the close of the war, and which amount of $10,000 was found due by a special commission appointed by Major-General Rosecrans to adjust claims against the United States on full proof and investigation of the facts.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I ask for the reading of the report.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. A second is demanded.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman waive that right until the report is read?

Mr. BAILEY. I demand it, but I am willing that a second shall be considered as ordered.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, if the Clerk will read the report——

Mr. BAILEY. I want to ask the gentleman from Ohio if this is one of the bills included in what is known as the omnibus claim bill, that is now pending in conference?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not know whether that is the case or not. I have no personal interest in this bill, but it is a bill that has been reported favorably in every Congress here since the Forty-second, and I think if the gentleman will listen to the reading of the report he will not object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BAILEY. My question was intended merely to meet this: I do not think that any of those bills included in that general bill ought to be taken out of it. I think they all ought to pass or fall alike.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think when my friend hears this report he will feel that this one ought to be passed anyhow, under any circumstances. I ask for the reading of the report.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. One moment. The House will be in order. Gentlemen should recollect that there is an unusual attendance of Members, Members-elect, and ex-Members, and that on that account there is a considerable addition to the usual noise, which is of itself sufficient ordinarily to prevent the transaction of business. [Laughter.] And if gentlemen will have the kindness to bear this in mind, and to mitigate, each one of them, what they are doing in that respect, we may be able to understand what is going on. Otherwise we can not.

Mr. COX. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to know if that claim has ever been passed upon by the Court of Claims or ever been allowed by the Quartermaster-General?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio at present has the floor, and is having the report read in his time.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The reading of the report will answer all these questions.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. WEAVER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1478) for the relief of James and Emma S. Cameron, submit the following report:

The facts out of which this bill for relief arises will be found stated in Senate report from the Committee on Claims of the present Congress, a copy of which is hereto appended as a part of this report.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

[Senate Report No. 80, Fifty-fifth Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1478) for the relief of James and Emma S. Cameron, having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

This claim has been reported favorably upon by the Senate Committee on Claims in the Forty-second, Forty-third, Fifty-first, Fifty-second, and Fifty-fourth Congresses, and a bill passed the Senate in the Forty-third, Fifty-first, and Fifty-second Congresses.

The claim has also been reported favorably to the House in the Fifty-first, Fifty-second, Fifty-third, and Fifty-fourth Congresses.

A copy of the Senate report, Fifty-second Congress, is hereto attached and made a part of this report.

Your committee recommend that the bill pass.

[Senate Report No. 155, Fifty-second Congress, first session.]

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 634) to authorize and direct the Secretary of War to investigate the claim made for fuel alleged to have been taken and used by the United States Army during the war from the property in Chattanooga known as Cameron Hill, and to provide for the payment thereof, having had the same under consideration, make the following report:

The same claim, but in the form of a bill to pay Emma S. Cameron for property taken and used by the Army of the United States during the late war, was favorably reported by the Committee on Claims of the Senate of the Forty-second Congress, and passed the Senate, but was not acted on in the House.

It was also reported upon favorably by the same committee of the Senate of the Forty-third Congress. It was also acted upon in like manner by this committee in the Fifty-first Congress, but amended in the Senate to take substantially the form of the bill as now presented, and so passed the Senate. In each of said reports the allowance recommended was $10,000, and a like allowance was recommended by the Committee on War Claims of the House in the first session of the Fifty-first Congress.

James Cameron and Emma S. Cameron were before and during the late war of the rebellion the owners of a homestead in the suburbs of the city of Chattanooga, Tenn., known as Cameron Hill, containing about 37 acres, the same having been paid for out of the patrimony of Mrs. Cameron. The location was a beautiful and a commanding one. About 34 acres of this land were thickly covered with a forest of large oak trees. Two and a half acres were highly cultivated to orchard and grape. The dwelling house, studio, small house, barn, outbuildings, fences, and improvements were in a good state of repair. This property was occupied as a residence by Mr. Cameron and his wife at the time of the breaking out of the war. In September, 1863, the Union Army, under command of General Rosecrans, entered the city of Chattanooga and took possession of this property and made such use of the premises as the commander thought for the best interests of the Army.

The trees, including orchard, were cut down and mostly used by the troops for fuel; the same use was made of the fences and outhouses and all the structures except the residence.

The proofs show that this was absolutely necessary, as the weather was extremely cold and there was no other available supply of fuel. The proofs make it further apparent that, for the purpose of maintaining its position at Chattanooga, the Army was compelled to further permanently injure and disfigure said premises by the erection of earthworks upon them, and that the residence—a commodious one, built of concrete—and the premises were occupied and used by our troops until the close of the war.

The loyalty of Mr. Cameron and his wife was so marked, and their cheerful sacrifices for the aid and comfort of the Union soldiers so frequent and constant, as to attract the attention and secure the good will of the commanding and many subordinate officers of our Army.

By Special Field Order, No. 6, Major-General Rosecrans appointed a commission to adjust claims against the United States.

Mr. Cameron and his wife filed claim before this commission for the destruction of the buildings, fences, timber, orchards, and other injuries done this property and for the use and occupation of it by the Union troops.

Upon the proofs taken at the time a finding was made in their favor of $200,000. Numerous affidavits and documents attest the loyalty of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron and the facts of fences, buildings, and timber being consumed by the Federal Army for fuel.

Among the documents submitted to the committee in support of this claim is the following letter from Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, commanding the armies of the United States, addressed to Mrs. Cameron:

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
City Point, Va., August 9, 1865.

MY DEAR MADAM: Your letter of the 8th of July was duly received, but not so promptly answered. I know yours to be a case where prompt payment should be made, and am willing to indorse your claim. I believe that your property at Chattanooga has been appraised by a board of officers. If so, send me the proceedings of the board and I will make my indorsement and return them to you. If you have no such evidence of the claim, inform me and I will order a board to assess it and will indorse the proceedings. This will be the first step toward a collection.

Yours, truly,

U. S. GRANT.

Mrs. CAMERON.

And also the following indorsement, made by General Grant upon the statement of the claim as made to commission under Field Order, No. 6:

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
City Point, Va., October 25, 1865.

I know the property within described, and the parties owning it, well. Mr. Cameron and his wife have been unflinching friends of the Government from the beginning of our troubles to the present day. There are no more thoroughly loyal people anywhere in the North, and they are entitled to protection and pay for their property converted to Government use. What is now known as Fort Cameron, Chattanooga, was the private property of Mr. Cameron. From its elevated and commanding position it had to be taken and fortified. By this means the entire property, with improvements, has been entirely destroyed for private use. I would recommend that the property be purchased at a fair valuation for Government use.

U. S. GRANT, General.

The committee recommend that the bill pass, with the amendment that the allowance made and paid shall not exceed $10,000, and that such amendment be made by adding the following to the end thereof:

"Provided, That no greater amount than $10,000 shall be allowed or paid to such person or persons."

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I think the reading of that report is all the information necessary for the guidance of the House. There are a great many gentleman here who know what the condition of Cameron Hill was at Chattanooga, and how valuable it was, almost in the heart of that city, with its splendid orchards and fine groves of timber. In the course of the preparation of that hill for defense, on account of its strategic importance, the timber was all taken away. There is not a tree on it to-day.

Mr. STEELE. I will ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that not only were the trees all cut down, but that the stumps were cut down and the roots dug up?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Everything of a wooden character was extirpated. The surface of the hill was transformed into battlements, and it served a very important purpose to the Union Army. Now, I do not know any of the family personally, but I am informed that the claimant to be benefited is an old lady somewhere in the neighborhood of 73, as I understand it, reduced from affluence to poverty. The loyalty of these people is asserted by General Grant. The value of the property taken was estimated at $20,000 by a board ordered by General Rosecrans.

This bill has been reported by every Congress since the Forty-second, and is now cut down to the sum of $10,000. I can answer any questions gentlemen may desire to ask.

Mr. HENDERSON. How much does the bill carry?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Ten thousand dollars.

Mr. HENDERSON. How much land was there taken?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The whole of the land.

Mr. HENDERSON. What was this property taken for?
Mr. GROSVENOR. It was taken for the purposes of firewood and timber.
Mr. HENDERSON. Is this for timber only?
Mr. GROSVENOR. No; this is the statement made. I will read it again.
Mr. HENDERSON. I did not hear the report.
Mr. GROSVENOR (reading)—

The location was a beautiful and a commanding one. About 34 acres of this land were thickly covered with a forest of large oak trees. Two and a half acres were highly cultivated to orchard and grape. The dwelling house, studio, small house, barn, outbuildings, fences, and improvements were in a good state of repair. This property was occupied as a residence by Mr. Cameron and his wife at the time of the breaking out of the war. In September, 1863, the Union Army, under command of General Rosecrans, entered the city of Chattanooga and took possession of this property and made such use of the premises as the commander thought for the best interests of the Army.

The trees, including orchard, were cut down and mostly used by the troops for fuel; the same use was made of the fences and outhouses and all the structures except the residence.

The proofs show that this was absolutely necessary, as the weather was extremely cold and there was no other available supply of fuel. The proofs make it further apparent that, for the purpose of maintaining its position at Chattanooga, the Army was compelled to further permanently injure and disfigure said premises by the erection of earthworks upon them, and that the residence—a commodious one, built of concrete—and the premises were occupied and used by our troops until the close of the war.

The loyalty of Mr. Cameron and his wife was so marked, and their cheerful sacrifices for the aid and comfort of the Union soldiers so frequent and constant, as to attract the attention and secure the good will of the commanding and many subordinate officers of our Army.

Mr. DALZELL. I would like to renew the question asked by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY]. Is this now in the omnibus bill?
Mr. GROSVENOR. I can now inform the gentleman that it is not.
Mr. DALZELL. I would like to ask the gentleman why not?
Mr. GROSVENOR. The report shows that the claim has always stood upon the report of the commission appointed by the general commanding.
Mr. CANNON. I notice that this bill is for the benefit of Mrs. Cameron. I notice also that the report shows that the property was Mr. Cameron's.
Mr. GROSVENOR. He is dead.
Mr. CANNON. I will ask the gentleman whether by proceedings before the Quartermaster-General's Department this claim was not adjudicated and paid?
Mr. GROSVENOR. It was never before the Quartermaster-General's Department.
Mr. CANNON. Why?
Mr. GROSVENOR. Because it stood, as I say, always upon what seemed to be a better condition—the report of the board of commissioners appointed by General Rosecrans.
Mr. CANNON. Well, that reports for two hundred thousand.
Mr. GROSVENOR. That is a mistake. It should be twenty thousand. I have corrected it.
Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman speak of his own personal knowledge of this property?
Mr. GROSVENOR. I speak absolutely from my own knowledge, and there are a score or more gentlemen on this floor who will sustain me in what I have said.
Mr. CANNON. Does the gentleman speak of his own knowledge when he says that the timber has not been paid for?
Mr. GROSVENOR. I do.
Mr. CANNON (continuing). By proceedings before the Quartermaster-General or otherwise?
Mr. GROSVENOR. I do; and state further that if the House will pass this bill, before it shall be signed by the President I will see to it that an official statement in that regard shall reach him.
Mr. CANNON. Well, but the gentleman ought to be able to say.
Mr. GROSVENOR. I do say, without qualification, that not one dollar was ever paid for that property.
Mr. CANNON. If the gentleman has examined——
Mr. GROSVENOR. I have examined, and I have the statement of a very skillful attorney who has also examined; and I have done this whole thing because of my sympathy for the people living in Tennessee [laughter on the Democratic side] and because I know myself the facts alleged in this report.
Mr. CANNON. I am only asking the gentleman a question, because I should very much doubt whether $10,000 worth of oak timber could be cut off 34 acres of land.
Mr. GROSVENOR. But the gentleman has not quite covered the ground. Some of you gentlemen know all about this whole matter. Now, we used the whole of the property. There were 34 acres of fine oak, besides the orchard and grapes, and a large house and other buildings. There are a score of gentlemen on the floor who know all about this property. Every vestige of civilization was swept off the top of that hill except the mansion house, which our officers occupied.
Mr. CANNON. General Grant has stated that he would recommend that the property be purchased at a fair valuation for Government use. Was this property there worth $300 an acre?
Mr. GROSVENOR. It was worth more than a thousand dollars an acre.
Mr. CANNON. It is still there.
Mr. GROSVENOR. It is still there, and desolate.
Mr. CANNON. What is it now worth?
Mr. GROSVENOR. It is the hill, which many gentlemen will remember, on which we planted the flag, when the Confederate flag was pulled down and the Union flag was carried up, in the presence of Frank Cheatham, General Gordon, and others in the great reunion of Federals and Confederates at Chattanooga.
Mr. CANNON. I am quite willing for this $10,000 to be paid to this old lady; I am quite willing that it shall be a gift; but let it be understood that you pay for the place, but not for the felling of the timber. If you are going to pay for felling timber you are going to get into claims for damages to real estate; and I do think myself, taking that view of it, that they should put this claim upon this ground.
Now, I am quite content, on the gentleman's showing, to so amend this bill, if he thinks it ought to be done, as to absolutely pay this lady $10,000—well, by gift, on account of the loyalty of her people, and on account of the circumstances; but when you undertake to pay for the value of timber and supplies, $10,000 for 34 acres of oak timber, it establishes a precedent that in my judgment ought not to be established.
Mr. GROSVENOR. My friend does not read the report nor listen to me. We took the entire property and despoiled it for our use. It was in fine condition, and we swept all that timber away and built forts. The gentlemen on that side are familiar with the great fortifications on Cameron Hill.
Mr. CANNON. I would like to ask my friend from Ohio if, among all the great battlefields where forts were constructed, Congress at any time has entered upon a policy of paying damages done to the realty?
Mr. DOCKERY. I would like to suggest that this is a precedent, unless my memory is at fault.
Mr. GROSVENOR. There is not a single element of it in this, and the gentleman from Missouri is mistaken. The trees of the orchard were cut down and hauled away by the troops for fuel, and the same was true of the fences and the outhouses and all the structures, except the mansion itself. The proof shows that this was absolutely necessary.
Mr. Cameron and his wife filed claims before the commission for the destruction of the buildings, the taking of the fences, timber, orchards, etc., and that investigation, made by order of General Rosecrans, was made on full knowlege of the kind of people they were, and there was an allowance of $30,000 made. It has stood from that time down to this day, until the family is impoverished and all but this lady is dead. Mr. Speaker, I have said all I can say.
Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Ohio if he has an estimate of the various items allowed, showing their value?
Mr. GROSVENOR. I have not, but I stand on the record made by the report of that commission.
Mr. LLOYD. Was there any appraisement by any board of appraisers?
Mr. GROSVENOR. There was.
Mr. LLOYD. Has the gentleman that appraisal?
Mr. GROSVENOR. It was made by a military commission appointed by General Rosecrans, but what became of their records nobody knows. The ordinary course of things was to have a board to estimate the value, and they estimated the value of the property at $20,000.
Mr. LLOYD. Was there any evidence before the War Department as to the value of the timber taken?
Mr. GROSVENOR. Most assuredly there must have been. These officers constituting this board were there on the ground, and had knowledge of the facts themselves.
Mr. LLOYD. Have not claims of this kind ordinarily gone before the Court of Claims for adjudication?
Mr. GROSVENOR. There was never any claim made except before this commission. General Grant came into full knowledge of all the facts after the report of the Rosecrans board, and recommended the payment of the sum asked for, and this bill has stood upon that foundation ever since.
Mr. CANNON. All that General Grant recommended was that the Government purchase the Cameron property.
Mr. GROSVENOR. That was during the war.
Mr. CANNON. During 1864.
Mr. GROSVENOR. That was during the war, and at that time they were building the fortifications on the hill.
The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] has control of the time in opposition.
Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] such time as he desires.
Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, the confusion is so great that I was unable to hear the statement of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] as to the machinery that was employed to ascertain the value of the property, and I will be glad if the gentleman will state just how it was estimated that it amounted to $10,000.

Mr. GROSVENOR. By Special Field Order No. 6, Major-General Rosecrans appointed a commission to adjust this claim and others against the United States. Evidence was taken at the time in all the claims as to the value of the property actually taken, and there never was a thought of paying damages for the use of the property.

Mr. LACEY. What became of the other claims?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Scores of them have been paid. I will tell the gentleman. This claim was investigated by the same men that investigated the claims of the churches in Chattanooga, and payment was made for every one of them except that in the case of the Catholic Church. The Quartermaster's Department refused to pay that claim because it was for property taken and not for the damages done to the property by reason of occupation, and doubtless gentlemen will remember that four or five years ago I called up and had passed a bill to pay the Catholic Church $28,000 that had been reported as due them by that same board of appraisers.

Mr. DOCKERY. That was for use and occupation?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No, that was for the stone. It was a stone church and unfinished then, and they took the stone and hauled it away and put it into the forts on top of Cameron Hill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Where does this lady now reside—in Chattanooga?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes; she is an old lady, and lives in Chattanooga.

Mr. SULZER. How much does this bill carry?

Mr. GROSVENOR. Ten thousand dollars—one-half of the sum found to be due by the commission appointed by General Rosecrans.

Mr. DOCKERY. Of course, if this bill be passed it opens the door wide to all claims for the taking of property in the Southern and other States of the Union. I make no point about the claim coming from the State of Tennessee; but, speaking from recollection, I have made the statement—and I believe it to be correct, or substantially so, at least—that the Government in extending relief of this kind has heretofore limited its contributions to public institutions and, in the main, for use and occupation of public institutions by the armies of the United States.

I did not know that there was any precedent established by Congress, at least in recent years, that warranted a bill of this sort—paying damages for timber or for the construction of earthworks on a farm. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] refers to a bill that had passed from my memory—a bill compensating certain parties for the use of stone, I believe. That, however, as a gentleman on my right advises me, was the case of a church.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman will allow me to say, in answer to a question which has been raised, that this claim was examined by the same board that investigated other cases of the same kind.

Mr. DOCKERY. If we enter upon the payment of damages incident to the movements of our armies during the late civil war, the question arises whether the Treasury of the United States will be able to meet this additional line of obligations.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I do not wish to embarrass the gentleman, but he will allow me to ask whether he does not remember that last year, or during the present Congress, the Appropriations Committee put upon one of their bills an appropriation to pay $1,200 upon a claim like this—the claim of a man named Kennedy, who went to the Appropriations Committee with his claim after the Committee on War Claims had rejected it?

Mr. DOCKERY. I have no recollection of such a claim; and I certainly had nothing to do with the incorporation of any such item in one of the appropriation bills. If it was so incorporated, it is in my opinion a bad precedent. Whatever may have been the merit of the claim, it was not entitled to recognition by giving it a place on an appropriation bill. If it was entitled to be paid, payment should have been provided for by a separate bill.

I have nothing to add except to say that, in my judgment, this legislation opens the door very wide for raids upon the Treasury. I know nothing about this particular bill, except what has been stated by the gentleman from Ohio. I shall vote against the bill.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman from Missouri yield to me a minute or two?

Mr. DOCKERY. Certainly. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, it may be that there are special circumstances concerning Mr. and Mrs. Cameron that would entitle them to the consideration of the Government to the extent of $10,000. If so, I am willing to vote it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. CANNON. No; not now. I say, it may be there are some circumstances surrounding the Camerons that entitle them to special consideration—that entitle them to receive $10,000 as a gift from the Government. There are such cases. If this is such a one, I am quite ready to vote for it.

The gentleman says this old lady is needy. I am not at all conversant with the circumstances. I never heard of the case before. But I do say it is passing strange, if the Government owed these parties for fuel or supplies, that they were not paid many years ago, because the tribunals have been open all the time. I undertake to say that the Government does not owe $10,000 for fuel taken from 34 acres of land.

"Ah, but," says the gentleman, "we are going to pay for damages done; the army threw up fortifications." Well, sir, we never have acknowledged any liability on the part of the Government in such cases; and the moment we embark upon the business of voting compensation in cases of that kind, we establish a new principle. For these reasons I shall vote against this bill.

Mr. BAILEY. I yield five or six minutes to my colleague [Mr. SLAYDEN].

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I do not know enough about this particular claim to declare my position upon it. I am willing to accept the statement of honorable gentlemen who have investigated it. But I have been somewhat interested in claims of this character, because since I came here I have seen the efforts of members to press their claims upon the attention of the House, and I have had brought to my knowledge the fact that there were pending a great many claims against the Government, more or less just. It has seemed to me that the wisdom of this body ought to suggest some means of relieving this House of the enormous consumption of time in discussing these claims, which might be adjudicated by some court, existing or to be created, with proper authority.

I have had in my charge a claim which I have been endeavoring to bring before the House—a claim arising subsequent to the war. Certain Federal officials—officers of the Army—came to Port Lavaca, in the State of Texas, in the year 1865, and under a contract made by the quartermaster with the owner of the property took possession of the wharves of Port Lavaca, and under that contract occupied them about eight months. When they were returned to the owner they asked him for his bill, which was given, itemized in every particular. That claim was referred by the quartermaster in immediate charge to his superior, who in turn sent it to the quartermaster-general then located at New Orleans, who replied that he had no authority to pay claims arising in a State lately in rebellion, although every step in connection with this indebtedness was taken after actual hostilities had ceased for some months, if the war itself was not technically concluded.

It was then sent to the Quartermaster's Department here in Washington, and after an investigation it was decided there that it could not be paid, unless specific authority from Congress was granted for that purpose, because the State had been lately in rebellion.

From that day to this, Mr. Speaker, this poor old man, who does not ask one cent of interest, has been seeking relief; has been presenting his claim here for consideration, and it has been frequently reported upon favorably, but there has been no concurrent action by the two Houses, and as a consequence the bill has never been passed for his relief. He is now 75 years of age, a paralytic, and poor and helpless. The Government has owed him since February, 1866, the to it paltry sum of about $5,300, but to this poor old man quite a fortune; and it can not be paid to him because we can not get the measure through the House.

For that reason, sir, I venture to express the opinion that the House should make provision for the creation of a court or tribunal to properly consider and adjudicate claims of this character and in that manner allow the Government of the United States to pay its just debts—debts which, like this, have been created under a contract, just as the people of the country are required and expected to pay their justs debts.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman allow me a word just there?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. If the gentleman from Texas will devise a wise and intelligent proposition to meet the suggestions he has made, and will draft a resolution of that character and bring it before the attention of the House, he will have done a greater kindness to the people of the United States than by any other act of legistation he can perform on this floor.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The gentleman from Ohio believes that these just debts of the Government should be paid?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do, unquestionably; and I have only suggested that the gentleman might take a step in that direction in the manner stated.

Mr. SLAYDEN. The greater experience, wisdom, and better judgment of my friend from Ohio would suggest the propriety of his preparing such an act of legislation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have been working at it for many years.

Mr. SLAYDEN (continuing). For certainly the just debts of the Government should be paid—those debts made under a contract, at all events—just as individuals are required to pay theirs.

Mr. BAILEY. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LOUD].

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, there are two grounds, and two only, for the payment of this claim. One is that it is a legal claim against the Government of the United States, and the other that it is a gratuity on the part of the House of Representatives. The latter, of course, no Representative under his oath has the right to support.

Now, if it be a legal claim against the Government of the United States, then the Government had better right now start into the business of paying for every piece of property destroyed of every character, particularly in the North, where there is no doubt of the loyalty of the claimant, during the unpleasant days of 1861–1865. If the claim has a legal standing, then the claim of the State of Pennsylvania, which has been pending here for many years, has also a legal standing, and every building, every church, every piece of property, every tree cut down or destroyed during the rebellion should be and must be paid for by act of Congress.

I know the winning ways of the gentleman from Ohio. I know the influence he has in the House. But I call upon the House to contemplate what it is doing to-day before they establish such a precedent as will provide for the payment in all cases for property destroyed during the rebellion.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of the time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee has six minutes.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to say a word on the pending bill, because I know nothing in the world about the claim it presents. I have had no opportunity of making an investigation. But I wish to say a word or two in reference to the payment of such claims.

Now, if I understand the action taken by Congress in dealing with claims of this character, it is this: Congress has decided, or did decide soon after the war—and I think the decision is in strict consonance with international law—that they would not pay for the use and occupation of property in the South, or in the insurrectionery districts, where it was necessary for the Army to operate in order to suppress the rebellion.

That, I think, is the proper rule of law. If the Government of the United States had a right to put down the rebellion, which they clearly had the right to do, they had also the right to occupy every foot, without cost to the Government, of territory in the South for that purpose. And I think that has been the line of action taken in these cases.

But, Mr. Speaker, Congress went further and said that if, while occupying this territory in the South in the suppression of the rebellion, the property of a loyal citizen—the personal property—was taken for the use of the Army, and the Army got the benefit of such property, we will pay for it. That is the law.

In this case, as I said, I do not know what the facts are. The bill on its face provides that the payment shall be for occupation of the separate property of this claimant, and for fuel taken therefrom for General Rosecrans's army. As I understand it, under the law, if it was for occupation, the Government is not bound to pay for such occupation. The Government has in some cases paid for use and occupation; but when it did so it transgressed the strict rule which it prescribed for its own action.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to the fact——

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.

Mr. GROSVENOR (continuing). That the Committee on Claims of the Forty-second, Forty-third, Fifty-first, Fifty-second, and Fifty-fourth Congresses recommended the passage of this bill, and that in the Forty-third, Fifty-first, and Fifty-second Congresses it passed the Senate?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Yes.

Mr. GROSVENOR. That favorable reports have been made in the House in the Fifty-first, Fifty-second, Fifty-third, and Fifty-fourth Congresses, all of them presumably charged with a knowledge of the law and the facts.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I say I am not familiar with the facts. This bill provides for payment for use and occupation and for fuel taken. I say, under the precedents Congress has established, it ought to pay for the fuel taken from this loyal citizen. Whether that amounts to $10,000 or not I do not know.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The report——

Mr. RICHARDSON. But I do say the Government is not obligated to pay for use and occupation. Now, the only interest I have in this matter, outside of a general interest, is that I think we ought to adhere to the rule laid down by Congress; and if Congress will pay to the loyal citizens of the South the value of the personal property taken from them and used by the Army, those of us from the South will be satisfied. We do not expect to carry the rule any further than that, and we are content to have the law enforced in that way. Now, if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] states that the proof shows that the personal property taken, that is, the fuel, was equal to $10,000, this claim certainly ought to be paid.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Not the fuel probably, but the gentleman will see that the report of the commissioners found $20,000.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I had not the report before me, and therefore did not know.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Twenty thousand dollars; but, as I understand it, because of the very fact suggested by the gentleman from Tennessee, the committees have uniformly cut the claim down one-half, presumably, I say, intending to pay only for the actual property taken.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, is it not a fact that the original proof showed that the amount taken was $200,000?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No; that was a misprint in the report. The original finding was $20,000.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have not a copy of the report before me.

Mr. CANNON. I have, and if my friend will allow me I will read from it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON (reading)—

Mr. Cameron and his wife filed claim before this commission—

That is, the one appointed by General Rosecrans—for the destruction of the buildings, fences, timber, orchards, and other injuries done this property and for the use and occupation of it by the Union troops.

Upon the proofs taken at the time a finding was made in their favor of $200,000.

The gentleman says that that is a misprint, and that it should be $20,000.

Numerous affidavits and documents attest the loyalty of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron and the facts of fences, buildings, and timber being consumed by the Federal Army for fuel.

Now, it does not show any appraisement of the value of the fuel.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have just had the report handed to me. I do not know how that is. I simply rose to state what I understand to be the law; that is, that the Government has agreed to pay loyal citizens for personal property taken and used by the Army, and with that we are content down there, and our chief complaint against Congress is that it does not do that, and has not paid any for a great many years.

Mr. LOUD. Your complaint is that it does not do enough of it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. We do not insist on pay for use and occupation, because we do not think under the law we would be entitled to it. Congress has in a few instances paid colleges and churches for use and occupation, but almost always in cases of this kind it has been where there was a contract made and they were used for hospital purposes or something of that kind. In cases of that sort it is eminently proper that there should be payment made.

The SPEAKER. The time for debate on the bill has expired. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 34, noes 58.

Accordingly (two-thirds not voting in the affirmative) the House refused to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. STEELE. I desire to ask unanimous consent——

LIEUT. ROBERT PLATT.

Mr. FISCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have a bill that comes up as unfinished business. I desire to call up the bill S. 1126.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 1126) authorizing the President to appoint Lieut. Robert Platt, United States Navy, to the rank of commander.

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint Robert Platt, lieutenant of the junior grade, United States Navy, not in the line of promotion, to the rank of commander, United States Navy, not in the line of promotion, and that for this purpose there be, and is hereby, authorized one additional commander, not in the line of promotion, but in all other respects to be entitled to the rank, pay, emoluments, and privileges of commander in the Navy of the United States.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I think there was a point of order reserved against that measure.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I make the point of order that debate is exhausted on this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Yes, sir; there is a point of order pending against this bill.

Mr. FISCHER. No.

Mr. GROSVENOR. A point of order is pending against the speech of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CANNON. What is the gentleman trying to do with this bill?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will endeavor to find out the status of the bill. [After a pause.] The Journal does not state whether debate was exhausted.

Mr. FISCHER. My impression is that debate was exhausted, and the House indulged in debate for five minutes on a side. I ask unanimous consent that debate be had for five minutes on a side.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that there be five minutes' debate on either side.

Mr. BAILEY. Pending that, Mr. Speaker, why make that request for five minutes when, upon demand of a second, we would be entitled to twenty minutes?

The SPEAKER. That was a request for unanimous consent, because the Chair was informed debate had been exhausted.

Mr. BAILEY. When was this matter before the House?

The SPEAKER. It was before the House the 2d of May, 1898.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that it fell when the House adjourned. It being a proceeding to suspend the rules, and that suspension day having passed by, the whole proceeding fell.

Mr. FISCHER. I will state to the gentleman that there was no other individual suspension day on which I could call it up.

The SPEAKER. But the Journal of May 2, 1898, says:

Pending further consideration in the House.
The bill was withdrawn to be pending as unfinished business on next suspension day.

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, that shows this bill has had its day in court.

Mr. FISCHER. I have been in attendance regularly here, and this is the first opportunity I have had to bring up the bill again. I know of no suspension day intervening between the days.

Mr. SULZER. We will admit that it is no fault of yours.

Mr. FISCHER. The fault is entirely with the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BAILEY. By unanimous consent it could go over, but I do not understand that there is anything in our rules to provide for unfinished business on suspension day.

The SPEAKER. There is.

Mr. BAILEY. I would imagine that at the close of suspension day the work that was not completed that day would fall.

The SPEAKER. Probably the reasoning of the gentleman may be correct, but the custom of the House, the Chair thinks, has been different. Matters have gone over to various suspension days; for instance, if the unfinished motion for suspension be made by a committee, it would go over to committee suspension day; at any rate, it would go over to that or the next suspension day.

Mr. BAILEY. I could understand, of course, that by unanimous consent that could be done.

The SPEAKER. But this was by unanimous consent, to go over until the next suspension day.

Mr. DOCKERY. I make the point that it is not in order under the terms of the agreement which the Chair has just read from the Journal.

The SPEAKER. That states it is to be pending as unfinished business on the next suspension day.

Mr. DOCKERY. If it was not called up, would it not go over?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. DOCKERY. But this bill was withdrawn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will hear the gentleman from New York on that point.

Mr. FISCHER. Merely the question as to whether or not it is still pending?

The SPEAKER. Whether it is still pending.

Mr. FISCHER. If the proposition were contained entirely within the first point of the consent which I asked for at the last session, the contention of the gentleman from Missouri would be well taken, or his point of order would be well taken; but if the entire language is read, you will find that coupled with that request for consent that it be withdrawn was that it may be considered pending as unfinished business. I did not stop with the proposition to withdraw it, but withdrew it on certain other conditions—that is, that it shall be here as unfinished business. If I had merely withdrawn it, then the point would be well taken; but what I asked for was that it should be unfinished business. It was to be considered as pending, to be withdrawn only for that time for consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the bill is before the House as unfinished business; and if it was unfinished business on the next suspension day, it would come up as unfinished business. The fact that unfinished business is not taken up does not destroy its status.

Mr. DOCKERY. I suppose it will be in order to vote this down?

The SPEAKER. That will be in order. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and the SPEAKER announced that it appeared that two-thirds had not voted for the bill.

Mr. FISCHER. I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—62 ayes and 59 noes, not two-thirds voting in favor thereof; so the House refused to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

BERDAN FIREARMS MANUFACTURING COMPANY.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 321) for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company be, and the said company is hereby, authorized to institute a suit in the Court of Claims against the United States and for the benefit of Mrs. Mary Kimball Berdan, the widow of Hiram Berdan, the inventor of certain devices described and claimed in a patent issued to the said company, dated March 30, 1869, and numbered 88430; said suit to be instituted for the use by the United States of the said devices from March 30, 1869, to July 20, 1881; and the bar of the statute of limitations is hereby waived and the suit may be prosecuted to final judgment, as the suit might have been prosecuted if it had been instituted within six years from the time when, as is alleged, the said devices were used by the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LOUD. I demand a second.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the motion of the gentleman from Texas, that a second be considered as ordered? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none; and a second is considered as ordered. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for twenty minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this claim is in favor of Mrs. Berdan, the widow of General Berdan, a noted officer in the Union Army during the civil war. She is simply asking permission to sue the United States in the Court of Claims, her claim being barred by limitation. The bill removes that bar and permits the suit to be brought. It would be nothing but an act of justice on the part of the Government, after it has obtained the use of the invention of General Berdan, that his widow be permitted to sue the Government.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Certainly.

Mr. COX. Does this bill go to the extent that the Court of Claims can render judgment on its finding of facts?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Certainly; that is the object of the bill. The Court of Claims would have rendered judgment in the former suit for the full amount of Mrs. Berdan's claim, but the statute of limitations barred all but six years of the claim. It is not an express contract, but an implied contract, and therefore was barred at the end of six years.

General Berdan, several years before his death, brought suit against the United States Government and obtained a judgment for the arms that were used for six years preceding the filing of the suit. But about ten years of the time that the Government had used the firearms was barred by the statute of limitation. The object of this suit is to permit his widow to recover from the Government the value of his invention during this ten years.

In 1866 General Berdan filed his application for a patent. It was issued in 1868. General Hancock and others were, in 1868, appointed by the United States Government to pass upon the merits of various patents on firearms with a view of adopting the best patent at that time. General Berdan's patent was adopted, and it was used for fifteen years by the United States Government upon the frontier and generally in the Army.

The old Springfield rifles were changed so that the extractor and ejector patented by General Berdan could be used in those arms. It was a great saving to the United States Government, and the Committee on Patents reported, after thorough investigation, that it saved the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Allen patent at that time was being used, and that patent cost the Government $1.25 to put the invention in each gun. The Berdan patent, which was superior to the Allen patent, only cost fifty-nine and a fraction cents; consequently there was a great saving to the United States Government in using the Berdan patent.

This award was made in favor of the Berdan patent over the Allen patent by a committee consisting of General Hancock and others, General Hancock being chairman of that committee. It was a patent of great value, and the widow now only seeks permission to bring suit in the Court of Claims, suspending the bar of limitation against her claim.

Suit would have been brought by General Berdan before it was barred by the statute of limitations, but he was advised by his attorneys that he had an express contract with the Government and that it would not be barred, and that he had better permit all the Springfield rifles belonging to the Government to be changed, so that he could bring suit, if he had to have a suit, upon the entire number of guns on which his invention was used. That advice lost him ten years' time. He waited six years more, or sixteen years in all, before he finally brought his suit in the Court of Claims against the Government. He obtained judgment for six years' time next preceding the filing of the suit, and the Government appealed the case to the Supreme Court, and the case was affirmed, thus sustaining fully the justice of the claim.

Mr. COX. Will my friend allow me? I understand that he obtained judgment for the use of the arms for six years.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Yes; six years preceding the filing of his suit.

Mr. COX. And by this bill you propose to extend it for ten years?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Yes; so as to include the rest of the time between the six years for which he obtained judgment and the time the Government commenced to use his patent, about ten years.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, I concur in all the gentleman from Texas has said in regard to this bill, and I hope it will meet with no opposition. The bill is an honest one, and has the unanimous support of the committee. It simply does an act of justice to a very worthy and deserving widow of a most distinguished Union soldier. I trust no member of this House will object to giving her a day in court to present the merits of her case.

Mr. COWHERD. I wish to ask whether at the time this article was patented General Berdan was an officer of the Government?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I can not answer that question.

Mr. SULZER. He was not.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, in view of the manner in which this bill comes before us, I must admit that I know nothing of it, though I know probably as much about it as the average member of this House. But it would seem that after the lapse of so many years, during a part of which this claimant has had his rights in the court and under the law, Congress should hesitate before it rehabilitates or breathes the breath of life into a claim which probably, if it had been prosecuted in the courts when the witnesses were alive, could never have resulted in a judgment in favor of the claim.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The gentleman will allow me to suggest that the evidence taken in the former suit can all be obtained.

Mr. LOUD. The argument made in favor of allowing this claim is that the party did go to the Court of Claims, but did not prosecute his suit, and the case was dismissed. Now, the assumption would be, after this lapse of thirty-six years, that he must have had then as good a case as he has now. Of course, it may be that some of the material witnesses are now dead—material witnesses perhaps on the side of the Government—by reason of which fact the case of the Government could not be as strongly presented as it could have been at that time.

I do not know any reason why the Government, after the lapse of thirty-odd years, should give a defeated contestant a rehearing. I say "a defeated contestant" because evidently if this party had had any case he would have pursued it in court. I do not believe it would be well to give the parties interested a rehearing of the case, with the opportunity to take advantage of certain conditions now existing. As is well known to some members of th s House, the interests of the Government are not at all times defended in the Court of Claims with the ability displayed on the other side, especially where a large amount of money is involved.

The main point made by the gentleman from Texas—I can not see much strength in it—is that the attorney of Mr. Berdan advised him that he had a contract.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. An express contract.

Mr. LOUD. That he had an express contract, and that there was no use of his pursuing the case further in the Court of Claims. That is but an allegation at best. But even admitting it to be true, why should a claimant of this kind, after having had all the rights of any other citizen, come here and ask the Government to permit him once more, simply because his attorney advised him to withdraw the suit—I do not think that fact appears in the evidence in the case, but if it were true, why, I ask, should he be permitted to take advantage, after the lapse of thirty-six years and the disappearance, possibly, of much of the evidence material to the case of the Government, why should he be permitted to bring his case again before the Court of Claims, a case involving, I suppose, a large amount of money, so that the parties could well afford, probably, to employ the best legal talent in the country, while they would have opposed to them on the part of the Government attorneys who have more cases to attend to in the Court of Claims than they can possibly attend to properly?

It appears from a casual examination of this report that it is not even alleged that the Government used in the construction of its arms more than a very small part of any of the patents or appliance alleged to have been owned by Mr. Berdan. Now, it would be pretty difficult to prove after thirty-six years——

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The report shows that there were 284,000 rifles——

Mr. LOUD. Certainly, I do not deny that rifles to that number were made; but it is not contended that those rifles were made in accordance with the patent of Mr. Berdan. All that is claimed is that perhaps some trifling portion of the arms manufactured may possibly have been an infringement upon some trifling part of an arm which he had invented. That is all that is alleged.

I hope the House will exercise the same sound judgment in this case that it has exercised in others, and that after this case has been allowed to sleep for thirty-six years Congress will permit it to rest with the millions of other claims no more meritorious which are knocking at our doors.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, the statements which have been made by the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. LOUD] as to the facts of this case are somewhat incorrect. He speaks about these claimants having rested upon their claim for thirty-six years. As a matter of fact, the patents in this case were not taken out anything like thirty-six years ago. They are of much more recent date. Suits were commenced in the Court of Claims on these patents some time, I think, between 1872 and 1879.

The facts are that the Government was so much interested in procuring the use of Mr. Berdan's inventions that the officers of the Government asked to have the patents expedited in the Patent Office. They were anxious to use these inventions because the Berdan device would save, in the actual cost of construction, at least $1.25 on every gun made.

Now, the attorneys for the patentee construed the arrangement with the Government, as attorneys sometimes do, incorrectly, and advised their client that he should not sue until the Government had completed the manufacture of all these guns.

The result was that the Government continued the manufacture of the arms, and Berdan went to the Court of Claims, which awarded him a royalty of 59.4 cents on each gun manufactured, which amount is about one-fourth of what the experts estimated should have been allowed to him. The court, however, could allow him a royalty only on a portion of the guns, for the reason that the statute of limitations absolutely prohibited the court from considering the question of his claim for guns manufactured six years prior to that time.

The case then went to the United States Supreme Court——

Mr. LOUD (interrupting). If the gentleman will allow me, I would like to know what he is quoting from? He seems to be quoting a statement of facts which do not appear of record here.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am quoting from the testimony in the case.

Mr. LOUD. This appears to have been presented a great many years ago, and I do not find the facts the gentleman possesses set forth.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will state to the gentleman that no part of the claim is thirty-six years old. I am speaking, however, particularly of the legal questions involved.

Mr. LOUD. I hope the gentleman will confine his statement, then, to the report of the facts as they appear of record.

Mr. MITCHELL. The facts are as they appear in the report.

Mr. LOUD. Then I will state that the gentleman's statement does not conform with the report as far as I have been able to examine it.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will thank the gentleman for any correction he may make. I do not wish to misrepresent any of the facts in the case. The facts are and the report shows that this device was not approved by the War Department until November, 1868, and the manufacture of it by the Government commenced after that date. I am stating now what is of record.

The legal situation is that the Supreme Court of the United States passed on the matter. As stated in the opinion of this court, recorded in 156 United States Reports, page 573, Berdan was unquestionably entitled to recover on the award of the Court of Claims, and the Supreme Court awarded him in this judgment the sum of about $95,000.

Now, under that decision of our highest court it is perfectly evident that the balance due is justly due as soon as the statute is removed, and that the widow should have the right to go to the Court of Claims and prove her case.

That is all I desire to say upon the question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote.

The SPEAKER. There is no necessity for reconsidering the vote, the bill having been passed under a suspension of the rules.

CONSIDERATION OF PUBLIC-BUILDING BILLS.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately after the reading of the Journal on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 7 and 8, the House proceed to consider such bills as may be indicated by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, such consideration to be first had in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the consideration of such bills in the House or in Committee of the Whole House to continue during the two days mentioned.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. DOCKERY. Before demanding a second, I would ask unanimous consent to propose a modification of the resolution. I suggest that the gentleman fix in the resolution some hour for adjournment each day.

Mr. MERCER. I will say that that is a good suggestion. I am perfectly willing to say that the House shall adjourn at 5.30 o'clock; and ask to so modify the resolution.

Mr. LOUD. I think 5 o clock is long enough.

Several MEMBERS. Why not make it 5 o'clock?

The SPEAKER. The modification proposed by the gentleman from Nebraska will be read.

Mr. MERCER. I propose to modify the resolution by adding to it the words "the House to adjourn not later than 5.30 o'clock p. m. on each day."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LOUD. I thought the gentleman from Missouri had demanded a second; but I demand a second.

Mr. MERCER. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. LOUD. I have no objection to that.

I have no objection to the resolution itself, I will say to the gentleman from Nebraska, but it seems to me that in the shape the gentleman offers his resolution the House would be compelled to remain in session until 5.30 o'clock, whether it is desired to do so or not, after completing its business.

Mr. MERCER. No; the gentleman is mistaken. I have modified it by providing that the session shall terminate not later than 5.30 on each of the days mentioned.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be again reported as modified.

The modified resolution was again read.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution passed.

ADDITIONAL EMPLOYEES, COMMITTEE ON ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the reconsideration of House resolution 375, providing for the appointment of additional clerks for the Committee on Enrolled Bills. This resolution was passed on Saturday last, but in such form that the chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills informs me the clerks could not get any pay.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills be, and he hereby is, authorized to appoint two additional clerks for said committee for the remainder of the session; said appointments to date from January 20, 1899.

Mr. LOUD. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask to reconsider the vote for the purpose of appending to the resolution the following words, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the resolution just read "and the clerks appointed under this resolution be paid $6 per diem, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves to suspend the rules and pass the resolution with the amendment reported.

Mr. LOUD. If that is the best parliamentary way, should we not first reconsider the vote already taken?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can move to suspend the rules, reconsider the vote already taken, and pass the resolution with the amendment which has just been read.

Mr. LOUD. That is entirely satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, the motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed, and to pass the same with the amendment, was agreed to (two-thirds voting in favor thereof).

REFERENCE TO COURT OF CLAIMS OF CERTAIN BILLS.

Mr. OTJEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the resolutions (Nos. 136, 137, 138, 139, 158, 165, 166, 167, 168, 171, 177, 178, 179, 180, 188, 189, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 209, 210, 211, 213, 214, 215, 217, 218, 240, 241, 243, 244, 245, 249, 265, 266, 268, 282, 295, 302, 303, 304, 305, 359, 379, and House bill 648) for the relief of Abel Casper, Fannie J. Johnson, William O. Mosely, Warren R. Dent, Martha S. Carmichael, Henry Easterlin, J. H. McVeigh, Mary Ann Hendricks, Levi Elmore, Mississippi Manufacturing Company, Mrs. Minnie Andrews, Richard P. Blackiston, Alexander Poland, W. B. Horner, Jacob E. Smith, Catherine Morein, James R. Shrodes, Thomas B. Scott, Michael Dittlinger, C. Phitzing, John Doyle, Dr. Theodorick Bland, Abram Lasher, J. & O. P. Cobb & Co., Mrs. S. O. N. Pleasants, Ellen J. Brossman, heirs of Andrew Schoenfelt, Joseph Curriden, Fannie Solari, estate of Henry E. Windley, Thomas Owens, heirs of John Montgomery, and Thomas E. Williams, M. H. Johns, W. D. Hatch, Edward O. Watkins, estate of Samuel Worthington, deceased, Theodore C. Greenhill, A. I. Sands, Francis Millets, Elizabeth Fulwiler, Catherine M. Pritchard, heirs of Manett Marsons, George Denny, sr., Mary E. O. Dashiel, Septimus Brown, W. B. Morrow, Mary E. Stalcup, widow of Joshua Stalcup, deceased, and Hamlin Caldwell, with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims for a finding of facts under the terms of the act approved March 3, 1887, and known to the profession and the courts as the Tucker Act.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. OTJEN. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. OTJEN. Mr. Speaker, there are 44 claims reported by the Committee on War Claims to this House with the recommendation that they be sent to the Court of Claims for consideration. They are all of one character, being for stores and supplies. The total amount involved in these 44 claims is $212,604. The last report of the Court of Claims upon claims of this character shows that it has acted upon 176 similar claims, and disallowed or dismissed 151 of them.

Mr. CANNON. Of these claims, or claims of a similar character?

Mr. OTJEN. Claims of a similar character. The amount claimed in the claims which were disallowed was $250,179. They allowed 25 claims, the amount allowed being $12,807, showing that the court has allowed a little less than 5 per cent. Now, in these 44 claims that we seek to send to the Court of Claims there is $312,000 involved, and if the court should allow them at the same ratio as heretofore—and there is no reason why a greater amount should be allowed—the amount allowed would be about $10,500. Now, these claims have all been passed upon by the Committee on War Claims and are on our Calendar here. Many of them have been reported a number of times, and it seems to me that they ought to be sent to the Court of Claims, there to be disposed of. Many of them will not return.

In the first place, the claimants will be required to prove their loyalty. Nothing is waived in sending them to the Court of Claims except the statute of limitations. It seems to me we ought to send these claims there rather than have them come up here session after session to lumber up our Calendar and involve the Government in the expense of printing reports, bills, and so forth. I simply ask that these claims be sent to that tribunal for consideration.

Mr. CANNON. In referring them under the Tucker Act, does that mean that the court is to render final judgment?

Mr. OTJEN. No; it simply reports its findings to the House without judgment.

Mr. CANNON. I understand my friend to say that these claims, amounting to $212,000, are all on the Calendar now?

Mr. OTJEN. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. All with favorable recommendations?

Mr. OTJEN. With favorable recommendations that they be sent to the Court of Claims.

Mr. CANNON. Have the committee looked into the merits of them?

Mr. OTJEN. Yes; that is the supposition. They were all acted on in full committee, and such a recommendation was made.

Mr. CANNON. Presumably they have merit?

Mr. OTJEN. They have merits or else they would have been disallowed.

Mr. CANNON. And still my friend has so little confidence in the judgment of the Committee on War Claims that he says here are $212,000 worth of claims and that if we will refer them to the Court of Claims he is satisfied that not exceeding 5 per cent of that amount will be allowed by the court.

Mr. OTJEN. Well, I am only giving you the facts, that the Court of Claims in passing upon 176 similar claims, amounting in the aggregate to $262,000, has allowed a total of only $12,807, which is a little less than 5 per cent.

Mr. CANNON. If my friend will allow me—because we want to get at the exact facts—I take it that all these claims have had their day in court under legislation of Congress, before the War Department, and have been rejected. Not content with that rejection, and after the statute of limitations has run, they still come to Congress—as they have power to do—to appeal to Congress for relief.

Now, my friend wants to wash his hands and give them a second adjudication, and he is satisfied that 95 per cent of them will be rejected, and he does that to get rid of them. Yet that 95 per cent of them will come up smiling and will be here when my friend is dead and gone, asking that the statute of limitations be removed a second time and that a second adjudication be set aside. These claims having had their day in court, when multiplied millions of dollars were paid, after investigation by the Department, at the Government expense, and after full hearing before the Quartermaster-General and the War Department, is it not the best now to say that these matters are stare decisis, and that we will let them sleep, they having had their day in court?

Mr. LOUD. Do we not want some company for the Berdan case?

Mr. CANNON. The Berdan case is upon quite a different ground, as I read the report.

Mr. LOUD. It wants to get into court and to get out.

Mr. CANNON. The facts are all of record. I do not care to discuss it now. The Berdan case was referred. We sent it to the court. That does not mean that these are right. I do not care to take the time of the gentleman, and if I consume his time I will yield him some of mine.

Mr. OTJEN. What we want to get is the facts.

Mr. CANNON. What we want to get at is the facts.

Mr. OTJEN. I can not give you the particulars in each case. I can only say to you that each and all of these cases has been investigated by the Committee on War Claims, and it is the judgment of that committee that these cases ought to go to the Court of Claims. Now, so far as the statute of limitations is concerned, I think as to these claims there ought to be only one condition, and that is whether they are honest and straightforward claims against the Government; and if they are, we ought to pay them, notwithstanding the statute of limitations, whether these claims have been passed upon by any department or not.

Mr. CANNON. I think there will be no question but every one has been passed upon.

Mr. GIBSON. If a case has ever been presented to any department of the Government there is no bar of the statute of limitations.

Mr. CANNON. Very well. The gentleman says there is no bar. I have no doubt, I will say to my friend, that every one of these claims has had its day in court before the Quartermaster-General's Department. We had a force of special agents who made investigations for the department. I remember that we made appropriations for that purpose.

Mr. GIBSON. I would say to the gentleman that if he would examine these cases investigated by the Quartermaster-General, he will find that the Quartermaster-General decided that there was no law for him to determine, and that he disallowed nearly all these Southern claims.

Mr. CANNON. My friend is clearly in error, because hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars were allowed.

Mr. GIBSON. That is very true; but they amounted to millions.

Mr. CANNON. These matters frequently fell within my knowledge, when they came before me as a member of the Committee on Appropriations for agents that were sent all over the country. Reports were made by them. There was a corps of clerks—I recollect at one time as high as 100 clerks—in the Quartermaster-General's Office. It was not only his duty, but it was a binding duty, under the law, to make these adjudications, and he did make them, and the reports of the Quartermaster-General were acted upon and appropriations were made.

Now, what I claim is this: That these claims having had their day in court, and having been adjudicated, they seek a second adjudication, and if perchance by our act they are given another chance and are again turned down, like hope they will spring eternal and seek a third adjudication. If these were matters between private individuals, they would have been ended; but as it is against the Government, why Congress has complete jurisdiction; and here we are.

Mr. OTJEN. May I interrupt the gentleman? I want to correct the gentleman by stating that not a single claim that has been disallowed by the Court of Claims for stores or supplies ever came back to Congress for reallowance. I looked that matter up very carefully about claims for stores and supplies, such as these cases, and not a single one has ever come back here for reallowance when once turned down by the court. I now yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, no man can so keenly appreciate the interest in these cases as a member of the Committee on War Claims. We are confronted every day that we have a session with claims presented by parties who are interested in them. We can not have other than ex parte hearings on these claims, and from the statements made and from the testimony adduced it is apparent that the claims are just and as meritorious as other claims before this House. But we prefer to refer them to the Court of Claims.

They appear to be just and meritorious; but in consequence of their antiquity we are unwilling to make a report to this Congress asking appropriations to pay them, but prefer to refer them to one of the branches, the judicial branch, of the Government, that it may ascertain whether or not the claim is just and whether the citizen was a loyal citizen and is entitled to be paid. Now, the objection made by the gentleman from Illinois to these claims is, as he says, "they have had their day in court." In this I am sure he is in error. I would not assert it positively, but I believe it to be true that not a single one of the claims proposed to be referred to the court by this resolution has ever had its day in court.

As a matter of fact, conditions were these: Congress provided several departments or agencies authorized to inquire into the validity of these claims, and some were authorized to make payments of this character of claims subsequent to the war. The Southern Claims Commission had power to do so, but by a rule prescribed by them in all claims amounting to the sum of $10,000 in value the witnesses had to appear here in Washington in person and testify before that commission. In consequence many of the claimants, being poor and unable to furnish the money to bring their witnesses here, could not prosecute their claims, and hence their claims fell by the wayside.

As a further matter of fact, a number of these claims were put into the hands of attorneys here that were never presented by such attorneys to any branch of the Government for adjudication or payment, and they have slept there for a number of years.

Mr. CANNON. If my friend will allow me right there, for that very reason, that poor people might have their claims investigated, Congress for many years appointed agents and paid them from the Treasury, who, at the expense of the Government, went into all the States from which the claims came and made investigation, after giving the claimants due notice, with full power to appear by attorney or otherwise.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Admitting that statement to be correct, they could not have known of these claims that were lying in the hands of attorneys in Washington or that belonged to people who were unable to bring their witnesses here to the courts.

Mr. CANNON. I say again, that these agents went on the ground—went to Tennessee, to Virginia, to Kentucky; and for many years that was done. My friend says that these claims were not before the Southern Claims Commission or the Quartermaster-General. I feel very sure that my friend is mistaken.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I do not state that positively. Some of them may have gone there, but I stated that the reason they were not acted upon by this tribunal was because the tribunal required the witnesses to come in person, and they could not come and bring their witnesses here on account of the expense.

Mr. CANNON. Right there I controvert my friend's position. I think he is in error, because the Government went on the ground through its agents, many of them, and made an investigation after giving notice to the claimants.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I can answer the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] better by citing one case. I know of one case in the resolution proposed to be referred of a gentleman who furnished stores and supplies to the Army in its necessity, and he took receipts from the commanding officers in charge. He had the affidavits of the men who got the property, and that claim has never been presented for consideration to any tribunal. Once it passed this branch of Congress, but has never been paid; and all we now ask is to go to court and allow the claimants to prove their claims.

It is a commentary upon any Congress, upon any Government, that will refuse or deny the right of any citizen to go to the courts of his country and prove up his claim against the country. I say from experience and observation that this Government is the poorest paymaster in the world. I have seen widows knocking at the door of the Committee on War Claims, asking that their just claims be paid to them, and when such claims were recommended for payment they were driven from the doors of Congress; they have gone down on the streets of this city and hawked their claims to attorneys, speculators, and purchasers upon the streets. Then these speculators and attorneys, after getting a large fee or purchasing the claim for a song, have presented the claim, and by Congress ultimately it is paid. Now, all these people ask is to go the court. This resolution does not provide for church claims or college claims. It provides for the payment to the people that furnished the soldier provisions and supplies.

Mr. McRAE. Why is it that under the law the committee does not refer them?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. The committee can not do it because they are barred by the statute of limitations and under the law. Under the Bowman Act the court could not have jurisdiction. We propose to refer them under the Tucker Act.

Mr. McRAE. Why not under the Bowman Act?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Because they are barred, and now have no standing under that law.

Mr. OTJEN. The law requires that they should be referred by the House and not by the committee. The Tucker Act requires the House to refer them.

Mr. McRAE. Are they not covered by the Bowman Act?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. No; they are not covered by the Bowman Act.

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word, if the gentleman will permit me.

Mr. OTJEN. How much time have I remaining, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. Two minutes.

Mr. CANNON. Is the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HENRY] for or against the bill?

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. I am for it.

Mr. CANNON. I will yield to my friend five minutes if he wants to yield it to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. OTJEN. Then I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HENRY].

Mr. HENRY of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I want to say in advocacy of this resolution that from an economical standpoint, aside from the justice of the case, it would be better that this resolution should pass. For years and years these bills have been introduced into each succeeding Congress. They are then required to be printed, with the report. They come here and stand on the Calendar, and the very next session they are reintroduced and more printing is required.

We ask now simply that these claims be sent to that court which has been provided by law for their adjudication, believing that there, if the parties can be heard, justice will be done in the premises. This will get the matter out of Congress. It will relieve us as Representatives of claims that are pressing upon us, and give a tardy justice to litigants. It will in many ways expedite the business of the House. We are anxious to get rid of these cases in this House. As has been said by my friend from Wisconsin, claims that fail to pass in the court are never resurrected here, but if they successfully pass the court as to the loyalty of the claimant and as to the amount due, it does seem to me that justice would demand that the claims be paid.

It will relieve Congress immensely to get rid of these claims—to get them out of the Committee on War Claims. Aside from that this court is the proper tribunal for hearing such claims. It is one which has been created by law for the purpose. Many of these petitioners were minors; many of them were too poor to comply with the requisition of the law. They now come to Congress and ask it to give them this relief by sending all of them to the Court of Claims that their claims may there be adjudicated.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, it is always an embarrassing matter to play the mean man or to try to do so; and after all I do not desire to try to play the mean man by contesting any just debt that the Government owes. But let us see whether these claims are in such condition that they are entitled to consideration of the kind recommended. It is fashionable for many of us here to get up on the floor and say that the United States Government is the meanest paymaster on earth. Gentlemen talk about poor persons, and it is said that when the Government has received that which it should properly pay for it shuts the door in the face of the just creditor. Now, let us see how plain a tale will put that down.

The Government of the United States except in time of war, under peculiar conditions—and it is asserted that these claims come under those conditions—can not incur a liability until there is first an appropriation, and then the liability is a legal one and the money is ready to pay it. If, perchance, through the neglect or other fault of some official, the man entitled to payment does not get it, he can sue the Government in a court of the United States and recover judgment, and judgments are always appropriated for as a matter of course. So there is one remedy.

Another remedy is that he can go to the Treasury Department and show his legal claim against the Government. It is audited by the Treasury Department without a cent of expense to him, it is certified to Congress, and such audits are always paid by an appropriation.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Is it not a fact that findings of the Court of Claims for the past six or eight years have not yet been paid?

Mr. CANNON. I am speaking about judgments. I will come to findings in a moment.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Can there be in these cases more than a finding?

Mr. CANNON. A finding; that is all.

Now, these claims are alleged not to be of the class I have been speaking of, because there is, in fact, no paymaster so good as the United States Government, when people have claims against it that are incurred under ordinary conditions, because the courts are open, the Treasury Department is open, and as to the great bulk of these claims you do not have to go either to the court or to the Treasury Department, because where there is a contract the money is paid as a matter of course. I think it just that I should say this much in defense of the Government.

Now, it is alleged that the United States during the prosecution of the late civil war took from loyal citizens stores and supplies and that under the law, the loyalty of such citizens being established, and it being established that those stores and supplies were taken for the use of the Army, and their value being ascertained, it is the duty of the Government under the law to pay the parties from whom they were taken. I admit it. It is the duty of the Government under the law to make payment. Now, the Government proceeded to pay. First, we had the Southern Claims Commission right away after the war. Great numbers of claims were adjudicated by that commission, but not every claim was favorably passed upon; many were rejected; they had their day in court and failed.

There was a statute of limitations as to the time within which those claims should be presented. The statute ran. Then, so as not to oppress any citizen, the Quartermaster-General was given jurisdiction to examine these claims; and they came in by the multiplied thousands. And Uncle Sam, in order that the poor might not be oppressed, appropriated money for the employment of agents who year after year went to Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, Missouri, and everywhere else in that part of the country which had been the theater of war and investigated these claims at the expense of the Government, the claimants receiving notice, and appearing, or having the power to appear, by attorneys and witnesses. And then report was made, and the Quartermaster-General adjudicated the cases and the claimants were paid.

But many claims were turned down. And there was in that case, too, a statute of limitation. Thus we had two tribunals and two statutes of limitation. Then we passed the Bowman Act, providing that any committee of this House might refer claims to the Court of Claims, which should make such findings as it deemed just. In connection with that act, also, there was a statute of limitations. The claims must be presented within a certain time, and the committees could not after that time refer claims to the court under that act. That time expired, and these claims were not referred under that act.

Then we had the Tucker Act, which required, as I understand, the action of Congress to refer claims to the court; and in connection with that act also there was a statute of limitation. After we have had these three tribunals and these three statutes of limitation these parties come now under the Tucker Act seeking to send these rejected claims (some of them, I do not know which, that have been sleeping perhaps for a generation) again to the Court of Claims; and the very gentleman in charge of the resolution assures the House that there is only about 5 per cent of them that can be passed. In the name of God, why send 95 per cent of these claims there and compel the United States Government, through its attorneys and by means of its other machinery, to defend these claims, which have been three times barred after having had their day in court? Such a proceeding looks to me like paltering with the patience of the Government, and one which ought not to be received with approval.

The statute of repose three times enacted and three times expired, and two adjudications in the courts, ought at some time to become really a statute of repose in these cases.

"Ah, but," says my friend from Tennessee, "if we can send them now to the Court of Claims, and they are turned down, we will get rid of them forever." That has not been my observation. My observation is that the claimant who wails the loudest is he who has had his day in court—in the Court of Claims and in the Supreme Court—and alleges iniquity; that the court overlooked certain facts or erred against him, or did wrong of some kind, and springs up and appeals clamorously for renewed equity.

How are we to help it? God alone knows how. I wish I had power to put some provision in the Constitution which would limit the power of Congress, where the statute of limitation has run, after one adjudication before a proper tribunal of the country—to limit the power of Congress to waive the statute of limitation under any circumstances and allow a second hearing.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am not inclined to allow the statement of the gentleman from Illinois to go on record without question that these claims have been rejected after having had a day in court——

Mr. CANNON (interrupting). My friend is on the Committee on War Claims, and of course I speak only in a general way. I am satisfied that these cases have had their day before the Quartermaster-General, and have been rejected; and if they do not avail themselves of their privilege under the law, of course they are barred, and ought to be barred, by the statute of limitations.

Now, I ask him how many or which one of these claims has been before the Quartermaster-General?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I can name one in favor of W. B. Morrow.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. And the case of C. Phitzing, a Federal soldier, who served in an Illinois regiment, and now resides in Mississippi.

A MEMBER. And there are others.

Mr. CANNON. Has my friend from Texas examined the record of the claim he speaks of?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I know the claim.

Mr. CANNON. But has he examined the Quartermaster's record?

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I have not. But I get my information from the Committee on War Claims. I obtain it from the records and books in that committee.

Mr. OTJEN. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CANNON. If my friend from Wisconsin will allow me——

Mr. OTJEN. Certainly.

Mr. CANNON. For I am sure we want only to do the right thing in these cases.

Mr. OTJEN. I only wanted first to ask my friend from Illinois, who makes reference to the reports of the Court of Claims and asks why we should send them there when 95 per cent are turned down.

I will tell him. It is because they come to Congress, time after time, believing that they have a just claim against the Government; bills are introduced and reports made, putting the Government to expense in printing and loading up our Calendar. We seek to send them to the Court of Claims, where they can be considered and examined by a properly constituted tribunal, and then if the report is in favor of the claim, that the Government will pay for it.

I do not know of any tribunal which can examine them more properly than the Court of Claims. He says every claim that has once had its day in court ought to be turned down. I think that is all right, but I think the Government ought to establish some tribunal where the people who have private claims against the Government may present them properly. Then, if they are rejected, let them be turned down, but if that tribunal allows them the Government then ought to pay them just as it pays its bonds.

I can only say that we as committeemen are attempting to do our duty in this matter when charged with the responsibility of these claims, and it is the view of the committee of which I am a member that these claims ought to go to the Court of Claims. They have been passed upon singly. It is the recommendation of that committee that they go there, and it seems to me that the House ought to give some weight to the judgment of that committee. I ask that the resolution be passed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the resolution.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. CANNON) there were—ayes 75, noes 17.

Accordingly, two-thirds voting in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the resolution was passed.

SNOW AND ICE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I should be glad to be recognized for a minute on an emergency matter. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 12009) to provide for the removal of snow and ice in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, for the following objects, namely:

For cleaning snow and ice from crosswalks and gutters, under the act approved March 2, 1895, $2,000, one half of said sum to be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half out of the Treasury of the United States.

For the removal of snow and ice, to be disbursed under the direction of the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in and around Washington, D. C., $1,000.

Mr. CANNON. I will say to the House that we had a snowstorm last night. It seems to me there can be no objection to this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 12008) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, all points of order are reserved.

The SPEAKER. All points of order are reserved.

TWELFTH CENSUS.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11815) to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill which will be reported by the Clerk.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a census of the population, of deaths, and of the manufacturing, mechanical, and agricultural products of the United States shall be taken in the year 1900, and once every ten years thereafter.

SEC. 2. That there shall be established at the seat of government a Census Office, the duties of which shall be the taking of the Twelfth and succeeding censuses and the collection of other statistics, as hereinafter provided: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to establish a census bureau permanent beyond the Twelfth Census.

SEC. 3. That the Census Office shall be under charge of a Director of the Census, who shall be appointed, as soon as possible after the passage of this act, by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall receive an annual salary of $6,000; and there shall also be an Assistant Director of the Census, to be appointed in like manner, who shall be an experienced, practical statistician, and shall receive an annual salary of $4,000.

SEC. 4. That during the absence of the Director, or when the office of Director shall become vacant, the Assistant Director shall perform the duties of the Director.

SEC. 5. That there shall also be in the Census Office, to be appointed by the Director thereof in the manner hereinafter specified, 5 chief statisticians, who shall be persons of known and tried experience in statistical work, at an annual salary of $3,000 each; a chief clerk, 1 disbursing clerk, and 1 geographer, at an annual salary of $2,500 each; 5 expert chiefs of division and 2 stenographers, at an annual salary of $2,000 each; 10 clerks of class 4, 15 clerks of class 3, 20 clerks of class 2, and such number of clerks of class 1, and of clerks, copyists, computers, and skilled laborers, at salaries of not less than $600 nor more than $1,000 per annum, to be appointed from time to time, as may be found necessary for the proper and prompt performance of the duties herein required to be undertaken. The disbursing clerk herein provided for shall, before entering upon his duties, give bond to the Secretary of the Treasury in the sum of $50,000, which bond shall be conditioned that the said officer shall render a true and faithful account to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury, quarter-yearly, of all moneys and properties which shall be received by him by virtue of his office, with sureties to be approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury. Such bond shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be by him put in suit upon any breach of the conditions thereof.

SEC. 6. That the Director of the Census may also appoint one captain of the watch, at a salary of $840 per annum; two messengers, and such number of watchmen, assistant messengers, and laborers, at salaries of $900 each per annum; messenger boys, at salaries of $400 each per annum; and charwomen, at salaries of $240 each per annum, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. That all appointments authorized by section 5 of this act shall be subject to such examination as may be prescribed by the Director of the Census, but such examination shall relate solely to the character and fitness of the applicant for the special position to which the applicant is to be assigned if selected: Provided, That employees in existing branches of the departmental service, under civil-service rules, whose services may be specially desired by the Director of the Census, may be transferred without examination; but not more than fifteen such transfers shall be made, and at the end of such service the employees so transferred may be eligible to appointment in the Departments without additional examination when vacancies exist. All appointments authorized by section 6 may be made without examination, and such appointees shall not be eligible for promotion without passing such examination as may be prescribed by the Director of the Census.

SEC. 8. That the collection of the information required by this act shall be made, under the direction of the Director of the Census, by supervisors, enumerators, and special agents, as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 9. That the Twelfth Census shall be restricted to inquiries relating to the population, to mortality, to the products of agriculture and of manufacturing and mechanical establishments. The schedules relating to the population shall comprehend for each inhabitant the name, age, color, sex, conjugal condition, place of birth, and place of birth of parents, whether alien or naturalized, number of years in the United States, occupation, months employed, literacy, school attendance, and ownership of farms and homes; and the Director of the Census may use his discretion as to the construction and form and number of inquiries necessary to secure information under the topics aforesaid.

The mortality schedule shall comprehend for each decedent the name, sex, color, age, conjugal condition, place of birth, and birthplace of parents, occupation, cause and date of death, and, if born within the census year, the date of birth. The form and arrangement of the schedule and the specific questions necessary to secure the information required shall be in the discretion of the Director. The schedules relating to agriculture shall comprehend the following topics: Name of occupant of each farm, color of occupant, tenure, acreage, value of farm and improvements, acreage of different products, quantity and value of products, and number and value of live stock. All questions as to quantity and value of crops shall relate to the year ending December 31 next preceding the enumeration. The specific form and division of inquiries necessary to secure information under the foregoing topics shall be in the discretion of the Director of the Census.

The schedules of inquiries relating to the products of manufacturing and mechanical establishments shall embrace the name and location of each establishment; character of organization, whether individual, cooperative, or other form; date of commencement of operations; character of business, or kind of goods manufactured; amount of capital invested; number of proprietors, firm members, copartners, or officers, and the amount of their salaries; number of employees, and the amount of their wages; quantity and cost of materials used in manufactures; amount of miscellaneous expenses; quantity and value of products; time in operation during the census year; character and quantity of power used, and character and number of machines employed. The form and subdivision of inquiries necessary to secure the information under the foregoing topics relating to manufacturing and mechanical industries shall be in the discretion of the Director of the Census.

The information collected shall relate to the fiscal year ending nearest the date set for the enumeration of the population. Whenever he shall deem it expedient, the Director of the Census may withhold the schedules for said manufacturing and mechanical statistics from the enumerators of the several subdivisions in any or all cases, and may charge the collection of these statistics upon special agents, to be employed without respect to locality. In cities or States where an official registration of deaths is maintained, the Director of the Census may, in his discretion, withhold the mortality schedule from the several enumerators within such cities or States, and may obtain the information required by this act through official records, paying therefor such sum of money as may be found necessary, not exceeding 2 cents for each death thus returned.

The Director of the Census is also authorized and directed to make suitable provision for the enumeration of the population and products of Alaska and other noncontiguous possessions of the United States, administered under the civil government thereof, for which purpose he may employ supervisors and enumerators or special agents as he may deem necessary. The only volumes that shall be prepared and published in connection with the Twelfth Census, except the special reports hereinafter provided for, shall relate to population, mortality, and vital statistics, the products of agriculture, and of manufacturing and mechanical establishments, as above mentioned, and shall be designated as and constitute the census reports, which said reports shall be published not later than the 1st day of July, 1902. The report upon population shall include a series of separate tables for each State, giving by counties the number of male persons below and above the age of 21 years, their color, whether native or foreign born, whether naturalized or not, and their literacy or illiteracy. All terms expressing weight, measure, distance, or value shall be expressed in the terms of the English language as spoken in this country.

SEC. 10. That after the completion and return of the enumeration and of the work upon the schedules relating to the products of agriculture and to manufacturing and mechanical establishments provided for in section 9 of this act, the Director of the Census is hereby authorized to collect statistics relating to the special classes, including the insane, feeble-minded, deaf, dumb, and blind; to crime, pauperism, and benevolence, including prisoners, paupers, juvenile delinquents, and inmates of benevolent and reformatory institutions; to deaths and births in registration areas; to social statistics of cities; to public indebtedness, valuation, taxation, and expenditures; to religious bodies; to electric light and power, telephone and telegraph business; to transportation by water, express business, and street railways; to mines, mining, and minerals, and the production and value thereof, including gold, in divisions of placer and vein, and silver mines, and the number of men employed, the average daily wage, average working time and aggregate earnings in the various branches and aforesaid divisions of the mining industry: Provided, That the reports herein authorized relating to mines, mining, and minerals shall be published on or before July 1, A. D. 1903.

And the Director of the Census shall prepare schedules containing such interrogatories as shall in his judgment be best adapted to elicit the information required under these subjects, with such specifications, divisions, and particulars under each head as he shall deem necessary to that end. For the purpose of securing the statistics required by this section, the Director of the Census may appoint special agents when necessary, and such special agents shall receive compensation as hereinafter provided. The statistics of deaths and births provided for in this section shall be obtained from, and restricted to, the registration records of such States and municipalities as possess records affording satisfactory data in necessary detail, in the discretion of the Director, the compensation for the transcription of which shall not exceed 2 cents for each birth or death reported. The statistics of special classes, and of crime, pauperism, and benevolence specified in this section shall be restricted to institutions containing such classes: Provided, That at the time of the census enumeration the data relating to these classes may be collected by the enumerators of such institutions, who shall receive compensation therefor at rates not exceeding, in per capita districts, 5 cents for each name enumerated and returned. The collection of statistics authorized by this section shall be made at such time or times and in such manner as will not interfere with nor delay the rapid completion of the census reports provided for in section 9 of this act, and all reports prepared under the provisions of this section shall be designated as "Special Reports of the Census Office."

SEC. 11. That the Director of the Census shall, at least six months prior to the date fixed for commencing the enumeration at the Twelfth and each succeeding decennial census, designate the number, whether one or more, of supervisors of census to be appointed within each State or Territory and the District of Columbia and other noncontiguous possessions of the United States, administered under the civil law thereof, who shall be appointed by the President: Provided, That the whole number of such supervisors shall not exceed 300: And provided further, That wherever practicable and desirable the boundaries of the supervisors' districts shall conform to the boundaries of Congressional districts.

SEC. 12. That each supervisor of census shall be charged with the performance, within his own district, of the following duties: To consult with the Director of the Census in regard to the division of his district into subdivisions most convenient for the purpose of the enumeration, which subdivisions shall be declared and the boundaries thereof fixed by the Director of the Census; to designate to the Director suitable persons, and, with the consent of said Director, to appoint such persons as enumerators within his district, one or more for each subdivision and resident therein; but in case it shall occur in any enumeration district that no person qualified to perform and willing to undertake the duties of enumerator resides in that subdivision the supervisor may appoint any fit person to be the enumerator of that subdivision; to communicate to enumerators the necessary instructions and directions relating to their duties; to examine and scrutinize the returns of the enumerators, and in event of discrepancies or deficiencies appearing in the returns for his district, to use all diligence in causing the same to be corrected and supplied; to forward to the Director of the Census the completed returns for his district in such time and manner as shall be prescribed by the said Director, and to make up and forward to the Director the accounts required for ascertaining the amount of compensation due to each enumerator in his district, which accounts shall be duly sworn to by the enumerator, and the same shall be certified as true and correct, if so found, by the supervisor, and said accounts so sworn to and certified shall be accepted by the said Director, and payment shall be made thereon by draft in favor of each enumerator.

The duties imposed upon the supervisor by this act shall be performed, in any and all particulars, in accordance with the instructions and directions of the Director of the Census: Provided, That if the supervisor of any district has not been appointed and qualified on the ninetieth day preceding the date fixed for the commencement of the enumeration, the Director of the Census may appoint a special agent, who shall be a resident of the same district, to perform the work of subdivision into enumeration districts: And provided, That any supervisor who may abandon, neglect, or improperly perform the duties required of him by this act may be removed by the Director of the Census, and any vacancy thus caused or otherwise occurring during the progress of the enumeration may be filled by the Director of the Census.

SEC. 13. That each supervisor of census shall, upon the completion of his duties to the satisfaction of the Director of the Census, receive the sum of $125, and in addition thereto, in thickly settled districts, $1 for each thousand or majority fraction of a thousand of the population enumerated in such district, and in sparsely settled districts, $1.40 for each thousand or majority fraction of a thousand of the population enumerated in such district, such sums to be in full compensation for all services rendered and expenses incurred by him, except that in serious emergencies arising during the progress of the enumeration in his district or in connection with the reenumeration of any subdivision he may, in the discretion of the Director of the Census, be allowed actual and necessary traveling expenses and an allowance in lieu of subsistence not exceeding $3 per day during his necessary absence from his usual place of residence, and that an appropriate allowance for clerk hire may be made when deemed necessary by the Director of the Census: Provided, That in the aggregate no supervisor shall be paid less than the sum of $1,000. The designation of the compensation per thousand, as provided in this section, shall be made by the Director of the Census at least one month in advance of the date fixed for the commencement of the enumeration.

SEC. 14. That each enumerator shall be charged with the collection, in his subdivision, of facts and statistics required by the population schedule, and such other schedules as the Director of the Census may determine shall be used by him in connection with the census, as provided in section 9 of this act. It shall be the duty of each enumerator to visit personally each dwelling house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of each family, or of the member thereof deemed most credible and worthy of trust, or of such individual living out of a family, to obtain each and every item of information and all particulars required by this act as of date June 1st of the year in which the enumeration shall be made. And in case no person shall be found at the usual place of abode of such family, or individual living out of a family, competent to answer the inquiries made in compliance with the requirements of this act, then it shall be lawful for the enumerator to obtain the required information, as nearly as may be practicable, from the family or families or person or persons living nearest to such place of abode; and it shall be the duty of each enumerator to forward the original schedules, duly certified, to the supervisor of census of his district as his returns under the provisions of this act; and in the event of discrepancies or deficiencies being discovered in his said returns he shall use all diligence in correcting or supplying the same.

In case the subdivision assigned to any enumerator embrace all or any part of any incorporated borough, village, town, or city, and also other territory not included within the limits of such incorporated borough, village, town, or city, or either, it shall be the duty of the enumerator of such subdivision to clearly and plainly distinguish and separate, upon the population schedules, the inhabitants of all or any part of such borough, village, town, or city, as may be embraced in the subdivision assigned to such enumerator, from the inhabitants of the territory not included therein. No enumerator shall be deemed qualified to enter upon his duties until he has received from the supervisor of census of the district to which he belongs a commission, under his hand, authorizing him to perform the duties of an enumerator, and setting forth the boundaries of the subdivision within which such duties are to be performed by him.

SEC. 15. That the subdivision assigned to any enumerator shall not exceed 4,000 inhabitants, according to estimates based on the preceding census or other reliable information, and the boundaries of all subdivisions shall be clearly described by civil divisions, rivers, roads, public surveys, or other easily distinguished lines: Provided, That enumerators may be assigned for the special enumeration of institutions, when desirable, without reference to the number of inmates.

SEC. 16. That any supervisor of census may, with the approval of the Director of the Census, remove any enumerator in his district and fill the vacancy thus caused or otherwise occurring. Whenever it shall appear that any portion of the enumeration and census provided for in this act has been negligently or improperly taken, and is by reason thereof incomplete or erroneous, the Director of the Census may cause such incomplete and unsatisfactory enumeration and census to be amended or made anew under such methods as may, in his discretion, be practicable.

SEC. 17. That the Director of the Census may authorize and direct supervisors of census to employ interpreters to assist the enumerators of their respective districts in the enumeration of persons not speaking the English language. The compensation of such interpreters shall be fixed by the Director of the Census in advance, and shall not exceed $4 per day for each day actually and necessarily employed.

SEC. 18. That the compensation of the enumerators shall be ascertained and fixed by the Director of the Census as follows: In subdivisions where he shall deem such allowance sufficient, an allowance of not less than 2 nor more than 3 cents for each living inhabitant and for each death reported; not less than 15 nor more than 20 cents for each farm, and not less than 20 nor more than 30 cents for each establishment of productive industry enumerated and returned may be given in full compensation for all services. For all other subdivisions per diem rates shall be fixed by the Director of the Census according to the difficulty of enumeration, having reference to the nature of the region to be canvassed and the density or sparseness of settlement, or other considerations pertinent thereto; but the compensation allowed to any enumerator shall not be less than $3 nor more than $6 per day of ten hours' actual field work each. The subdivisions to which the several rates of compensation shall apply shall be designated by the Director of the Census at least two weeks in advance of the enumeration. No claim for mileage or traveling expenses shall be allowed any enumerator in either class of subdivisions, except in extreme cases, and then only when authority has been previously granted by the Director of the Census, and the decision of the Director as to the amount due any enumerator shall be final.

SEC. 19. That the special agents appointed under the provisions of this act shall be restricted to field work only, and they shall have equal authority with the enumerators in respect to the subjects committed to them, and shall receive compensation at rates to be fixed by the Director of the Census: Provided, That the same shall in no case exceed $6 per day and actual necessary traveling expenses and an allowance in lieu of subsistence not exceeding $3 per day during their necessary absence from their usual place of residence.

SEC. 20. That no supervisor, supervisor's clerk, enumerator, interpreter, or special agent shall enter upon his duties until he has taken and subscribed to an oath or affirmation to be prescribed by the Director of the Census; and no supervisor, supervisor's clerk, enumerator, or special agent shall be accompanied by or assisted in the performance of his duties by any person not duly appointed as an officer or employee of the Census Office and to whom an oath or affirmation has not been duly administered. All supervisors, chief statisticians, chief clerk, disbursing clerk, geographer, expert chiefs of division, stenographers, supervisors' clerks, appointees provided for in section 6 of this act, interpreters, special agents, clerks in the Census Office, and enumerators provided for in this act shall be appointed or employed, and if examined, so examined, as the case may be, solely with reference to their fitness to perform the duties herein provided to be by such employee or appointee performed, and without reference to their political party affiliations.

SEC. 21. That the enumeration of the population required by this act shall commence on the 1st day of June, 1900, and on the 1st day of June of the year in which each succeeding enumeration shall be made, and be taken as of that date. And it shall be the duty of each enumerator to complete the enumeration of his district and to prepare the returns hereinbefore required to be made, and to forward the same to the supervisor of census of his district, on or before the 1st day of July in such year: Provided, That in any city having 8,000 inhabitants or more under the preceding census the enumeration of the population shall be taken and completed within two weeks from the 1st day of June as aforesaid.

SEC. 22. That if any person shall receive or secure to himself any fee, reward, or compensation as a consideration for the appointment or employment of any person as enumerator or clerk or other employee, or shall in any way receive or secure to himself any part of the compensation provided in this act for the services of any enumerator or clerk or other employee, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $3,000, or be imprisoned not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 23. That any supervisor, supervisor's clerk, enumerator, interpreter, or special agent, who, after having taken and subscribed the oath of office required by this act, shall, without justifiable cause, neglect or refuse to perform the duties enjoined on him by this act, or shall, without the authority of the Director of the Census, communicate to any person not authorized to receive the same any information gained by him in the performance of his duties, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $500; or if he shall willfully and knowingly swear or affirm falsely he shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon conviction thereof shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years and be fined not exceeding $800; or if he shall willfully and knowingly make a false certificate or a fictitious return he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction of either of the last-named offenses he shall be fined not exceeding $5,000 and be imprisoned not exceeding two years.

SEC. 24. That each and every person more than 20 years of age belonging to any family residing in any enumeration district or subdivision, and in case of the absence of the heads and other members of any such family, then any representative of such family, shall be, and each of them hereby is, required, if thereto requested by the Director, supervisor, or enumerator, to render a true account, to the best of his or her knowledge, of every person belonging to such family in the various particulars required, and whoever shall willfully fail or refuse to render such true account shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding $100. And every president, treasurer, secretary, director, agent or other officer of every corporation, and every establishment of productive industry, whether conducted as a corporate body, limited liability company, or by private individuals, from which answers to any of the schedules provided for by this act are herein required, who shall, if thereto requested by the Director, supervisor, enumerator, or special agent, willfully neglect or refuse to give true and complete answers to any inquiries authorized by this act, or shall willfully give false information, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $10,000, to which may be added imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year.

SEC. 25. That all fines and penalties imposed by this act may be enforced by indictment or information in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 26. That the Director of the Census may authorize the expenditure of necessary sums for the traveling expenses of the officers and employees of the Census Office and the incidental expenses essential to the carrying out of this act, including the rental of sufficient quarters in the District of Columbia and the furnishing thereof, and the fitting up and maintenance of the printing outfit in the Census Office.

SEC. 27. That the Director of the Census is hereby authorized to print and bind in the Census Office such blanks, circulars, envelopes, and other items as may be necessary; and to print, publish, and distribute from time to time bulletins and reports of the preliminary and other results of the various investigations required by this act. He is also authorized to bind, or to have bound by contract, if expedient, such schedules of the Eleventh Census as he may deem essential for preservation and necessary reference.

SEC. 28. That in case the Director of the Census deems it expedient, he may contract for the use of electrical or mechanical devices for tabulating purposes: Provided, That in such case due notice shall be given to the public, and no system of tabulation shall be adopted until after a practical test of its merits in competition with other systems which may be offered.

SEC. 29. That the Director of the Census is hereby authorized, whenever he may think proper, to call upon any other departments or office of the Government for information pertinent to the work herein provided for.

SEC. 30. That all mail matter, of whatever class, relative to the census and addressed to the Census Office, the Director of the Census, assistant director, chief clerk, supervisors, enumerators, or special agents, and indorsed "Official Business, Census Office," shall be transmitted free of postage, and by registered mail if necessary, and so marked: Provided, That if any person shall make use of such indorsement to avoid the payment of postage or registry fee on his or her private letter, package, or other matter in the mail, the person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to a fine of $300, to be prosecuted in any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 31. That upon the request of the governor of any State or Territory, or the chief officer of any municipal government, the Director of the Census shall furnish such governor or municipal officer with a copy of so much of the population returns as will show the names, with the age, sex, color or race, and birthplace only of all persons enumerated within the territory in the jurisdiction of such government upon payment of the actual cost of making such copies; and the amounts so received shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States, to be placed to the credit of, and in addition to, the appropriations made for taking the census.

SEC. 32. That the Director of the Census shall provide the Census Office with a seal containing such device as he may select, and he shall file a description of such seal with an impression thereof in the office of the Secretary of State. Such seal shall remain in the custody of the Director of the Census, and shall be affixed to all certificates and attestations that may be required from the Census Office.

SEC. 33. That such records, books, and files as relate to preceding censuses, and all property of whatever nature used at the Eleventh Census, including the printing office outfit, as may be necessary in conducting the work of the Census Office and can be spared from present uses, shall be transferred to the custody and control of the Census Office created by this act. The furniture and property so transferred shall be inventoried by the proper officers of the Department of the Interior, and a copy of the inventory filed and preserved in the office of the Secretary of the Interior and of the Director of the Census.

SEC. 34. That for the organization and equipment of the Census Office to perform the preparatory work necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, the sum of $1,000,000, to be available on the passage of this act, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to continue available until exhausted. Of said appropriation such amount as may be considered by the Director of the Census to be necessary for immediate preliminary printing may be expended under the direction of the Public Printer. And the Director of the Census shall submit to the Secretary of the Treasury, on or before October 1, 1899, further estimates for the work herein provided for.

SEC. 35. That the act entitled "An act to provide for the taking of the Eleventh and subsequent censuses," approved March 1, 1889, and all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second on that bill.

The SPEAKER. A second is demanded by the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Illinois and the gentleman from Indiana will be recognized to control the time.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to take but a few minutes in speaking on the bill, which has been read, and members who are interested in the matter, of course, have followed that and are advised as to its general character. I will say, in the main we have followed the precedents in the preparation of bills for the taking of preceding censuses, but have made a number of changes that we believe will add efficiency to the work and lessen the expense as compared with the Tenth and Eleventh censuses. The chief change that is made in this bill as compared with the preceding census bills is the fact that we provide in this bill for a separate bureau.

Under preceding bills of this character the work has been done under the Department of the Interior. The experience in taking the last census especially has satisfied the members of the committee reporting this bill that much more efficient work can be secured by a separate bureau, making the Director of the Census responsible for the work. Now, in the clerical force of the Bureau for the Eleventh Census there were 93 employees. We have provided for only 62. The annual expense for the Eleventh Census for this clerical force aggregated $163,865, and in the bill as we provide it will not exceed $116,500, an annual saving there of over $40,000.

In the preparation of the work we have provided for 300 supervisors, or at least that number can be used. I will state to the members of the House that for the Tenth Census there were only 150 supervisors and for the Eleventh 175. A great many members expressed the wish that in the preparation of the bill it could be so arranged that there would be a supervisor for each Congressional district. We found on investigation that this could not be done consistently with efficient work, the purpose in taking the census being to conform as closely as can be to the local conditions. Now, I understand, to illustrate, that the State of Massachusetts has a law by which only one supervisor is desired or required for this work. We leave it discretionary with the Director of the Census to determine how large or small each division shall be.

I know that in large cities, like Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, and other places, the work of taking the census will be much more efficiently done under one supervisor than one for each Congressional district. Three hundred supervisors will enable the Director of the Census to conform these districts to the Congressional districts wherever it shall be found practicable or desirable.

Another change that we have made, which I think will commend itself to the Members of the House and ought to commend itself to the Senators and general public, is this: The supervisors are to be named by the President of the United States. In the previous census bills these supervisors have been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. We recommend that the supervisors be named by the President, on the recommendation of the Director of the Census.

On examination of the question we find that they can be appointed by the President without confirmation by the Senate, and it is especially desirable if the Director of the Census divides the supervisors' districts so as to conform as near as may be with the Congressional districts that the power of appointment rest with the President.

Now, the enumerators are to be appointed by the supervisor, or recommended by him and appointed by the Director, and taken from the locality in which they live.

These districts are divided into districts of population not to exceed 4,000 inhabitants. My judgment is that these districts will do divided into smaller population districts than this for the reason that the bill requires that the work of enumeration in cities of 8,000 and over shall be done in fifteen days from the date of the commencement of the work, and in rural districts in thirty days from the date of the commencement of the work.

Gentlemen of the House can readily see that if the work is to be done in this limited time, that the enumeration districts should be subdivided so that the enumerator can do his work accurately and well within the time limited.

Mr. HENDERSON. Can the gentleman give any estimate of what the compensation of the enumerators will amount to on the basis of his subdivision?

Mr. HOPKINS. From $125 to $175 each.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I notice in the tenth section of this bill there is a provision concerning the collection of data as to public indebtedness. Is there any objection to also inserting in that a provision for the collection of data as to the private indebtedness and mortgage indebtedness? It seems to me that those are valuable statistics and ought to be known, and inasmuch as each individual is to be seen in the taking of the census, it is only an additional question, which would involve no great additional expense. I refer to line 6, page 8, of the bill. It would be simply enlarging a little the scope of the inquiry.

Mr. HOPKINS. I will say that that matter was considered by the committee, and the gentleman will see, as all other members of the House will by examining the bill, that section 9 relates to five great divisions under which the work is to be done; that is, population, mortality, manufacturing and mechanical industries, and agricultural products. It was thought wise by the committee, in following the example of the Senate, to limit the number of subjects, so that the work that is done under the census bill can be given to the public within the time when the statistics will be of value.

Mr. DALZELL. I would like to ask the gentleman a question right there.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Please let me complete my inquiry.

Mr. HOPKINS. I will state further that in the Tenth Census, owing to the large number of subjects that were placed under the direction of the Superintendent of the Census, it was nine years and four months before the last volume was published. The figures had become obsolete, and were of no value to statisticians or scientific men in this country or abroad, when they were finally published.

In the Eleventh Census it was attempted to restrict this inquiry, but it was found that it took eight years and four months before the last volume was published, and great complaint has been made against the work because of this fact. We are told that in view of the enormous amount of work that was placed on the Superintendent of the Census through the investigation of these various subjects, it was a physical impossibility to procure the publication of these works at an earlier date.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Is it not a fact that in the Tenth and Eleventh censuses that report concerning the amount of farm mortgages that existed was one of the earliest reports that was published, and was published in less than one year from the time of taking the census?

Mr. HOPKINS. I will say to the gentleman from Colorado that the farm mortgages is one of the subjects that has been severely criticised by people generally and by statisticians, and that great expense was incurred in the taking of it. In the last census that subject alone cost the Government more than a million of dollars, and the work was not satisfactory, not because of any lack of skill or ability in the Census Bureau, but on account of the subject itself.

This is a matter that changes so rapidly that the data when it is obtained, and by the time it can be published, is of no value. If the gentleman has followed the recording of mortgages in his own State, he can see how rapidly the condition changes, and that it will be impossible to give statistics upon that subject which will be of any value. Therefore the committee thought, as the Senate committee thought, that it would be unwise to include that in the bill.

Mr. DALZELL. Now, if the gentleman will allow me, if there was nothing else in the bill than what is contained in section 9, I take it that no statistics would be gathered as to mines and mining.

Mr. HOPKINS. There would not.

Mr. DALZELL. I find in section 10 that there is a provision made for mines and mining and minerals. Does not my colleague think the two sections are inconsistent?

Mr. HOPKINS. They are not. The five subdivisions, where it is important under the Constitution to obtain early information, are embodied in section 9 of the bill. The gentleman will observe the bill requires the Director of the Census to procure that information and publish it in due form within two years from the time when this information is taken by the enumerators.

Now, by getting it within that time this information will be of value to statisticians and scientific men the world over.

In order to meet just the point suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL], we have embodied in the bill section 10, which provides for much more careful, accurate, and detailed information about a variety of subjects, including mines and mining, than we have had heretofore. It was our purpose at first to leave out any provision of that kind, because in the Geological Department of the Government a large amount of that information is obtained; but the Director of that Department, in a letter to the committee, stated that it would be important to embody such a provision in the bill and to procure that information after the census proper, as provided for in section 9, has been taken.

Mr. DALZELL. I find that in section 10, which relates to statistics as to mines and mining and other important matters, the language is that "the Director of the Census is hereby authorized." Is it the intention of the committee to leave this matter to the discretion of the Director of the Census? If not, why is not the word "directed" used, as in other cases?

Mr. HOPKINS. The intention is to make the provision directory, and I think it is so.

Mr. DALZELL. Let me say to the gentleman that in my judgment there can be no satisfactory statistics covering the subject of manufacturing and mechanical arts unless mining statistics be given in connection with them, and as a necessary part of them.

Mr. HOPKINS. This subject was discussed not only by the Senate committee, but by the committee of the House. There was at first a division of sentiment as to whether statistics in relation to mines and mining should be included in section 9, as suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. We are getting such statistics now from the Geological Department; and it was at first thought that to make such an addition to section 9 might tend to delay the report of the census on population, mortality, and these other matters which are of prime importance. But under section 10 mines and mining will be as thoroughly investigated and the statistics as accurately and elaborately prepared as they would be if the subject were included in section 9; but the compilation of such statistics will be deferred until the more important matters have been gathered and reported by the Director of the Census to the public.

Mr. STEELE. In taking the census heretofore, had the Director unlimited authority, as he will have under this bill, to employ whatever labor or clerical force may be necessary?

Mr. HOPKINS. In previous census bills the Director of the Census was given the same authority, so far as the selection of his force was concerned, as is given here.

Mr. STEELE. Under this bill his authority is absolutely unlimited as to the number and cost.

Mr. HOPKINS. That must necessarily be the case. Such has been the provision in every bill that has ever been reported on this subject.

Mr. KELLEY. Is it not true that when the Eleventh Census was taken there was a greater public demand for statistics pertaining to farm indebtedness and indebtedness in general than for any other figures which were put out?

Mr. HOPKINS. I do not agree that such was the fact.

Mr. KELLEY. The gentleman stated a moment ago, in reply to a remark of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH], that there was such a demand for that portion of the statistics that they were first put out.

Mr. HOPKINS. I did not say that they were first put out; the gentleman from Colorado said that.

Mr. KELLEY. Yes; the gentleman from Colorado said so. But the gentleman from Illinois stated that those statistics were put out in response to a great public demand. Now, it seems to me that statistics of this class, for which it is very apparent there is and has been a great public demand, should not be omitted.

Mr. HOPKINS. As I have already stated to members of the House, the result of the collection of those statistics was so unsatisfactory, and the time taken in gathering them and the expense connected therewith so great, that it has not been thought wise to embody in this bill any provision for the collection of such statistics.

Mr. KELLEY. Is the gentleman able to give us an estimate of the time in which the statistics in general can be put out with that portion eliminated?

Mr. HOPKINS. No; I can not give the time now. The only trouble was that such a mass of information was required from the enumerators that their returns were not accurate, and in many cases had to be taken again. In connection with the Eleventh Census 250 questions were prepared in a schedule by the Director of the Census and placed in the hands of the enumerators, each of whom was obliged to collect in his locality the information covered by those questions. In cities of 8,000 population and over he was required to do this work within fifteen days, and in rural districts in thirty days. Under such circumstances it will readily be seen that accurate and desirable information, such as should be embodied in reports of this character, could not be collected.

Mr. KELLEY. Would the gentleman agree to an amendment covering statistics of this kind and providing that they be gathered in a proper manner?

Mr. HOPKINS. I am sorry to say that I can not. This is a matter which has been carefully considered by the committee, and after consultation with members outside and with Senators, we have agreed that provision for that class of statistics ought not to be embodied in the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Is the gentleman willing that an amendment of that character be voted upon?

Mr. HOPKINS. I have just said I am not.

Mr. LACEY. I wish to ask the chairman of the committee a question as to the parliamentary status of this bill. I find that the Senate has passed a census bill. This bill in its present form is, of course, a House bill. The gentleman did not move to suspend the rules and strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and substitute for it the bill now pending before the House, but his motion was to pass this as an independent House bill. Now, will not, in that event, the situation be this: This House will have passed a bill, H. R. 11815, and the Senate another bill, to wit, Senate bill No. 4545, and there is no basis for a conference between the two Houses upon the differences in these respective bills?

Ought not the motion that he made be amended, or should it not have been composed, in other words, in this form—to strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and substitute the House bill, so that the matter might then go into conference by the joint action of the two Houses?

Mr. HOPKINS. Either motion would have accomplished the purpose. But our hope is that the Senate will pass the House bill as we have reported it, and we have prepared it with a great deal of care and consideration. We reported it, in fact, with that in view.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I will yield to my friend from Illinois some portion of the time allotted to me if he desires to consume further time in the discussion of this matter.

Mr. Speaker, from what the gentleman from Illinois has stated in unfolding this measure before the House for its consideration, as well as from the character of the interrogatories propounded to him by gentlemen with regard to it, it is quite apparent that this bill ought not to pass in a hurried manner, but that it should be considered with due deliberation on some other occasion when there is ample opportunity to investigate all of its provisions and make such amendments and modifications as may be found necessary.

I think, however, that I know the temper of the House. It is apparent that the measure will pass, and that nothing which I can say, or which any other member on the floor of the House can say, for that matter, will prevent its passage under the motion submitted by the gentleman. I desire, however, to enter my protest against it, and to present briefly some of my reasons for such action.

In my humble opinion, sir, the bill is a step backward. It is a marked retrogression. To pass it in this form is simply to disregard the advice and recommendations of those persons who are most capable, from long experience, of giving us information upon the subject.

Mr. Robert P. Porter, the Superintendent of the Eleventh Census Bureau, after severing his connection with that office, complained bitterly that much of his time while at the head of the Bureau had been taken up in attending to the demands made upon him by Senators and Representatives for places for their constituents. He also declared that in his opinion the Census Office should be made a permanent institution of the Government, and that its operations should be placed entirely under the control of the civil service. That, in his judgment, was the only way in which the functions of taking the census could be properly and efficiently performed.

Mr. Carroll D. Wright, who succeeded Mr. Porter in his office, declared positively, and I think that we all have reasons to know his statement to be true, that the last census was an exceedingly unreliable and was also a very extravagant piece of work. He said that in his opinion it had cost the taxpayers of the United States $2,000,000 more than it would have cost them if it had been taken under proper civil-service regulations.

He further declared that during his administration of the office, near its close and at a time when the public service required that the force should be curtailed in the interest of economy, he was compelled by the importunities of Senators and Representatives to increase the number of the employees under his charge nearly 400 persons, not one of whom was necessary for the work of the Bureau, but each one of whom had, of course, to be paid by the people of the United States.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the census is a very important piece of work. By it we estimate our growth, our progress, and our resources as compared with that of other nations. It is the finger board along the highway which the nation is traversing to indicate the degree of our advancement. It is the very foundation upon which all legislation is more or less based and upon which our business calculations and our business superstructures are often erected. The American Statistical Association and the American Economic Association and various other business organizations and interests of the country, who appreciate the importance of taking the census accurately, are asking that this measure in its present form shall not be passed, but that the census shall be placed under the control of civil-service regulations. How important it is, sir, that this work shall be put into efficient hands; that it shall be accurately performed. Of what use will it be if it is done imperfectly?

I know it is provided in this measure that the Director of the Census may, if he sees proper—and it seems to be largely a matter of discretion with him, as I read the terms of the bill—have what are known as pass examinations, or departmental examinations, with a view to determining the competency of those who seek employment in the Bureau. Mr. Speaker, we all know that pass examinations as administered in the Government service have always been a sham and a fraud. They have not secured the services of the most efficient employees for the Government. They have been invariably abused, and they have interposed no successful barrier to those who sought to use the public offices of the country to reward their political friends. Under it some capable employees will get into the service, and many incompetent ones will be employed.

This measure, sir, if passed, is nothing more nor less than a declaration to those who have graduated from the common schools of the country, to the sons of the farmers, to the sons of the laborers, that unless they can get the support of some public man, unless they can have a pull upon some Senator or Congressman, they shall have no opportunity to submit to this pass examination, to demonstrate their superiority for work in the Census Office, and to receive at the hands of its Director a place therein as the reward of their merit. It is a declaration here that we will not have competitive examinations open to young men of all political beliefs in all sections of the country, to the end that the persons who have the best qualifications may have the places, and that the Government may get the services of those best equipped for the work, but it seeks, by restricting the number of those who may apply for place to those that have influence enough to get the consent of a Senator or Congressman to stand this departmental examination, to establish the very thing which the friends of the spoils system claim is represented by the civil-service system, to wit, an undemocratic monopoly of the offices of the country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we are on the verge of another political campaign in this country. It is hardly two years off. The influences that make for a corrupt ballot are already strong enough for us to contend with. This measure proposes to augment those difficulties rather than to lessen them. Every political party which can control this Bureau is now invited by this bill to step in and offer in advance bribes to men to support the policy of that party. Shall the offices which belong to the people be thus used against them? Shall they be parceled out as personal perquisites of public men? Are the deserving but poor and uninfluential citizens to be wholly thrust aside? Can we afford to inaugurate such a system as this? So far as I am concerned, I am not willing to agree to it, and desire to express my dissent by casting my vote against this bill.

I have no doubt, sir, that this or some similar measure divorcing the census from the protection of the civil-service law and turning it over to the base uses of those who desire to prostitute office for personal and party purposes, rather than to administer it for the welfare of the entire people, will pass Congress. When it does, the President of the United States will be called upon either to approve of it or to disapprove of it. The President has always professed to be a friend of the civil service. His utterances in Congress, when he was a member of this House, and his votes here have justified the belief that he is such a friend. To his honor be it said that he stood like a wall of adamant against gentlemen on the floor of this body who sought, in a previous session of this Congress, to attack and destroy the civil-service law.

When this bill comes to him for his consideration, I entertain the hope, in common with many other people in this country, that he will interpose against it a Presidential veto. The eyes of many people of this nation will be turned hopefully in his direction. If he sees fit to exercise the veto power, in my humble opinion it will result only in good to the country, in advantage to all of our citizens. If, upon the other hand, he sees fit to give it his approval—and he has, of course, the unquestioned right to do so—I can see no remedy except to submit to its unwise provisions and await the time when the quickened intelligence and conscience of the people will see the necessity, in a matter so important as the taking of a census, of divorcing it from all inaccuracy, from all evil, and of placing it upon a firm and reliable foundation, so that it will be regarded by all classes as entirely accurate and as a safe basis upon which to construct their calculations.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Will the gentleman yield three minutes to me?

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has ten minutes remaining.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. How much time does the gentleman from Colorado require?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Three minutes is all the time I care for.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. I desire to reserve five minutes for myself. I do not know that I shall utilize it. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] desire some additional time?

Mr. HOPKINS. I should like a little, but I shall ask unanimous consent for it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I will yield three minutes to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. Speaker, I have no doubt that there are many provisions of this bill that are worthy of support. But, Mr. Speaker, it is not a character of bill that ought to be presented to the House under a suspension of the rules. In the present status of this bill no amendment whatever can be offered to it, and it must be voted for exactly as the committee has presented it, or else it must be defeated. There are some very important omissions, in my judgment, in this bill. It ought to be considered either in Committee of the Whole or before the House, where amendments could be offered and voted on.

Mr. HOPKINS. Will the gentleman allow me just there? Does not the language of section 9, at the bottom of page 4, cover practically what the gentleman desires? It says "ownership of farms and homes."

Mr. SHAFROTH. I think not.

Mr. HOPKINS. That will indicate who own the farms and who are the tenants.

Mr. SHAFROTH. But that does not indicate the extent of the mortgage that may be against them; and it seems to me that an amendment ought to be made by putting in, after the word "public," "and private," so that it would be public and private and mortgage indebtedness. That would at least be one point that would be improved by an amendment.

Mr. HOPKINS. The gentleman ought to understand that private indebtedness is impossible to get. You can not get any statistics that would be reliable. It would be regarded as a piece of impertinence by a great majority of men.

Mr. SHAFROTH. They could be made to answer, just like the other questions.

A MEMBER. We could do it again.

Mr. SHAFROTH. But, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the very fact that the members of this House have had no opportunity to examine this bill—and yet I have suggested an amendment which is replied to by the gentleman that he will not consent that the House shall even vote upon it—is sufficient reason why we should not pass the bill under suspension of the rules. [Applause.] We ought to have this bill before the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union or before the House itself, and then when an amendment should be offered it could be voted upon, and if a majority of this House say that such a matter as I have suggested ought not to be in it, then they can vote it down and I will heartily support the bill. There is no danger that the bill will not be passed.

Mr. STEELE. I would like to ask the gentleman what advantage it will be?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I can not yield to the gentleman. I have only three minutes. But, Mr. Speaker, when we take into consideration the number of defects that would appear if the bill were read by sections, when we take into consideration there is no opportunity given to offer amendments and have the amendments voted upon, it seems to me that the bill ought to be considered where that can be done and the bill perfected. [Applause.]

Mr. STEELE. Now the gentleman can tell what advantage there is to be gained by enumerating the private mortgages.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The advantage would be like all other information. It is of as considerable importance to know the condition of the people as to know how much the indebtedness is. It is as much so as collecting information about the public indebtedness; in fact, private indebtedness is harder to ascertain.

Mr. STEELE. I would say so.

Mr. SHAFROTH. And for that reason only once in ten times can you get even an approximate idea of it. It could be done by inserting a question in the interrogatories. It would not add one iota to the expense of taking the census should we include this one item.

Mr. SIMPSON. I would suggest to my friend that it was the only information gained in taking the Eleventh Census that the people cared for.

Mr. STEELE. Perhaps it was particularly cared for by my Populist friends.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois has asked me for the balance of my time. With the understanding that he uses it himself, I yield the balance of my time to him, which I understand to be seven minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has five minutes remaining.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to take that time. I desire only to say to the gentleman from Colorado that the subject he desires to inject in this bill is a matter that would result in no good to anybody. As gentlemen have said around me, inquiries of that character would be regarded as a matter of impertinence, and if the information were made public it would ruin half the business men of the country. It looks like interfering with private affairs, and it is not——

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. HOPKINS. And it is not a fair subject of legislation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois declines to yield.

Mr. KELLEY. Has he declined or has the Speaker declined?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield?

Mr. HOPKINS. I decline to yield. There has never been an investigation in any previous bill of this character.

Now, Mr. Speaker, just a word in reply to my friend from Indiana. I think the records of this House will show that my vote has always been cast in favor of civil-service reform where that matter has been properly before the House.

Mr. MARSH. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. HOPKINS. I will yield.

Mr. MARSH. I desire to ask the gentleman whether this census bill is designed to cover the people of the Philippine Islands? [Laughter.]

Mr. HOPKINS. In answer to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON], I desire to say that the Committee on Census gave a hearing to the National Civil Service League, and in the investigation that was had they admitted that the enumerators—the most numerous class of employees under this bill—could not be selected under civil-service rules. The same argument that excludes them from the civil service applies equally to the supervisors, so it is only the clerical force in the office at Washington that would come under the civil-service law.

Now, we believe from the investigation that we have made that section 7 of the bill provides for an examination that will give as efficient a clerical force to the Director of the Census in the discharge of his duty as it would be possible to secure from the Civil Service Commission. We find the trouble in the previous census did not exist so much from the fact that they were selected on noncompetitive examination as from the fact that the Bureau was under the control of the Interior Department.

When the Bureau was established rules were prepared by the Secretary of the Interior, under the advice of the Director of the Census, by which efficient help from all Departments was secured; but when there was a change of Administration and a new Secretary of the Interior came from the State of Georgia, who was hostile to the civil-service law, he abrogated all rules and all law governing this force and let into the service a lot of incompetents, and they are the ones that led Mr. Wright to indulge in the remark that has been quoted by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JOHNSON]. Now, I will say to him that by establishing a separate bureau, and making the Director of the Census responsible for the work, no such condition of affairs can exist as the one that was commented upon by him as existing in the Eleventh Census.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Iowa and a number of other gentlemen think that, in view of the fact that the close of this session is to be on the 4th of March, instead of having a separate bill it would be better to consider the Senate bill (S. 4545), and I move to strike out all after the enacting clause in that bill and substitute this bill, so as to put this question into conference at once. I therefore ask unanimous consent that this be done.

Mr. KELLEY. I object.

Mr. HOPKINS. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will change my motion, and, instead of asking unanimous consent, I move to suspend the rules, strike out all after the enacting clause in Senate bill 4545, and substitute House bill 11815.

Mr. BROSIUS. Are the bills identical? We do not know what is in the Senate bill.

Mr. HOPKINS. I move to strike out all after the enacting clause in the Senate bill and substitute the House bill.

Mr. HENDERSON. Make the House bill an amendment to the Senate bill?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes; the motion makes the House bill an amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then the gentleman withdraws his first motion?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

The SPEAKER. That will require a new procedure.

Mr. KELLEY. Has the bill been reported by a committee?

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. MCRAE. On that last motion by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS], Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. BROSIUS. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BROSIUS. It seems to me this is in the nature of an amendment, and the question is whether it is permissible under the rules to amend the bill.

Mr. HOPKINS. Well, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw my motion in view of the fact that objection was made to unanimous consent, and I ask for a vote on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the House bill, which has been read to the House.

The question was taken; and the Chair stated that he was in doubt.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 147, noes 42.

So (two-thirds having voted in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ANTI-CONTRACT LABOR LAWS.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11247) to extend the anti-contract labor laws of the United States to Hawaii.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act approved February 26, 1885, "to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States, its Territories and the District of Columbia," be, and the same is hereby, extended to the Hawaiian Islands.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 7, after the word Columbia, insert "and the acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto;" and in line 8 strike out the word "is" and insert "are."

Mr. KNOX. I demand a second on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. GARDNER. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KNOX. Mr. Speaker, when this bill to extend the contract-labor laws to Hawaii was offered under a proposition for unanimous consent, I objected to it. When the same bill was again offered as an amendment to a bill from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, I raised the point of order that it was not germane, which point was sustained by the Speaker. I rise at this time, however, not for the purpose of opposing the bill, but to state that those objections on my part were not made because I was not in hearty sympathy with the alien contract-labor laws of the United States, nor because I am not in hearty sympathy with the extension of those laws to all the territories that the United States has acquired, or which may, by any chance, be hereafter annexed to the United States. I believe that among the most difficult problems to arise in relation to these possessions will be the maintenance of the status of American laborers in the United States by the prevention of the importation into the United States of the products of cheap labor in those various islands.

My objection was that there is already before the House a bill reported by the Committee on Territories which extends entire the laws of the United States to the Hawaiian Islands, and creates an American Territory of those islands, and because I was desirous that that bill should receive consideration and be passed at this session of Congress. I felt that Hawaii is now a Territory of the United States and is entitled to a government to be created by the United States; that the people of those islands should have the benefit of all the laws of the United States. I was also opposed to the bill because I believed that this fragmentary method of legislation in regard to Hawaii is vicious in principle and will be found impracticable in operation. I believe that this measure, if passed, will not accomplish its purpose, for the reason that we have now no courts in Hawaii with jurisdiction over this subject. In my opinion it is far more important that a district court with the jurisdiction of a circuit court should be created there than that any other measure should now be passed with reference to the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman kindly state to the House what the provisions of this bill are?

Mr. KNOX. It proposes to extend the alien contract-labor law, the law of 1885 and the amendments of that law, to the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. HENDERSON. The real purpose is to keep Japanese labor out of Hawaii?

Mr. KNOX. Undoubtedly; and in its purpose it is an exceedingly meritorious bill.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Does the gentleman recognize the fact that by reason of his objection several thousands of those cheap laborers have come in at the ports of Hawaii?

Mr. KNOX. I do not recognize any such fact.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. That is the current report of the newspapers.

Mr. KNOX. I have authentic information from the Treasury Department on that point. The contracts under which those laborers entered were made long before this bill was presented by the distinguished chairman of the Labor Committee of this House.

Already, Mr. Speaker, in the Hawaiian Islands, the laws of the United States, laws necessary for the proper government of the people there, can not be enforced because we have not a court of competent jurisdiction there. Already there are ships in the harbor of Honolulu which have been libeled, and the process of libel already pending can not be carried out because there is no district court there and no court with the jurisdiction of the circuit court of the United States. I think that those islands, having become a part of our territory, the people there are entitled to the protection of the laws of the United States, and I wish to say that if the bill providing for that object should fail, it will not be because the committee that has had the matter in charge did not give it prompt and careful attention, and did not report the bill summarily and, as I conceive, in time for action. With this statement I say again I have no further opposition to offer to this bill.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, the facts as officially ascertained, which make it undesirable to delay longer such legislation as this, are that 3,000 contract laborers are already known to have reached the Hawaiian Islands since the annexation, and that the very day following the passage of the resolutions of annexation contracts for the importation of only a few less than 6,000 laborers were approved by the government, and that some 3,900 of those laborers are to be brought in during the first quarter of 1899.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KNOX] is unfair when he says that these contracts were made before the bill was introduced. The making of the contracts was the cause of the introduction of the bill. There is nobody in the United States, so far as I know, that wants the door left open for the importation of these Japanese coolies, save only the gentleman from Massachusetts, and he wants them for a special purpose—to wit, to assist the House of Representatives in passing a bill from the Committee on Territories.

Mr. KNOX. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman from New Jersey is exceedingly unfair in that statement. I have specially stated that I had no possible opposition to the passage of the bill, and was heartily in favor of the principles involved; that the bill should pass upon its merits; and if the bill reported by the Committee on the Territories is to fail, then I am in favor of the passage of this bill at the present time. It is unjust, therefore, to say that I desired to permit the importation of alien contract laborers into Hawaii through any opposition I had to this bill.

The gentleman also made a misstatement of my answer to the gentleman's question on the subject of contracts made before the passage of the bill. I stated the contracts were made before the bill was considered and reported to the House by the committee.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I desire a word only before the vote is taken upon the motion of the gentleman from New Jersey. I introduced this and thought it important for us to stop the importation of contract labor.

I wish to indorse what the gentleman from New Jersey has said about the necessity, and to thank him for the promptness with which he secured the report of the bill. Every labor organization in the country asks for the passage of this bill. The laws sought to be extended are applicable at present to the United States, and it seems to be exceedingly unfair to delay the passage of this bill to await the consideration of a code of laws for the control of the Hawaiian Islands.

However much we may want to consider the bill reported from the Committee on Territories by the gentleman from Massachusetts, to which reference has been made, that bill will probably not be considered by both branches during the present Congress, and another year will then elapse before anything is done, and 10,000 more people will be carried under the labor-contract laws of Hawaii contrary to the principle and spirit of the law which we have enacted for this country. It is an outrage to permit the present system of labor thus to continue.

This is one of the laws the commission which was sent by Congress to those islands recommended to be repealed; and it was urged and is urged in the report of the committee that it ought to be repealed. I hope therefore that the motion of the gentleman from New Jersey will prevail and the bill will be passed at once.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ARMY NURSES.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11770) to provide for the employment of women nurses in military hospitals of the Army, with the amendments of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. FISCHER. On that I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. The bill will first be read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act women nurses in the proportion of not more than one-half of 1 per cent of the number of enlisted men in the United States Army shall be employed in military hospitals, and shall constitute the woman's nursing service of the Army.

SEC. 2. That there shall be a commission known as the nursing service commission, composed of the Secretary of War, the General Commanding the Army, the Adjutant-General, and the Surgeon-General, ex-officio, and three women appointed by the President, who shall be nurses, graduates of a general hospital training school giving a course of instruction lasting not less than two years; and the terms of office of the first three so appointed under the provisions of this act shall be as follows: One for two years, one for three years, and one for four years, and all subsequent appointments shall be for the term of four years, and that this commission shall, subject to the provisions of this act, have general charge of the nursing service.

SEC. 3. That there shall be a superintendent of women nurses in the Army, who shall be a woman graduated from a general hospital training school for nurses having a course of instruction lasting not less than two years, and who shall be appointed by the President for a term of four years, and confirmed by the Senate, from candidates nominated by the commission. The superintendent shall be subject to the orders of the Surgeon-General.

SEC. 4. That the nurses in the service shall be divided into chiefs of nurses, head nurses, and assistant nurses, all of whom shall be graduates of general hospital training schools having courses of instruction lasting not less than two years, and shall present credentials and pass an examination to the satisfaction of the commission: Provided, That no chief nurse shall be appointed in hospitals having but one ward. Each chief of nurses shall be subject to the orders of and responsible to the surgeon in charge of the hospital for the nursing care of patients. Any nurse may be suspended by the chief of nurses, or by the surgeon in charge of the hospital through the chief of nurses, for incompetency or misconduct, and may be discharged by the Surgeon-General and the superintendent of nurses.

SEC. 5. That all further rules and regulations regarding admission to and conduct of the nursing service shall be formulated by the superintendent of nurses, subject to the approval of the commission: Provided, That all such nurses, before being so appointed, shall pass a satisfactory moral, professional, and physical examination. Ward masters and hospital corps men, when detailed for service in hospital wards, shall be subject to these rules and regulations.

SEC. 6. That the salary of each woman member of the commission shall be $6 per day when in actual service. The salary of the superintendent of nurses shall be $2,000 per annum. She shall be provided with suitable office facilities, and not to exceed two clerks for the transaction of business. The salary of chiefs of nurses shall be $75 per month. The salary of head nurses shall be $50 per month. The salary of assistant nurses shall be $40 per month: Provided, That in addition to the salaries above provided each woman member of the commission, the superintendent of nurses, and each nurse in the woman's nursing service shall be entitled to transportation and necessary expenses when traveling on public business: And provided further, That the nurses herein provided for, except the superintendent of nurses, shall be entitled to subsistence, uniforms, laundry, medical attendance, nursing, and medicines during illness.

SEC. 7. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. FISCHER. Before that I want to know if the gentleman will consent, so far as he is concerned, to the adoption of an amendment, which I understand must be presented by unanimous consent now in order to find a place in the bill?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I have no objection to the amendment I understand the gentleman wishes to offer.

Mr. FISCHER. With that understanding, I will not insist upon a second.

Mr. STEELE. I demand a second on the bill.

Mr. FISCHER. But I think it proper that the proposed amendment should be read to the House.

Mr. STEELE. I demand a second without any condition.

The SPEAKER. A second is demanded, and the Chair will appoint the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRIFFIN] and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE] as tellers.

Mr. STEELE. I have no objection to a second being considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will submit the request. Is there objection to the suggestion that a second be considered as ordered?

Mr. FISCHER. Now I will renew the request I made a few moments ago under a conditional arrangement with the gentleman from Wisconsin. If it be granted, I will not insist upon a second.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York reserves his right to object to the second being ordered, and proposes the following amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, however, That in time of war the Secretary of War may avail himself of the services of duly qualified sisters of the Red Cross Society as voluntary nurses.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Will the gentleman please indicate at what part of the bill he desires to insert the amendment?

Mr. FISCHER. I should say after line 11.

Mr. STEELE. As I do not think the bill ought to pass anyway, I will object to that.

Mr. FISCHER. Then I object to the second being considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made, and the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. FISCHER and Mr. GRIFFIN were appointed tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 84, noes 13.

Mr. STEELE. No quorum, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER counted the House and announced 194 members, a quorum, present, and that a second was ordered.

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. SULZER. I hope the House will not adjourn until this bill is passed.

The motion of Mr. STEELE was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRIFFIN] is recognized to control the time in favor of the bill, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISCHER] to control the time against it. The Chair understood the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISCHER] to demand a second.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to fix in the Army of the United States a woman's nursing service. As the Army is at present organized, while woman nurses are engaged and employed and serve to a limited extent and under certain conditions, yet they are not recognized in such form as to encourage that kind of service, which is as much needed as any service performed in the Army.

Mr. DOCKERY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him what is the annual expense involved in the passage of this bill?

Mr. GRIFFIN. In reply to the question of the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that it is impossible to state what the total aggregate annual expense will be, but an examination of the report will indicate what the salaries and rations will amount to for a minimum army of 50,000 men. If the Army should be increased to a hundred thousand, or any fraction beyond the 50,000, the basis upon which the computation is made renders it very easy to take this report as to salaries and rations and determine what the annual expense will be.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I will answer the question of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] first, and then I will yield to the gentleman from Kentucky. The total salaries proposed by this bill for an army of a minimum of 50,000 men are $135,230. That not only includes the nurses who are serving in army hospitals at various points where they are needed, but also includes the expense of a superintendent, and the per diem and expenses of 3 women, who are to be members of the commission with the 4 Government officers. The cost of the rations for that number of nurses, 250, is estimated at $36,500 annually. The two items added make a total expenditure for salaries, per diem and expenses, and rations of $171,730. That, I believe, answers the question of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. Did the committee have before it any testimony about the cost of hiring nurses—whether or not the salaries fixed in this bill are reasonable compensation?

Mr. GRIFFIN. The committee had no expert testimony before it. It exercised its own judgment. It compared the salaries paid in private life, and also took the recommendations of the Surgeon-General.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Does the gentleman know of any instance where you can get a competent trained nurse for $40 a month? Has the gentleman had any experience in that direction?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I am sorry to say that I have had experience in employing competent nurses, and my experience would more than double that expense.

Mr. MCCLELLAN. Twenty dollars a week is the usual charge in New York for trained nurses.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that those who represent this measure, those who framed it and asked Congress to pass it, are in communication with the trained nurses of this country, and it is their judgment that competent trained nurses who have graduated from a school giving two years' time to the proper education of nurses will be willing to serve for $40, and that a head nurse will serve for $50, and a chief nurse for $75 a month.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. I just want to say to the gentleman that while, fortunately, I have not had the same experience that he has had in being compelled to hire trained nurses, I have been to some extent familiar with the matter by reason of my acquaintance with hospitals that have had trained nurses, and I have never yet known an instance where a first-class, well-graduated trained nurse would not command from two and a half to three and a half dollars per day at any time; and I do not believe the salary here proposed will enable the Government to get first-class trained nurses. I am for the bill if you make the salary large enough so that you can hire first-class people. I do not believe you can get them, though, for the proposed salary.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, they all have rations; they have allowance; they have their uniform, and their laundry is paid for; their quarters are provided; their traveling expenses are paid; and when you take into consideration all these allowances, you are getting somewhere near the amount that a trained nurse should have for her services.

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. The gentleman is entirely in error. There is not a hospital in the United States that does not furnish quarters, provisions, and uniforms for their trained nurses. If you are going to get a corps of this kind, pay a salary that will pay trained nurses to take these positions.

Mr. QUIGG. If they do not want any more, what is the use of giving it to them?

Mr. WHEELER of Kentucky. Oh, yes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Those who represent the bill and represent the trained nurses of this country favor this monthly payment, and say to us that trained nurses, when needed, will respond to the call of the Government and perform the services for the amount provided for in this bill as compensation and the allowances which they will receive; and it seems to me that all those who believe as the gentleman does—and I am glad to know that he favors the measure—will support the bill without any question.

Mr. POWERS. Will the gentleman yield to me for a suggestion?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Certainly.

Mr. POWERS. In support of the proposition the gentleman is now making, is it not true that the nurses in hospitals and those in cities who charge three or four dollars a day are only employed a small portion of the year, and under this bill they would be employed from January to December, and therefore would work for less per month?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I thank the gentleman from Vermont for the suggestion. It is a good one, and it meets in a measure the objection which might be raised because the salary was insufficient. With the nurses in the service of the Government, it is a permanent employment and not a temporary one, and the nurses that serve in private families and in the hospitals in the cities are apt to be employed only temporarily, and hence for the time they are employed must charge as much money as those in whose service they may be are willing to pay, in order that during the time they are idle they may not be dependent upon others.

Mr. FOOTE. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Certainly.

Mr. FOOTE. I am in favor of this bill, but I would like to ask, for information, if this bill provides that the Army or the Secretary of War may employ volunteer nurses when they are offered?

Mr. GRIFFIN. The colleague of the gentleman from New York proposes an amendment which gives the Secretary of War power to employ volunteer nurses in time of war. There is at the present time authority for such employment.

Mr. FOOTE. Does not this bill destroy that very feature of the law by which volunteer nurses are employed?

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is not my view of it.

Mr. SULZER. I will say it is not.

Mr. FOOTE. I am in favor of this bill if that is so; but I do not think we ought to cut out any volunteer nurses.

Mr. GRIFFIN. If the gentleman from New York shall insist upon his amendment, and it is accepted, then perhaps there will be no question about it.

Mr. MOODY. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Certainly.

Mr. MOODY. Is it proposed to maintain this corps of nurses in time of peace as well as in time of war?

Mr. GRIFFIN. It is, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. MOODY. Now, I would like to ask the further question. Has this bill been submitted to the Medical Department of the Army, and has it received the approval of the department?

Mr. GRIFFIN. The Surgeon-General approves the principle of trained nurses in the Army.

Mr. MOODY. Does he approve this bill?

Mr. GRIFFIN. He has not approved this bill, and I do not think he would approve it, because he desires to have complete control over the nurses in the service of the Army.

Mr. MOODY. Ought he not to?

Mr. GRIFFIN. In my opinion, no; emphatically no. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, we have had enough experience of the unfortunate system which has prevailed in this country with reference to the care of our sick and wounded soldiers that have needed proper care. We are progressing, and this is one step in advance of what we were yesterday, if we can only enact it into law. A commission composed of the Secretary of War, the Surgeon-General, the Adjutant-General, the Commander of the Army, and three women who are graduates of such institutions as I have described——

Mr. STEELE. The Surgeon-General is only ex officio a member of the commission.

Mr. GRIFFIN. He has an opportunity to vote.

Mr. STEELE. But only ex officio.

Mr. GRIFFIN. They are all ex officio members of the commission.

Mr. MOODY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him another question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Certainly.

Mr. MOODY. Is that board to be subordinate to any officer of the Army, or is it an independent corps? Is it under the command of any officer of the Army?

Mr. GRIFFIN. This corps is under the rules and regulations which may be prescribed by the commission.

Mr. MOODY. By these women commissioners?

Mr. GRIFFIN. No, sir; by the Secretary of War, by the Surgeon-General, by the Adjutant-General, by the Commander of the Army, four in number, and by three women. The Army has a majority of that commission, and can control the rules and regulations that may be adopted. The superintendent, in the first instance, being more familiar with the manner of nursing and what is essential for the proper control of that service, prepares the rules and regulations, but before they have any force they must be approved by this commission. Hence, I say, Mr. Speaker, that the entire control of this service is in the War Department.

Mr. DRIGGS. Does not this bill provide only for trained nurses, and not for volunteer nurses at all, under section 8, which says that "all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act shall be repealed?"

Mr. GRIFFIN. It is true that the bill does not in terms provide for any volunteer nurses. The amendment proposed by the gentleman's colleague from New York, which is not objectionable, will provide for it. Now, in reply to the gentlemen who desire to know if this system is to be in vogue in time of peace, I say, yes. It is absolutely necessary, if you wish to perfect an effective system of this kind, to obtain in time of war, that they shall be educated in time of peace to become familiar with Army regulations respecting that service.

Mr. HILL. I see by the report on the subject that the Secretary of War and Surgeon-General are opposed to this. Was there before the committee any officer of the Army who favored the adoption of this bill?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I will say there was not, except a representative of the Surgeon-General.

Mr. HILL. And he was opposed to it?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yes.

Mr. HILL. No officer of the Army or the War Department appeared before the committee in favor of the bill.

Mr. GRIFFIN. No. I will say that the Secretary of War is not opposed to it. The gentleman is wrong in saying that the Secretary of War has expressed himself in opposition to it.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Let me suggest to the gentleman that the universal observation of all who visited the hospitals was that the trained nurses were absolutely indispensable.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I supposed that the idea advanced by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LIVINGSTON] was known to every man on the floor of this House.

Mr. MORRIS. Will the gentleman from Wisconsin allow me a question?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Certainly.

Mr. MORRIS. Is it not a fact that there are already employed in the Army about 600 nurses?

Mr. GRIFFIN. There are between 500 and 600.

Mr. MORRIS. Are they not under the control of the Surgeon-General, and are not the rules and regulations governing them promulgated by him?

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is the fact.

Mr. MORRIS. And he can employ as many women nurses as he needs?

Mr. GRIFFIN. I think so.

Mr. MORRIS. And all you expect to do by this bill is to take the appointment and the making of the rules and regulations out of the hands of the Surgeon-General and put it into the hands of this board. Is not that about all?

Mr. GRIFFIN. That is about all there is to it.

Mr. MORRIS. One more question. Is it not a fact that on boards composed of any Secretary, or a Cabinet officer, or other high official there would scarcely ever be one of them present at a meeting of the board but the Surgeon-General, who would be responsible for the department, and thereby the three women would practically control the whole nurses' department?

Mr. GRIFFIN. To agree with the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MORRIS] would be to say that the highest officers of this Government would be guilty of a neglect of duty. I say emphatically and unqualifiedly that those officers would attend the meetings of that board. I wish to say further, because I think I am a little more familiar with the workings under this bill than the gentleman from Minnesota, that the meetings would be very infrequent. I apprehend that when they have met and formulated their rules and regulations they will not be obliged to meet again unless some very extreme case shall arise during that year. So that it will not be any great burden on them to attend the meetings of the commission.

And, sir, if it were possible that the women who are to be members of that board were to exercise such control over the appointment of nurses as to prove an injury to the service, certainly the four officers of the War Department would be most sure to attend the meetings and prevent any improper action in the control of the women of the nursing service of the Army, and to reconsider any improper rule or regulation which may have been made.

Mr. Speaker, if there are no further questions, I reserve the balance of my time, if I have any.

Mr. FISCHER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE].

Mr. STEELE. Mr. Speaker, my opposition to this bill is, first, because it takes from the Surgeon-General duties belonging to him under the present law—duties which he has faithfully administered in the employment of nurses to the number at one time of about 1,200, about 600 being now employed, and at wages higher than those proposed in this bill. You can not hire trained nurses for any such wages as this bill contemplates.

One of the worst troubles about the bill is that it is brought up here under a motion to suspend the rules, with no opportunity to amend it. Has the Surgeon-General been derelict in the discharge of his duty? Should he be "called down" any more than the head of any other department?

Has he been in any respect faithless to his trust? Certainly not. Yet you come here and say in this bill that two other officers and three women shall say what persons the Surgeon-General shall employ as nurses in the Army. And you give no opportunity to amend the bill in that respect. In addition to that, you provide that these nurses shall be paid so small a compensation as will make it impossible for you to hire the class of nurses that would be desirable in the Army. More than that, you cut out the volunteer nurses. In short, you propose to take from a great department of the Government, one that has done itself much credit in the service, the functions that properly belong to it, and give them over practically to three women. I have said this much so that the grounds of my opposition to the bill may be understood.

Mr. FISCHER. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MORRIS].

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that I entirely agree to the employment of women nurses in the Army; but, as I am informed, and as the gentleman from Wisconsin has just stated, there is already authority vested in the Surgeon-General to employ just as many nurses as he wants to employ and to make all necessary and proper rules and regulations for the government of those nurses. The only object of this bill is to create a commission to appoint these nurses and then to govern them through rules and regulations——

Mr. SULZER. Is it not a fact that the Surgeon-General, at the very beginning of the war with Spain, proposed to employ trained nurses in the Army?

Mr. MORRIS. I know nothing about that.

Mr. SULZER. It is a fact.

Mr. MORRIS. There are now 600 nurses employed by this Government under the Surgeon-General, and he has the right to employ just as many more as he chooses. Now, it would break down all discipline in any department of any military organization in the world to give to a commission the practical control of the employees of that military department. Would this House for one instant entertain a proposition to pass such a bill as this in reference to the Commissary Department, the Quartermaster's Department, or any other military department of the Government? Such a measure would be subversive of all discipline. That is the reason I oppose this bill. I hope the Government will employ trained nurses; I think they ought to be employed; but let them be employed by that department to which they belong, and let them be controlled by that department. If the head of that department is not fit to govern it, then get somebody that is.

Mr. STEELE. And give wages that will allow the employment of such nurses as we ought to have.

Mr. QUIGG. Does not the gentleman from Minnesota think that the question whether a measure of this kind will be subversive of discipline would depend entirely upon the regulations which these four Army officers may prescribe?

A MEMBER. And three women with them.

Mr. QUIGG. But the Army officers have the majority.

Mr. MORRIS. Any gentleman who knows anything about military organization knows that the responsibility of a military department can not be divided without a subversion of discipline. No military department of any government ought to be controlled by the method this bill proposes.

Mr. SULZER. Is there anything in this bill that does what the gentleman says?

Mr. MORRIS. I have said all that I care to say.

Mr. FISCHER. Mr. Speaker, my opposition to this bill in its present form is based upon a letter, which I will read:

To the House of Representatives:

The New York Red Cross protests against the passage of the House bill 11770 in its present form because it is inimical to the future work of the Red Cross in the cause of humanity in time of war, and would like to have a hearing on this measure before its passage.

WM. T. WARDWELL, President.
BETTINA HOFKER LESSER,
Sister in Chief.
WM. A. GANS, Counsel.

FEBRUARY 6, 1900.

The hearing which this letter asks has not been granted. In section 7 of the bill there is the usual clause, "that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed."

Mr. SULZER. The gentleman will allow me to say that there is nothing whatever in this bill which interferes directly or indirectly with the Red Cross Society.

Mr. FISCHER. I will show the gentleman, I think, that is not quite so before I conclude. I was just coming to that when he interrupted me.

That provision, repealing every law inconsistent with the provisions of this act, repeals sections 1238 and 1239 of the Revised Statutes, which provide that the Secretary of War may engage nurses, either voluntary or paid.

Mr. SULZER. There is no provision of law for the Red Cross nurses to repeal.

Mr. FISCHER. Now, if the present act should pass and these two sections are repealed, the Secretary of War or the Surgeon-General can not engage the services of a volunteer nurse. Under the provisions of this bill he will be compelled to avail himself only of paid nurses, as provided by the bill, who should pass and be mustered in by this board.

Mr. STEELE. Undoubtedly; that is correct.

Mr. FISCHER. My amendment would meet that objection, and that was the intention of the amendment.

Mr. SULZER. We have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. FISCHER. But the trouble is that unless I can procure unanimous consent in the House the amendment avails nothing. If any objection is made, of course it can not be inserted.

Mr. SULZER. As far as I am concerned, I will be glad to have you ask unanimous consent.

Mr. STEELE. No; do not do that.

Mr. SULZER. Ask unanimous consent——

Mr. STEELE. Who is running the gentleman from New York? [Laughter.]

Mr. SULZER. I am. [Laughter.]

Mr. FISCHER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of facilitating the passage of the bill I will ask unanimous consent for the adoption of the amendment I have heretofore suggested.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the amendment suggested by the gentleman from New York, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add at the end of line 11, page 4: "Provided, however, That in time of war the Secretary of War may avail himself of the services of duly qualified Sisters of the Red Cross Society as voluntary nurses."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. STEELE. I would have no objection to the amendment if you add after the words "Red Cross," "or other worthy societies or associations."

Mr. SULZER. We accept that.

Mr. MOODY. I will not object if they will consent that the second section be stricken out.

Mr. SULZER. Well, we will not accept that.

Mr. MOODY. Then I object.

Mr. FISCHER. Mr. Speaker, a single word in conclusion. This measure, now under consideration, fixes the salary of certain proposed officers and involves an expenditure of $175,000.

Mr. STEELE. Without adding for traveling expenses.

Mr. FISCHER. The Surgeon-General of the Army is fully able to meet the requirements of the service in time of war or peace for the employing of necessary nurses, and as has been said by the gentleman from Minnesota, if he is inefficient, some one else will be placed there. But the work should not be divided up in the manner proposed in this bill or the medical work taken away from the proper bureau of the Department.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER].

Mr. SULZER. Mr. Speaker, in the brief time at my disposal it will be impossible for me to explain to the House or to attempt to discuss the provisions of this bill. I concur, however, in all that has been so well said by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRIFFIN].

This bill came to the Committee on Military Affairs from the loyal, patriotic women of America. A committee of those women appeared before us and most eloquently urged its favorable report. I was impressed with all they said, and, on deliberation, convinced that this bill should speedily become a law.

The committee have unanimously reported the bill, and there should not be, and I trust there will not be, any objection to its passage to-day. It is one of the best, one of the most humane, and one of the most essential bills in connection with the Army that we have had before us in this Congress.

Every member of this House knows, if he knows anything, that at the beginning of the recent war with Spain the Surgeon-General of the Army was absolutely opposed to having trained women nurses in the field and in the camps, and he only finally reluctantly consented to it when public opinion forced him to do so. History has shown that the Surgeon-General's opposition was wrong then, and, in my judgment, events will demonstrate that the Surgeon-General's opposition to this bill is wrong now.

You all know what those brave and heroic volunteer women nurses did for our sick and wounded soldier boys in the camps and at the front. No one can speak too highly or too eloquently of their patience, their fortitude, their devotion, and their noble self-sacrifice in the performance of duty to the sick and dying soldiers of the Union. Every woman who went to the front to do duty as a nurse is entitled to the gratitude of the American people. Every woman who went to the camps and to Cuba to nurse the sick, the wounded, and the dying soldiers of her country is a patriot entitled to the thanks of Congress, and she should receive from the hands of the President a medal of honor to commemorate her patriotism.

I have introduced a bill to do that, and ere I leave Congress I hope to place it on the statute books of the Republic.

You all know how our soldiers sickened and died in the camps and at the front. In my judgment, it would have been much worse if it had not been for the trained women nurses. It is impossible to estimate the beneficent services they rendered. Many a poor soldier would not be alive to-day if it were not for them. Many a dying comrade had his last hours made comfortable by their tender care and angelic ministrations.

All honor and all glory, I say, to the brave women nurses who went to the front and in the fever-stricken and pestilential camps. They were all heroines—every one. Their reward is the consciousness of duty well done, and their monument is in the patriotic hearts of the soldiers of the Republic. We owe them a debt of gratitude we never can repay.

And in that spirit, sir, I contend that this bill should pass, and I hope it will pass unanimously. It will be a shame and a disgrace if any member interposes an objection. The bill is a good one in all respects. There can be no honest, no just, criticism of it. The flimsy opposition sought to be raised here by a few gentlemen is a mere quibble and unworthy their gallantry or their patriotism.

We want trained women nurses in the Army. They are needed there just as much as trained nurses are needed in our hospitals. We want them in the Army in time of peace, and we want them in time of war. We want them in time of peace to nurse the sick in the army hospitals. We want them in time of war to care for the ill in the camps and to minister to the wounded and the stricken carried from the field of battle. Their work is a work of their own—it can not be done by others.

My friends, a word more, and I am done. I notice my time is exhausted, and I will not detain the House.

To-day the patriotic women of America plead for this bill; to-day the brave soldiers of the Union ask for it and demand it; and in their name, in the name of justice to humanity and our own civilization, and, above all and beyond all, in the name of the loyal, the self-sacrificing, and the heroic women nurses who recently went to the front, I pray you, I appeal to you, to pass this bill ere this House adjourn to-day. [Loud applause.]

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. FISCHER. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MORRIS].

Mr. MORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I want to say, in reply to the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SULZER], that no man has any more regard for the women nurses than I have, but he must be mistaken in what he has said about the position of the Surgeon-General. I know of my own knowledge that one lady was appointed from my own district, upon my own recommendation, to be a nurse, and died in the service in the late war.

Mr. LANDIS. I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. MORRIS. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LANDIS. Did not the Surgeon-General, in his testimony before the war investigating committee, slur women nurses?

Mr. MORRIS. I do not know anything about that.

Mr. LANDIS. He did.

Mr. STEELE. If he has done that, he ought to be turned out.

Mr. CANNON. If there be a bad Surgeon-General, he can be remedied.

Mr. LANDIS. I want to say that I am in favor of a new Surgeon-General, if this bill or a similar bill is not to pass.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is not the time for debate on this bill exhausted?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FISCHER] has ten minutes.

Mr. FISCHER. I have no desire to occupy that time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question being taken, Mr. GRIFFIN demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 100, noes 61.

The SPEAKER. Two-thirds not having voted in the affirmative——

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 124, nays 84, answered "present" 7, not voting 136; as follows:

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

NATIONAL MILITARY PARK NEAR VICKSBURG.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following bill with the amendments recommended by the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa, chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, moves that the rules be suspended and the following bill be passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4382) to establish a national military park to commemorate the campaign, siege, and defense of Vicksburg.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. BAILEY. How long a bill is this?

Mr. HULL. Four or five pages.

The SPEAKER. Nine pages.

Mr. BAILEY. I suppose there is going to be no opposition. I think it is a bad practice to pass bills without being read. It will not take long to read the bill, and I understand that is all there will be about it.

Mr. HULL. Very well; I withdraw the request.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4382) to establish a national military park to commemorate the campaign, siege, and defense of Vicksburg.

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to commemorate the campaign and siege and defense of Vicksburg, and to preserve the history of the battles and operations of the siege and defense on the ground where they were fought and were carried on, the battlefield of Vicksburg, in the State of Mississippi, is hereby declared to be a national military park whenever the title to the same shall have been acquired by the United States and the usual jurisdiction over the lands and roads of the same shall have been granted to the United States by the State of Mississippi; that is to say, the area inclosed by the following lines, or so much thereof as the commissioners of the park may deem necessary, to wit: Beginning near the point where the graveyard road, now known as the City Cemetery road, crosses the line of the Confederate earthworks, thence north about 80 rods, thence in an easterly direction about 120 rods, thence in a southerly direction, and keeping as far from the line of the Confederate earthworks as the purposes of the park may require and as the park commission, to be hereinafter named, may determine, but not distant from the nearest point on said line of Confederate earthworks more than 160 rods at any part, to a point about 40 rods south and from 80 to 160 rods east of Fort Garrott, also known as the "Square Fort;" thence in a westerly direction to a point in the rear of said Fort Garrott, thence in a northerly direction across the line of the Confederate earthworks and to a point about 200 feet in the rear of the said line of Confederate earthworks, thence in a general northerly direction, and at an approximate distance of about 200 feet in the rear of the line of Confederate earthworks as the conformation of the ground may require, to the place of beginning. This to constitute the main body of the park. In addition thereto a strip of land about 264 feet in width along and including the remaining parts of the Confederate earthworks, namely, from the north part of said main body of the park to and including Fort Hill or Fort Nogales, on the high hill overlooking the national cemetery, and from the south part of said main body of the park to the edge of the bluff at the river below the city of Vicksburg; and also in addition thereto a strip of land about 264 feet in width, as near as may be, along and including the Federal lines opposed to the Confederate lines herein and above named and not included in the main body of the park; and in further addition thereto such points of interest as the commission may deem necessary for the purposes of the park and the Secretary of War may approve; the whole containing about 1,200 acres, and costing not to exceed $50,000.

SEC. 2. That the establishment of the Vicksburg national military park shall be carried forward under the control and direction of the Secretary of War; and the Secretary of War shall, upon the passage of this act, proceed to acquire title to the same by voluntary conveyance or under the act approved August 1, 1888, entitled "An act to authorize the condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes," or under act approved February 22, 1867, entitled "An act to establish and protect national cemeteries," as he may elect or deem practicable, and when the title is procured to all of the lands and roads within the boundaries of the proposed park as described in section 1 of this act, he may proceed with the establishment of the park; and he shall detail an officer of the Engineer Corps of the Army to assist the commissioners in establishing the park.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to enter into agreements of leasing upon such terms as he may prescribe, with such occupants or tenants of the lands as may desire to remain upon it, to occupy and cultivate their present holdings upon condition that they will preserve the present buildings and roads and the present outlines of field and forest, and that they will only cut trees or underbrush under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, and that they will assist in caring for and protecting all tablets, monuments, or such other artificial works as may from time to time be erected by proper authority.

SEC. 4. That the affairs of the Vicksburg national military park shall, subject to the supervision and direction of the Secretary of War, be in charge of three commissioners, to be appointed by the Secretary of War, each of whom shall have served at the time of the siege and defense in one of the armies engaged therein, two of whom shall have served in the army commanded by General Grant and one in the army commanded by General Pemberton. The commissioners shall elect one of their number chairman. They shall also elect, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, a secretary, who shall also be historian, and who shall possess the requisite qualifications of a commissioner, and they and the secretary shall have an office in the city of Vicksburg, Miss., or on the grounds of the park, and be paid such compensation as the Secretary of War shall deem reasonable and just.

SEC. 5. That it shall be the duty of the commissioners named in the preceding section, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to restore the forts and the lines of fortification, the parallels and the approaches of the two armies, or so much thereof as may be necessary to the purposes of this park; to open and construct and to repair such roads as may be necessary to said purposes, and to ascertain and mark with historical tablets, or otherwise, as the Secretary of War may determine, the lines of battle of the troops engaged in the assaults, and the lines held by the troops during the siege and defense of Vicksburg, the headquarters of General Grant and of General Pemberton, and other historical points of interest pertaining to the siege and defense of Vicksburg within the park or its vicinity; and the said commissioners in establishing this military park shall also have authority, under the direction of the Secretary of War, to do all things necessary to the purposes of the park, and for its establishment under such regulations as he may consider best for the interest of the Government, and the Secretary of War shall make and enforce all needful regulations for the care of the park.

SEC. 6. That it shall be lawful for any State that had troops engaged in the siege and defense of Vicksburg to enter upon the lands of the Vicksburg national military park for the purpose of ascertaining and marking the lines of battle of its troops engaged therein: Provided, That before any such lines are permanently designated the position of the lines and the proposed methods of marking them by monuments, tablets, or otherwise shall be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and all such lines, designs, and inscriptions for the same shall first receive the written approval of the Secretary of War, which approval shall be based upon formal written reports which must be made to him in each case by the commissioners of the parks; and no monument, tablet, or other designating indication shall be erected or placed within said park or vicinity without such written authority of the Secretary of War: Provided, That no discrimination shall be made against any State as to the manner of designating lines, but any grant made to any State by the Secretary of War may be used by any other State. The provisions of this section shall also apply to organizations and persons; and as the Vicksburg National Cemetery is on ground partly occupied by Federal lines during the siege of Vicksburg, the provisions of this section, as far as may be practicable, shall apply to monuments or tablets designating such lines within the limits of that cemetery.

SEC. 7. That if any person shall, except by permission of the Secretary of War, destroy, mutilate, deface, injure, or remove any monument, column, statue, memorial structure, tablet, or work of art that shall be erected or placed upon the grounds of the park by lawful authority, or shall destroy or remove any fence, railing, inclosure, or other work for the protection or ornament of said park, or any portion thereof, or shall destroy, cut, hack, bark, break down, or otherwise injure any tree, bush, or shrubbery that may be growing upon said park, or shall cut down or fell or remove any timber, battle relic, tree, or trees growing or being upon said park, or hunt within the limits of the park, or shall remove or destroy any breastworks, earthworks, walls, or other defenses or shelter on any part thereof constructed by the armies formerly engaged in the battles, on the lands or approaches to the park, any person so offending and found guilty thereof, before any United States commissioner or court, justice of the peace of the county in which the offense may be committed, or any court of competent jurisdiction, shall for each and every such offense forfeit and pay a fine in the discretion of the said commissioner or court of the United States or justice of the peace, according to the aggravation of the offense, of not less than five nor more than five hundred dollars, one-half for the use of the park and the other half to the informant, to be enforced and recovered before such United States commissioner or court or justice of the peace or other court in like manner as debts of like nature are now by law recoverable in the several counties where the offense may be committed.

SEC. 8. That to enable the Secretary of War to begin to carry out the purpose of this act, including the condemnation or purchase of the necessary land, marking the boundaries of the park, opening or repairing necessary roads, restoring the field to its condition at the time of the battle, maps and surveys, material, labor, clerical, and all other necessary assistants, and the pay and expenses of the commissioners and their secretary and assistants, the sum of $65,000, or such portion thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and disbursements under this act shall require the approval of the Secretary of War, and he shall make annual report of the same to Congress.

A second was not demanded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

GRANT OF CERTAIN LANDS TO THE STATE OF ALABAMA.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the rules be suspended and the Senate bill which I send to the desk be passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2768) to grant lands to the State of Alabama for the use of the Industrial School for Girls of Alabama and of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.

Be it enacted, etc., That the governor of the State of Alabama be, and he is hereby, authorized to select, out of the unoccupied and uninhabited lands of the United States within the said State, 25,000 acres of land, and shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior, who shall forthwith, upon receipt of said certificate, issue to the State of Alabama patents for said lands: Provided, That the proceeds of said lands when sold or leased shall forever remain a fund for the use of the Industrial School for Girls of Alabama, located at Montevallo, Ala.

SEC. 2. That the governor of the State of Alabama be, and he is hereby, authorized to select, out of the unoccupied and uninhabited lands of the United States within the said State, 25,000 acres of land, and shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior, who shall forthwith, upon receipt of said certificate, issue to the State of Alabama patents for said lands: Provided, That the proceeds of said lands when sold or leased shall forever remain a fund for the use of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. DOCKERY. Is this bill unanimously reported by the committee?

Mr. ALDRICH. It is.

The question was taken on suspending the rules and passing the bill; and the SPEAKER announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. HOWE. Division. [After a pause.] Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the demand for a division.

The SPEAKER. The demand for a division is withdrawn. The ayes have it; and, in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, the rules are suspended and the bill is passed.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House adjourn.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 11487. An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900.

The motion to adjourn was then agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive and other communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Commissioner of Patents, transmitting his annual report for 1898—to the Committee on Patents, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Secretary of War transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for "Salaries, office of the Secretary of War"—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

REFEREES AND TRUSTEES IN BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. HOAR. I present a petition of the referees in bankruptcy, within and for the district of Massachusetts, appointed under the act approved July 1, 1898, praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the compensation of referees and trustees in bankruptcy.

I ask unanimous consent to say a word upon the subject of the petition. It will take but one moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No objection being made, the Senator from Massachusetts will proceed.

Mr. HOAR. As I stated, it is a petition from the referees in bankruptcy in Massachusetts, praying for an increase of the compensation to those officers. The committee on conference, in order to make the bankruptcy law acceptable, pared down to the quick the allowances for services in administering estates, and I am getting from all parts of the country letters from prominent lawyers and these officials asking for an increase, stating that it is very difficult for them to discharge their duties with justice to themselves without an increase of the compensation.

I desire to say that it does not seem to me practicable, in the short time that remains of the present session, to revise the policy adopted by Congress last year on that subject; and if it were it seems to me that it is better to wait until the public experience has shown whether there be any other important amendments needed in the bankruptcy legislation, certainly until next year, before taking up any revision or reconsideration. I hope these officials will be patient and will get along, if they can, for another year without further attempting to have the matter revised at this session.

The petition is signed by gentlemen whom I know personally, and they are highly esteemed. One of them shares my own law office at home. I am disposed to do anything that I can for them, and I make this statement so that they will understand the difficulty.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The petition will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4446) granting an increase of pension to Ellen Charlton, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. LINDSAY, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11017) granting a pension to Jesse Everly, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 80) providing procedure in certain pension cases, reported it with amendments.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11115) granting a pension to Allen Meeks, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5435) granting a pension to Emma J. McIntire, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10688) granting an increase of pension to John J. Bowen, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10013) to increase the pension of Joseph H. McGee, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5796) granting an increase of pension to Peter E. Shipler, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3307) to increase the pension of Andrew S. Evans, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2617) granting a pension to Mary E. Sessions, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5036) granting a pension to James C. Delaney, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. THURSTON, from the Select Committee on International Expositions, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 225) relative to the Greater American Exposition to be held in Omaha, Nebr., in the year 1899, and to encourage the same by providing, without expense to the Government, for exhibits from Cuba, Porto Rico, the Ladrone Islands, and the Philippine Archipelago, and for the use of the Government buildings erected for exposition purposes in 1898, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5221) for the relief of Lieut. Horace P. McIntosh, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SHOUP, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4982) granting an increase of pension to Harriet Tubman Davis, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GALLINGER (for Mr. BAKER), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1279) granting a pension to Barbara C. Lowe, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

He also (for Mr. BAKER), from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6810) granting a pension to Mary Luella Steele, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported an amendment directing the Secretary of the Interior to cause an investigation to be made of the alleged cutting of green timber on the Chippewa ceded and diminished reservations, in the State of Minnesota, to inquire as to the present method of "estimating" timber on said lands, and authorizing him to suspend the further cutting of timber on said reservation, intended to be proposed to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. RAWLINS, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8480) providing for the sale of the surplus lands on the Pottawatomie and Kickapoo Indian reservations in Kansas, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5291) to put in force in the Indian Territory certain provisions of the laws of Arkansas relating to corporations, and to make said provisions applicable to said Territory, reported it without amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT, from the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10253) to amend the internal-revenue laws relating to distilled spirits, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. HANSBROUGH, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4806) granting an increase of pension to Bonaventura Heinz, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

REPORT ON CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

Mr. LODGE. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 230) providing for the printing of the report of Robert P. Porter, special commissioner of the United States, on the industrial and commercial conditions of Cuba and Porto Rico, to report it without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution. It provides that there shall be printed in one volume 9,000 copies of the special report of Robert P. Porter, special commissioner of the United States, on the industrial and commercial conditions of Cuba and Porto Rico; 3,000 copies for the use of the Senate, 5,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 for the use of the Treasury Department.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to have the Senator from Massachusetts state the character of the report of Mr. Porter.

Mr. LODGE. It is a report, as stated in the joint resolution, on taxation and present industrial condition of Cuba and Porto Rico. It is a report of great value, I understand.

Mr. ALLEN. How long was Mr. Porter in Cuba making the investigation?

Mr. LODGE. The report was made some little time ago.

Mr. ALLEN. I infer from the press dispatches that he was not in Cuba to exceed two or three weeks, or a month at most.

Mr. LODGE. That is the last visit—his second visit. He made a previous visit.

Mr. ALLEN. Was the first visit made before the war?

Mr. LODGE. No; both were made since the war.

Mr. ALLEN. Both have been made since the war?

Mr. LODGE. The last visit, the one to which the Senator refers, was the visit made to Gomez.

Mr. ALLEN. Was the report made to the President of the United States?

Mr. LODGE. No; it was made to the Treasury Department. Mr. Porter went there as an agent of that Department, I understand. The report contains a good deal of valuable information, from what I have been told.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope it will be much more valuable and accurate than his census of 1890.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. GORMAN introduced a bill (S. 5458) providing for the execution of new bonds by officers, employees, and clerks in any of the Executive Departments of the United States, and for the release of sureties on original bonds; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. McENERY introduced a bill (S. 5459) for the relief of the estate of William P. Williamson, deceased, late of Iberville Parish, La.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. LINDSAY introduced a bill (S. 5460) for the relief of John C. Browder; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. TELLER introduced a bill (S. 5461) for the relief of James C. Howard; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas introduced a bill (S. 5462) to authorize certain persons who have intermarried with Cherokees to sue for their interest in certain moneys of the tribe from which they were excluded; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PETTUS introduced a bill (S. 5463) to equalize the pay of letter carriers; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 5464) to establish and erect a military post at Huntsville, Ala.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. McENERY submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $36,000 for the construction and maintenance of a suitable boat to be used in removing the water hyacinth from the navigable waters of the State of Louisiana, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SEWELL submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for the improvement of Mantua Creek, New Jersey, from $10,000 to $50,000, and also providing for a preliminary survey of Maurice River and Oldmans Creek, New Jersey, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PRITCHARD submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $200,000 for the improvement of the harbor of refuge at Cape Lookout, North Carolina, and authorizing the Secretary of War to enter into contracts for material and labor for the completion of said project, as appropriations may be made from time to time, not to exceed the sum of $3,500,000, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. NELSON submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $3,000,000 annually to provide arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the militia, intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MORGAN submitted an amendment extending the franking privilege to all mail matter transported between any of the Hawaiian Islands and the United States, intended to be proposed by him to the Post-Office appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BURROWS submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to pay 50 per cent additional for all work in excess of eight hours performed by laborers, workmen, and mechanics at United States navy-yards and naval stations between March 18, 1898, and October 31, 1898, intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KENNEY submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $550 for a survey of the St. Jones River, Delaware, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for improving Murderkill River, Delaware, from $5,000 to $65,000, and authorizing $1,500 of said appropriation to be used in reopening the mouth of the St. Jones River, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GEAR submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 for continuing the improvements on the Missouri River at Sioux City, Iowa, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. PETTUS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $400,000 for continuing the improvement of the Tennessee River at the Colbert Shoals and Bee Tree Shoals, Alabama, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,000 to reimburse J. B. Holloway for the preparation of the House omnibus claims bill and statistics relating to war claims, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SEWELL submitted an amendment providing that the act of May 16, 1888, relating to anchorage of vessels in the port of New York be extended to include the waters of Kill van Kull, Newark Bay, Arthur Kill, and Raritan Bay, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment relative to the compensation of the engineer member of the Deep Waterways Commission, appointed from the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

BRUNSWICK, GA., HARBOR IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. BACON submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be directed to call upon H. L. Marinden, the officer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey appointed by the Secretary of War, under the provisions of the river and harbor act of 1896, to make survey of the work of C. P. Goodyear on the outer bar of Brunswick, Ga., for a report of the value of such work to the Government, based on his report of survey of April 28, 1898, and transmit the same to the Senate.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING INVESTIGATION.

Mr. MASON submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That 2,000 copies of the letters of transmittal, the report of the Treasury Department committee which investigated the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in 1897, the reply of the Director of the Bureau thereto, and the rejoinder of Mr. Lyman, chairman of the investigating committee, be printed for the use of the Senate.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Mr. HAWLEY submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the stenographer employed to report the statements of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, United States Volunteers, and Maj. Gen. M. C. Butler, United States Volunteers, before the Committee on Military Affairs, be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that said committee, in considering matters coming before it during the present session of the Senate, is authorized to employ a stenographer to report any hearings that may be held, and to have such hearings printed for the use of the committee, such stenographer to be paid from the said contingent fund.

RESERVOIRS FOR IRRIGATION PURPOSES.

Mr. CARTER submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and hereby is, directed to furnish in concise form for the use of the Senate a general statement of the origin, character, and extent of the surveys of reservoir sites made by the United States Geological Survey, with brief memoranda as to present conditions of water storage and the more important sites in each large hydrographic basin, also a summary of estimates as to probable cost of constructing suitable dams at points where the stored water will be of most immediate value to the public.

HEARINGS UPON RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. President, I should like to have the attention of Senators for just one moment.

I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to inform Senators that that committee is now considering the river and harbor bill; that it will meet this afternoon at 2 o'clock and continue in session until adjournment; that it will meet every morning at half past 10 and continue in session until adjournment each day, with an intermission from 12 to 2; that to-day and Wednesday and Thursday Senators who desire to be heard touching any items in the river and harbor bill will be given the opportunity; that after Thursday there will be no more hearings at all. The limitation of time at which the present session is to close compels us to make this rule. So Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday Senators will be heard at any time except during the intermission from 12 to 2.

CHOCTAW, OKLAHOMA AND GULF RAILROAD.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to call up the bill (S. 5388) granting the right of way through Indian reservations to the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad Company. It will only take a minute to dispose of it.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPENSES OF STATES IN RAISING VOLUNTEER ARMY.

Mr. ALLISON obtained the floor.

Mr. FORAKER. I introduce a joint resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. ALLISON. If it takes no time I will yield.

Mr. FORAKER. If there is any objection of course it will go over.

The joint resolution (S. R. 241) declaratory of the true intent and meaning of an act of Congress approved July 8, 1898, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act of Congress approved July 8, 1898, entitled "An act to reimburse the governors of States and Territories for expenses incurred by them in aiding the United States to raise and organize and supply and equip the Volunteer Army of the United States in the existing war with Spain," shall be held and construed to apply to expenses incurred as well after as before the day of the approval of said act.

Mr. COCKRELL. A similar bill is pending before the Committee on Military Affairs, and it has been referred to the War Department and the Auditor for the War Department for consideration and report. It was discussed by a subcommittee in charge of another matter this morning. I think the joint resolution ought to go to the Committee on Military Affairs, so that we can have the whole matter covered.

Mr. FORAKER. Very well. I did not know that there was another measure pending. In view of what has been stated by the Senator from Missouri, I have no objection to the joint resolution being referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. COCKRELL. The committee will act on the matter promptly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the joint resolution will be so referred.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 321) for the relief of the Berdan Firearms Manufacturing Company was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

The bill (H. R. 4382) to establish a national military park to commemorate the campaign, siege, and defense of Vicksburg was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 8694) to enable the city of Albuquerque, N. Mex., to create certain indebtedness, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

The bill (H. R. 11247) to extend the anti-contract labor laws of the United States to Hawaii was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Territories.

The bill (H. R. 12009) to provide for the removal of snow and ice in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

TWELFTH AND SUBSEQUENT CENSUSES.

The bill (H. R. 11815) to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER], who is not now in the Chamber, the bill will lie on the table.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa asks that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TILLMAN. Is the morning business closed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. TILLMAN. I gave notice last evening that at the expiration of the morning business I would call up the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] and ask leave to address the Senate on it. I do not presume it is the intention of the Senator from Iowa to antagonize me in my right to do that.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from South Carolina desires to make some observations of which he gave notice, I do not wish to interfere with his purpose. I am perfectly willing that the joint resolution shall be called up for the purpose of enabling him to make some observations.

Mr. TILLMAN. There was an additional notice given by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], that he would try to get a vote on the joint resolution before 2 o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no objection to a vote on the joint resolution, if it can be taken without debate, after the Senator from South Carolina has concluded.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the position to be that House bill 11217 is taken up by unanimous consent, and the Senator from Iowa in charge of that bill consents that the Senator from South Carolina shall proceed to make the remarks of which he gave notice last night.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Let the appropriation bill be informally laid aside.

Mr. ALLISON. And the joint resolution is to be taken up for that purpose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. For that purpose.

Mr. MASON. I desire to understand the parliamentary situation. I do not understand that there was unanimous consent to take up the appropriation bill until after the disposition of the joint resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. There is no unanimous consent respecting appropriation bills. It is understood that they have the right of way. I am perfectly willing to give way, as the Senator from South Carolina states that yesterday he gave notice that he would desire to make some observations upon the joint resolution this morning. I do not object to the joint resolution being taken up for that purpose.

Mr. HALE. Why not have it understood that a vote shall be taken?

Mr. WOLCOTT. The unanimous consent is given as to the remarks to be made by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HALE. In accordance with the understanding yesterday and the notice given by the Senator from South Carolina and also by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] that the joint resolution would be called up, why not let the Senator from South Carolina proceed with his remarks with the understanding that a vote shall be taken on the joint resolution without further debate?

Mr. GALLINGER. I shall have to object to that, Mr. President.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think the matters had better be disposed of one at a time. It would be very unusual for the Senate to refuse to allow the Senator from South Carolina to proceed with his remarks of which he has given notice. The question as to whether the Senate will then consider the joint resolution and vote on it can be decided by the Senate after the Senator from South Carolina concludes.

Mr. ALLISON. I can not give way for general debate upon the joint resolution this morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina will proceed.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will only remark before I begin that the Senator from Iowa knows very well that if a Senator can not debate any proposition here upon a measure pending he can debate it anyway on any measure that may be up, and the Senator from Iowa gains no time by pressing matters unduly.

Mr. ALLISON. I have yielded to the Senator from South Carolina.

POLICY REGARDING THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. TILLMAN. I ask that Senate joint resolution 240 be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the joint resolution introduced yesterday by Mr. MCENERY, as follows:

A joint resolution (S. R. 240) declaring the purpose of the United States toward the Philippine Islands.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That by the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain it is not intended to incorporate the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands into citizenship of the United States, nor is it intended to permanently annex said islands as an integral part of the territory of the United States; but it is the intention of the United States to establish on said islands a government suitable to the wants and conditions of the inhabitants of said islands to prepare them for local self-government, and in due time to make such disposition of said islands as will best promote the interests of the citizens of the United States and the inhabitants of said islands.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, but for the fact that I had given notice that I would speak I would not do so this morning, because I have been unwell all night. I am here now only after having passed a sleepless night, and I am suffering at this time great pain.

I have listened to the long and able debate on the general proposition of annexation or expansion, and have never at any time intended to obtrude my views upon the Senate, but to content myself with an occasional foray into the mêlée, or, in other words, to performing a little guerrilla warfare. But there has been such a radical change in the situation since Saturday evening, and things have now assumed such a shape, that I feel constrained to present some views on this question that have hitherto failed to strike the attention of those Senators who have addressed themselves to it.

The first thing, Mr. President, which strikes one who will read the joint resolution with an analytical mind is the absolute uselessness, and the cold-blooded purpose its language conveys. It is simply an assertion of power and of right on the part of this Government to buy and sell those islands for our interest, not for theirs, and to ignore in toto every consideration which those people have a right to expect at our hands.

I do not think anyone can justly charge that there is any politics or that there has been any politics in the determination of the vote of Senators on this question. It has been determinee from other reasons than partisan purposes. While most of thosy who have opposed the ratification of the treaty belong to the party to which I belong, it may be said as a fact, upon which every American citizen can congratulate himself, that the other party gave to the opposition two of its ablest men, who have stanchld and from the very beginning stood here opposed to this new idea of imperialism. If I were actuated or had been actuated by any political purpose I should have been glad to see the treaty ratified, because, if I do not mistake the trend of public events, the results of the ratification of the treaty promise to bring but disaster to the party which is mainly responsible for it.

There are some things connected with the ratification which merit a little comment, as I pass along, in relation to the resolution which I am now discussing. I will not say, though I have seen it asserted in the newspapers, that the resolution is being pressed by the Senator from Rhode Island for the purpose of redeeming a pledge. I do not know whether that is true, and I do not care. I demand for myself here the recognition of the fact that I am a Senator and claim to exercise my functions as such from high and patriotic motives, and I do not presume to deny to every other one of my colleagues a similar high motive. I can only say that from my point of view, if it was right to defeat the treaty on Saturday, it was right to defeat it on yesterday.

I have never in my legislative experience in this body or in any other assemblage, heard so many speeches giving the most cogent reasons why a man should not vote for a proposition, followed by the acknowledgment that the speaker, notwithstanding, intended to give his vote in its support. So at least a great many votes that have gone to the treaty and have enabled it to become the law of the land , have been cast by men who have been in great doubt as to their duty, and have at last yielded rather to pressure than to any conscientious or calm consideration of the result.

There has been another phase or peculiarity connected with the discussion which we have had. Learned and able lawyers have exhausted themselves in the contention pro and con as to the constitutional right to annex those people in this way. Mr. President, as far as my observation goes, and as I understand the present status of the American people, we have no Constitution left. The only rule which governs Congress now is the rule of the majority. We had an illustration of that when the Hawaiian treaty was rejected by the constitutional one-third, more than one-third refusing to ratify it, and the majority brought in and passed its resolution of annexation by which the Constitution was overridden.

I will qualify the statement I have just made as regards our having no Constitution left, which the majority are bound to respect, by saying that the two-thirds vote to ratify a treaty is the only scintilla of the original instrument which now remains to hamper the majority.

But, Mr. President, while this is a cold-blooded fact which must excite surprise and cause forebodings in the minds of patriots, I wish to address myself to the merits of this question rather than to deal with the accompanying circumstances which have been surprising and in some degree disgusting.

If we are to pass any resolution at all—and I desire that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] who has this matter in charge shall give me his especial attention now—I think that resolution ought to be one which will pave the way to peace in the Philippines, rather than one which will be an aggravation of the war which has begun there. I know that it is natural for the American blood to flame up in anger when the flag is fired upon; I know it is natural for our race to want to fight, very often whether we have provocation or not, and whether we are right or wrong; but, sir, in this great crisis in which so much is involved, it does seem to me that those Senators who have contended from the beginning that our policy should be to ratify the treaty first, and then deal with the results of that cession afterwards, should cause those who are responsible for the existing condition to take up carefully and calmly and seriously consider the proposition which I have just advanced: that we should either pass a resolution which may pave the way to peace, or that we should pass none at all.

This resolution, if it shall pass and be approved by the President, is nothing more, as I have said, than the cold-blooded enunciation of our power; and a declaration that we will deal with this question from the standpoint of our interests, regardless of the rights or the wishes of those 10,000,000 Asiatics who have come under our sway. And above all, notwithstanding the assertions which we heard here yesterday, that we "could not take time to enter into negotiations with the men who had pistols at our breasts, or with those who had fired upon the flag," it appears to me that of all times in our history we could and should at this moment give forth a sound that would be generous and worthy of the great American people.

Mr. President, what caused this last battle of Manila? The reports which we receive through our newspapers all come from American sources; they charge that the Filipinos wantonly attacked the American army, and that that army had a right to defend itself, which nobody assumes to deny. But when we recollect that the telegraph lines from those islands are in charge of the American commander there, or of those whom he designates to control them, it is natural for us to suppose that nothing would be let out under the censorship which has existed for the last three months or more that would be in the slightest degree derogatory to the good faith or the honor of the American army there. Time alone will tell whether this battle was provoked by the Filipinos for purposes of their own, or by the Americans for the purpose of endeavoring to sway men in this Senate to ratify the treaty and change the status.

I recall one of Æsop's fables in which a painter had depicted a lion lying on his back prone beneath the heel of a man, and when he showed the painting to the lion the lion said, "Yes, you painted that; but if you will let me paint it, the situation will be just the opposite."

I come now to make a statement, upon which I base what I have just said, to this effect: That I have seen in the last forty-eight hours an invalided officer of the American Army, one of the regulars, who has just reached this city from Manila. From what he told me of the situation before he left there, I dare to assert that the American Army has been in a state of siege in that city for three or four months; that the lines surrounding the city have been in the possession of the Filipino army outside; that no American was allowed to cross them; and that those Filipinos, while they had not been actively engaged in firing upon our troops, have enforced a strict recognition of the fact that they were in an attitude of antagonism, that they did not recognize this Government as having any rights outside of the city of Manila. If that be true, Mr. President, the question recurs as to who may be responsible or who was responsible for the battle of Saturday night last.

As I understand the legal status the ratification of the treaty will bring about this result: That in the eye of the law the Philippine Islands are ours and the inhabitants thereof are to-day rebels; they are now ours by right of cession from Spain, ratified yesterday by this body, and to be ratified soon by the Spanish Government; they are American subjects; and since they have fired upon the flag they are "rebels." That is the law of the situation as we see it and possibly as the world sees it.

Now, considering the fact, which can not de denied—for our consul, Mr. Williams, reported the fact as far back as February, 1898, before Dewey sailed into Manila Bay—that there was a rebellion against Spain: that the Filipino army was lying outside of the city of Manila and hostilities were active; considering the fact that they organized a government as far back as last June; considering the fact that they have been actively engaged in collecting munitions of war and have recruited their army until, as this officer told me, they have not less than 40,000 men outside of Manila to-day, we are brought face to face with the consideration as to whether it was not wise and proper and the best thing from their point of view for the Filipinos to make the attack which they did, or which it is said they did, on Saturday night last.

If they went to war with the United States before the United States had a title to those islands in law, what is their legal status in international law? They can not be called rebels to us except from the extreme standpoint of legal technicality. We had no right in Manila so far as they were concerned; we only had rights there so far as Spain was concerned; and if, after they had their representative here pleading and begging for some word of comfort, some promise as to our policy, or some dim outline even as to the purpose of recognizing their right to local self-government, they grew desperate at last and fired upon our troops, the firing upon those troops before we had any legal title must give them the right of belligerents in war, although they have been subjects of Spain, because by the cession to us we simply fall heir to Spain's residuary title in those islands, subject to the rights of the natives who were struggling for freedom before we went to war with Spain on an entirely different issue.

We may say they are rebels, and in strict legal interpretation they may be rebels, but, Mr. President, let this war terminate how it will, history will declare that they are to-day patriots striving for what we fought for in our struggle with Great Britain in the last century; and we can not escape from the condition at least of doubt as to the course we ought to follow when we consider this fact. They were fighting for their freedom against Spanish tyranny two years ago, and they continued to fight up to the time when Aguinaldo left the islands and went to Singapore; they continued the fight, as our own consul said, after he left; they never did cease, some of them; there never was peace; and now the question which addresses itself to every American who loves his flag and loves his great country and loves the great principle upon which that flag rests and that country is founded is this: Are we to take the place of Spain as their taskmasters and oppressors? Do "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed"?

I have looked back down the vista of what history I have read, and I appeal to any Senator here who may be versed in history to correct me if I am wrong when I say there never has been in the history of mankind a precedent for the existing condition now at Manila between the United States and the Filipino insurgents. The transition or transfer of the legal title to the islands during the period of their rebellion against one government and their effort to throw off the yoke and establish an independent government has never, so far as I recall, occurred before in the history of the world, and I would ask the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], himself a historian, if he recalls any?

Mr. LODGE. I did not hear the Senator's question.

Mr. TILLMAN. I say the present situation in Manila is unique, it is sui generis, it is the first one of the kind that has ever existed in the history of the world where a colony of another nation at war with that nation for its freedom has been sold in the meantime to another power and their allegiance or sovereignty transferred.

Mr. LODGE. I think the situation is unique in the fact that the people whom we liberated down there have turned against us.

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, Mr. President, the question of liberation is one which will present two points of view. We can look at it from our side and then look at it from theirs. I have just presented a few of the ideas which have occurred to me as having actuated the Filipinos in firing upon the American flag, as they did last Saturday, and that was that they desired to obtain in the eye of international law the rights of belligerents and not become rebels after the cession, as would have occurred if they had fired yesterday evening or this morning, after we had ratified the treaty.

But, as strange as this condition and situation is, as anomalous as it may seem to those who think with the Senator from Massachusetts that we went to Manila for the purpose of liberating the Filipinos——

Mr. LODGE. I did not say we went there for the purpose of liberating the Filipinos; we went there to make war on Spain; but as a matter of fact, we did liberate them. They were absolutely helpless before the Spanish power and remained so until the destruction of the Spanish fleet by Admiral Dewey.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will grant that, if the Senator wishes to contend for it; but the question is whether that liberation carries with it the right of this country to take the sovereignty of those islands and control them against their will and against our own traditions and principles? That is the point.

I wish now to present for the consideration of Senators, and especially of those Senators who stand committed here to a proposition that they are opposed to expansion and are opposed to annexation, but desired to ratify the treaty in order to close the condition of war with Spain and then address themselves to what shall be done in the Philippine Islands afterwards—I say I wish to address to those Senators some remarks in regard to what appears to me our plain and bounden duty at this time, our duty not only to them, but more especially to ourselves.

Senators will recall the fact that some twenty years ago the South African Republic, known as the Transvaal, inhabited by the Boers, was annexed to the British Empire by proclamation. A British diplomatic agent had gone into that country to spy out the land, so to speak, to feel the temper of the people. Having notified his Government that it was advisable to do so, a proclamation was issued, simply reaching out and swallowing the whole Republic, putting them under the British flag, and sending a British governor, accompanied by a regiment of soldiers, to take possession of the cities, towns, and forts, and lo, the thing was done; the Transvaal became a part of the British Dominions!

The Boers, a sturdy Dutch stock, who had fled from Natal and from the Orange Free State to get rid of the Englishmen, numbering only about 50,000 souls all told, met in mass meeting and in assembly time and again. They protested, they supplicated, they negotiated, they begged. In the meantime, while these proceedings were going on, there was a transfer of power in England from the wily, brilliant, but unscrupulous Disraeli to that grandest of English statesmen of this century, William Ewart Gladstone. But even Mr. Gladstone, though he felt that the incorporation of the Boers into the British Empire was wrong, did not feel called upon to say so officially or to take any action; and in the Queen's address to the Commons, written, of course, by the prime minister, it was stated that their request could not be granted.

They were put under the British yoke in 1877. In December, 1880, three years afterwards, the machinery of the Government had begun to move, and the British taxgatherer came around and levied on a wagon belonging to one of the Boers who had refused to pay taxes. He put it up for sale, but, instead of selling it, several Boers rode in on horseback, took charge of the wagon, and gave this British official notice to get out, and in a week's time the entire province was in rebellion against the British Crown—in rebellion from the standpoint of English law, as were our forefathers in 1776, but struggling for that inherent right of man, as Americans have been brought to believe—self-government.

The British troops began to move; reinforcements were rushed from Cape Town, from the adjoining territory belonging to England. The Boers were farmers who had never drilled, but the best riflemen in the world. The result was that in the conflicts with the British regulars these undrilled farmers whipped the redcoats, although they were officered by trained soldiers; and under the lead of one of their number, whose name was Joubert, they won some notable victories. Reading the history of his brilliant military deeds last night, I came to think that possibly under similar conditions, extended a thousandfold as to this man Aguinaldo, who is now called an upstart and an organizer of a "tinhorn government" in Manila, in the Philippines, it may come to pass that under his inspiration and leadership a similar result will happen in those islands.

The last conflict between these Dutch farmers—half civilized if you choose to term them so—and the British army was at Majuba Hill, where a thousand picked British regulars had taken an impregnable position, as they thought, in the cup of an extinct volcano, a natural fortification with a rim around it. The Boers surrounded them, crawled up to the rim of the cup, and shot to death over half of their number, put the rest to flight—those they did not capture—and "all the world wondered." Of course the British bulldog barked and the British lion roared. The demand from the rabble was, "Rush more reinforcements down there and shoot those rebels to death. England's honor demands it."

What did Gladstone say and what did Gladstone do? Realizing that a continuation of the war involved the loss to Great Britain of many soldiers, but more clearly still feeling that his predecessor in office had committed a grave wrong, he sent a negotiator, Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, with instructions to bring about an honorable peace by the restoration to those people of their republic, reserving only to the Queen of England the right of suzerain and the right to control the foreign policy of the republic.

When Parliament met, the leader of the opposition, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, moved a resolution censuring the Government for its disgraceful surrender to these struggling Boers in South Africa and the return to them of their inheritance of self-government. The English press—that portion of it which belonged to the opposition—clamored for punishment of the rebels and for their annihilation and extinction. Mr. Gladstone, in defending his conduct, made a speech in Parliament, an extract from which I shall read; and I would to God that it could be framed and hung up in every legislative chamber where the rights of man are discussed and passed on by legislators, as a guide as to what true statesmanship demands. Here is what that great Englishman said:

> Our case is summed up in this: We have endeavored to cast aside all considerations of false shame, and we have felt that we were strong enough to put aside those considerations of false shame without fear of entailing upon our country any sacrifice at all. We have endeavored to do right, and to eschew wrong, and we have done that in a matter involving alike the lives of thousands and the honor and character of our country. And, sir, whatever may be the sense of gentlemen opposite, we believe that we are supported, not only by the general convictions of Parliament, but by those of the country. We feel that we are entitled to make that declaration, for from every great center of opinion in Europe, from the remotest corners of Anglo-Saxon America, have come back to us the echoes of the resolution which we have taken, the favoring and approving echoes, recognizing in the policy of the Government an ambition higher than that which looks for military triumph or for territorial aggrandizement, but which seeks to signalize itself by walking in the plain and simple ways of right and justice, and which desires never to build up empire except in the happiness of the governed.

There is no parallel for the action of the English prime minister. He was the first who had the greatness of soul to rise up and do what was right regardless of consequences. Can the American nation, which we claim to be the home of liberty, a nation of free men, imbued with ideas of self-government from their cradle—can we do less?

It was said that English honor demanded that these colonists should be punished. Everybody knows that England could have sent troops enough there to have killed the last man of them, just as we can send troops enough to Manila to kill, as the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] said the other day, "to shoot them to death," if need be, to make them respect our flag and our authority. We can do it. Nobody doubts that. The question is ought we to do it? Is it honorable to do it? Is it right to do it?

What more do we want in the Philippines than the right of a protectorate, which will give us the control of their foreign policy, will keep away from those islands any outside interloper, or landgrabber, or robber who might desire to gobble them up and enslave the people? What right, or what advantage will it be to us to do more than to occupy as to those islands a similar position as that existing in the Transvaal?

As though coming at the most opportune time possible, you might say, just before the treaty reached the Senate, or about the time it was sent to us, there appeared in one of our magazines a poem by Rudyard Kipling, the greatest poet of England at this time. Mr. President, this poem, unique, and in some places difficult to understand, is to my mind a prophecy. I do not imagine that in the history of human events any poet has ever felt inspired so clearly to portray our danger and our duty. It is called "The White Man's Burden." With the permission of Senators I will read a stanza, and I beg them to listen to it, for it is well worth their attention. This man has lived in the Indies. In fact he is a citizen of the world, and has been all over it, and knows whereof he speaks.

Take up the White Man's burden—
Send forth the best ye breed—
Go, bind your sons to exile,
To serve your captive's need;
To wait, in heavy harness,
On fluttered folk and wild—
Your new-caught sullen peoples,
Half devil and half child.

Mr. President, I will pause here. I intend to read more, but I wish to call attention to a fact which may have escaped the attention of Senators thus far, that with five exceptions every man in this Chamber who has had to do with the colored race in this country voted against the ratification of the treaty. It was not because we are Democrats, but because we understand and realize what it is to have two races side by side that can not mix or mingle without deterioration and injury to both and the ultimate destruction of the civilization of the higher. We of the South have borne this white man's burden of a colored race in our midst since their emancipation and before.

It was a burden upon our manhood and our ideas of liberty before they were emancipated. It is still a burden, although they have been granted the franchise. It clings to us like the shirt of Nessus, and we are not responsible, because we inherited it, and your fathers as well as ours are responsible for the presence amongst us of that people. Why do we as a people want to incorporate into our citizenship ten millions more of different or of differing races, three or four of them?

But, Mr. President, we have not incorporated them yet, and let us see what this English poet has to say about it, and what he thinks.

Take up the White Man's burden—
No iron rule of kings,
But toil of serf and sweeper—
The tale of common things.
The ports ye shall not enter,
The roads ye shall not tread,
Go, make them with your living
And mark them with your dead.

Ah, if we have no other consideration, if no feeling of humanity, no love of our fellows, no regard for others' rights, if nothing but our self-interest shall actuate us in this crisis, let me say to you that if we go madly on in the direction of crushing the Philippines into subjection and submission we will do so at the cost of many, many thousands of the flower of American youth. There are 10,000,000 of these people, some of them fairly well civilized, and running to the other extreme of naked savages, who are reported in our press dispatches as having stood out in the open and fired their bows and arrows, not flinching from the storm of shot and shell thrown into their midst by the American soldiers last Sunday.

The report of the battle claims that we lost only 75 killed and a hundred and odd wounded; but the first skirmish has carried with it what anguish, what desolation, to homes in a dozen States! How many more victims are we to offer up on this altar of Mammon or national greed? When those regiments march back, if they return with decimated ranks, as they are bound to come, if we have to send thousands and tens of thousands of reenforcements there to press onward until we have subdued those ten millions, at whose door will lie these lives—their blood shed for what? An idea. If a man fires upon the American flag, shoot the last man and kill him, no matter how many Americans have to be shot to do it.

The city of Manila is surrounded by swamps and marshes, I am told. A few miles back lie the woods and jungles and mountains. These people are used to the climate. They know how to get about, and if they mean to have their liberties, as they appear to do, at what sacrifice will the American domination be placed over them? Here is another verse of Kipling. I have fallen in love with this man. He tells us what we will reap:

Take up the White Man's burden,
And reap his old reward—
The blame of those ye better,
The hate of those ye guard—
The cry of hosts ye humor
(Ah, slowly!) toward the light—
"Why brought ye us from bondage,
Our loved Egyptian night?"

Those peoples are not suited to our institutions. They are not ready for liberty as we understand it. They do not want it. Why are we bent on forcing upon them a civilization not suited to them and which only means in their view degradation and a loss of self-respect, which is worse than the loss of life itself?

Mr. President, I am nearly done. Nobody answers and nobody can. The commercial instinct, which seeks to furnish a market and places for the growth of commerce or the investment of capital for the money making of the few, is pressing this country madly to the final and ultimate annexation of these people regardless of their own wishes and at whatever cost to them or us.

We are face to face with the question as to whether we will be content to pass a resolution here which might be sent to the Filipinos as a flag of truce and a means of bringing about pacification and ultimate relinquishment of everything except the protectorate and such commercial advantages as we ought to keep, and which they will gladly give us. We are at a crisis in our own history, when we must turn our faces away from this temptation, turn our backs upon the incentive which has led us thus far, or we must move forward remorselessly and relentlessly, doing our own country and our own people more harm than can result to those people, though we exterminate them from the face of the globe. We have within our grasp, and possible of attainment, a glory and honor such as has never come to another nation in the history of the world—the honor of having fought a war for the love of liberty and humanity, animated by no greedy, selfish purposes hidden under the declaration.

We are still an undegenerate people. We have not yet become corrupted. We have in our veins the best blood of the northern races, who now dominate the world. While we make no pretenses—and it is a pity that we do not even stand up to the few we do make—we have here a religion whose essence is mercy. We have had an experience in free government, government based on the will of the governed—for government by majority is government with the consent of the governed—and we have been taught by that government what so few people of this world have learned, both the firmness to rule and the power of obedience to that rule. We are a Christian people, and our missionaries, or those imbued with the missionary spirit, clamor for the annexation of these islands for the purpose of shedding over them the light of the gospel. We are asked to do as Mahomet did with his creed—carry the Christian religion to these people upon the point of a bayonet, as he spread Islamism over western Asia and eastern Europe and northern Africa on his scimiter.

There are two forces struggling for mastery here, and the better instincts of every Senator within the hearing of my voice lead him to side with me in the proposition that we do not want to shoot people into a civilized condition if we know how to get around it. The two forces to which I have referred as struggling for mastery are liberty, light, and morality—in a word, Christianity—contending against ignorance, greed, and tyranny, against the empires of Mammon and Belial. In the summer seas of the Tropics in both hemispheres two flags are afloat to-day above two ancient cities. They both bear the emblem of this great Republic, the Stars and Stripes. One goes to Havana and is floating in the free air as a harbinger of peace, order, prosperity, happiness, liberty. The other floats in Manila as an emblem of power, cold-blooded, determined to do what? To subjugate those people and force on them such a government as we think is best for them, and then, according to the language of the resolution, determine afterwards as it may be to "our" advantage whether we will sell them or whether we will rule them in our "own" way, without regard to their rights or wishes.

Gladstone "hauled down" the English flag in the Boer Republic. He preserved the semblance of empire, but gave to them what they sought—local self-government. It is a question here whether we will "haul down the flag" in the Philippines or whether we will advance it until we have conquered the last island at whatever cost. It was planted there in honor and now it is proposed to fix it there in dishonor. Why not tell these people now before further blood is shed? "We do not intend to do with you differently from what we do with the Cubans. We went into the war for the purposes of freeing a nation oppressed beyond all historical precedent almost. By accident or without premeditation you have fallen in our grasp. We bought you from Spain and have title. We only want enough of your territory to give us a harbor of refuge, a naval station, the right to protect you from outside interlopers, and to get such commercial advantages as you of right ought to give us." Pass a resolution of that kind, and then if those people will not listen to reason and continue to fire on the flag, I for one will say their blood be on their own heads. Let slip the dogs of war and teach them to respect the Stars and Stripes. But we are there now upon a false pretense. We are there wrongfully. We are there without any justification to ourselves or to the civilized world.

Mr. President, I yield to no man in loyalty to the sentiment, "my country, may it ever be right, but right or wrong, my country." But, oh, my God! when I think how dishonorable the prosecution of the war promises to be to us as a people, how little justification for it we have, even to ourselves, I would that you, my brother Senators on this floor, would pass a resolution which could bring about immediately a cessation of hostilities and a condition which might give the Philippine people the same right to bless us as Cuba will possess, and command for us the admiration and respect of the civilized and pagan world!

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, it seems to me that some of the statements of fact made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr.

TILLMAN] need at least a brief reply, and I desire to state in a very few words just what happened in those islands as a matter of history.

There was an insurrection in the Philippines under the lead of Aguinaldo. The insurrection was dealt with ruthlessly by the Spaniards and was substantially put down. They made an agreement with Aguinaldo and the other chiefs by which on the payment of a certain sum of money and the establishment of certain reforms the chiefs were to withdraw and the insurrection come to an end. In a perfectly characteristic manner, in fact just as they behaved in Cuba in 1878, after the chiefs had yielded and the insurrection was substantially over, the Spaniards failed to make the reforms and paid only half the money. With that money Aguinaldo and his chiefs retired to Hongkong, and, although there was guerrilla warfare here and there in the outlying districts, the insurgent Filipinos were absolutely at the mercy of the Spaniards and the Spanish authority was complete as it always had been over those islands. There was no other sovereignty there. There was no belligerent there.

Aguinaldo was brought to the islands on the 19th of May in the steamer Nanshaw, under American auspices. There was at that time no organized Filipino force. At first the results of his appeal were so discouraging that he was disinclined to continue. But he did remain, on representations of support made by our commanders. Then the Filipinos began to come in. They found a very great difference between the situation when they had last faced it and the situation after Admiral Dewey's destruction of the Spanish fleet. So long as there were Spanish ships of war in Manila Bay it was absolutely hopeless for the insurgents to think for one moment of besieging the city or of making any effective attack upon the capital which was the center of the whole Philippine system. But with the Spanish fleet destroyed, with the bay in the hands of the American fleet, they were enabled to draw their forces gradually about the city, and they did so. When Aguinaldo first came into connection with our consuls he said to them that his desire was for annexation to the United States and for freedom from the Spanish rule. After he had got over again to Luzon and found how much the situation had changed, he gradually began to increase his ideas of his own importance. He had never adjusted his own relations to the universe, and they remain unadjusted, I think, at the present time.

But the essential point I desire to make is simply this: The insurgent force, as an effective force, and the insurgent rebellion, as an effective rebellion, existed solely because of the victory of Admiral Dewey, and the Admiral, as you may see by reading his dispatches, said to our Government, "I have been extremely careful in all my dealings with these people. I have never made them the allies of the United States. I have never recognized them. I have simply aided them because they were fighting the common foe." Admiral Dewey can be trusted, I think, to manage a matter of that sort without committing the United States to any position to which it should not be committed.

Now, to-day we are there in the city of Manila rightfully by all the laws of war and by all international law. We hold it, as we have a right to hold it, under the agreement with Spain. There was no sovereignty there whatever except the sovereignty of Spain, and we succeeded to that sovereignty in the city of Manila and its suburbs. There has never been an act of oppression against the Filipinos by any American soldier or by the American forces of any kind in the Philippine Islands. Those patriots have never been oppressed by any American in the active service of the country, or by any American act. Their oppression exists solely in speeches in the United States Senate. They have been treated with the utmost consideration and the utmost kindness, and, after the fashion of Orientals, they have mistaken kindness for timidity.

Now, Mr. President, there were the American forces in Manila, where they had a right to be, and, more than that, stringent orders had gone from the President of the United States to General Otis and Admiral Dewey that under no circumstances whatever should any attack be made upon the Filipinos. More than that, Mr. President, over a fortnight ago Aguinaldo was informed officially by General Otis that the President of the United States had ordered him not to attack the Filipinos, so that he knew we had no intention of attacking him. He knew it a fortnight ago.

This idea that he had no notion of our intentions, Mr. President, is a totally mistaken one. He knew absolutely and officially what the intentions of the United States Government were. He knew what the orders of the President of the United States were to the General and Admiral.

But, Mr. President, knowing all that, the Filipinos deliberately precipitated this attack upon the American forces in Manila, where our army had a right to be. They precipitated an attack upon the forces of the country which had given them their existence as a fighting force, upon the forces of the country which had liberated them from the power of Spain. They did it in the face of the declared intention of the United States, conveyed to them from the President by the officers in command of the army and navy.

What caused them to make that attack, what encouraged them to do it, I do not know; but I do know that their representative here fled from this city to Canada and started on that flight before any news had reached this city of an attack at Manila. He knew that that attack was coming, and his flight was a confession that he knew it, and I believe that he incited and advised it. He knew the dispatches that he had sent, and whatever reason they may have had for making the attack, they believed they were going to produce a great effect in this country and upon the fate of the treaty by assailing the troops and the ships of the United States.

Now, Mr. President, the Filipinos made that assault upon our troops, upon the friendly nation, upon people who had never oppressed them, and the attack was met as American soldiers and sailors will always meet every attack. And while they are there in arms assailing American troops, when they have shed American blood, I do not think it is the time to help or to encourage them either by speech or in any other way. Let us bring them back to order and to peace. When they return to their senses, when they have learned their lesson, when they are ready to meet us in the spirit in which we went to them, then will be the time to negotiate and deal with them.

But when they attack American troops, attack them with an attempted surprise, attack without one reason or a single provocation for doing so, while that state of things continues, while they, as Spanish subjects, have broken the truce that exists between this country and Spain, and put themselves in the light of public enemies of the United States, there is to my mind but one thing to do, and that is to sustain our Army and Navy. When they return to the ways of peace, then we can deal with them in the ways of peace; but when they of their own motion attack us in the ways of war, then there is but one way to deal with them, and that is by the way of war. They are in collusion with Spain. Spanish soldiers, as General Otis reports, served their guns, and they have been met, as they deserved to be met, with swift and overwhelming punishment.

But the one point I desired to make above all others, Mr. President, and which I now repeat, was that the Filipinos and Aguinaldo knew the generous and peaceful intentions of the United States. They knew that the President had given orders not to attack them, and under those circumstances they themselves made the attack, and made it wantonly. Therefore I do not think that this is the moment to flatter or to coddle or to praise them.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLISON. I hope we will now have the regular order.

Mr. TILLMAN. I hope the Senator will just allow me to put in here——

Mr. ALLISON. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. TILLMAN. It is not 2 o'clock yet.

Mr. ALLISON. Two o'clock has no relation whatever to the question. If we are to pass these appropriation bills, with but twenty-two days now remaining, there must be time for their consideration. I yielded to the Senator from South Carolina to make his observations. I will yield to him now if he desires to put into the RECORD any document or paper.

Mr. TILLMAN. I simply wish to quote what I have quoted once before, but it comes in this immediate connection.

Mr. LODGE. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that I have read every one of those reports. I know what is in them.

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not doubt that, but I simply desire, if the Senator from Iowa will permit me, to let the people of this country know that by our own officers, sent there specifically to find out the conditions which existed and the probable action of those people, we had notice nearly six months ago—last August—that Aguinaldo and the Filipinos would not permit us or anybody else to set up a colonial government there.

Mr. ALLISON. I am willing the Senator shall have inserted in the RECORD the paper he desires.

Mr. TILLMAN. It is an extract from a letter of Major Bell, major of engineers, and I will ask the kind permission of the Senator to have it read.

Mr. TELLER. Oh, no; put it in the RECORD.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will read it myself. You can not force me to do what I do not want to do, and you can not ride over me when I wish to have a subject discussed. I will discuss it upon the appropriation bill if you will not allow it to be discussed upon the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President——

Mr. TILLMAN. I do not want to be discourteous.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not wish to treat discourteously the Senator from South Carolina or any other Senator. I yielded to him because he had given notice that he desired to make some observations to-day. It is no more my business than it is his business to deal with these questions that must be considered now. I have yielded now to him to put into the RECORD any paper he desires.

Mr. TILLMAN. I want to have it read. It is only about ten lines.

Mr. ALLISON. I will yield to have it read if the Senator will mark it and send it up to the desk or read it himself.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will read it myself.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator will.

Mr. TILLMAN. As I said, it is a letter from Maj. J. F. Bell, who was sent to the Filipinos by General Merritt last summer, and who visited various points on Luzon Island, to which he had a safe conduct from Aguinaldo. His report is to this effect in part:

There is not a particle of doubt but what Aguinaldo and his leaders will resist any attempt of any government to reorganize a colonial government here. They are especially bitter toward the Spaniards, but equally determined not to submit any longer to being a colony of any other government. What they would like best of all would be a Filipino republic with an American protectorate, for none realize their inability more clearly than they to maintain a republic without protection of some stronger power.

That is Major Bell's report to us. We have had fair notice. We were told by our own officers that those people would fight us; but in the face of that, our President sent his honorable commissioners to Paris and bought those people like sheep, and now you propose to slaughter them.

Mr. MONEY. Will the Senator from Iowa kindly allow me to read about one minute from a letter from a private soldier, which I have just received, with one other? It is from a young man of the very highest character, a son of one of the most distinguished men in my State. I will read it if the Senator will permit me to do it. It will take about one minute.

Mr. ALLISON. Certainly, I will permit it.

Mr. MONEY. I rely upon the Senator's courtesy, and will not abuse it. Some of the letter is interesting to the general public. I will state that it is dated Manila, Philippine Islands, December 24, 1898. It has been a long time on the way. The writer says:

Have been quite busy recently, as there have been almost daily (and senseless) alarms that the insurgents were going to make an attack. At this writing I believe it only a matter of time when there will be a clash, for the two armies' outposts are within a mile or two of each other, and a single shot from either side would precipitate a general engagement.

That is the opinion of a young man who is a private in the ranks and who, as I said, is absolutely reliable as to truth, and is of sufficient intelligence to form an opinion that ought to be of some value. That letter was written nearly a month and a half ago. It shows the conditions which existed at that time. I thank the Senator from Iowa for his courtesy.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is called for, which is the Indian appropriation bill.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. QUAY. I desire to withdraw the amendment that I offered when the bill was last before the Senate, and, at the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa in charge of the bill, in lieu thereof I move, in line 12, page 34, to strike out the word "ninety" and insert the words "one hundred," which will accomplish the same purpose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment heretofore proposed is withdrawn, and the Senator from Pennsylvania offers in lieu thereof an amendment which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 34, line 12, before the word "thousand," strike out "ninety" and insert "one hundred;" so as to read:

For subsistence and civilization of the Arapahoes and Cheyennes who have been collected on the reservations set apart for their use and occupation, $100,000.

Mr. ALLISON. That amendment is in accordance with the suggestion of the Secretary of the Interior, and I do not object to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. QUAY. I desire, while I have the floor, to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the provision on page 37:

For the purchase of teams, farming implements, seeds, and other necessary articles for the Mexican Kickapoo Indians, known as the "Kicking Kickapoos," in Oklahoma Territory, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, $3,000.

That amendment is insufficient. Two thousand was allotted to them last year, which proved to be altogether insufficient. I ask the Senator from Iowa to agree to an amendment increasing the appropriation from $3,000 to $5,000.

Mr. ALLISON. The committee authorized me to propose to increase the amount from $3,000 to $5,000, and to make it immediately available. Therefore I move to strike out "three" and to insert "five" before "thousand," and to add, after "dollars," "to be immediately available."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On line 8, page 37, strike out "three," before "thousand," and insert "five;" and insert at the end of line 9 the words "to be immediately available;" so as to read:

For the purchase of teams, farming implements, seeds, and other necessary articles for the Mexican Kickapoo Indians, known as the "Kicking Kickapoos," in Oklahoma Territory, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, $5,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TURNER. I ask the Senator from Iowa to yield to me to offer an amendment to the pending bill for reference to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to propose some amendments on behalf of the committee. Before doing so I yield, of course, to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. TURNER. I wish to get the amendment to the Committee on Indian Affairs and to get a report on it before the bill passes. I send the proposed amendment to the desk.

Mr. TURNER's amendment authorizing the Indians of the Yakima Indian Reservation to lease their lands allotted for agricultural purposes for a term not exceeding five years, etc., was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

TICKET BROKERAGE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock has arrived, and it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1575) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce."

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside so as to proceed with the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa asks that the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill be continued, laying aside the unfinished business informally.

Mr. ALLEN. Is the unfinished business the bill commonly known as the anti-scalping bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. So the Chair understands.

Mr. ALLEN. How does it become the unfinished business?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was made so by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. Two weeks ago.

Mr. ALLEN. I was not here at the time, and therefore I did not know it.

POLICY REGARDING THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. LINDSAY. With the consent of the Senator from Iowa, I will inquire what becomes of the joint resolution of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] which has been under discussion this morning?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution goes to the Calendar.

Mr. ALLISON. The joint resolution was taken up this morning by unanimous consent in order that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] might make some observations upon it.

Mr. LINDSAY. I desire to give notice that on Thursday, after the morning business has been disposed of, if I do not interfere with any appropriation bill, I will submit some remarks on that joint resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. I should be very glad if two or three days now could be devoted to the consideration of pressing appropriation bills that must go back to the House.

Mr. LINDSAY. I shall not interfere with appropriation bills.

Mr. ALLISON. I assure the Senator from Kentucky that there will be ample opportunity for him and other Senators to discuss the joint resolution which was introduced by the Senator from Louisiana, and I hope we may have a vote upon it.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that I intend to make some remarks upon the pending resolution, unless it is disposed of, and I do not consider the appropriation bills of so great importance as the pending resolution. I intend to be very respectful to the budget of annual appropriation bills; but there has been an agreement running now for weeks, and finally upon the last vote an agreement was made by many of the Senators, that we were to have a vote upon the joint resolution yesterday immediately after the adoption of the treaty. I do not say that we were all taken into the agreement. I say that that agreement was made, and upon that agreement the treaty was ratified. I mean to say——

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Will the Senator from Illinois inform the Senate when that agreement was made?

Mr. MASON. I refer to what came to my attention in the course of ordinary conversation with my colleagues upon the floor immediately before the vote was taken.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I had not noticed anything of it in the RECORD, and I did not know when the agreement was made.

Mr. MASON. If the Senator had been attentive he would have observed that I said it was not an agreement to which we were all parties. I do regard it as more important than any appropriation bill. I happen to have that opinion, and I differ very materially with very many of my colleagues on both sides of this Chamber. When I get ready to be heard I will promise the Senate to be silent, if that will be any inducement, in order to get a vote upon these resolutions.

There seems to be, however, a manifest disposition not to have a vote after having the treaty adopted, and after having reached a state of war with the natives, which I believed would take place and which I stated in this Chamber would take place, and for which I was sneered at by distinguished gentlemen who now refuse us a vote. Having reached a state that was as clear to be seen as that the night was to follow the day, and having reached the point when you agreed that we should have a vote to declare upon what basis those people should be treated, at least to hold out some ray of hope, some peg where they could hang a hope of ultimate independence, if we are to go on now day after day with every promise made broken and disregarded, I say very respectfully to the Senator who has charge of the appropriation bills that I do not consider the appropriation bills half as sacred as the keeping of the promise made between ourselves that there should be a vote upon the resolution. I make this reply to his suggestion. I shall not permit the appropriation bills to interfere with me when I am prepared to speak upon the resolutions, and I announce now that I shall not speak upon them if there is any disposition to give us a vote.

It looks to me as though the Senator from South Carolina, or rather the Senator from Louisiana who introduced the resolution, and who had an agreement absolutely with the gentlemen in charge of the treaty, is to be treated for the next thirty days as I have been treated when I respectfully asked for a vote upon my resolution. I desire to give notice, respectfully, that I have no special consideration and no interest in appropriation bills compared with the interest I believe the people have in the passage of one of these resolutions, or the defeat of the resolution, if you please.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I have no other interest in the business of the Senate than every other Senator has. These appropriation bills are bills of great detail and usually require conferences between the two Houses respecting them. Since I have been in the Senate they have taken precedence, by unanimous consent, of all other business of the Senate.

I do not know what contract or agreement or arrangement the Senator from Illinois suggests, but, so far as I am concerned, I am ready any moment to vote upon his resolution or any other. The difficulty respecting this resolution and kindred resolutions is that they are debated and debated, and no vote seems possible. I am willing at any moment to have a vote taken, and now, if Senators will vote upon the resolution, I am willing to vote upon it.

But it is absolutely essential, if we are to transact the business of the Senate during this session, that the appropriation bills shall be disposed of. I am willing to sit here at night and to have long sessions during the day to consider the resolutions that are cognate to the one proposed by the Senator from Louisiana, but I submit to Senators that we will get along much more rapidly with the business of the Senate by taking up the appropriation bills when they are ready for consideration and taking up the important matter suggested by the Senator from Illinois at other times.

Mr. TILLMAN obtained the floor.

Mr. MASON. Well, Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina has been recognized.

Mr. MASON. I ask unanimous consent that the vote upon the resolution of the Senator from Louisiana be taken——

Mr. TILLMAN. I have the floor, I believe, Mr. President.

Mr. MASON. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. TILLMAN. I wish to ask the Senator from Illinois a question if he will be kind enough to answer it. I understood him a moment ago—if I did not understand him rightly, I hope he will correct me—to state that an agreement was reached or a pledge made to the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from South Carolina, my colleague, prior to their voting for the treaty that if they did vote for it they would be given a resolution of this character or a vote on it. Was that it?

Mr. MASON. No.

Mr. TILLMAN. What was it that the Senator said?

Mr. MASON. You did not understand me. I said an agreement was made to which we were not all a party. It was not an agreement made in open Senate by unanimous consent, but an agreement was made and brought to my attention by different colleagues upon the floor that it was agreed, and agreed all around, that the moment the treaty was passed we were to have a vote upon the resolution of the Senator from Louisiana. It was not agreed, so far as I know, with either the junior Senator from South Carolina or the Senator from Louisiana. I had no talk with them on the subject.

Mr. TILLMAN. "All around." Where, Mr. President? Around the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. MASON. Well, that is a good deal—about twice around the Senator from South Carolina and once around the junior Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. I was simply trying to arrive at a knowledge of what had been agreed upon and by whom the agreement had been made.

Mr. MASON. Oh, it was a statement. I made it very plain. It was not a unanimous agreement in open Senate, such as we usually make, whereby we fix a time to vote. It was the general talk among my colleagues. I was not managing——

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Senator does not get that vote, he will consider that he has been buncoed?

Mr. MASON. I am getting used to it since I came into this body. But what I want to give notice of is that I am getting a little bit tired of it, and I want a vote upon one of these resolutions. I do not want to ask any Senator to vote contrary to his judgment. I claim that I have a right to express myself, and if I can not get a vote upon it I want to inflict the Senate and the country once again.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I would like to ask——

Mr. MASON. I ask unanimous consent that the vote upon the resolution offered by the Senator from Louisiana shall be taken at 1 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I object to any unanimous consent being given.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] was recognized.

Mr. MASON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. I do not think the Senator would make that suggestion if there was a full house.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not yet put the request of the Senator from Illinois, because the Senator from Nebraska has been recognized. The Chair will put the request later.

Mr. MASON. I suggest the absence of a quorum. I want a full Senate.

SPEECHES AT A JACKSONIAN BANQUET.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to interrupt the Senator from Iowa long enough to ask permission to place in the RECORD certain speeches published in the Omaha World-Herald of January 8, 1899, at the Jacksonian banquet held in Omaha. The speeches were made by ex-Vice-President Stevenson, ex-Governor John P. Altgeld, Hon. WILLIAM SULZER, of New York, Dr. A. H. Hipple, Judge Robinson, and Hon. T. J. Doyle, of Nebraska, and bear upon important political issues now before the country. I ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the RECORD.

Mr. MASON. I object.

Mr. ALLISON. I was not able to hear a word the Senator from Nebraska said, so I do not know what he desires.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I could not hear a word.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unanimous consent is asked by the Senator from Nebraska to print in the RECORD certain speeches.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not desire to make a speech myself and attach these speeches as a part of my remarks, but they are speeches delivered by such men as ex-Vice-President Stevenson, ex-Governor Altgeld, and men of that character, and they bear——

Mr. MASON. Mr. President——

Mr. ALLEN. I will yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. I objected. I followed the lead of the distinguished Senator from Colorado. I am opposed to unanimous consent.

Mr. ALLEN. I could not tell at this distance whether it was a protest or an approval.

Mr. MASON. There are very few things you can tell so far as they are off now.

Mr. ALLEN. I see the Senator, however, very well. They are speeches by such gentlemen as I have named and——

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

Mr. ALLEN. I yield again to the Senator from Illinois.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska is in order.

Mr. ALLEN. Such men as Dr. Hipple——

Mr. MASON. Then I am not in order when I object to the unanimous consent asked?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question has not yet been put to the Senate. The Senator from Nebraska has not finished his statement.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order. The Senator from Nebraska asked for unanimous consent, and I objected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair holds that the Senator from Nebraska can not be taken from the floor in that way. The Chair will put his request to the Senate in a moment.

Mr. ALLEN. I have made the request I desired, if I have been able to make it clear to the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unanimous consent is asked of the Senate that certain papers referred to by the Senator from Nebraska be published in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. MASON. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I think the resolution which has just been so ably discussed——

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. There is no quorum present to transact business.

Mr. ALLEN. I trust the Senator will observe the rules and not attempt to take me off my feet while I am upon the floor.

Mr. MASON. I am anxious to have a full house while the Senator speaks.

Mr. ALLEN. That suggestion can not be made while I occupy the floor.

Mr. MASON. I ask for a ruling of the Chair upon the question whether it is not proper to make that point at any time.

Mr. ALLEN. I decline to yield to my amiable friend from Illinois. I will be through in a few moments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Illinois as soon as the Senator from Nebraska yields the floor.

Mr. MASON. Then do I understand the rule to be that while a Senator is speaking the point of no quorum can not be made?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands the rule.

Mr. ALLEN. It has been the ruling since I have been here that a Senator can not be taken off the floor by another Senator suggesting the want of a quorum.

When interrupted by the Senator from Illinois I was endeavoring to say that I think the resolution introduced by the Senator from Louisiana ought in good faith to be adopted by the Senate without any further debate or dissent. It has developed this morning that in some kind of a conclave or caucus or conference, from which some of us were excluded and of which we knew nothing, it was determined yesterday to take up the resolution of the Senator from Louisiana and adopt it after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain.

Mr. President, that resolution is expressive of very important doctrine. It declares a policy on the part of the Government of the United States. It is in perfect harmony and keeping with the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence; it is in perfect accord with the fourth subdivision of our declaration of war with Spain, introduced by the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]; and in so far as it touches the question at all it is expressive of a true American doctrine.

The questions of expansion and of imperialism are important questions in this country at this time. There is a broad distinction between natural, peaceful, and proper territorial expansion where territory is ceded to this country through peaceful means and by mutual agreement, and that other kind of expansion which finds its chief prototype in Napoleon I, and which believes in the forcible colonization and subjection of alien peoples and their territory to our country against their protest.

I understand that to be in substance the distinction between expansion and imperialism. This distinction is made very clear by certain speeches made at the Jacksonian banquet at Omaha on the 8th of January last, delivered by our late honorable Vice-President, Mr. Stevenson; ex-Governor Altgeld, of the great Commonwealth of Illinois; Hon. WILLIAM SULZER, of New York; Dr. Hipple, Judge Robinson, and Hon. T. J. Doyle, of my State. These speeches are exceptionally able; they were delivered by a class of orators and thinkers equal, I can say without any disrespect or disparagement, to any Senator in this Chamber; and now, without reading the speeches, I ask that the usual course be pursued, and that they be printed as a part of my remarks. I offer them.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MASON. I object.

Mr. ALLEN. Then I will read them myself. I trust the Senator will not go to that length. Such a thing has never occurred in this Chamber before to my knowledge. I send these speeches to the desk and ask the Secretary to read them in their order, and I also send the order in which they were delivered.

Mr. MASON. I have no desire to inflict any physical punishment upon the Senator from Nebraska. I am perfectly willing the speeches shall be read, if everybody else is agreeable. I have often heard these speeches myself, as I come from the State of Illinois; but if the Senator wants to give them to the country in this way, and no one else objects to their reading, I shall not object.

Mr. ALLEN. I have not had the benefit of them myself. The Senator resides in one of the most populous cities of the United States, where they enjoy all the facilities and opportunities for an education.

Mr. MASON. Did the Senator say "populous" or "Populist?"

Mr. ALLEN. I reside in a Populist city of about 1,600 people, 75 miles west of the Missouri River, and only having one little branch railroad, and so my opportunities of education are very limited. If I had the opportunities the honorable Senator from Illinois has, I have no doubt that in the course of twenty-five or thirty years I might acquire as much information as he possesses.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to ask the Senator if he would not be satisfied to have the speeches referred to printed as a document? They would then be available to all Senators.

Mr. ALLEN. They are short, and I think they ought to take the ordinary course.

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course I shall not object to the Senator's request; I wish, however, that he would not put them in the RECORD, but have them printed as a document.

Mr. ALLEN. I prefer the ordinary course of printing them as a part of my remarks.

Mr. HAWLEY. I object to the speeches going into the RECORD, if that is the request.

Mr. ALLEN. Then I will put them into the RECORD myself.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not object captiously; but these are the ordinary Jacksonian banquet speeches, which in excellence and eloquence are probably not different from the numerous other speeches delivered at such banquets held in the last fifty years. They cover a large space, four newspaper pages of speeches of the Senator's particular personal friends, no more eloquent, no more able, than a great many others which have been delivered. I think it is a calamity to burden the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD with matter of that kind. The RECORD is coming to be for an ordinary Congress an enormous mass of volumes, and it is getting to be so that no ordinary library in the country will consent to take them for a series of years, as they will not have room for them. They are rarely looked at again after the morning they appear.

Mr. ALLEN. This is the first time in the six years I have served here that I have ever heard objection to the attaching of speeches or documents to the remarks of a Senator.

Mr. HAWLEY. I have myself before made objections.

Mr. ALLEN. I have the power to put these speeches in the RECORD in spite of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], and if he wants to consume the time of the Senate that it will take me to read the speeches, he may do so. I will read them.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator speaks as if the crime would be mine of reading those speeches here. I will withdraw my objection and let the Senator put them in the RECORD, but I shall protest hereafter against this shameful crowding of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD with foreign matter.

Mr. ALLEN. I thank the Senator.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MASON. I have no objection to the speeches being read, but I object to their being printed without being read.

Mr. ALLEN. I submit that it is the ordinary courtesy of the Senate.

Mr. MASON. I say I do not ask the Senator to read the speeches. I am perfectly willing to relieve the Senator from any physical effort of that kind. I do not intend to inflict the Senator to the extent of compelling him to read those speeches which he has so often pondered on.

Mr. ALLEN. I want to appeal to the Senator from Illinois not to stand here and badger me about this matter. I am not a mere tyro. I know something about the courtesies of the Senate. I have been here for a few years, and I have yet to see an instance in which there has been an objection made to a Senator publishing speeches or documents as a part of his own remarks.

Mr. MASON. I do not object to that.

Mr. ALLEN. Now, does the Senator want me to stand here and kill the valuable time of the Senate and delay the passage of the Indian appropriation bill and the passage of the resolution of the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY] by reading these speeches? I appeal to the Senator to pursue the ordinary courtesies of the Senate, and to permit these speeches to be published without reading, as a part of my remarks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MASON. Mr. President, I beg your pardon. I do object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois objects.

Mr. MASON. I object. I want the speeches read. I had some intimation of some agreement and I asked unanimous consent for a vote, and I have tried it for thirty days while the distinguished Senator has been looking after his fences—which was all right—for a vote upon one of these resolutions, and yet we are further off from a vote to-day than we were thirty days ago. I consider those resolutions of greater importance than that the speeches of distinguished United States Senators, ex-Representatives, or the ex-governor of the State of Illinois should be read here, or than the appropriation bill, if the Senator pleases.

Mr. ALLEN. I hope the Senator will not undertake to punish me for the sins of his party. Let the Senator turn his wrath upon the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] or some other distinguished leader of his party in this Chamber, and not undertake to reach his own side of the Chamber by heaping his discourtesies upon me.

Mr. MASON. Is it a discourtesy to you to ask that the public and the Senate have the benefit of the reading by one of the clerks at the desk?

Mr. ALLEN. No; but, Mr. President——

Mr. MASON. I fear the Senator is looking for some discourteous treatment where none is intended.

Mr. ALLEN. I am not looking for any discourtesy at all—not the slightest.

The Senator from Illinois said a moment ago that some kind of agreement was made yesterday, I believe, respecting a vote to be taken upon the resolution of the honorable Senator from Louisiana now pending before the Senate. I did not know such an agreement was made. I had never heard of it before. I infer from what the Senator from Illinois says that it was an agreement made on the Republican side of this Chamber. Now, if the Senator and his Republican associates are recreant to their agreement, if they fail at this time to keep their pledge that the resolution shall be promptly brought before the Senate and voted upon, I insist I am not a party to that transaction, and that the Senator, instead of undertaking to prevent my having these speeches printed in accordance with the precedents of the Senate—a thing which has never been done before to my knowledge—ought to turn his batteries upon his own political associates who have been guilty of this supposed treachery.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I desire to say that as one very insignificant Republican Senator, I was not a party to any agreement and know nothing of it.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I do not like to be made a poodle dog in a play of this kind.

Mr. ALLISON. If the Senator from Nebraska will allow me—he suggested that the Senator from Illinois should turn his vials of wrath upon the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations rather than upon his side of the Chamber—I wish to say that I know nothing of any such agreement. So I want to absolve myself from the wrath of the Senator from Illinois, if I can.

Mr. ALLEN. I want to make one more appeal to the Senator from Illinois to extend me the ordinary personal courtesy, which has never been denied in this Chamber, of having these speeches published in the RECORD without their being read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] that he be permitted to print as part of his remarks in the RECORD the papers he has sent to the Secretary's desk?

Mr. MASON. I object, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. ALLEN. Well, Mr. President, I do not know that I can do anything but to bide my opportunity when the Senator is absent from the Chamber to have the speeches published, or to ask the Secretary to read them now.

Mr. MASON. I have no objection at all to having them read. I should enjoy them very much.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not like to be put in the attitude of antagonizing or being made the conscious instrument through the capricious conduct of the Senator from Illinois of delaying the public business.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator yield to me for a question? I desire, if I can, to find out what the hitch is.

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. TILLMAN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. I desire to know just what is before the Senate—not the appropriation bill, but the immediate trouble.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. A request for unanimous consent to have certain matter printed in the RECORD as a part of the remarks of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. MASON. Printed without reading, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Printed without reading.

Mr. TILLMAN. I understood the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] to withdraw his objection to having the matter printed.

Mr. ALLEN. Yes. The objection comes from the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MASON].

I will withdraw these speeches, Mr. President, for the time being, or my request for their publication, until the atmosphere clears a little, when I will attempt it again.

Mr. ALLEN subsequently said: I desire to offer these speeches as a part of my remarks made a few moments ago, and I ask unanimous consent that they be published without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the documents he has sent to the desk be inserted as a part of his remarks. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The speeches referred to are as follows:

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

[Speech of Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson in response to the toast, "The Democratic Party," at the annual banquet of the Jacksonian Club, at Omaha, Nebr., January 7, 1899.]

Mr. President and Gentlemen: I count it indeed a high privilege to join my voice with yours to-night in this magnificent city of the West in doing honor to the memory of one of the patron saints of Democracy, Andrew Jackson. During the century now drawing to a close America has given to the world its best lessons in liberty and in law. Near its beginning to Great Britain—no less than to Spain at its close—it has given a never-to-be-forgotten lesson in the dread art of war. The brilliancy of recent victories, the splendid achievements of our arms upon foreign shores and upon distant waters, can not obscure or dim the glory of the triumph of American valor at New Orleans upon the proud day of which this is the anniversary. The 8th of January is one of the sacred days of our calendar.

Each recurring anniversary recalls a bloody struggle which will for all time hold its place in history. Upon that day Jackson, with a handful of militia, with a loss of 7 killed and 6 wounded, defeated and captured the splendidly equipped regulars of the British army. The disgraceful surrender of Hull at Detroit, the wanton destruction by fire of the public buildings at Washington, with all the insults and wrongs which had precipitated the second war with Great Britain, were more than atoned for by the victory we celebrate. It was the last battle of the war; the last fought—the last, I trust in God, that will ever be fought—by England against the United States. The events which inspired, together with the glorious culmination of a struggle forced by a powerful upon a weak nation, belong now to the domain of history. No American will forget that the British courage, before which a few months later the old guard of Napoleon went down at Waterloo, was unable to cope with Jackson and his heroic comrades at New Orleans.

The treaty of Ghent, establishing peace—which I trust will endure with the ages—between Great Britain and America, had been signed on the 24th of December, fourteen days before the great battle was fought. For many days thereafter its existence was unknown to the real actors in the great drama. We stand in awe as we contemplate the marvels which have been wrought out by man in the years that lie between that great event and the present hour.

We celebrate each returning 8th of January—as each returning Fourth day of July—in no spirit of unfriendliness to the land from which we derive our language and in a measure our laws, but that the noble deeds of the illustrious dead, the founders and defenders of the Republic, may not perish from the memories of the living. Responding and rejoicing as we do at every manifestation of good will upon the part of the mother country toward her once dependent colonies, yet it is not meet that the truths of history be forgotten. Earnestly as we desire that for the future "the battle flag be furled" between us and our kindred beyond the sea, yet may the day be far distant when the recurrence of our national anniversaries fail to touch a responsive chord in the American heart.

Upon this historic anniversary and this coming together of such as are of the political faith of Andrew Jackson, it may not be out of place to note in brief words some of the achievements of the great party of which during a stormy career he was the acknowledged chieftain and defender. The Democratic party, under the leadership of its immortal founder, Thomas Jefferson, after a memorable contest, came into power on the 4th day of March, 1801. The intervening years that stretch back to that masterful hour make up almost a century of our national life. No age nor country within so brief a span has witnessed events so stupendous, achievements so marvelous along all pathways of human thought and endeavor. All that genius in the ages past has contributed to the world's treasury of knowledge—to whatever tends to human comfort and to the lessening of human distress—dwindles in the presence of the marvelous achievements of the nineteenth century.

The United States of America—its form of government still an experiment—containing a few millions of people, with but scant population west of the Alleghenies, its frontiers in constant menace from the savage, without army or navy, was struggling for place among the nations. The hour that witnessed the inauguration of Jefferson witnessed the first advent to power of the great political party which for more than one-half the years that make up our constitutional history has controlled the destiny of the Republic. In his brief address to his countrymen upon his induction into the great office Jefferson gave expression to his views upon the salient principles of government, and formulated that confession of political faith which for almost a century has been the touchstone of all Democratic platforms and creeds.

As the key to constitutional interpretation, as the corner stone of our governmental fabric, he proclaimed: "Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none; the support of the State governments in all their rights as the most convenient administration for all our domestic concerns; the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority, the vital principle of republics; a well-disciplined militia, our best reliance in peace and for the first moments of war; the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith; encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as its handmaid, freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus, and trial by juries impartially selected."

During fifty-six of the ninety-eight years that have passed since this "creed of our political faith" was declared, the Democratic party has been in control of the General Government. With the deathless principles here enunciated as its evangel, it has kept the faith. In victory and in defeat it has held inviolable the tenets of its great apostle. It celebrated its advent to power by the repeal of the odious alien and sedition laws, enacted by the Federal party during the Administration of Adams. The champion of "equal and exact justice to all men," it stands to-day, as in the past, the relentless foe of special privileges, of organized greed, of high protective and prohibitory tariffs, of all unlawful combinations, monopolies and "trusts"—of whatever tends to oppress or to enrich a class at the expense of the people. Deprecating whatever deprives the accused of his guaranteed right of trial by jury, it held with our great court—amid the storm and stress of civil strife—"the Constitution of the United States the supreme law of the land, in war as well as in peace." Recognizing the wisdom of the fathers in the creation of the great coordinate departments of the Government, the Democratic party, at a critical moment in our history, defeated the mad efforts of the dominant party in Congress to remove from his high office by impeachment the President of the United States for the exercise of clearly defined executive duties.

The antagonist at all times of religious tests and religious intolerance, the Democratic party—amid the excitement and passion born of Know-Nothing fanaticism and proscription—stood, the bulwark of liberty and conscience—of the right to worship God according to the dictates of individual judgment and reason. To the end that "labor be lightly burdened" and commerce, "the handmaid of agriculture," encouraged, the Democratic party stands now, as in the past, for "tariff for revenue only," for the reduction to the minimum of the cost of all necessary articles of consumption. Experience has demonstrated that high tariffs have deprived the Government of its needed revennes, secured to the favored beneficiaries colossal fortunes, and largely increased to the people the cost of the necessaries of life. The baleful but logical results of so-called "protection" are seen in the sudden growth of giant monopolies, combination in restraint of lawful trade, and "trusts," more perilous than foreign foe to the existence of popular government.

"Economy in the public expense" has been and will continue the party shibboleth of democracy. "Subsidies" and all unnecessary expenditures of the public money have ever found untiring foes in those who hold the political faith of Jefferson. Recognizing the imperative obligation to maintain intact State as well as Federal authority—each within the limits prescribed by the Constitution—the Democratic party, with Jefferson, would maintain the rights of the States "as most convenient for the administration of all domestic concerns," and recognize as paramount the sacred obligation "to preserve the General Government in its constitutional vigor as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and our safety abroad." "Honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith." It was during the wise and economical Administration of President Jackson that the last dollar of governmental indebtedness was paid and our national debt wholly extinguished.

The Democratic party would mete out even-handed justice alike to creditor and debtor. It is the antagonist of whatever, either in legislation or administration, would impair the sacredness of existing obligations or render their discharge more difficult by augmenting or by lessening the debt-paying power of money. "A well-disciplined militia—our best reliance in peace and for the first moments of war." True at the beginning of the century, with a few millions of population, no less true at the close, as we stand in the forefront of the nations, with a population of 70,000,000. The result of our recent conflict with Spain gives emphasis to the prophetic words of Jefferson. Existing conditions in continental Europe, entailing taxation and misery to the verge of human endurance, illustrate by sad object lessons the inevitable results of large standing armies in time of peace.

Shall we still give heed to the warning of the great sage of the revolution or enter upon a new century with European monarchies as our model? Shall we be deaf to the teachings of one hundred years of our own history? Without a large standing army, but relying upon the patriotism and courage of American manhood, we were victorious in the war with Great Britain, with Mexico, in the great civil strife, and with Spain. In the light of history, can it be possible that the American people will consent to the creation of a large standing army and its consequent continuing and ever-increasing burden of taxation? Shall this be the response of the free Republic to the appeal that comes from despotic Russia for the disarmament of all the nations?

"Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none." At no period in our history have these words of Jefferson possessed a deeper significance. Before we abandon the traditions of the fathers it is well that we deliberate upon the possible consequences of a departure from the settled governmental policy of more than a century. Not in the "delirium of victory," but only after calm discussion of what may follow, should the momentous question now presented be determined. Nations as well as individuals may "do that in their zeal which their calmer judgment dare not approve." It would be difficult to conceive of a question more vital, more far-reaching in its consequences, than that now confronting us as to the disposition of recent conquered territory.

Is it too much to say that the enforcement of the proposed policy of the expansionists in a large measure involves the question of a change in our form of government? It can hardly be contended that the measure proposed for the control or government of the Philippine Islands finds warrant in the Constitution. Shall the closing hours of the century witness the American people abandoning the pathway in which past generations have found prosperity and happiness, and embarking upon that of aggression and expansion, against which we are warned by the wrecks which lie along the entire pathway of history? Even if true that "imperialism" would open up a new and larger field for our commerce and make us an important factor in the great affairs of nations, even these would be purchased at too dear a price. Standing out against the new policy of expansion, of absorbing distant islands, with their 10,000,000 mongrel population, into our body politic, with all it involves of European complication, are the warnings of the founders of the Republic. It was Jefferson who said, "Our first and fundamental maxim should be never to entangle ourselves in the broils of Europe."

Washington, when retiring from his great office, left these farewell words to be read and pondered by the oncoming generations of his countrymen: "The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is in extending our commercial relations to have with them as little political connection as possible. Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand on foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle ourselves in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, or caprice?"

To those who, in the exuberance of feeling produced by suddenly discovered kinship, would "interweave our destiny" with that of England, counting on her friendship and aid in whatever continental entanglements may result from imperialism, it may be well to recall the suggestive words of Washington: "There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard." Is it asking too much of the American people to solemnly ponder the warnings of Washington and his compatriots before venturing upon an untried pathway beset with foreign jealousies, complications, and antagonisms?

As precedents for the proposed policy of expansion we are referred by its advocates to the Louisiana purchase and to the vast area added to our Republic by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. Neither the purchase from France in 1803 nor the cession by Mexico half a century ago furnish a precedent for the policy now proposed to be inaugurated. By the Louisiana purchase the United States acquired the vast territory stretching northward to the British possessions and westward from the Mississippi to the domain of the Spaniard. Out of this vast area, purchased for $15,000,000 from the great Napoleon, have been carved 14 sovereign States. As the result of the masterly statesmanship of President Jefferson and the unrivaled diplomacy of Monroe and Livingston the free navigation of the Mississippi was secured forever, and a magnificent area, an empire in extent, made a part of our national domain. This grand achievement is the glory of Jefferson and of the great historic party of which he was the founder.

Under a later Democratic Administration, and as the result of the treaty which terminated our war with Mexico, we acquired California, Nevada, Utah, a portion of Arizona, and New Mexico, thus bringing under our flag, to remain forever, the vast expanse stretching from the eastern seaboard to the Pacific Ocean. The territory thus acquired was the fit abode for men of our own race. Either at the period of annexation or soon thereafter it passed under the rule of the Anglo-Saxon, who had carried with him our language and our laws. It was territory contiguous to our own, and acquired with the intention at the proper time—when population and conditions would justify—of carving it into States. The wisdom that inspired all this seems more than human. The result: Millions of happy American homes, increase beyond the dreams of avarice of our national wealth, and the United States chief among the nations of the earth.

Are we to be told that history is but repeating itself, and that the contemplated annexation or absorption of the Philippine Archipelago finds precedent in the historic events I have mentioned? The answer is found in the bare statement of facts. The acquired territory is contiguous; the Philippine islands, 8,000 miles distant. The former adapted to the residence, comfort, and happiness of our own people; the latter the fit abode for the half-civilized and degraded races, its only occupants amid poverty and wretchedness for centuries. The acquisition of the territory upon our own continent added little to the national expense; to maintain sovereignty over the distant islands will necessitate immense expenditures upon our Army and Navy. The people of the former were of the self-governing races; the latter know no rule but that of force.

We are told that "Trade follows the flag," and that untold commercial advantages will result from the proposed acquisition. Trade knows no sentiment; it goes where it is profitable. What of our products will find market in these remote islands? Ninety per cent of our exports reach European markets "because only the civilized man is the consumer." Whatever of commercial advantage may result from annexation will be as the dust in the balance to the immense naval expenditure it entails.

The graver questions involved in the proposed scheme of annexation are yet to be considered. What is to be the permanent form of government for the Philippine Islands? I do not controvert the power of the National Government to acquire new territory. The power incident, of establishing for it temporary government, is alike unquestioned. The instances already cited, of the Louisiana purchase and that by treaty from Mexico, are well established precedents. In these cases, however, it was never questioned that, with suitable boundaries and division and under proper regulations, the entire territory would ultimately attain to statehood.

The question recurs, What form of government do the expansionists propose for the Philippine Islands? Are the Territorial or colonial governments which Congress may possibly establish to be only preliminary to the creation of sovereign States to be admitted into the Federal Union? This of necessity contemplates the admission of many additional Senators and Representatives to seats in Congress, the aggregate population of the islands now being double that of our entire country at the first inauguration of Washington. In view of the degraded character of the population, their total unfitness for self-government, the proposition is monstrous. Its consummation would be a crime against civilization.

If it be the intention to establish our political institutions in these remote islands, then what becomes of the "Monroe doctrine?" This vital international policy, announced by the President of the United States seventy-five years ago, was: "We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety." Immediately following this, and as part of the declared intention of our Government, so clearly enunciated by Monroe, was the solemn declaration: "With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere."

The Monroe doctrine is wholesome and enduring. It is the faith of Americans of every creed and party—is of the very warp and woof of our political being. It was promulgated at the critical moment when the "Holy Alliance" was attempting to stifle the republican spirit and reestablish the despotism of Spain upon her revolted colonies in South America and Mexico. The essence of the doctrine, as understood by the world then, was, while we forbid the establishment of despotic governments upon the American continent, we recognize the corresponding obligation to refrain from any attempt to force our political system upon any part of the Old World. This has been our settled rule of faith and practice for seventy-five years. Its promulgation defeated the purpose of the Holy Alliance and destroyed forever the power of Spain upon this continent. Under it Louis Napoleon, a third of a century ago, was obliged to withdraw the French army from Mexico and leave the ill-starred Maximillian to his fate. Under it the empire established by foreign bayonets disappeared and the Republic was restored. Are we now to say that we still recognize the binding force of this doctrine upon other nations, but not upon ourselves?

If ultimate statehood for these remote islands be disclaimed, how, then, are they to be held and governed? The only alternative is by force—by the power of the Army and the Navy; and this not for a day or for a year, but for time. What then becomes of the bed-rock principle that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed?" If they are to be held permanently, as conquered provinces, then it will not only be in absolute disregard of all the traditions of the past, but in direct antagonism to the letter and spirit of our Declaration of Independence. It is no less true now than in the days of our Revolution that "government by arbitrary power is still despotism."

A question yet more grave can not escape our serious consideration. It is one that touches the good faith, the honor of our nation. Events have crowded in such rapid succession that we seem to have forgotten the avowed purpose of the war with Spain. It was declared to be a war solely in the interests of humanity—solely for the relief of the oppressed and starving at our door. An eminent Republican Senator a few months ago voiced the sentiments of the entire country when he said: "It is a war in which there does not enter the slightest thought or desire of foreign conquest or of national gain or advantage." Alas, what a change has come in so brief a time! The wrongs of the poor Cuban are forgotten, and the dream of the imperialist is now of untold commercial gain and of the United States becoming chief among the factors in European politics. "We can not escape history." For all time we will be judged by our solemn disclaimer, immediately following the formal declaration of war:

"The United States hereby disclaims any disposition to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over said island, except for the pacification thereof, and asserts its determination when that is accomplished to leave the government and control of the island to its people."

It was this solemn disclaimer by the American Congress that justified the war at the bar of our own conscience and that of the world. To say now that our disclaimer applied only to Cuba and not to other Spanish dependencies would be only "to palter with words in a double sense." It is a subterfuge unworthy of the greatest of nations. Is it too late even now to demand of those whose hands hold power to make good our solemn declaration that our war with Spain was waged not in the spirit of aggrandizement but solely in the interest of humanity?

In the retrospect of a century it is our glory that the absolute faith of Jefferson in the people was well-founded; that the great historic party of which he was the founder has ever been true to the fundamental principles of popular government. "New conditions impose new duties." Grave questions of domestic and foreign policy have been discussed and wisely determined during the century now closing. Others, possibly of yet more difficult solution, lie along the pathway of the century soon to open before us. May we not abide in the belief that whatever conditions may arise or dangers may menace, the Democratic party, true to the traditions of the past, true to the faith of Jefferson, will stand in the near and in the remote future the faithful guardian of the Constitution, the tireless defender of the deathless principles of free government?

THE SITUATION.

Ex-Governor John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, in responding to the toast assigned him, said:

THE REPUBLIC THREATENED.

This club has won fame through its struggle for higher politics—for higher standards of justice and for more honest economic and financial policies. But great as are your achievements, much as you have accomplished, your work has barely begun. This Republic has been the beacon light of the world for more than a century.

It has not only lifted the hopes of all men but by its example it has turned the face of nearly all nations toward liberty. Since the first reading of the Declaration of Independence over 250 constitutions that were republican in form have been adopted. Most of them perished, but they will rise again. Now the foundations are being pulled from under our own institutions. The very altars of liberty are being betrayed by the men set to guard them. Two years ago, when we turned the face of our party toward the sun, we protested against economic policies that robbed, against financial policies that paralyzed, and against judicial usurpation that enslaved. Every day's development since that time has shown not only that we were right but that the situation was far more serious than we supposed.

LOOK ABOUT YOU, AMERICAN CITIZENS.

Look about you! Nearly all of the wealth of this land is passing into a few hands, and not one of these hands favorable to the freedom of the citizen. Every great industrial, commercial, mining, or transportation enterprise is passing into the hands first of corporations, and then by further consolidation into the hands of trusts, which thus have an absolute monopoly—a monopoly which can arbitrarily fix prices, fix wages, and regulate output—a monopoly which has no soul, and whose chief purpose is to plunder the public. The monopolist and the speculator prosper, but the masses wither. Men of moderate fortunes and of fair incomes, who were the bulwark of the Republic, are slowly but surely being wiped out. We are being reduced to two classes. In the first stage these will be known as the very rich and the moderately poor, and in the second stage as the masters and the slaves. We have established a moneyed aristocracy, and are now fastening a yoke on posterity. A standing army is to be enthroned and bayonet argument is to govern.

WEALTH THE ENEMY OF LIBERTY.

Republican institutions can not live amid these surroundings. Wealth has never been the friend of liberty. Concurrently with the progress of these changes we hear the snarling voices of men who deride the doctrines of Jefferson and Lincoln that made our country great and mighty. Already we see magazine articles urging the establishment by law of a permanent aristocracy in our system of government, and from high quarters we hear a demand for Hamiltonism. Hamilton believed in monarchy and aristocracy bottomed on corruption.

He was in love with the English system, thoroughly rotten from top to bottom, and he labored to transplant whatever he could of that system. He once said to John Adams: "Purge the British constitution of its corruption and give to its popular branch equality of representation and it would become an impracticable government. But as it stands at present it is the most perfect government that ever existed." He did not advance a single new thought, did not promulgate a single new principle; and he sneered at the idea that the people were capable of self-government.

HAMILTON WAS AGAINST OUR CONSTITUTION.

England herself has since that time repudiated corruption and established equality of representation. Hamilton favored the adoption of the new Constitution, but was not satisfied with it, and openly expressed the hope that some future war would centralize the powers of the Government. When he was made Secretary of the Treasury, the new Constitution had been adopted, Congress had been given power to raise money, everybody could see that the new Republic could now easily pay its debts, and that it was not necessary to introduce corruption of any sort. But, true to his theory, he at once secured the establishment of a national bank and introduced the British funding and bond-issuing system, coupled with its limitless opportunities for plunder. A short period of unparalleled speculation and peculation followed. The sharks and financial birds of prey made fortunes, and Hamilton became the hero of the hour.

The whole system collapsed in a few years, and scattered ruin and misery over the country. Yet for a whole century the men who use the Government to plunder the country have shouted for Hamilton. Whether Hamilton himself shared in the plunder is immaterial. He expressed his belief in the system, and deliberately furnished the opportunity to others. During the Administration of Mr. Adams Hamiltonism ran wild. Almost every principle of the Declaration of Independence was trampled under foot, and those provisions of the new Constitution that were intended to protect the individual were ruthlessly brushed aside. No man dared to criticise the Administration. Scores of good men were denied trial by jury and languished in prison for exercising the rights of free speech.

A tyranny was established that surpassed anything existing in England. Four years of this regime was all that the American people could stand; they declared that they had not cast off a foreign yoke to take up a more galling home yoke, and in 1800 they arose and overthrew it so completely that it has taken nearly a century for a resurrection.

DEATH OF HAMILTONISM.

Had Hamiltonism prevailed at that time the whole history of the Republic would have been different. The brains, the industry, the skill, and the enterprise of the earth would not have flocked to our shores.

The genius of man being cowed would have withered here, as it had in Europe, and the American Republic would to-day be simply an oligarchy, stretching in small settlements from the Mississippi to the Atlantic. Hamilton was a member of the Constitutional Convention, and succeeded in establishing that aristocratic branch of our Government known as the Federal judiciary, unrepublican and undemocratic. It is not chosen by the people and is not accountable to them. In fact, for practical purposes, is not accountable to anybody. Jefferson opposed this manner of creating a judiciary with all his might, and he pointed out that here would ultimately be found the tomb of American liberty. How prophetic was that vision! During its whole career this branch of the Government has never been on the side of the weak, but always on the side of power. First it stood for federalism and usurpation.

When General Jackson tried to protect the American people from the clutches of the great rotten bank the Federal judiciary used all its power to help that institution. After the bank went down this same judiciary did the bidding of the mighty slave power, and after this went down these courts took the corporations under their wings and many of them seemed to become mere side-door conveniences for concentrated and even corrupt capital. For the last thirty years the corporations have fled to the Federal courts like ancient murderers fled to cities of refuge—there they felt safe.

Recognizing that the construction of the laws is more important than making laws, these powerful influences have allowed no man to be appointed judge whom they did not believe friendly to them. They do not buy Federal judges, because it is not necessary. In their eagerness to serve the corporations these judges have in recent years established government by injunctions in this country, under which a judge becomes legislator, court, and executioner. They brush free speech—the liberty of the citizen—and trial by jury away with a contemptuous sneer.

A TRUTHFUL JUDGE.

The Anglo-Saxon race has shed its blood to maintain these bulwarks of liberty, and our Constitution guarantees them to every citizen. But they have already been stabbed to the vitals. For several years we have beheld the spectacle of some supreme court and other Federal judges dragging their ermine around over the land to act the part of advocates for those interests which are destroying republicanism in this country. What are the liberties of America worth when committed to the guardianship of such men? During the recent campaign Mr. Depew came to Chicago under the auspices of the Hamilton Club to deliver a partisan address at the Auditorium. Federal Judge Peter S. Groscup mounted the rostrum for the purpose of introducing the orator, and told the audience, among other things, that the light of Jefferson was waning—that on the dial plate of our nation's history this hour was Hamilton's; that Hamilton's great name exactly fitted these times, etc.

HANNA, QUAY & CO. ARE HAMILTONIANS.

My friends, must we admit that Judge Groscup was right? Let us look around again. The senate of the great State of Ohio has just indicted a Hamiltonian senator for bribery and debauchery in securing a high office. A grand jury in Pennsylvania has just indicted another Hamiltonian senator for robbing the treasury of the State. Almost every great trust appears to have one or more Hamiltonian senators as standing conveniences. In the House of Representatives, where the voice of the people was supposed to be heard, we find a pensioned ringmaster of monopoly stifling the voice of the people's Representatives and reducing Republican Congressmen to a condition of pity and contempt.

Two years ago a horde of Hamiltonian statesmen went to the capital of Illinois and not only sold out the people but robbed the State of everything in sight. Wherever you find dirty finger marks in the temple of justice or a foul odor in the halls of legislation, there you will find Hamiltonianism. Verily, the spirit of Hamilton fits these times. But what shall we say of a judiciary that openly rejoices over the fact that an era of corruption has enveloped the land; that the betrayal of the people has become a science, and that the robbing of the people has become a fine art? And now we are to widen the sphere of this class of statesmen by giving them a chance to rob the Filipinos! Heaven pity those poor people. The Spaniard took what was in sight, but the Hamiltonite, with his bond jobbery, enters the womb of the future and plasters his mortgage on remote generations.

THE TONGUE OF TREASON IS WILDLY WAGGING.

During the political and partisan peace jubilee recently held in Chicago the President of the United States went to the Chicago University for the purpose of being dubbed doctor of laws. In handing him the parchment, Prof. A. K. Parker, who made the presentation speech, said, among other things: "The doctrine of sovereignty of the people leads a precarious existence in the mouths of men who love long-sounding words and have not stopped to consider that it is only a specious form of the ancient blasphemy that might makes right." Stop here a moment and reflect. The President of the United States, standing under the wing of the Standard Oil Company, accepts a proffered honor which is coupled with the declaration that the doctrine of popular sovereignty is a specious form of blasphemy, and he utters not one word of protest, but by his silence and by his acceptance nods his approval.

GLORIES IN THE SPECTACLE OF LINCOLN AT GETTYSBURG.

Come now to another scene. On November 19, 1863, Abraham Lincoln stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg, and with tears in his eyes asked the American people to dedicate themselves anew to that cause for which the heroes, living and dead, had fought on that field, so "that government of the people, for the people, and by the people should not perish from this earth." Consider these words; they embody the most complete form of popular sovereignty; yet only thirty-five years later we behold a Republican successor of Lincoln nodding assent to a doctrine which characterizes the above utterance of the great martyr President as a specious form of blasphemy. Yea, Hamiltonism fits these times. Jefferson and Lincoln stood on the platform of the common people, and as the light of Jefferson wanes the work of the great liberator passes into the shadow.

QUEEN AND PRESIDENT.

About two months ago the New York Chamber of Commerce gave a banquet, and the president of that body asked the assembled guests to drink to the health of the British Queen before drinking the health of the President of the United States, and it was done. He said the President would consent to this if he was there. To be sure, this will not shake our Republic, but it does show the tendency of thought among certain classes. It shows that the stock jobbers, the speculators, and the financial wolves have no more love for our institutions to-day than they had in 1776, when they sided with England, or 1861, when they sided with the Confederacy.

MAUDLIN TALK OF ANGLO-AMERICAN ALLIANCE.

From this same source comes the maudlin talk of an alliance with England. We are to repeat the experience of the lamb and lie down with the lion, and we have toadies and flunkeys in America who would consider it a privilege to lie down inside of the lion.

HOW TO CALL A HALT.

But, say you, these things are not new to us; tell us what to do? My friends, no mortal can tell you in advance. In all great conflicts the first thing is to ascertain the principle involved and the ultimate object aimed at. The campaign will then be shaped by conditions and events. We wish to prevent the enslavement of our people and the establishment of an aristocracy. We see that no aristocracy, either of birth or wealth, can be established or maintained where the great masses are prosperous and independent. It can exist only amid cheap property, cheap labor, and cheap men. A cowed and a poor people are the soil in which it grows. When they gave us a financial system which paralyzed our country, which cheapened property, which crushed labor, and which cheapened manhood and destroyed independence, they laid the first stone for an American aristocracy. If these conditions are to continue, then the star of the Republic has set.

But if we can overthrow this system, if we can reestablish bimetallism, if we can found a scientific monetary system and restore the price of products and of property, if we can raise the spirit of labor and renew the independence of the masses, then the beginning of the next century will crush this aristocracy to atoms and cast it to the four winds, and a liberated people, bowing only to the God who made them, will leap forward with a joy that shall gladden the earth. You see the money question confronts us at the door. It is not of our choosing. We can not make issues. Issues grow out of wrong; grow out of injustice; grow out of human suffering. Cowards and weaklings evade them, but men must meet them.

THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

Other great questions vital to our existence have been evolved by the age and must be met. But the financial question is basic and central. It is the mother of a whole brood of evils. The financial speculators of the east of Europe want the absolute power to control average prices. Therefore they want silver and greenbacks wiped out, so as to make everything rest on gold—this they can easily corner—then with a monopoly of issuing paper money they can concentrate everything into a few hands. A few gigantic banks can then control. When it suits their speculative purposes they can expand and raise prices, and then contract and lower prices, and thus catch the country coming and going. These great and unscrupulous interests always move secretly and in the dark. They bridge every chasm with a bribe and catch the political highwayman with an official uniform. The gold standard has never drawn an honest breath nor taken an honest step in this country, and its success so far shows the venality and the apostacy of American politicians.

RATIO OF METALS.

What about 16 to 1? Well, my friends, it is not in our power to change this; it is impossible to get anything along any other line. Change the ratio and the whole case dissolves. To be sure, theoretically this is not so, but we have to deal with fearfully sad facts. For twenty years both of the great parties denounced the gold standard and demanded the free coinage of silver at the old ratio. It looked as if the question would be settled in a week. But instead the gold standard got more firmly seated in the saddle. How? By corruptly controlling the Government and manipulating Congress. Open the question of ratio and you will get no action in a century. To drop the ratio is to betray the cause. We are for the old ratio because it is right, because it will undo a great crime, because it will make prosperity possible, because we can not succeed in any other way, and because the suggestions for a change come only from the enemy.

PRIVATE MONOPOLIES.

Now, gentlemen, time never stands still, and evolution is eternal. Now, questions affecting our very existence have arisen; while they are old elsewhere, they are new here. This is an age of concentration in all things, and the formation of private monopolies in particular. Competition has been wiped out. In harmony with the law as it has stood for centuries, we have denounced this, but to no purpose; we have legislated against it, but in vain. When they could not defeat legislation by bribery, they went before some subservient Federal judge and had it declared unconstitutional. Our remedy has failed. Private monopoly is as injurious and as much of a crime as ever, and we can not stop its birth; we must change our tactics and convert private monopolies into public monopolies. Give the whole public the benefits of the monopoly instead of a few individuals. Let the Government take them. This is not state socialism; it is simply protecting the people, and therefore is democracy in its broadest sense. The European people fight socialism, but get the greatest benefits from collective ownership.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP WOULD KILL MONOPOLY.

There seems to be no other way to protect the public, and it involves our very existence as a party. The Democratic party must always stand for the great masses, or else it has no mission. The Republican party stands for private monopoly and rottenness, and the monopolies will always support it and try to crush us. It is a fight not only for humanity but for our very existence.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

There are hundreds of things that the public can not do. But there are a great many that it can, should, and must do. It has been demonstrated that municipalities can successfully and very profitably own and operate water, gas and electric light plants, street-railway systems, and a number of other things, and the American people are prepared to move forward along this line, and every such step by helping the people will help the Democracy.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE MONOPOLIES.

The American people are also prepared to take the telegraph and telephone monopolies and make them a part of the Post-Office, and thus not only cheapen the service by one-half, but make the telegraph neutral in politics. Ours is almost the only great Government in the world that does not own the telegraph lines.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

I believe that our people are also prepared for postal savings banks and widening the functions of the postal department. It is safe and very cheap to the public. The English post-office runs savings banks, issues fire insurance, sells annuities, and does many other things at greatly reduced rates, and it does what is almost a general carrying or express trade of small articles at greatly reduced rates. A man once said: "You can send a sawmill through mails there."

CONTROL OF RAILWAYS.

But the greatest question is the control of our railroads. Nearly all the governments of the earth own the railroads; and railroad service, both passenger and freight, costs their people on the average about one-half what our people must pay. However, it is not the economic feature that I wish to discuss at present. The railroads and corporations now run our Government. They control the appointment of Federal judges, they meddle with the election of Congressmen, Senators, State legislators, governors, and aldermen. They dictate the policy of government, and they do it by corruption. Years ago I wrote some articles favoring governmental control or regulation of railroads, but not ownership. Observation has satisfied me this is all futile. Instead of a board regulating the corporations the corporations regulate the board, and if they run against an honest board some friendly judge flies to their rescue and kicks the board clear off the highway.

INTERSTATE-COMMERCE FARCE.

It was lately suggested that the law should require the interstate commerce commissioners to shut their eyes when drawing their salary, so as to lessen the moral shock of getting something for nothing. At present there seems to be no way of protecting the public and restoring to the people their government except by having the Government own the railroads. As between having the corporation own the Government or having the Government own the corporation, the American people will prefer the latter.

DUTY OF THE PARTY.

To the Democratic party it is a question of vital interest. It can never become a corporation party without abandoning its mission and becoming contemptible in the eyes of men. Therefore the corporations will always furnish the boodle to MARK HANNA with which to debauch the American voter and defeat that party. If the Government owned the roads it would be different. True, it would create a large patronage. This, however, might be regulated by civil service; but even if it were not, the Government could not possibly coerce its men more than the corporations do now, and it could not pay the large sums for corruption purposes which the corporations now advance and then indirectly get back from the Government. If the Government owned the railroads many trusts now made powerful by railroad distribution would dissolve.

The great and criminal corporations are the incubators which have been hatching the little bantams that talk aristocracy. Destroy the incubators and the brood will die out. These, my friends, are the issues, this our high purpose.

We are not interested in cheap politics. We are trying to establish a higher justice and bring mankind a day's march nearer to the great high plane of human brotherhood. Two centuries ago the world struggled for religious liberty; to-day it is in the birth throes of industrial liberty.

Religious liberty could not live amid superstition, but demanded liberal institutions. Political liberty could not live amid kings and aristocracies, but demanded republican institutions. Industrial liberty can not live amid monopoly and injustice, and it is calling for higher standards. Democracy established religious and political freedom, and it must now establish industrial freedom by giving the public the benefit of all monopolies.

How is this to be done? By the same means by which every great reform and moral advance in the history of the world has been carried forward. The soul of the hero and the spirit of the martyr are the twin guides of human progress. James Russell Lowell summed up the whole history of civilization when he penned the lines:

"Truth forever on the scaffold,
Wrong forever on the throne,
But that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch upon His own."

To-day Truth is on the scaffold, and Wrong is on the throne. The forces that support crime in high places are masters, and as they live by the breath of falsehood, we must expect every possible indignity and we must expect temporary reverses.

RIGHT IS ETERNAL.

Howard Taylor said: "Over a century ago the British drove the Pine Tree flag off of Bunker Hill, but God retreated with it till he brought it back to Bunker Hill." My friends, justice is not abdicating; have no fear about our cause. Its ultimate success is written on the programme of destiny.

"Yes," says some one, "but the wilderness is dreary; when shall we reach the promised land?" I do not know. On the dial of progress time is not indicated by months or even years, but by epochs—some long, some short. In our country they have been short, and the change has always been like a sunrise when things look most gloomy.

"But," says another, "are not most of the powerful forces arrayed against us?" Yes; the same forces that have fought every reform made are also against us; but when the time is ripe they disappear from the earth.

A century ago Hamiltonism seemed to be permanently intrenched and supported by all the strong forces of society, but in a few years it went down.

POWER OF THE MONEY POWER.

When the powerful national bank controlled nearly all of America and tried to coerce President Jackson, it had its slimy finger in every neighborhood, dominated the drawing-room, the countingroom, the schoolhouse, the press, the church, the politicians, and the Government. Yet a couple of years were sufficient to overthrow it and expose its awful rottenness. Hear what George W. Curtis said of the slave power in even the Northern States in his day:

"Slavery sat supreme in the White House and made laws at the capital. Courts of justice were its ministers and legislatures its lackeys. It silenced the preacher in the pulpit, it muzzled the editor at his desk, and the professor in his lecture room. It set a price upon the head of peaceful citizens, it robbed the mails, and denounced the vital principles of the Declaration of Independence as treason. In States where laws did not tolerate slavery it yet ruled the club and the drawing-room, the factory and the office. It swaggered at the dinner table and scourged with scorn a cowardly society. It tore the golden rule from schoolbooks and from the prayer book the pictured benignity of Christ."

AN AWFUL PICTURE TO BEHOLD.

My friends, this is an awful picture of supreme power. The men and the women who opposed this institution did not expect a change for centuries, but the great clock in the chamber of the Omnipotent never stands still; it ticked away the years as it had formerly ticked away the centuries, until finally it struck the hour. The world heard the tread of a million armed men, and slavery perished from America forever. Mr. Curtis's description exactly fits these times. The money power sits supreme in the White House and makes laws at the Capitol. Courts of justices are its ministers and legislatures are its lackeys. It silences the preacher in his pulpit, the editor at his desk, and the professor in his lecture room.

INTELLIGENCE OF THE COUNTRY WITH DEMOCRACY.

But the infallible finger of its growing insolence shows that the hour of its destruction is near. Remember that 30,000 votes properly distributed in 1896 would have elected Mr. Bryan. The patriotic intelligence of the land is already with us. Deduct from Mr. McKinley the negro vote, and he is lost; deduct the ignorant city slum votes which he got, and he is lost; deduct the vote purchased with Hanna's boodle, and he is lost; deduct the false returns made by corrupt election judges, and he is lost. He was elected by tainted dollars, and his future must rest on them. The elements of corruption are his mainstay, and nothing can stand long on a rotten foundation. Remember, too, that not a single devotee of 1896 has deserted. Flesh-pot patriots may weary, but our mighty army still has its face to the sun, and our only course is forward.

THIS IS GOD'S FIGHT.

Ah, say you, this is a fight against money, and we have none. This is true. But no great moral and political reform ever yet rested on money. The Almighty has never yet tried to sprout the seeds of justice in the garden of lucre. Only poisonous vines will grow there. Noble manhood perishes there. It is moral force that, in the end, moves the world. Had Christ been furnished a million dollars by a syndicate to introduce his religion it would have been a failure. True, we must have money for hall rent, printing, etc., but we must get it from those who give with a blessing, and not from the men who demand the selling of souls and the surrender of manhood.

MONEY CAN NOT WIN.

If the sugar trust or the Standard Oil trust would give us $10,000,000 to make a campaign with, our cause would be lost. It would be Clevelandism over again. Even if we won the election, our moral force would be gone and we would accomplish nothing. It is the ardor of devotion that shakes empires, and we must win this fight by a self-sacrificing manhood. Men with flesh-pots can not help us. I hear the derisive laughter of MARK HANNA at the mention of manhood. But, my friends, American manhood will yet survive to throw the deodorizing lime of oblivion upon his polluted grave.

NO TIME, NO PEACE, FOR TRIMMERS.

We are in a crisis. The liberties of a mighty people are at stake. There is no neutral ground; trimming and trading can no longer be tolerated. The world demands earnestness and candor. I do not believe in the black flag; give every honorable enemy quarter. But we must have a sacred black motto which we must keep to the front, and that is, "Woe unto him who trifles with the confidence of the American Democracy." Grover Cleveland is dead, and he left no friend to whom to send the obituary notice. Scores of wobbling statesmen are to-day looking through the fence into the graveyard for a burial place, because they were hit with the wrath of a deceived people. Each age furnishes a weapon for the people. The weapon for this age is the initiative and referendum. Through it we can restore Democracy.

Then fill our people with the spirit of Andrew Jackson, and the corruption of Hamiltonism, as well as the hypocrisy of McKinleyism, will no longer threaten or disgrace our land.

WHY WE HONOR JACKSON.

Why do we honor the memory of Jackson? He was not a great scholar, not a great orator, not a great publicist, not a great military man, and yet he stands like a mighty rock in the ocean, towering high in air, while thousands of scholars, orators, publicists, generals, and statesmen who have come since his time are lost in oblivion. It is because of his character. Amid temptation and threats of destruction he fixed his eye upon the star of justice, shook his fist in the face of power and delivered the American people. This country needs more Andrew Jacksons, and the people believe that they have found one in William J. Bryan.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATED.

Congressman WILLIAM SULZER spoke as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen: It is a matter of much personal gratification to me to be with you to-night and participate in your joyous and magnificent celebration of Jackson's day.

I would be false to myself and to every sentiment of gratitude I possess and hold dear if I did not at the very beginning of my remarks express to you how deeply and sincerely I appreciate the honor and the distinguished compliment of your invitation. I accepted it, of course. I could not do otherwise. Coming from whence it did, and how it did, I could not refuse. I am very glad, indeed, to be with you, and as long as I live I shall never forget your courtesy, your reception, your consideration, and your hearty and genuine hospitality.

I like the Democrats of the great West, and I hope they will like me.

I stand squarely on the Chicago platform, and as a Democrat, tried and true to every tenet of our party and to its fundamental principles, I come to you from the toiling, throbbing, earnest Democrats of the East, and bring you their fraternal greeting, and their message of hope for union and harmony in our ranks, and for the triumphant victory of our grand old party for years to come.

In my judgment, we are destined to triumph if we religiously adhere to our principles, fearlessly and vigorously promulgate them, and honestly and tenaciously strive to enforce them. We must be true to ourselves and to the teachings of the fathers of Democracy, and if we are and continue to have faith in the justice of our cause, we must and will succeed, and signal victory must and will crown our efforts.

We celebrate to-day one of the most important epochs in the annals of our history.

This is Andrew Jackson's day, sacred to the memory of the hero of New Orleans, sacred to the memory of the grand old man, the old hickory of the Democratic party, sacred to the memory of one of the most unique, one of the most stalwart, and one of the most magnificent figures and characters in all American history.

Andrew Jackson was a hero from his cradle to his grave. Irresistible events and circumstances beyond his control made him so.

The fascinating story of his life reads like a romance and demonstrates that truth is stranger than fiction. That story is a part of the most stirring and eventful period in our history, an incentive to every hopeful schoolboy, a beacon to every sincere patriot, a star of hope to every struggling toiler, and a conclusive proof of the stability and the opportunity of democratic institutions.

Andrew Jackson from his birth to his bier was a remarkable personage. He was a man of iron will and of indomitable spirit. His veins were filled with good red blood, but his nerves were of steel. He never knew fear. He never turned his back on friend or foe. He knew the right and never hesitated to do it. He hated cant, despised hypocrisy, and cared naught for consequences.

He was a plain man. He loved the plain people; they understood him and they loved him.

He was a forceful man, a direct man, a positive man, an honest man, and a truthful man. He hated a liar, and he spurned with contempt a coward.

His life began with the struggles of a brave people to cast off the tyrannous yoke of oppression, and when it went out his last look witnessed the greatest and the grandest Republic the world has ever seen.

His life was a part of the Republic, and demonstrated its opportunities and its possibilities.

Andrew Jackson was not born to the purple; he was no child of pampered fortune; he knew woe and want, poverty and misery, trial and trouble.

He was schooled in the school of adversity, but learned to surmount all difficulties.

He was a soldier in three wars and a hero in each.

His parents came from the north of Ireland. He was of Scotch-Irish origin, and had that blood in his veins with all that it means and all that it implies.

He first saw the light of day in Carolina in March, 1767. It was a new and sparsely settled country. Shortly after his birth his father died, leaving a widow and three orphan children. Andrew Jackson was the youngest.

His early days were days of hardship and privation, but they were trial days to school him and to fit him for the part he was to play in life.

At that time the Revolution smoldered, and when it finally blazed forth in all its fury, the greatest and the grandest Revolution that ever shook the earth, all the Jacksons were in it and a part of it.

Andrew Jackson, then a mere lad, was a soldier and a hero in those dark and stormy days. He was a warrior for the right, a soldier for freedom. He was captured, made a prisoner of war, and while such, because he refused to blacken the boots of an English officer, was struck a cruel blow on the head with a sword. He carried the terrible scar to his grave, but he avenged the insult at New Orleans.

The Revolution passed and the Republic dawned. During the heroic struggle Jackson's mother and his brothers died, all martyrs to the sacred cause. The close of the contest to vindicate the principle that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed found Andrew Jackson homeless, penniless, and friendless, with neither kith nor kin, but nothing daunted. The ordeal of the Revolution made him a man, a patriot, and a Democrat.

Andrew Jackson loved his mother with a passion almost divine. His devotion to her memory is the noblest trait in his heroic character, and his undying fame her greatest monument.

Napoleon asked, "What is wanting to save the youth of France?" Madame Champau answered, "Mothers." No man was ever truly great whose mother was not really great.

Andrew Jackson's mother intended him for the ministry, but fate willed otherwise. He studied law, practiced it successfully, was a judge and a good jurist, a member of both branches of Congress, molded the Constitution of Tennessee, was the greatest and most successful Indian fighter who ever lived, crushed at New Orleans the greatest invading forces which ever desecrated our sacred soil, humbled in the dust the flower of the English army, and destroyed for all time the power and the prestige of Great Britain on the Western Hemisphere.

Andrew Jackson was the hero of the war of 1812 and won its most decisive victory. We celebrate that triumph to-night. He was a great citizen-soldier, but a greater civilian. He was a volunteer and believed in and stood for the volunteer forces of the Republic. He was opposed to a great standing army and had no sympathy with imperialism.

He was a Democrat, reared in the Democratic school of Thomas Jefferson. He stood for the freedom of the press, freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, for civil and religious liberty, for the Constitution, for all that Jefferson stood for. He believed in our cardinal principle of special privileges to none, equal opportunities for all.

He stood for advancement, for progress, for personal liberty, for the schoolhouse and the home. There was nothing illiberal, nothing narrow-minded, about Andrew Jackson. He was broad-gauged and broad-minded. He believed in the ability of the plain people to govern themselves. He stood for their rights, their hopes, their aspirations, and he vindicated them while he lived.

He brought about the annexation of the Floridas and was their first American governor. He accomplished what he purposed; he did things.

He was twice President of the United States, stamped his personality indelibly on her history, and when he died he was the popular idol of the American people. He will always be one of the most interesting figures in our history.

He vindicated American institutions, crushed treason, pilloried nullification, and dethroned the United States Bank, the greatest trust and monopoly of his day.

He stood for the home and the hearthside, the sanctity of the family, and for the blessings of Christian civilization.

He stood for internal improvements, for commerce, the American merchant marine, and he loved his country with an intensity that was patriotism personified.

No one ever questioned the purity of his patriotism, or challenges the integrity of his motives, and yet no public man in all our history was ever more bitterly assailed by his enemies or more justly loved by his friends and adherents.

Andrew Jackson had his faults and his foibles. He was not a demigod—he was only human. He hated and he loved in human ways like other human beings. He triumphed and he suffered. He was a man of force and of passion, the man for every crisis, and yet no man could be calmer under more trying circumstances—no man suffered more and complained less. His whole life was an heroic struggle mentally and physically. But amid all the storms of his tempest-tossed career his heart beat true, and was ever warm; his hand was always steady, his head was ever cool, and within his stern exterior there dwelt a Christian spirit and a noble nature as gentle as a woman's. He was a great Democratic leader, and no man ever had more loyal followers.

He stood for the true democracy, the rule of the plain people, the democracy which unfetters trade, fosters commerce, establishes industry, aids enterprise, maintains equal opportunity, unshackles the mind and the conscience, and defends liberty.

He was a great man, the representative of two centuries. He was the embodiment of true American manhood, the personification of the genius of our free institutions, and the incarnation of Jeffersonian Democracy. He always subordinated personal interest to his sense of public duty.

We are Americans, we are Democrats; and as Americans and Democrats we love and revere the memory of Andrew Jackson, the illustrious patriot of the Hermitage, the hero of New Orleans, and the sage of Tennessee.

It is not my purpose to eulogize the hero of New Orleans. Nothing I can say will add to his greatness or his glory. History has done Andrew Jackson ample justice. His monument, more enduring than marble or brass, is in the grateful and patriotic hearts of his loyal countrymen.

It is fitting and proper, however, that this day should be celebrated by the Democrats of our country and by the plain people, whose friend Andrew Jackson ever was.

To-day we want and the Republic needs men with the indomitable spirit, the magnificent courage, and the patriotic zeal of Andrew Jackson. The preservation of our free institutions and the perpetuity of the Republic would be absolutely safe if we had an Andrew Jackson in every hamlet, every county, and every State of the Union.

To-night, as Democrats, we invoke the name and fame of the hero of New Orleans, in our fight to reestablish the American merchant marine. Under his Administration our shipping and our commerce flourished as it never did before. During the Democratic days of Jackson nine-tenths of American commerce was carried in American ships, flying the American flag. To-day more than nine-tenths of American commerce is carried in foreign ships flying foreign flags. Republican legislation has driven our flag from the seas, and destroyed our foreign carrying trade. We pay over $300,000,000 every year to foreign shipowners. Why? Because we have legislated in their interest, and against the true interest of our own people. Because the Republican party has legislated our flag off the seas.

It is the duty of the Democratic party to restore our merchant marine. We must combat the disastrous policy of the Republican party against our merchant marine and repeal its vicious legislation. We must revive our great shipping industries, and thus give employment to thousands of idle men, re-create the American sailor, and ere long again witness the gladsome sight of the American flag flying on every sea and kissing the sky in every foreign port. The Democratic party, the party of Andrew Jackson, must and will restore and reestablish the American merchant marine.

To-night as Democrats we invoke the spirit of Andrew Jackson in favor of the volunteer forces of the Republic and against a large standing army in time of peace composed of men who are not taxpayers, but are taxeaters. Andrew Jackson was a citizen-soldier, and he believed in the citizen-soldiery of the land. As Democrats we should do all in our power to defeat the now avowed project and policy of the Republican party to increase the Regular Army of our country to 100,000 soldiers. We do not need this vast army in time of peace any more than we need a king. We should favor a great navy to protect our coast and our commerce, but we should, if we are true to the people and our principles, vigorously oppose this enormous increase of the Regular Army. A large standing army in a republic is always a menace to civil liberty and free institutions.

To demonstrate this we have only to look to-day to the pitiful condition of France. We have no need of an immense standing army in time of peace. The Regular Army is the most undemocratic institution we have. In time of trouble, in case of war, the Republic should rely on its citizen-soldiery and its volunteer forces. It is contrary to the true principles of the Democratic party to permit the military power to become supreme and paramount to the civil authority. A desperate effort will be made by the Republicans to pass the act to create a great standing army, and if it succeeds it will burden the taxpayers of the country for its maintenance $150,000,000 a year. Every Democrat in the land should be alive to the dangers of this Republican movement, and do all in his power to frustrate it.

To-night, as Democrats, we invoke the memory of the hero of New Orleans against any alliance with Great Britain, especially when the agent of that Government is the Benedict Arnold of the home-rule cause. We need no alliance with Great Britain. All we need now, as in the past, is a firm reliance on our own greatness, our own ability, our own integrity, our own power to defend our rights, protect our citizens, and legislate for ourselves on every proposition regarding our own welfare, our own happiness, our own well-being, and our own prosperity.

If Andrew Jackson were alive to-day he would never sanction an alliance with Great Britain. The spirit of 1776 and 1812 still lives. The Republican party is in favor of this alliance; the Democratic party should be strenuously opposed to it. Its consummation means national disintegration.

To-night, as Democrats, we invoke the memory of President Andrew Jackson against the encroachments on the rights of the people of the national banks. They menace our Republic to-day. Jackson waged the most bitter and relentless war of his life against the United States Bank, and finally destroyed that gigantic monopoly. If he had not it would have destroyed the Republic. One of the greatest acts of his life was the veto of the bill extending the charter of that bank trust. In the light of what is going on to-day that veto message should be read by every citizen in our land. There is a bill now pending in Congress which gives to the national banks of the country far greater powers and privileges than were ever enjoyed by the United States Bank. It is a Republican bill, and the Republican party stands sponsor for it and is committed to its passage.

If it should become a law it would give the monopoly of issuing money to the national banks, and hence the right to expand or contract the currency of the people whenever it suited their convenience. No corporation should have this power to make or destroy. It would deprive the Government of one of its greatest attributes of sovereignty and give to the national banks the right to paralyze, at their own will, every industry in the country. It is the most daring attempt the banks have ever made by law to sieze one of the greatest weapons for good or evil known to civilized man. For the Government to surrender this prerogative and delegate away this power would be a crime against every citizen in this land and work woe and misery to millions yet unborn.

As a Democrat, and a follower of Andrew Jackson, I am opposed to the Government delegating away its powers to the national banks. The Democratic party should vigorously oppose conferring any additional powers on or granting any greater privileges to the national banks. In my judgment they already possess entirely too much power. They are doing precisely to-day, only to a greater extent, what the United States Bank did in the days of Andrew Jackson. The right to coin and issue money is one of the greatest prerogatives of the Republic and one of the highest attributes of its sovereignty. It should not be delegated, transferred, assigned, or set over to any national bank, to any trust, or to any monopoly. As Democrats and believers in the meaning of this day, we should resist the encroachments of national banks on the liberties of the people with the same zeal and the same courage that Andrew Jackson resisted the audacious claims of the United States Bank in his day. And when the national banks impudently declare that the Government should go out of the banking business, we should answer that the banks should and must go out of the governing business. And we should make that answer good now and for all time to come.

In Jackson's day there was only one Nick Biddle. To-day there is a Nick Biddle in every national bank in the land.

Let me say here, it is a matter of gratification for me to tell you that the recent attempt of the Republicans to pass through Congress an international bank charter met with the signal and the overwhelming defeat that the scheme deserved. It was one of the most iniquitous bills ever presented to Congress. According to its terms there was no limit to its powers for pelf and no end to its possibilities for evil. If it had been enacted into law it would have created the greatest trust the world has ever seen. By virtue of its provisions it would monopolize, own, and control almost everything under the sun. It was the most colossal scheme ever devised by the ingenuity of man to rob and swindle the people and to enslave for all time to come the industrial masses.

Under the provisions of that bill this gigantic financial trust, with unlimited capital, unrestricted powers, and unparalleled opportunities, would soon absorb, monopolize, own, and control the wealth, the treasure, and the commercial and industrial business enterprises of the land. The bill was so cleverly drawn that the men behind it could practically do anything from buying and holding land to loaning money on personal property, and they could do it all on their own terms and fix their own rates of interest. It would have been the trust of trusts. It was the greatest trust franchise Congress was ever asked to give away, and I am happy to state that by a very decisive vote Congress placed its seal of condemnation on the colossal scheme. But it will come up again. The forces of corruption are always active, never conquered. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

As Democrats to-night we should also invoke the patriotic spirit of the great destroyer of the United States Bank monopoly, Andrew Jackson, and, following in his footsteps, every Democrat in our land should enlist in the war of the people against the trusts. Andrew Jackson was the implacable foe of monopoly. Were he alive to-day he would be the implacable foe of the trusts.

To-day the great trusts of the country are practically supreme. Many of them are so intrenched in power that they are to all intents and purposes above the law and no longer amenable to legislative action. The crying evil of the times is the power and the sway of the trusts. They endanger not only our free institutions but our free men. The battle cry of the Democratic party should be, "The trusts must go!"

To-day about 200 trusts control, wholly or in large part, every conceivable product and industry of the country.

These gigantic combinations constitute, in my judgment, the greatest menace at the present time to our democratic institutions. They control the supply, monopolize the product, and dictate the price of every necessary of life. They force out of legitimate employment thousands and thousands of honest toilers. They enhance prices, reduce wages, and write the terms of their own contracts. They destroy competition, paralyze opportunity, assassinate labor, and hold the consumers of our country in their monopolistic grasp. They levy tribute on every man, woman, and child in the Republic. They blight the poor man's home, darken the hearthside of his children, cloud the star of legitimate hope, and destroy equal opportunity. They control legislation, escape taxation, and evade the just burdens of government, while their agents construct and maintain tariffs to suit their selfish ends and greedy purposes. They imperil trade, stagnate industry, regulate foreign and interstate commerce, declare quarterly dividends on watered stocks, and make fortunes every year out of the people. Their tyrannical power, rapid growth, and centralization of wealth are the marvel of recent times and the saddest commentary on our legislative history. Prior to the civil war there was not a trust in the country except the United States Bank trust, which Jackson killed.

They practically own, run, and control the Government to-day, and defy successful prosecution for violation of law. If their power of centralization is not speedily checked, and they go on for another quarter of a century like they have in the past few years, I believe our free institutions will be destroyed, and instead of a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, we will have a Government of the trusts, by the trusts, and for the trusts.

How much longer will the people humbly consent to be robbed and submissively permit a continuation of this outrageous policy of favoritism by class legislation? All legislation bestowing special benefits on the few is unjust, and against the masses and for the classes. It has gone on until less than 8 per cent of the people own more than two thirds of all the wealth of our country. It has been truly said that monarchies are destroyed by poverty and republics by wealth. If the greatest republic the world has ever seen is destroyed, it will fall by this vicious system of robbing the many for the benefit of the few.

The total population of the United States is about 70,000,000. The total aggregate wealth of the United States, according to the best statistics that can be procured, is estimated at about $62,000,000,000, and it appears, and no doubt much to the surprise of many, that out of a total population of 70,000,000 less than 40,000 persons in the United States own more than one-half of the entire aggregate wealth of the land. And this has all been brought about by legislation during the last twenty-five years.

The centralization of wealth in the hands of the few by the robbery of the many during the past quarter of a century has been simply enormous, and the facts and figures are appalling. Three-quarters of the entire wealth of our land appears to be concentrated in the hands of a very small minority of the people, and the number of persons constituting that minority grows smaller every year. The legislative schemes which have been most favored for checking this growing centralization of wealth are generally the most elusive and the most impotent.

Impartial students of these startling facts and statistics can hardly escape the irresistible conclusion that a conspiracy exists, and has existed for some time, to convert the Government of the United States into a powerful oligarchy of wealth. The millionaires, the plutocrats, the trusts, the monopolies, and the syndicates seem to be supreme and legislate for their own interests, benefit, and protection. If it continues, the yeomanry of our country will soon be reduced to a condition of industrial serfdom more pitiable than ever existed before in the history of the world.

The money power, the trusts, the syndicates, and the favored few of the land threaten the perpetuity of our free institutions by subsidizing the pulpit, buying the press, seating well-paid attorneys in legislative halls and courts of justice, stifling free speech and the right of lawful assembly and stretching out their tentacles to the colleges of the land to crush professors who have the courage of their convictions and dare to tell the truth regarding economic and social principles.

My friends, to crush the trusts, now and forever, is the highest duty, and the true mission to-day of the Democratic party. In this war of extermination against the octopus which is enslaving our industrial masses, and destroying our free institutions, we should invoke the aid and the support of every lover of liberty, and every disciple of Andrew Jackson, whose memory we revere and celebrate to-day. He said: "The Union must and shall be preserved." Let us to-night as firmly resolve and proclaim that the rights and the liberties of the people must and shall be preserved from the insidious encroachments of aggregated wealth.

THE JACKSONIANS.

Dr. A. H. Hipple, in responding to his toast, "The Jacksonians," spoke as follows:

Those of you who regularly attend the banquets of this club know that the toast to which I have the honor to respond always forms a part of our programme. A decent respect for the opinions of the great Democratic party, of which we form a part, and of the people whom we seek to influence, impels us to proclaim from time to time the principles upon which we base our actions, and the policies founded upon those principles which we think ought to be adopted. The principles for which we contend are few in number and easy to understand. We believe that every individual should be allowed the greatest possible freedom consistent with the maintenance of public order.

We believe in local self-government, and are opposed to centralization of power in any form as being dangerous to the liberty of the people. We believe in the right of every man to worship his Creator in any manner that he may choose, and we denounce as un-American any attempt to place a man in office or keep him out of office because of his religious faith. We believe that it is the duty as well as the privilege of every citizen to take an active interest in public affairs and use every honorable means to secure the nomination and election of good men to office. And finally we believe that the duties of every public office, however great, and of every public service, however humble, should be performed by a Democrat. In case no Democrat is available for an office we have no particular objection to a Populist or a Free-Silver Republican, but it is not in accordance with our principles.

POLICIES AND PRINCIPLES.

In the matter of doctrine I can speak for the Jacksonians with assurance, knowing as I do that we are all united in support of the fundamental principles of true Democracy; but when I speak of policies I realize that I am dealing with questions in regard to which there may be honest difference of opinion within our own ranks. As time progresses new issues arise and old ones perish. It is the duty of the Democratic party to apply to these new issues the precepts laid down by the fathers of Democracy, which time has shown to be the only security of a free government. But I am not one of those who believe that the sages are all dead, and that the words of Jefferson and Jackson are oracles from which an answer can be obtained to every question. No truer patriots than they ever lived; but patriots just as true are living now. Every age produces its own great men. Nebraska to-day has a Jackson of its own; let us hear him.

The Jackson whom we are proud to call our patron saint buckled on his sword and went out to fight for the liberty of his own people; the Jackson of Nebraska whom we are proud to call our leader buckled on his sword and went out to fight for the liberty of an alien race, bound to him only by the common ties of humanity. The former saw the danger that confronted the Republic from nullification; the latter sees the danger that confronts it from expansion. The elder Jackson saw a United States bank in operation, and as President used all his power to crush it; the younger sees a United States bank in process of formation, through the medium of an infamous currency bill, and, if I mistake not, within a very few years he, too, will be using the power of the Presidency to crush it. I do not know what the historian of the future will say in regard to him, but if he is elected to the Presidency, as every Jacksonian hopes he will be, I believe the verdict will be that no abler statesman ever occupied the Presidential chair than Col. William J. Bryan.

STAND ON CHICAGO PLATFORM.

The Jacksonians stand squarely upon the Chicago platform. When we find a member who does not believe in that kind of Democracy, we lead him out to the edge and gently drop him down among the Republicans, where he belongs. We realize that the issues growing out of the war will have to be met and that the next national Democratic platform will have to be framed accordingly; but regardless of any new planks that may be adopted, we want the old financial plank to occupy the former prominent position. We are in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, because we believe it furnishes the only solution of the great financial problem, and we will never consider the money question settled until it is settled right.

There is one question, however, which was alluded to in the Chicago platform and discussed to some extent during the campaign of 1896 to which I think more attention should be paid in future. I allude to the subject of trusts. The Democratic party has always regarded capitalistic combinations as dangerous to our institutions, and within the last few years these combinations have increased at an alarming rate. The World Almanac for 1898 gives a list of 110 leading trusts, with statistics in regard to them. The capital stock of these 110 trusts amounts to considerably more than $3,000,000,000. Some idea of the immensity of this capitalization may be obtained from the fact that it exceeds the total assessed valuation of all the real and personal property in the States of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and the Dakotas, according to the census of 1890.

When we realize that the trusts of this country have capital enough to buy at its assessed value all the property in eight of our most prosperous States, including such cities as Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, and when we realize further that so long as the Democratic party remains true to its principles these trusts will be arrayed against us, we can form some idea of the forces against which we have to contend. Were it not that public sentiment is in our favor, we would never be able to overcome them, but the trusts themselves, by their iniquitous methods and infamous practices, have brought about a condition of affairs which the American people will not tolerate much longer. In these days of commercial injustice and industrial tyranny rich men are afraid of poor men, poor men are afraid of starvation, armed hirelings take the place of peace officers, and injunctions against free speech and the use of public highways are enforced with bayonets. History teaches us that the oppression of the many by the few has been common in all ages, but history also teaches us that sooner or later the oppressors meet their just reward, and if I read aright the signs of the times, the trusts will meet theirs when they encounter, in open battle, the Democratic party.

NO REASON TO FEAR.

Our political opponents profess to see in the recent elections a vindication of the position taken by them in 1896, and a presage of Republican victory in 1900. The Jacksonians interpret them differently. It is true, we sustained some losses, and these we deplore; but our sorrow has caused no feelings of dejection. In the eloquent language of the Apostle Paul, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destoyed." Experience teaches us that the political pendulum can swing one way as easily as the other, and now that the Republicans have complete control of the executive and legislative branches of the Government, they can be depended upon to enact legislation in the interests of the banks and trusts, which will alienate from them much of the support which they have hitherto received.

If no mistakes are made, we have no reason to fear the future. With a party united in the cause of good government, with a platform framed in the interests of the people, with a leader who enjoys the confidence of his followers, we believe that the opening of the twentieth century will see the Democrats again returned to power. But whether we achieve victory or sustain defeat, the Jacksonians will remain loyal to the principles of true Democracy.

NEBRASKA'S DEMOCRACY.

Judge John S. Robinson, of Madison, responded as follows:

In responding to the toast "Nebraska's Democracy," let me say at the outset that no claim will be made by me that the principles of Democracy are different in Nebraska from any other State in the Union. There is but one kind of Democrats and but one Democracy in this nation, and no matter in what part of the land they may dwell, they are those who believe in the Democratic faith as taught by the great founders of the Democratic party. Democracy believes in a form of government which makes every man equal before the law; a government which will give to every man equal voice and equal powers in the selection of the nation's rulers and lawgivers; a government which will protect the weak against oppression from the powerful and the strong; a government which will so shape the laws of a country that every man who toils shall have a fair share of the wealth which his industry has created.

In view of the charge that is made, not without foundation, that of late years many of the great corporations existing under the laws of this country have undertaken to dictate how their employees shall vote, and that their efforts in this direction have caused many of the wage-workers of this nation to manifest less of that freedom in the exercise of the right to use their own judgment as to how their ballot should be cast, it is proper for me to say that no such influence surrounds the voters of this State.

TILLERS OF THE SOIL.

The Democracy of Nebraska is largely composed of men who plan their own labor and sell the products of their industry in the markets of the world in free and open competition with all mankind. Its voters are to be found in the towns and cities of this State; in the farmhouses which dot her broad prairies and nestle among her fertile fields, where can be found the fulfillment of the promised seedtime and harvest, and bounteous fields of grain ripen in the sunlight of God. They are not dependent upon the order or command of any trust or syndicate for the right to toil. The power as yet is vested in no man or set of men to dictate to its voters how their ballots shall be cast, or to cause them to hesitate from any fear of want or hunger when they approach the sacred precincts of the election booth.

It is to be expected that, situated as they are, the free voters of an agricultural State, that the Democracy of Nebraska would be true to itself and bold and outspoken in advocating its beliefs; that they should be free to oppose all things which are wrong in this Government, and uphold and advocate every measure which Democracy believes to be right. We ask nothing from this Government but equality and justice to all; we seek protection for no favored industry within our borders. The Democracy of Nebraska is opposed to the existence of any form of trusts, which in defiance of a nation's laws exact from the people of this nation vast sums of money by controlling the necessaries of life, and in this way build up immense fortunes in the hands of a few while they take from the weary hand of labor the morsel which is its own.

HUMAN LIBERTY.

The Democracy of Nebraska stands firm for the great principle of human liberty as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, "That governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." This principle Democracy had accepted as true for more than a century of time, and no greed for commerce, no thirst for power, no clamor for spoils, no desire for conquest, has ever caused the Democracy of Nebraska for one moment to doubt its truth. Across the waters of the ocean there came to the listening ears of humanity the cry of the oppressed. The eagle of liberty went forth and paused in his flight above a land whose people were struggling to be free.

Valor called her sons from mountain, plain, and city, from palace and from cottage, and placing above them the flag of human liberty bade them go forth and stay the hand of tyranny. Amidst the hell of battle and the fierce carnage of war that mission was performed. The sound of conflict has ceased; the cannon has grown cold; and now there has arisen in this Republic a class of people who, under the protecting shadow of the eagle's wing, would send the vulture of greed and in the shining path of humanity's victory would themselves march the monsters of oppression and tyranny, who would proclaim to the world that this is a nation of hypocrites and liars, that the flag which went forth from its borders with the promise of carrying liberty to other lands is to become an emblem of oppression and tyranny.

OPPOSES IMPERIALISM.

To all this the Democracy of Nebraska stands opposed. The liberator must not become the oppressor. We know the cry of the eagle from the shriek of the vulture, and the roar of the lion from the jackal's whine. We love our flag too well to ever wish to see it float above a people or a land where those who rest beneath its shelter would not rise in its defense.

When in recent years leaders proved false, and men high in the councils of the Democracy of this nation betrayed the trust reposed in them, and sought to lead the party of Jefferson and Jackson into the camp of organized greed, the Democracy of Nebraska was among the first to raise the banner of true Democracy and reach forth its hand to remove from power the leaders who were false, and in that contest she gave the bravest and the best of all her sons to lead the fight.

Arrayed against Democracy in that struggle was every man who would coerce and threaten the vote of labor, every corporation whose greed for gain demands of the Government that the many be taxed for the benefit of a few, every trust which seeks to fatten by controlling the necessaries of life, every money changer who demands that this Government should surrender the great power of a nation's credit to banking corporations. Out of that struggle Democracy came defeated, but bearing in the grasp of her great leader the banner of a pure Democracy. At the end of that contest Democracy knew its friends and knew its foes. The alignment was made, and now with ranks unbroken she is waiting to again renew the battle. She has no compromises to offer. We want nor seek no barren victory. We stand for a victory which will mean the carrying out a form of government in this Republic tending to the advancement of human liberty and the happiness and prosperity of the entire people.

PROPHECIES FOR 1900.

Attorney T. J. Doyle, of Lincoln, in responding to the toast "1900," spoke as follows:

It is due to Democracy that I should give the assurance that the prophecies which I make and horoscope which I cast shall not unalterably commit the party to the policy which I portray. The two years of Republican nightmare which is to ensue between now and 1900 must be placed behind you. The things which have been declared settled will bear evidence of having been settled with an emetic which is continually effervescing.

The monetary policy of Secretary Gage and the soi-disant sound-money sclons of Indianapolis will have crystallized into law. The drain upon the Federal exchequer caused by outstanding Treasury notes, the great menace to the maintenance of the gold standard, will have ceased, and there will be substituted in its stead a drain upon all industry, and, instead of issuing bonds to be redeemed by future generations, the toiling masses will pay the expense of maintaining the gold basis in the reduction of prices, which will induce gold to return to the country.

Republicanism, emboldened by the respect paid by a loyal people to the high office of the Chief Executive of the nation, will have become unqualifiedly committed to that fad of the dreamer, an English alliance and territorial control of the Philippines. The slogan of the loyal champion of the trust will be, "Unlimited march of the star of empire, a formidable standing army, government out of the banking business, a flexible system of currency controlled by a monetary commission." To ape and point with pride to the achievements of the British Empire. What a spectacle! What fealty to the grand spirit of the Republic of republics! Ye sons and descendants of the fathers of the Revolution, will you march under the banner of modern tories or will you hearken to the voice of warning coming down through the centuries, the accumulated wisdom of ages, warning you against a policy which wrecked and caused the downfall of the ancient republics?

STANDS BY FIRST PRINCIPLES.

True to her mission since the formation of the Republic, the party of Jefferson and of Jackson, in the battle royal of 1900, shall place Americanism and the true principles of representative government, as set forth in the Declaration of Independence, in happy contrast with the English policy of the Republican party; shall proclaim anew the wholesome truths and enduring principles set forth in the Chicago platform of 1896; that the principles of our Declaration of Independence are, as was triumphantly asserted by the immortal Lincoln, universal in their application; that this inspired declaration of the freedom and liberty of man will admit of the inhabitants of no land, whose souls yearn for freedom and government emanating from the consent of the governed, being held as the vassals of the great Republic whose proudest boast has ever been that it is the land of the brave and the home of the free.

ENGLAND'S POLICY.

The policy of Great Britain in her modern alliances will be portrayed by Democracy as a warning to all who love their country and forget their duty. It will be recalled that in the Crimean war Great Britain formed an alliance with France and Sardinia and Turkey, to protect the Sultan of Turkey in the same policy as his successor has since carried on in Armenia, with the sheltering connivance of Great Britain, the policy of settling the internal troubles by wholesale massacre, rape, and robbery. The Russian Emperor sent his armies to the Turkish frontier to stop the butchery, and initiated the principle upon which we ourselves carried on our triumphant war with Spain, taking up the sword for the cause of humanity. Is the free and moral United States to be bound by treaty to join hands with Great Britain for the protection of the murderer and the ravisher—the libel on human nature—the being whom Mr. Gladstone justly described as the unspeakable Turk? Shame, eternal shame, upon the thought!

Attention will be directed to the fact that Lord John Russell, speaking on behalf of the English ministry, encouraged Denmark to fight her big neighbor, Prussia, by declaring that if the troops of that power crossed the Elbe to seize the Duchy of Schleswig-Holstein, they would find British bayonets opposed to them. This was the signal for the ruin of the Danes. They resisted the Prussian claims, were mowed down in thousands by the newly invented needle gun, and lost their territory in the bargain. British bayonets were conspicuous for their absence.

The sons of liberty will be reminded of the alliance, under which the Confederate States had a fleet of commerce destroyers built in British ports. While we remember the Maine, we should not forget the Alabama.

The infamous compact with Louis Napoleon for a joint intervention in Mexico for the purpose of placing an Austrian prince upon the throne of Montezuma, with the title of emperor, will not be forgotten. It will be retold how the English withdrew from the alliance when the United States showed disapproval in her characteristic fashion. That France was left in the lurch and withdrew her troops on the breaking out of the war with Germany. The miserable puppet emperor paid the penalty of his ambition with his life, and his beautiful and blameless widow became the inmate of an insane asylum.

JUDAS CHAMBERLAIN.

The man who proposes this alliance on behalf of Great Britain is the same party whose perfidy to his former chief, Mr. Gladstone, broke up the Liberal party. He is universally despised as a dastardly renegade. His political treachery is of so black a dye as to have earned for him among his former colleagues in the House of Commons the sobriquet of Judas Chamberlain. It will be told with telling effect that the whole purpose of this proposed alliance is foreshadowed in the formation of the South African Chartered Company, with its object to establish, by fair means or foul, British dominion over the whole of South Africa. This involves the destruction of two existing republics, the Orange Free State and the Boer Republic.

In the thousand logical unanswerable arguments which shall be advanced against this un-American idea of alliance, the millionaire tuft hunters, who are constantly on the lookout for princely matrimonial alliances for their families, will remain steadfast to this tenet of the Republican party. The introduction of titles would be the first fruit of an alliance with England. "The Earl of Bowery" or the "Marquis of Tenderloin" would sound so much better than Colonel Jones or Judge Smith.

It will be told that this proposed alliance is direct effrontery to 20,000,000 American citizens, through whose veins courses the blood of Irish ancestors. The Irishman has dearly learned the lesson of what an alliance with England means. It has meant for Ireland absorption and robbery and depopulation. Therefore, he reasons, and rightly, for America would mean English supremacy, destruction of the Republic, and national dishonor. He has not renounced his allegiance to England and sworn to uphold this Republic for such a consummation as this. He will draw the sword and pour out his blood for the Stars and Stripes, but for the Union Jack, never.

No conflict fought with such momentous consequences to future generations, since the American revolution, has been submitted to the American people as the issue of 1900.

TRIBUTE TO W. J. BRYAN.

It will involve the question of the dignity of American citizenship. No higher encomium, no greater honor can be done the individual than to say of him: "He is a true American citizen." When this policy culminates of degrading the Senate, dignified by the splendid genius of a Webster, Clay, and Calhoun to the semisavagery characterized in the predilection to wear bells upon the fingers and rings upon the toes, it will mean many centuries of retrogression. In this great conflict Democracy will be synonymous with patriot. The great underlying principles which make this the only true Republic that ever existed will be set forth in all their strength and cogency. It will be a battle for the liberty of man; a contest involving the purification of the flag of country. The great central figure in this triumphant march of the people will be America's foremost citizen and statesman whose matchless oratory, suberb logic, and unfaltering devotion to the principles of patriotism shall cause the people to rally to the standard bearer of Democracy, W. J. Bryan.

When this great battle is over and the glad tidings are flashed to the liberty-loving world that the principles of Democracy have triumphed, that the great commoner, who was enthroned in the hearts of the people, has been chosen Chief Executive of the nation, it will come as a new birth of freedom to the Republic.

It will be received as one of the colossal triumphs which the womb of the future now holds in store for the blessing of the twentieth century.

It will come as a new hope and promise to the liberty-loving world.

It will conclusively establish the stability and perpetuity of a representative form of government.

In the benign administration which follows we will hail with delight a return to the simplicity which characterized the Administration of Jefferson. The true spirit of the great Republic will assert itself until the noble spirit of the fathers will seem to live again in directing the happy, lofty, triumphant course of the Administration, giving to mankind a lesson of wisdom, prudence, and patriotism which will stand as the crowning glory of the new century.

POLICY REGARDING THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois made a request for unanimous consent that the vote be taken to-morrow on the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. MCENERY].

Mr. MASON. That was objected to, as every other request I have made for thirty days has been objected to, by some one. I suggest that there is not a quorum present, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois suggests the absence of a quorum. Under the rules the Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Clay,	Hansbrough,	McEnery,
Bacon,	Cockrell,	Harris,	McLaurin,
Bate,	Cullom,	Hawley,	Mallory,
Burrows,	Deboe,	Heitfeld,	Mantle,
Butler,	Elkins,	Jones, Ark.	Martin,
Caffery,	Fairbanks,	Jones, Nev.	Mitchell,
Chandler,	Foraker,	Kenney,	Money,
Chilton,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Morgan,
Clark,	Gear,	McBride,	Pasco,
Perkins,	Quay,	Smith,	Tillman,
Pettus,	Rawlins,	Stewart,	Turley,
Platt, Conn.	Ross,	Sullivan,	Warren,
Platt, N. Y.	Sewell,	Teller,	Wellington,
Pritchard,	Shoup,	Thurston,	Wolcott.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 15, after line 8, it is proposed to insert:

For additional amount for buildings for additional schools at points on the Chippewa Reservations in Minnesota, to be selected by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, $20,000, to be immediately available and to be reimbursable.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 38, line 9, in the appropriations "For support and civilization of Shoshone Indians in Wyoming," I move to strike out the word "twenty," before the word "thousand," and insert "twenty-five;" so as to make the appropriation $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. After line 9, on page 38, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After line 9, on page 38, it is proposed to insert:

For support and civilization of the Arapahoes in Wyoming, $5,000.
For the construction of a telephone line to connect the Arapahoe subagency with the Shoshone and Arapahoe main agency in Wyoming, $750.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 42, after line 15, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 42, after line 15, it is proposed to insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to pay to such Alsea and other Indians on the Siletz Reservation in Oregon, parties to an agreement made October 31, 1892, ratified by the act of Congress approved August 15, 1894 (28 Statutes, page 323), as shall be found to be competent and capable of managing and taking care of their own affairs their pro rata share of the permanent fund of $100,000 appropriated by said act of August 15, 1894, and now to their credit in the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Will the Senator from Iowa explain by whom it is to be ascertained that these people are capable of taking care of themselves?

Mr. ALLISON. By the Secretary of the Interior. I will say to the Senator that this amendment is offered in accordance with one of the articles of the agreement, and that the Secretary of the Interior has already, through an inspector, made an investigation into this matter.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Ought not the words "by the Secretary of the Interior," be inserted in the amendment after the word "found"?

Mr. ALLISON. I have no objection to that. Let it read "to be found by the Secretary of the Interior." I thought that was the phraseology employed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be modified, as suggested, by inserting the words "by the Secretary of the Interior" after the word "found." The question is on the amendment as modified.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to know what tribe of Indians this refers to?

Mr. ALLISON. This refers to the Alsea and other Indians on the Siletz Indian Reservation, in Oregon.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I ask unanimous consent for the adoption of an amendment which I send to the desk, which has passed the Senate as a separate bill. It ratifies an agreement, and I think it has the unanimous support of the Committee on Indian Affairs and the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations. I offer it, and ask unanimous consent to have it adopted. It passed the Senate heretofore by a unanimous vote.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to say respecting the amendment that it is in the nature of an agreement. It is legislation which the Committee on Indian Affairs unanimously recommends, and I believe the Secretary of the Interior also desires its ratification. It can be put on this bill by unanimous consent, and I hope no objection will be made to it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. To what does it relate?

Mr. PETTIGREW. To an agreement between the Lower Brules and the Rosebud Indians.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Is it recommended by the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes; it is recommended by the Department.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert:

Agreement with the Lower Brulé band of Sioux Indians in South Dakota and the Indians of the Sioux tribe on the Rosebud Indian Reservation in said State.

Whereas James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, did, on the 1st day of March, 1898, make and conclude an agreement with the male adult Indians of the Lower Brulé band of the Sioux tribe, occupying or belonging on the Lower Brulé Reservation, in South Dakota, which said agreement is as follows:

AGREEMENT.

This agreement made and entered into on the 1st day of March, 1898, by and between James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, on the part of the United States, and the Lower Brulé band of the Sioux tribe of Indians occupying or belonging on the Lower Brulé Reservation, in South Dakota, witnesseth:

ARTICLE 1. The said Indians belonging on the Lower Brule Reservation hereby consent and agree that those of their tribe now south of the White River on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, S. Dak., may remain thereon; that they may take with them and have converted into the permanent fund of the Indians belonging upon the Rosebud Reservation their proportional or pro rata share of the funds now in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians belonging upon the Lower Brule Reservation; and that the Lower Brule Indians who have so removed may become and are hereafter to be considered Indians of the Rosebud Reservation.

ART. 2. In consideration of the lands upon the Lower Brule Reservation abandoned by the Indians who have removed to the Rosebud Reservation, and in order that the United States may reimburse itself for the lands purchased for the Indians last mentioned upon the Rosebud Reservation, the said Indians of the Lower Brule Reservation do hereby cede and relinquish to the United States a tract of territory constituting a portion of the Lower Brule Reservation, and estimated to contain about 120,000 acres, described as follows:

Townships 107, 108, and 109 N., range 79 W. of the fifth principal meridian; also sections 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, and west half of sections 2, 11, 14, 23, 26, and 35, in township 109 N., range 78 W. of fifth principal meridian; also sections 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, in township 108 N., range 78 W. of fifth principal meridian; also sections 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, in township 107 N., range 78 W. of fifth principal meridian; also north ½ of sections 3, 4, 5, and 6 of township 106 N., range 78 W. of fifth principal meridian; and north ½ of sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 of township 106 N., range 79 W. of fifth principal meridian. The same being the western portion of the Lower Brule Indian Reservation from its northern boundary to its southern boundary, as herein described.

ART. 3. It is hereby further agreed that a reallotment shall be made by the United States to the Indians remaining upon the Lower Brule Reservation within the diminished portion thereof: Provided, That all children born prior to the time of making such reallotment shall receive allotments of land in manner and quantity as provided in section 8 of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889: And provided further, That instead of giving an allotment of 320 acres of agricultural or double that quantity of grazing land to the head of a family, as provided in said section 8, one-half of that quantity shall be allotted to the husband and one-half to the wife, where both are living and otherwise entitled to the benefits accruing to Indians belonging upon said reservation.

ART. 4. The United States hereby agrees to maintain and continue the Lower Brule Agency and Agency Boarding School as at present for those Indians who remain of the Lower Brule Reservation.

ART. 5. This agreement shall not take effect and be in force until ratified by act of Congress of the United States.

Dated and signed at the Lower Brule Agency, S. Dak., on the 1st day of March, 1898.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN, [SEAL.]
United States Indian Inspector.

1. BIG MANE (his x mark) [SEAL.]
2. BLACK ELK (his x mark) [SEAL.]
3. CHAS DE SHEUQUETTE (his x mark) [SEAL.]

and two hundred and forty (240) others.

I hereby certify that at the request of Indian Inspector McLaughlin I read the foregoing agreement in open council to the Indians of the Lower Brule Agency, parties thereto, and that it was explained to them through the interpreters, paragraph by paragraph.

B. C. ASH,
United States Indian Agent.

LOWER BRULE AGENCY, S. DAK., March 1, 1898.

We hereby certify that the foregoing articles of agreement were fully explained in open council to the Indians of Lower Brule Agency, parties hereto, and were thoroughly understood by them before signing the same, and that the agreement was duly executed and signed by said Indians.

ALEX. RENCOUNTRE,
Official Interpreter.
GEORGE ESTES,
Special Interpreter.

LOWER BRULE AGENCY, S. DAK., March 1, 1898.

Witnesses to the foregoing agreement, signatures of inspectors and the 243 Indians whose names appear as parties thereto.

B. C. ASH,
United States Indian Agent.

Agency Clerk.
J. R. COLLARD,
Agency Physician.

LOWER BRULE AGENCY, S. DAK., March 1, 1898.

I certify that the total number of male Indians over 18 years of age belonging on this reservation is 268, of whom 243 have signed the foregoing agreement.

B. C. ASH,
United States Indian Agent.

LOWER BRULE AGENCY, S. DAK., March 1, 1898.

I certify that the official records of the Lower Brule Agency show 268 male adult Indians over 18 years of age, residing on or belonging to the Lower Brulé Reservation, 243 of whom have duly signed the foregoing agreement.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN,
United States Indian Inspector.

LOWER BRULE AGENCY, S. DAK., March 1, 1898.

And whereas James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, did on the 10th day of March, 1898, make and conclude an agreement with the male adult Indians of the Sioux tribe on or belonging on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, in the State of South Dakota, which said agreement is as follows:

AGREEMENT.

This agreement, made and entered into on the 10th day of March, 1898, by and between James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, on the part of the United States, and the Sioux tribe of indians beloning on the Rosebud Indian Reservation, in South Dakota, witnesseth:

ARTICLE 1. The Indians of the Rosebud Indian Reservation hereby give their permission and consent for the Indians of the Lower Brulé Reservation, in South Dakota, who have left the same and settled upon the Rosebud Reservation to remain thereon and take allotments of lands in severalty, as provided in section 8 of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889, modified as hereinafter provided.

ART. 2. In consideration for the permission and consent aforesaid it is hereby agreed that the United States shall pay the Indians of the Rosebud Reservation, as now constituted, excluding the said Indians who have removed to the Rosebud Reservation from the Lower Brule Reservation, pro rata, in cash, at the rate of $1.25 per acre for the lands allotted to the Indians of the Lower Brule Reservation, as provided in article 1 of this agreement; and it is understood and agreed that the Indians of the Rosebud Reservation shall not be dependent upon the funds of the Lower Brule Indians for such payment, but the same shall be made to them directly by the Government of the United States.

ART 3. It is further provided and agreed that the Lower Brule Indians who have permanently located upon the Rosebud Reservation shall have their pro rata or proportional share of the tribal funds now in the Treasury of the United States belonging to the Indians of the Lower Brule Reservation transferred to and consolidated with the funds of the Indians belonging on the Rosebud Reservation, and that hereafter they shall be regarded in all essential respects as Indians of the Rosebud Reservation, and their annuities and other benefits from the Government, whether derived from treaty provisions or otherwise, shall be distributed to them at the Rosebud Agency, or a sub-agency connected therewith: Provided, That the Lower Brulé Indians who have so located upon the Rosebud Reservation shall have no further interest in the Lower Brule Reservation, or the lands comprising the same, after their interest in the tribal funds has been transferred to the Rosebud funds as above stipulated.

ART. 4. It is hereby agreed on the part of the United States that allotments in severalty shall be made to all children born prior to the date of the ratification of this agreement then living, in manner and quantity as provided in section 8 of said act of March 2, 1889: Provided, That in future allotments upon the Rosebud Reservation, instead of allotting 320 acres of agricultural or double that quantity of grazing land to the head of a family, as provided in said section 8, one-half of said quantity shall be allotted to the husband and one-half to the wife, where both are living and otherwise entitled to the benefits accruing to the Indians belonging upon said reservation: Provided further, That the allotments heretofore made on the Rosebud Reservation shall be revised in conformity with the preceding proviso: And provided further, That where any Indians to whom allotments in severalty have been made in the field have since died such allotments shall be duly completed and approved, and the land shall descend to the heirs of such decedents in accordance with the provisions of section 11 of said act last above mentioned.

ART. 5. This agreement shall not take effect and be in force until ratified by act of the Congress of the United States.

Dated and signed at the Rosebud Agency, S. Dak., on the 10th day of March, 1898.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN, [SEAL.]
United States Indian Inspector.

1. CHARLES C. TACKETT, [SEAL.]
2. I. P. BETTELYOUN, [SEAL.]
3. CLEMENT WHIRLWIND SOLDIER, [SEAL.]

(and 1,020 others).

I hereby certify that at the request of Indian Inspector McLaughlin I read the foregoing agreement in open council to the Indians of the Rosebud Agency, S. Dak., parties thereto, and that it was explained to them through the interpreters paragraph by paragraph.

CHAS. E. McCHESNEY,
United States Indian Agent.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK., March 10, 1898.

We hereby certify that the foregoing agreement was fully explained by us in open council to the Indians of the Rosebud Agency, S. Dak.; that it was fully understood by them before signing, and that we witnessed the signatures of the Indians thereto; and we further certify that the foregoing names, though similar in some cases, represent different individuals in every instance.

LOUIS ROULIDEAU,
Official Interpreter.
THOMAS FLOOD,
Special Interpreter.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK., March 10, 1898.

We certify that we witnessed the signatures of Indian Inspector McLaughlin and Indians to the foregoing agreement, parties thereto.

FRANK MULLEN,
Agency Clerk.
H. B. COX,
Assistant Clerk.
J. FRANKLIN HOUSE,
Day School Inspector.
H. J. CATON,
Farmer, Cut Meat Creek District.
JOHN SULLIVAN,
Farmer, Black Pipe Creek District.
FRANK SYPAL,
Farmer, Butte Creek District.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK., March 10, 1898.

I certify that the total number of male Indians over 18 years of age belonging on this reservation is 1,160, of whom 1,023 have signed the foregoing agreement.

CHAS. E. McCHESNEY,
United States Indian Agent.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK., March 10, 1898.

I certify that the official records of Rosebud Agency, S. Dak., show 1,160 adult male Indians over 18 years of age belonging on the Rosebud Reservation, 1,023 of whom have signed the foregoing agreement, being 153 more than the three-fourths majority of the adult male Indians of Rosebud Agency.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN,
United States Indian Inspector.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK., March 10, 1898.

Therefore, it is hereby provided that the agreement made and entered into on the 1st day of March, 1898, by and between James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, on the part of the United States, and the Lower Brulé band of the Sioux tribe of Indians in South Dakota be, and the same hereby is, accepted, ratified, and confirmed.

That the agreement made and entered into on the 10th day of March, 1898, by and between James McLaughlin, United States Indian inspector, on the part of the United States, and the Sioux tribe of Indians belonging to the Rosebud Indian Reservation in South Dakota be, and the same is hereby, ratified and confirmed.

That for the purpose of making the payment to the Indians of the Rosebud Reservation stipulated for in article 2 of the foregoing agreement with the Sioux tribe of Indians belonging to the Rosebud Indian Reservation the sum of $148,600 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That the said payment is to be in full for all lands required by the said Lower Brulé Indians for allotments in accordance with the provisions of article 1 of the aforesaid agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RAWLINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. Between lines 3 and 4, on page 46, it is proposed to insert:

That the waters of the streams in the Uintah Indian Reservation, in Utah, are hereby declared open to appropriation for useful purposes according to the laws of the United States and the local laws and customs of the State of Utah, either on or off said reservation, subject at all times to the paramount right of the Indians on said reservation to so much of said waters as may have been appropriated, or may hereafter be appropriated, used, and needed by them for agricultural and culinary purposes; and the right is hereby granted for the construction and maintenance of all necessary dams, ditches, and canals on or through said reservation for the purpose of diverting and appropriating said waters as aforesaid: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to secure to the Indians the quantity of water needed by them for domestic and agricultural purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not clear but that the amendment should be modified in some respects, but I am willing that it shall go into the bill as proposed by the Senator from Utah, and if a modification is necessary it may be made later.

Mr. RAWLINS. I have already modified it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. After line 18, on page 23, it is proposed to insert:

That all chattel mortgages executed in the Quapaw Agency, in the northern district of the Indian Territory, shall be recorded in the town of Miami by the clerk of the said northern district of the Indian Territory or his duly appointed deputy in a book or books kept for the purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I propose another amendment, which has been reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add, after line 16, on page 14, the following:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to cause an investigation by an Indian inspector of the alleged cutting of green timber under contracts for cutting "dead and down" on the Chippewa ceded and diminished reservations in the State of Minnesota, and also whether the present plan of estimating timber on said lands is the best that can be devised for protection of the interests of said Indians; and also in his discretion to suspend the further cutting of timber on said reservations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DAVIS. I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill.

The SECRETARY. On page 14, it is proposed to strike out all after and including line 17, and all on page 15 from lines 1 to 8, both inclusive, and insert:

For the erection of suitable buildings for schools upon the Indian reservations in Minnesota, as follows:

At Cass Lake, $3,000.

At the Narrows, on the north shore of Red Lake, $5,000.

At White Oak Point, $10,000.

At Twin Lakes, on the White Earth Reservation, $3,000.

For enlarging the present school at Wild Rice River, on White Earth Reservation, $3,000.

For building schools similar to those above appropriated for at such points in Minnesota as may be selected by the Secretary of the Interior, the additional sum of $6,000.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I have been convinced for a long time that the methods of education in the Indian reservations referred to in the bill are imperfect and insufficient. They build large schoolhouses for a widely scattered people, and not one-tenth of the instrumentalities of education to which those children are entitled ever reaches them. I have accordingly offered this amendment. It has not been reported from any committee, and I suppose a point of order will be made against it. I desire, as a part of my remarks, to have inserted in the RECORD a letter upon the subject from a gentleman who has passed many years in that country and whose judgment is entitled to most implicit reliance. I ask unanimous consent that the letter which I send to the desk may be inserted as a part of my remarks.

The letter referred to is as follows:

916 WESTMINSTER STREET NW., WASHINGTON, D. C.,
January 10, 1899.

HONORABLE SIR: I respectfully ask your influence toward procuring additional school accommodations for the Indian children in Minnesota.

It appears by the latest Government report to which I have access, namely, that for 1897, that there were then belonging to the White Earth Agency children of school age—females, 6 to 14 years; males, 6 to 16 years—1,936 children. But the school age is really for both sexes from 6 to 18 years, and persons are often kept in school till 24. Reckoning, then, from 6 to 18 years, there are about 2,580 children on White Earth Agency.

Out of the 2,580 the agent reports 466 children as being in eight schools on the agency during that year, or only 1 in 5$\frac{1}{10}$ of the school population.

Those 466 are about all the present schools can accommodate; so more than 4 out of every 5 of those unfortunate children have to stay out of school, starve, freeze, and suffer every misery and grow up vagabonds, because no schools are provided for them on their reservations.

It is true there are schools at a distance, as Carlisle, and others nearer home, but their parents will not allow them to go to those distant schools, because they are afraid they will be sick or something happen to them while out of their sight. Those who go to those distant schools are generally French half-breeds, sometimes almost white. They get all the benefits, but the full-blooded Indian children whom we wish most to educate are at home, out of school, growing up in ignorance and vice, there being no schools for them.

Yet they have, as you know, ample means in their pine to provide schools and schoolhouses for their children; it need not cost the white people a cent. According to my calculation it would not take more than one dollar out of fifty of what they own to build the necessary schoolhouses. The Government has already advanced $2,000,000, on the security of their pine, to pay the salaries of the Chippewa commissioners, etc., and could easily advance them the small sum of $30,500 spoken of below for schools. And the Chippewas are most anxious to have the small amount of their money needed for schools used in that way; nothing would please them so much. While they are unwilling to send their children away to a distance to school, they are very anxious to have them educated among them, where they live, and there is no disposition of the money that would be so good for the white people of Minnesota as this.

If those Indian children are not educated now, they will be forced to grow up vagabonds, nuisances, and almost criminals. We know that such people are very expensive to take care of. Far better to prevent them from becoming such by giving them a proper start in life now. It will be a thousand times cheaper in the end. If kept in school from 6 to 16 or 18 they will speak English as well as we—they will be very much like other children. As one proper solution of the Indian problem every one of the 2,580 Indian and mixed-blood children belonging to the White Earth Agency should, next summer, be put in school and kept there, and to that end schoolhouses should, next summer, be built for all of them.

For this purpose we do not need an expensive plant, where trades, etc., are taught. Such things are desirable, but not necessary. A plain frame boarding school building will do very well. If we wait to get those expensive plants, such as are now designed for White Earth, Red Lake, and Leech Lake, it will take too long, and while the grass will be growing the horse will starve. Already twenty-five years have elapsed, almost a generation, and notwithstanding all the effort I have been able to make by appeals, etc., the Government has not established one new school. It adopted two out of four that I started, and that is all.

I would say here that as a general thing day schools will not do, not even when a dinner is given at noon and the children clothed free. We have found by experience that they will not come, nor will their parents send them, unless they are boarded. Then many of them live too scattered. At the narrows on Red Lake they might attend a day school, with dinner and clothing, but nowhere else would they do it.

Beneath, then, I shall give a list of six new schools that ought to be built, and the cost of all of them combined would be only a little over three-fifths that of one school such as the Government is now building at White Earth, yet I believe each one of them will do as much good as that expensive school, and the number of children they will provide for will be, I think, six times as great. I have built three Indian boarding schools myself, and carried on four boarding schools for four years in these very localities, with 200 pupils, so I think I ought to know something about it.

First. At Cass Lake are about 40 children; no school there and not one child being taught. The poor Indians there are always begging for a school, but their children are forced to grow up in ignorance. The proposed new school at Leech Lake will not meet their need; it would not hold their children with the others whom it is proposed to put in it. There are 518 children reported by the agent as belonging at Leech Lake, White Oak Point, and Cass Lake, the children of which places it is proposed, I suppose, to put there, but 150 will probably be the capacity of that school, the same as of the White Earth, even if $50,000 is used in its construction. Then they would not send their children to a distant school, away from home, as Leech Lake, as they would send them to one right among them. By all means give them the common, plain school they ask, out of their own money.

I will make the Government a present of the school building in which I carried on a boarding school there for four years, and which cost $730, if it will carry on a school there; also land for a beautiful site for a school will be furnished. Cost of frame school boarding house at Cass Lake, $3,000.

Second. At the Narrows, on the north shore of Red Lake, in one village there are 80 fine full-blood Indian children, close together. No school, no child being taught; all forced to grow up in ignorance. Many are most anxious for a school, and there is no place where a school would do more good. It is true $30,000 have been appropriated for a school at Red Lake Agency, but that new school would not begin to hold the 479 children between 6 and 18 at Red Lake. Besides, as usual, their parents would not send them away from home in great numbers across the lake, where they can not see them. What a blessing a school would be to that Indian village, even to the old people! For a frame boarding school at the Narrows, Red Lake, $5,000.

Third. About White Oak Point are reported by the agent 173 children, girls 6 to 14, boys 6 to 18. A school should be built somewhere in their midst next summer, and every child should be put in it and kept there. The new Leech Lake school will not hold their numbers with the Leech Lake and others whom it is intended to place there. Cost of boarding school for White Oak Point, $10,000.

Fourth. At Mille Lac, near Minneapolis, there are about 800 Indians living. The little children there are starving, freezing, brought up in every vice and seeing only evil—whisky drinking, gambling, and debauchery of all kinds. The same is true of White Oak Point Indians. There is no school there; not one child in school; all forced to grow up to that horrible life. A school should be built somewhere for them and every one of those children put in it. Cost of boarding school for them, $7,500.

Fifth. The new school at White Earth will not be nearly large enough to contain the children there. It is to have accommodation for 150 children.

But the agent reports there 364 children, boys 6 to 16, girls 6 to 14, or about 484 children between 6 and 18 years.

To provide for those unable to get in the new school, a boarding school to hold 60 children should be built at Twin Lakes, on the White Earth Reservation, 18 miles northeast of the agency. There are 60 children tributary to that point. There I have built a new frame schoolhouse, with all modern improvements, to hold 60 children, at a cost of over $900, the use of which I will give to the Government free if it will carry on a school there. A school would be a great blessing to that locality.

Cost of a new school boarding house at Twin Lakes for 60 children, $3,000.

Sixth. The present Wild Rice River School, on White Earth Reservation, should be enlarged to hold 60 more children, at a cost of $3,000. Great numbers are refused admittance there every fall.

The above-enumerated schools would provide the Indians everywhere with pretty good school accommodations at a cost in all of only $33,500. That is only a little over three-fifths of the cost of one school like that at White Earth, and it would build six for six very destitute localities, most of them having at present no school and not one scholar.

These schools would provide for 500 children at least, against the 150 in the much more expensive single school at White Earth. When the schools are once built the Government is perfectly willing to carry them on. With the outside nonreservation schools to which some would go, they would give every Indian child a chance in life and a good start.

If it be objected that these schools would not give room enough, ven tila tion enough, etc., the answer is that for four years I carried on such schools and found them perfectly sufficient. There never was any sickness or evil effects or overcrowding. I believe they would do almost or quite as good work as more expensive plants.

We can not wait to get those expensive plants—$50,000 schools. We want to put every child in school at once; next summer; not to allow another generation to pass, as one has already. If we have to wait for $50,000 everywhere, it will be a great many years before we will get them. It is not the building nor the plant that makes the school, but good, kind, capable, Christian teachers inside, and those are just as likely to be found in a three-thousand-dollar as in a fifty-thousand-dollar school.

I would mention also that the new Fooston Branch Railroad has just been built through that country, which is a lumber country, and building can now be done very cheaply and very easily.

For the sake, then, of the poor, suffering, innocent children of our State, who are compelled by hundreds to live a most horrible life, while their parents have ample means to provide them with a good Christian up-bringing, I beg of you to use all of your influence and efforts to have school boarding houses provided for them all next summer. Those children must always live in our State. They can never be transported elsewhere. They must be mingled with our people and our descendants. Some of those children will be living seventy years hence, either as respectable producers or as vagabonds and criminals, a disgrace and a burden, according to what we now do with them in the formative period of youth. If we let them alone they must become the latter. In money cost it will be a thousand times cheaper to do a little preventive work.

We have pressed a bitter cup of woe to those people, and have horribly abused them; but a great reparation, and the best we can now make, will be to give their little children, whom they love so much, a good start in life. That will make amends for a great deal. It will cost us no money; only a little effort. Any man of ordinary sense could go there and by midsummer have the necessary modest school building in every settlement or village of Indians. If the Government wishes me to supervise it, I will do it without salary and pay my own expenses.

Our present Commissioner of Indian Affairs is trying to do the very best he can for the Indians and for schools. But the traditions of the Indian Office seem to be in favor of $50,000 and $20,000 plants only; and I feel that in that way we shall not get around quick enough. We need those schools at once—next summer; and we need, where necessary, compulsion to put every one of those children in school and keep them there.

At present our school accommodations for only one child in five is deplorable. Dr. Hailmann, the late superintendent of Indian schools, told me that the reason he had no school accommodations was because our Congressional delegation took no interest in it; never asked for any; that if they did as the South Dakota delegation and Mr. Pickler did, we would have all the schools we wanted. Knowing your sympathetic kindness to the unfortunate, I thus lay before you the sad case and deplorable situation of many hundreds of poor children, guilty of no crime, but only the victims of unfortunate circumstances, who are cold, hungry, and unspeakably wretched to day, and who have only the gloomiest and most forbidding future to look forward to (if they survive the hardships they now have to bear), and all for want of what we have it easily in our power to give them out of their own funds—the comfort and warmth of a home in a Christian school.

If you think it would do any good to have me meet the Minnesota delegation and make a personal statement to them about the matter, I am ready to do so.

Hoping I have not trespassed on your time too long, I am,

Very respectfully, yours,

J. A. GILFILLAN.

Hon. C. K. DAVIS, United States Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. At a future time, during the next session of Congress, when objection can not be made, I shall take occasion to press very zealously the consideration of that letter. The amendment which I offered does not, nor will anything I may propose hereafter, interfere with the building of the larger schools, but it is intended to supplement them by smaller ones.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will take the liberty to suggest to the Senator from Minnesota that as the amendment for which he offers a substitute has been agreed to as in Committee of the Whole, it will be necessary to reconsider that action or else to withhold the amendment until the bill is in the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to say to the Senator from Minnesota that on my motion an amendment has already been agreed to, in addition to the amendment printed in italics, which appropriates $20,000 for four schools in the Leech Lake Reservation, to be established at places to be designated by the Secretary of the Interior. I will ask the Senator at a later period to examine the amendment, and the whole question can be considered in connection with those two amendments without striking out and inserting what he proposes.

Mr. DAVIS. I will withdraw my amendment for the purpose of considering what the Senator from Iowa suggests. I will state, however, that what has been done in the Senate with respect to the $20,000 is all well enough as far as it goes, but the Leech Lake Reservation——

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I wish to ask the Senator from Minnesota, as a matter of information, whether the amendment he proposes has been considered by the Committee on Indian Affairs, or whether there is any recommendation by the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. DAVIS. There is none whatever.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think amendments of this kind ought to have the approval of the Indian Office, and while this matter is under consideration I would suggest to the Senator from Minnesota to call the attention of the Department to it, and let us have a recommendation, if possible.

Mr. DAVIS. Living in the State and having had intimate connection with those people for so many years, I know enough about it myself to feel entire confidence in the strength of the position when the matter shall be properly before the Senate, without present reference to the Indian Office.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If the Senator from Minnesota does not wish to satisfy other Senators by the opinion of the Department, very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Minnesota is withdrawn.

Mr. MANTLE. I offer an amendment which has been reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert on page 61, as a new section, the following:

SEC. 9. That the following-described tract of land be, and the same is hereby, set aside as a reservation for the permanent use and occupancy of the Indians now occupying or belonging upon the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, which reservation shall be known as the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation, namely:

Beginning at the point in the middle of the channel of Tongue River at its intersection with the southern 40-mile limits of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, thence west on the said southern 40-mile limits to its intersection with the eastern boundary line of the Crow Indian Reservation; thence south on said boundary line to its intersection with the line dividing townships 5 and 6 S.; thence east on said dividing line of townships 5 and 6 S. to its intersection with the line dividing ranges 40 and 41 E.; thence north on said line dividing ranges 40 and 41 E. to the line dividing townships 4 and 5 S.; thence east on the line dividing townships 4 and 5 S. to its intersection with Cook Creek; thence down Cook Creek to its confluence with Tongue River; thence down the middle of the channel of Tongue River to the place of beginning.

Provided, however, That if upon the survey or resurvey of the boundary lines already established it shall be found that the main stream of Cook Creek on or near the range line between ranges 40 and 41 lies south of the line dividing townships 4 and 5 S., then in that case the line running north on the range line between ranges 40 and 41 shall extend north only to the intersection of said line with the main stream of Cook Creek, and thence down Cook Creek as hereinbefore provided: Provided further, That in the erection of the reservation boundary fence along said Cook Creek the same shall be so erected as to divide the waters as near as may be between the north and south sides thereof: Provided, further, That certain tracts, approximating 65 acres, lying west of Tongue River, in sections 26 and 34 in township 4 S. of range 43 E., owned by Joseph Scott, and the northeast quarter of section 3 in township 3 S. of range 44 E., belonging to St. Labra's Mission, and the south half of the northwest quarter of section 10 in township 2 S. of range 44 E., belonging to R. P. Colbert, shall be excepted from and not included within the reservation boundaries named.

SEC. 2. That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, namely:

For the payment of settlers within the said boundaries for lands and improvements, $150,445: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall and does, in his discretion, ratify and approve, under the provisions of section 10 of the Indian appropriation act approved July 1, 1898 (30 Statutes, pages 596 and 597), the agreements entered into thereunder by United States Indian Inspector James McLaughlin with the settlers included within said boundaries, submitted by him to the Secretary, with his report, dated November 14, 1898, and shall find, upon investigation hereafter to be made, that the improvements of the settlers referred to remain intact and in good condition: Provided further, That the settlers shall remove immediately from the reservation upon the payment of the sums, according to their respective agreements as ratified and approved by the Secretary of the Interior;

For payment of Indians residing east of Tongue River for improvements, $1,150;

For the construction of 65 miles of wire fence around a portion of said reservation, $7,150;

For the purchase of 1,000 2 year-old native Western heifers for the use of the Indians of said reservation, $25,000;

For the purchase of 40 2-year-old Hereford or Durham bulls for the use of the Indians, $3,200;

For buildings at the Tongue River Agency, on said reservation, $10,000;

For subissue station, farmer's residence, and blacksmith's shop at Tongue River, $3,055;

In all, $200,000.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to purchase the heifers and bulls herein provided for at such time as he, in his discretion, may deem best, and to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to secure a just and equitable distribution of this stock among the Indians residing or belonging upon the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation; and he shall cause such portion of the reservation to be fenced as he, in his judgment, may deem necessary; and in like manner to construct or repair buildings at the Tongue River Agency, establish and build a subissue station, a farmer's residence, and blacksmith's shop, as herein provided for.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior shall pay to the Indians residing east of Tongue River the respective sums for their improvements as ascertained by Inspector McLaughlin in agreement submitted with his said report upon condition that they shall remove to the reservation hereby established.

Mr. ALLISON. That I understand is an agreement made between the Interior Department and the Indians of Tongue River.

Mr. MANTLE. That is correct.

Mr. ALLISON. The amendment has the support of the Committee on Indian Affairs and was examined by the Committee on Appropriations. I will ask the Senator from Montana if it contains any legislation other than the ratification of the treaty?

Mr. MANTLE. That is all. It simply contains a ratification of an agreement made by the Interior Department with the Northern Cheyenne Indians.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It requires an appropriation.

Mr. MANTLE. It requires an appropriation to carry it into effect.

Mr. ALLISON. It requires an appropriation, of course. The amendment can be put on the bill only by unanimous consent. I shall not object to it, nor to another agreement which has been made with the Indians on the Fort Hall Reservation. The amendments are said to be necessary in order to complete agreements with those Indians at an early period. Therefore they must go on the pending bill if they are to pass into law at the present session. I deprecate the placing of these agreements upon appropriation bills, and unless they can go on by unanimous consent I shall object to their consideration, but I shall not myself make the point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHOUP. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 61, after the amendment just adopted, it is proposed to insert the following:

AGREEMENT WITH THE SHOSHONE AND BANNOCK INDIANS OF THE FORT HALL RESERVATION, IN IDAHO.

SEC. 10. The following agreement made and entered into between Benjamin F. Barge, James H. McNeely, and Charles G. Hoyt, duly appointed commissioners on behalf of the United States, and the headmen and a majority of the male adults of the Bannock and Shoshone tribes of Indians upon the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, in the State of Idaho, is hereby accepted, ratified, and confirmed, namely:

ARTICLE I.

That the said Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation do hereby cede, grant, and relinquish to the United States all right, title, and interest which they have to the following-described land, the same being a part of the land obtained through the treaty of Fort Bridger on the 3d day of July, 1868, and ratified by the United States Senate on the 16th day of February, 1869:

All that portion of the said reservation embraced within and lying east and south of the following-described lines: Commencing at a point in the south boundary of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, being the southwest corner of township 9 south, range 34 east of the Boise meridian, thence running due north on the range line between townships 33 and 34 east to a point 2 miles north of the township line between townships 5 and 6 south, thence due east to the range line between ranges 35 and 36 east, thence south on said range line 4 miles, thence due east to the east boundary line of the reservation; from this point the east and south boundaries of the said reservation as it now exists to the point of beginning, namely, the southwest corner of township 9 south, range 34 east, being the remainder of the description and metes and bounds of the said tract of land herein proposed to be ceded.

ARTICLE II.

That in consideration of the lands ceded, granted, and relinquished, as aforesaid, the United States stipulates and agrees to pay to and expend for the Indians of the said reservation $600,000, in the following manner, to wit:

Seventy-five thousand dollars, or as much thereof as may be necessary, shall be expended by the Secretary of the Interior in the erection of a modern school plant for the Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation at a point near the present agency, said point or site to be selected by the Secretary of the Interior, and the surplus remaining, if any, of the above $75,000 may be expended by the Secretary of the Interior for the educational needs of said Indians.

One hundred thousand dollars shall be paid in cash pro rata, share and share alike, to each man, woman, and child belonging to and actually residing on said reservation, within three months after the ratification of this treaty by the Congress of the United States. The remainder of said sum total shall be paid pro rata in like manner, as follows:

Fifty thousand dollars one year after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars two years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars three years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars four years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars five years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars six years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars seven years after the first payment.
Fifty thousand dollars eight years after the first payment.
Twenty-five thousand dollars nine years after the first payment.

The deferred payments shall bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, said interest to be placed annually to the credit of said Indians, and shall be expended for their benefit by the Secretary of the Interior at such times and in such manner as he may direct: Provided, That none of the money due to said Indians under this agreement shall be subject to the payment of any claims, judgments, or demands against said Indians for damages or depredations claimed to have been committed prior to the signing of this agreement.

ARTICLE III.

Where any Indians have taken lands and made homes on the reservation and are now occupying and cultivating the same, under the sixth section of the Fort Bridger treaty hereinbefore referred to, they shall not be removed therefrom without their consent, and they may receive allotments on the land they now occupy; but in case they prefer to remove they may select land elsewhere on that portion of said reservation not hereby ceded, granted, and relinquished and not occupied by any other Indians; and should they decide not to move their improvements, then the same shall be appraised under direction of the Secretary of the Interior and sold for their benefit, at a sum not less than such appraisal, and the cash proceeds of such sale shall be paid to the Indian or Indians whose improvements shall be so sold.

ARTICLE IV.

So long as any of the lands ceded, granted, and relinquished under this treaty remain part of the public domain, Indians belonging to the above-mentioned tribes, and living on the reduced reservation, shall have the right without any charge therefor, to cut timber for their own use, but not for sale, and to pasture their live stock on said public lands, and to hunt thereon and to fish in the streams thereof.

ARTICLE V.

That for the purpose of segregating the ceded lands from the diminished reservation, the new boundary lines described in Article I of this agreement shall be properly surveyed and permanently marked in a plain and substantial manner by prominent and durable monuments, the cost of said survey to be paid by the United States.

ARTICLE VI.

The existing provisions of all former treaties with the Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation not inconsistent with the provisions of this agreement are hereby continued in force and effect; and all provisions thereof inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

ARTICLE VII.

The existing main traveled roads leading from McCammon to Blackfoot and from McCammon to American Falls are declared public highways, and the proper use of such is hereby granted to the general public.

ARTICLE VIII.

The water from streams on that portion of the reservation now sold which is necessary for irrigating on land actually cultivated and in use shall be reserved for the Indians now using the same so long as said Indians remain where they now live.

ARTICLE IX.

This agreement shall take effect and be in force when signed by the commissioners and by a majority of the male Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation over 18 years of age and ratified by the Congress of the United States.

Signed on the part of the United States Government by the commissioners aforesaid and by the following Indians of the Bannock and Shoshone tribes, residing and having rights on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation.

BENJAMIN F. BARGE, Commissioner.
JAMES H. McNEELY, Commissioner.
CHARLES G. HOYT, Commissioner.

KENNEKE (his x mark) JOHNSON,
Interpreters.

Witness:
CHAS. M. ROBINSON.
J. H. BEAN.
ALBERT W. FISHER.

ROSS FORK, IDAHO, February 5, 1898.

FORT HALL AGENCY, IDAHO, February 5, 1898.

I hereby certify that 227 Indians constitute a majority of male adult Indians on or belonging on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, Idaho.

F. G. IRWIN, JR.,
First Lieutenant, Second Cavalry, Acting Indian Agent.

For the purpose of making the first cash payment stipulated for in article 2 of the foregoing agreement, and for the purpose of a new school plant, as provided in the same article, $175,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I desire to move an amendment on page 44, which I hope will meet with the approval of the chairman of the committee. I send it to the desk to be read.

The SECRETARY. After line 19, on page 44, it is proposed to insert:

That it shall be unlawful, after July 1, 1899, for any tribal government or officer thereof in the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, or Chickasaw Nation, in the Indian Territory, to collect or receive any permit, merchant, ferry, or other taxes imposed on noncitizens or on citizens for employing noncitizens; but all such taxes or revenues, according to the laws of said nations, together with all taxes and revenues due from citizens, shall be collected by the Secretary of the Interior, who shall employ and pay from such receipts all necessary force to enforce this law, and the remainder shall be used for the benefit of said nations or tribes, respectively.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Arkansas if this amendment has the approval of the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It has not been submitted to the committee.

My purpose in offering the amendment is to get rid of an abuse that exists in that country which ought not to be allowed to exist longer. As is well known to members of the Senate, there are a number of taxes collected by those tribes on noncitizens for the privilege of living in the Territory, and persons employing noncitizens are required to pay a tax of 50 cents a month, or some such sum. Complaints are numerous that the amounts paid into the Treasury are very much less than the amounts that ought to be collected. There are constant complaints coming up that where the taxes on merchants, which are considerable in the different tribes, ought to amount to several thousand dollars a year, an insignificant sum, amounting to only a few hundred dollars, is collected and paid in.

I believe that an efficient system of collecting those taxes ought to be organized by the Secretary of the Interior, that he ought to have full control of the entire matter, and that the money collected, after paying the expenses of collection, ought to be held by him subject to the tribe in which it is collected.

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator if this amendment has been submitted to the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It has not.

Mr. ALLISON. Does it in any way interfere with the act known as the Curtis law?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It does not.

Mr. ALLISON. Is it in support of it?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think it is strictly in line with the Curtis law.

Mr. ALLISON. I am not especially familiar with the method of dealing with these taxes. I dislike to make a point of order upon the amendment, but I very much fear it may have some injurious effect.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I will suggest that I have no objection that the committee of conference shall strike it out of the bill if it goes in, if upon investigation at the Indian Office there is any doubt about the wisdom of its adoption. I am perfectly willing that the matter shall be referred to the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and if it does not receive the cordial and hearty support of both of those gentlemen I am willing that the conference committee shall drop it out of the bill.

Mr. ALLISON. With that understanding I shall not make a point of order. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, is perhaps more familiar with the matter than I am.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, under the old tribal government among the Five Civilized Tribes they levied a tax upon every merchant who did business in that country, upon every physician and every lawyer who was not a citizen of the tribe, and also upon every laborer and upon every renter of land. This money was used, I suppose, to maintain an Indian school system and to support a tribal government, and perhaps it was necessary and proper. But we have by legislation substituted United States courts for the tribal courts, and we have also substituted the laws of Arkansas for the tribal laws of that country in a large measure. We have obviated the necessity of collecting this tax.

Under the old system the white people who lived in that country, some 350,000, had no provision made for the education of their children. Their children were not allowed to attend the Indian schools, and there was no method by which they could raise money for the purpose of supporting schools themselves.

Under the existing condition of affairs those people can now pay taxes for the purpose of educating the children of that country, and therefore the necessity for collecting this tax has disappeared.

Instead of adopting this amendment we ought to adopt an amendment prohibiting the tribe from collecting from these people a single dollar in the future. We have provided for the organization and incorporation of towns in that country, and the towns are largely inhabited by the outsiders whom the Indians have permitted to come into that country. We have provided that they can tax their property for the purpose of sustaining a city government, sustaining schools, suppressing crime, and managing their affairs. There should not be taken from these people, in my opinion, a single dollar for the benefit of this tribe in the way of taxation. Therefore the amendment ought to be defeated on its merits, and I hope to defeat it in that way. If I can not, I shall make the point of order against it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The taxes are in force in the nations now. There has been no proposition before that made by the Senator from South Dakota at this moment on the floor to repeal those taxes. There has been no suggestion from anybody anywhere that these people have not the right to levy this tax upon persons from the outside, not citizens of their country, for the privileges of exercising trade in their country. Nobody has said it was not right. The taxes are now on the books. They are enforcible in the tribal courts by this tribal government.

The simple proposition in the amendment is that we shall provide that the taxes shall be collected by the Secretary of the Interior by machinery which he shall arrange and organize, and not by the old tribal inefficient method of collecting heretofore. It does not change the taxing laws. I agree that we have no right to change their tax laws under the rights that we give those people under the Curtis law. We have made agreements with them about the division of their land, and especially providing that their tribal government shall continue in force for eight years; and these were a part of their laws. They have been their laws for years past.

We have no moral right, we have no legal right, to deprive those people of the right of levying this small tax upon people who go into that country and exercise privileges of trade. Merchants going there pay no taxes unless they pay taxes under this provision. They are scattered all through the country everywhere, and we have no right now by any means to prevent the collection of that tax.

This is not a question whether the tax shall be collected or not. It will be collected in a sort of pro forma way by the tribal authorities. These taxes remain in force. The means of collecting them will be just as effective under the laws as they exist now as after we adopt this amendment. It simply provides an efficient means of collecting the taxes, that they shall not be used for fraudulent and corrupt purposes, not to be misappropriated by dishonest collectors, but that they shall find their way into the hands of the officials of the United States and be used for the benefit of the nations and tribes.

I am astonished at the position taken by the Senator from South Dakota. I am amazed that he is unwilling to have an efficient system of collection there instead of the inefficient and utterly untrustworthy system that has existed heretofore.

Mr. PETTIGREW. The Senator from Arkansas, in his remarks previously made, stated that they were unable to collect the tax and that therefore it was not being collected.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. If the Senator understood me to say that they collected none of these taxes I want to disabuse his mind. In one of these nations, where there are said to be perhaps fifty merchants engaged in business, there are two merchants in one town whose taxes amount to $1,200 a year each on account of the amount of their business. The total tax accounted for in that nation by the tax collector was less than $2,000, although two merchants in the town in which they lived paid $2,400 into his hands, as is well known, taking no account of the collections that were made from other merchants. It is for the purpose of stopping that abuse, the failure to get the money into the treasury of the nation and not on account of its not being paid by the citizens, that I have offered the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It appears, then, that the tribes are now unable to enforce this tribal law. In their condition as separate, independent, and sovereign nations they enacted these laws by which outsiders, citizens of the United States, who had come there by their invitation, could be taxed, could have this burden put upon them; but as we have wiped out their courts absolutely in two of the tribes, and have provided that in those tribes where we have not entirely wiped the legislative function out their legislative acts are subject to revision by the Government, and in view of the fact that we have supplied them at the expense of the Government with courts, I think it is about time that we paid some attention to the 350,000 citizens of the United States who are living in that country. If this tax is to be collected, instead of turning it over to the tribal treasury, it ought to be turned over to the American citizens, to the 350,000 people who have gone into that country for the purpose of assisting them in establishing schools.

Already there are bills before the Committee on Indian Affairs to appropriate large sums of money for the purpose of educating the white children who have had no facilities whatever for securing an education heretofore. It seems to me an absurd proposition—and I am astonished that the Senator from Arkansas should present such an amendment to the bill—to lay this burden upon the Arkansas settlers who have gone into that country, and turn this money over to the Indians when the necessity for it has ceased. On the contrary, the citizens of Arkansas who have moved into the Indian Territory ought to have the careful consideration of the Senator from Arkansas, and their interests should be guarded and protected rather than sacrificed by insisting upon laying this unjust and unfair burden upon them.

It is a matter of surprise to me that the Senator from Arkansas should present this proposition at this time and undertake to secure its enactment. I would rather have expected from him the presentation of an amendment in order to regulate the abuse of which he speaks, by repealing the Indian law by which these taxes have heretofore been collected, and providing that they never should be collected hereafter.

In view of the fact that these people can now be taxed for the purpose of furnishing schools for their children, in view of the fact that we have taken the place, so far as the tribes are concerned, of the tribal government and the tribal courts, and are now supplying them a government and a court at the expense of the Government of the United States, the necessity for this tax has disappeared, and therefore I object to the unfair burden.

It is true we have made agreements with the Chickasaws and Choctaws, and also with the Seminoles, by which their tribal government continues for eight years under certain restricted conditions, and their courts have jurisdiction over some of the minor offenses; but as to all serious questions, both of life and of property, and as to the rights of persons and property, the Government of the United States supplies the courts even in those tribes where we have perpetuated in a limited way tribal government. However, as to the greatest number of these Indians, as to the Cherokees and Creeks, we have made no agreement which has been ratified by Congress, but we have enacted a law of Congress which wipes out almost absolutely their tribal government and their tribal courts and puts in their place the laws and the courts of the United States. So the necessity for claiming this money from the people who are living in that country has disappeared and ceased to exist.

Therefore, as I said before, this amendment ought to be defeated upon its merits, or else it ought to be changed so as to repeal the tribal law absolutely and prohibit the collection of this tax altogether from any of the citizens of that country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall make the point of order against the amendment, Mr. President.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will not do that. This is not a question as to whether the tax shall be collected or not. The tax is collected.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Not much of it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The only question is whether the money shall be used for the benefit of the nation, or whether it shall be misappropriated by tax collectors.

The statement made by the Senator from South Dakota as to there being no necessity for this tax is not sustained. As I understand, there is not money enough in the treasury of these nations now to maintain their schools. They need this tax for the purpose of maintaining their school system, and the tax ought to be maintained for that purpose. They will get a part of the tax whether this thing is done or not, but it will be collected by their collectors and it will not be paid in.

I hope the Senator from South Dakota will allow the amendment to go in. He himself will probably be a member of the committee of conference, and at least the conference committee can strike it out. If upon examination and consultation with the Indian Office and the Secretary of the Interior they believe it is unwise and that the policy of it is doubtful, they can strike it out of the bill. I have no objection to that being the understanding, leaving it absolutely to the discretion of the conferees, but I hope the Senator will not make the point of order.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, the proposition of the Senator is, practically, that we shall leave this matter to the clerks of the Interior Department, because they will determine it. I believe that the Committee on Indian Affairs is better able to judge of this question than the clerks in the Department. All questions of minor importance that are referred to the Indian department and the Interior Department (I speak of those because I am more familiar with those Departments, and I presume it is true as to all the others) are passed upon by $1,200 and $1,500 clerks, and then, in a formal way, without examination or investigation by the heads of the Departments or the Secretaries, they are sent up to us.

Too much credit is given, as a rule, by Congress to these recommendations. We can not shirk our duty by putting the responsibility there when we understand the system as it is operated. Of course if a very important question goes to the Department and the attention of the Secretary is particularly called to it, he will give it his care and attention, but in the multitude of his duties it is impossible to examine all these small and minor questions. We can not shirk the responsibility of our acts by saying it is recommended by the Department.

Therefore I am not willing to leave it to the Department or to the committee of conference. A measure of this sort should come in here, go to the Committee on Indian Affairs, be thoroughly and carefully investigated and looked into, and then if it goes upon an appropriation bill it should be reported back from that committee with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. President, I shall insist upon my point of order. Let this matter go over another year, and let it come up in a proper and regular way, and have the committee investigate it and have some responsibility behind it or facts and figures with regard to the case. By this I do not mean to say that the Senator from Arkansas is not responsible. Neither do I mean to say that he is not prompted by the best of motives. But I think he has lost sight of the 350,000 people who have gone into that country, most of them from Arkansas and Kansas and Texas, and therefore I feel that it is my duty to endeavor to protect their interests in this connection.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota makes a point of order against the amendment. The point of order is sustained on the ground that it is general legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I have a few amendments on the part of the committee that I desire to offer at this stage. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. After line 20, page 42, insert:

For the purpose of making certain repairs on the Government bridge across the Niobrara River, near Niobrara, Nebr., also one span of 60 feet over the back channel of the Niobrara River, and three spans of 60 feet each over the Bazile Creek, the sum of $3,000, said sum to be expended by the United States Indian agent at the Santee Agency, Nebr., for said purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer another amendment which is in the nature of legislation, and therefore I ask unanimous consent that it may be inserted in the bill. It is an amendment that is very much desired by the Indian Office and by the Secretary of the Interior. It relates to the leasing of pasture lands upon the San Carlos Reservation. It is said that this amendment is necessary in order to enable them to make leases. I ask unanimous consent that it may be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Iowa will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 36, after line 12, insert:

Provided, That the provision in section 3 of the act approved February 28, 1891 (26 U. S. Statutes at Large, page 794), namely, "That where lands are occupied by Indians who have bought and paid for the same, and which lands are not needed for farming or agricultural purposes and are not desired for individual allotments, the same may be leased, by authority of the council speaking for such Indians, for a period not to exceed five years for grazing, or ten years for mining purpose, in such quantities and upon such terms and conditions as the agent in charge of such reservation may recommend, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior," be, and the same hereby is, extended to include and to apply to the White Mountain Apache and San Carlos Indian Reservation, in the Territory of Arizona: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as recognizing title or ownership of the Indians in or to any part of said White Mountain Apache and San Carlos Indian Reservation.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask leave to modify the amendment. I see that it may be held to include mining leases.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is what it is for.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I withdraw it, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I offer an amendment to come in at the proper place. I suppose page 44, after line 19, is as good a place as any.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. After line 19, page 44, insert:

That the Delaware Indians residing in the Cherokee Nation are hereby authorized and empowered to bring suit in the Court of Claims of the United States, within sixty days after the passage of this act, against the Cherokee Nation for the purpose of determining the rights of said Delaware Indians in and to the lands and funds of said nation under their contract and agreement with the Cherokee Nation dated April 8, 1867; or the Cherokee Nation may bring a like suit against said Delaware Indians; and jurisdiction is conferred on said court to adjudicate and fully determine the same.

SEC. —. That the persons known as Chickasaw freedmen, residing in the Chickasaw Nation, are hereby authorized and empowered to bring suit in the Court of Claims of the United States, within sixty days after the passage of this act, against the Chickasaw Nation, for the purpose of determining their rights to citizenship in the Chickasaw Nation and to an interest in the lands of the Chickasaw tribe, under provisions of the treaty made in 1866 between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes of Indians and the laws of the Chickasaw Nation and of the United States pursuant to said treaty; or the Chickasaw Nation may bring a like suit against said Chickasaw freedmen; and jurisdiction is conferred on said court to adjudicate and fully determine the same.

SEC. —. That the Chickasaw Nationof Indians in the Indian Territory be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered, in the name of the governor of said nation, within ninety days after the passage of this act, to institute suit in the United States Court of Claims against the United States to recover any and all arrears of interest claimed to be due them on their trust funds. Said suit may be instituted in said court by petition in the name of the governor of said nation, which petition shall simply state the facts constituting their cause of action; and the Court of Claims of the United States is hereby invested with full jurisdiction and powers exercised by courts of equity so far as may be necessary to give full relief in said suit; and it may consider all questions involved in any of the treaties between the United States and the Chickasaw Nation of Indians and awards of the Secretary of the Interior under any of said treaties and the acts of Congress in relation thereto.

Said court shall pass upon all claims or cross claims proposed or asserted by either party, touching said claims for arrears of interest, so as to adjudicate all matter of dispute arising therein and do what equity and justice require between the parties to the suit. All reports, records, and other papers in any Executive Department of the Government, including any award made by the Secretary of the Interior touching any claim provided for in this act, and all acts of Congress in relation thereto, as well as any papers, reports, or records before Congress or the committees thereof, bearing upon said claims, may be used before the said court; and such weight may be given to them by said court as to it may seem just, to the end that perfect justice and equity may be done between the parties. Notice of such suit shall be executed by delivering a true copy of said petition to the Attorney-General of the United States, whose duty it shall be, for and in behalf of the United States, to demur or answer the petition therein within thirty days after the service of such process upon him, unless the court for good cause shall grant further time for filing the same.

SEC. —. That persons known as Mississippi Choctaws, of Choctaw Indian blood, who claim rights as Choctaw citizens in the lands of the tribe in the Choctaw Nation, are hereby authorized and empowered to bring suit in the Court of Claims of the United States, within sixty days after the passage of this act, against the Choctaw Nation, to determine their rights aforesaid under treaties made between the United States and the Choctaw tribe of Indians, and particularly under article 14 of a treaty concluded on the 27th day of September, 1830; or the Choctaw Nation may bring a like suit against said Mississippi Choctaws; and jurisdiction is conferred on said court to adjudicate and fully determine the same.

SEC. —. That white persons who have intermarried with Cherokee citizens according to Cherokee laws, and white persons who have intermarried with Choctaw or Chickasaw citizens according to their laws and provisions of treaties between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes, are hereby authorized and empowered to bring suits in the Court of Claims of the United States, within ninety days after the passage of this act, against their respective nations, for the purpose of determining, according to law and equity, all their rights and claims under such laws and treaties in and to the lands and funds of the respective tribes into which they have so intermarried; or said nations may bring like suits against such intermarried persons within their respective nations; and jurisdiction is conferred on said court to adjudicate and fully determine all such rights: Provided, however, That nothing herein shall in any manner impair or disturb any rights acquired by such persons by virtue of the findings and judgment of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians or of the United States courts in the Indian Territory upon appeal in proceedings had under the jurisdiction and authority conferred by act of Congress approved June 10, 1896.

SEC. —. That the Delaware Indians residing in the Cherokee Nation are hereby authorized and empowered to bring a suit in law or in equity against the United States Government in the Court of Claims to recover and collect from the United States Government any money that in law or equity may be found due to the said tribes under treaty stipulations and for reimbursement of their tribal fund for money wrongfully diverted therefrom. That the Peoria tribe of Indians are hereby authorized and empowered to bring a suit in the Court of Claims of the United States, within six months after the passage of this act, against the United States Government for the purpose of determining what, if any, moneys or lands are due said Peoria tribe from the United States, particularly under treaties of 1854 (10 Statutes, —) and 1867 (15 Statutes, 513), and jurisdiction is hereby conferred on said court to hear and determine the same.

That the Seminole Nation of Indians in the Indian Territory be, and is hereby, authorized and empowered to institute in the United States Court of Claims against the United States a suit or suits to recover any and all moneys and arrears of interest claimed to be due said nation under or in pursuance of law or treaty stipulations. Also the persons known as the loyal Seminole Indians in the Indian Territory be, and they are hereby, authorized and empowered, within ninety days after the passage of this act, to institute suit in the said Court of Claims against the United States to recover any and all moneys claimed to be due them in pursuance of treaty stipulations. Also the persons known as the loyal Creek Indians are authorized to bring suit as herein provided for any loss of property under the provisions of the treaty of 1866. All reports, records, and documents relative to said claims on file in any of the Executive Departments of the Government and any awards made by the Secretary of the Interior in relation thereto may be used before said court, to the end that justice may be done to all parties in interest.

SEC. —. That any suit, except such suit as is provided for in section 3 herein, so authorized may be brought by any party other than said tribes in their own behalf or in the name of any trustee or delegate selected by them, with approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and by any one of said tribes in the name of the principal chief, acting principal chief, or governor of the tribe; and the law and practice and rules of procedure in such courts shall be the practice and law in all such cases; and copies or petitions filed in any case at commencement of suit shall be served on the principal chief or governor of the tribe, or on the trustee or delegate so appointed, or on any other person suing, or on his representative, by a marshal of the United States court in Indian Territory, and on the Attorney-General of the United States, who shall designate and appoint, from the Department of Justice, a competent person to defend for the tribe and for the United States in each of said suits, and said court shall have authority, in its discretion, to enforce its judgments in all such cases by proper process. Should any of such persons recover against any one of said nations, the court shall render judgment for the amount and order the same paid by the United States and deducted from any funds due such nation, and shall direct to be paid out of the sum so recovered reasonable fees to attorneys of record, the amount to be determined by the court: Provided, That any suit brought under provisions of this act shall be by said court advanced on the docket and determined by the court as early as practicable, and the judgment of said court shall be final.

Mr. ALLISON. That is legislation upon an important matter and general legislation. I make a point of order on it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It has been passed by the Senate as a bill at this Congress.

Mr. ALLISON. That does not make it in order unless there is an appropriation connected with it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the point of order insisted upon?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. There are features in the amendment that are of great importance and of absolute merit. I do not think a bill of the sort ought to be disposed of on a technical point of this kind. There are a number of people in the Indian country who have rights that ought to be adjudicated in the courts. The amendment simply provides that the Delaware Indians, the Mississippi Choctaws, and the intermarried white people in that country shall have the right to bring suit in the Court of Claims to determine what are their legal rights and their relations with the tribes. It is just and fair. We can not take the rights that these people have away from them. They are entitled to rights of citizenship among those tribes or they are not. If they are, their rights must be determined by the courts. We can not hold that they are not by simply denying them an opportunity of a hearing in the courts.

The bill which the amendment embodies was passed months ago, and it has gone to the House. It has not had an opportunity to be heard in the House; and it is not right to deprive a large number of citizens of legal vested rights simply because of the impossibility to get time to have a bill considered in Congress. I hope the Senator from Iowa will not insist on his point of order.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the matter is too important to be considered on this bill. I insist upon the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order made by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. ALLISON. On page 40, line 22, after the word "employees," I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. After the word "employees," line 22, page 40, insert:

Including physician for the Walker River Reservation, at $900 per annum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer another amendment, which is merely to correct a ruling of the Comptroller, that Indian agents specially assigned to duty at Washington for a brief period may receive their per diem for the future as is provided in this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 9, on page 9, after the word "days," it is proposed to insert:

And the accounting officers of the Treasury are hereby authorized to allow per diem pay to such special agents while remaining at the seat of Government under orders and direction of the Secretary of the Interior for a period not exceeding twenty days at any one time during the fiscal year 1898-99.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk, which I presume will not be objectionable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 45, at the end of line 16, it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, discontinue said commission prior to the date named, or remove any member thereof and appoint a successor for the member so removed.

Mr. CARTER. I believe that is a beneficial amendment, and that it should be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT of Connecticut in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana.

Mr. ALLISON. Is that the amendment the Senator from Montana showed me this morning?

Mr. CARTER. Yes, sir. It relates to the commission appointed to negotiate with the Crow, Flathead, and other Indians, and permits the Secretary of the Interior to suspend the entire commission or remove any member of it and appoint another person in lieu.

Mr. ALLISON. Does it change the date?

Mr. CARTER. It contemplates changing the date from the 1st of November, 1899, to the 1st of January, 1900.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well, with those modifications I do not object to the amendment.

Mr. CARTER. I suggest as part of the amendment that the words "November, 1899," in lines 13 and 14, on page 45, be stricken out, and in lieu thereof that the words "January, 1900," be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the proposed modification.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed in line 13, on page 45, after the words "day of," to strike out "November, 1899," and insert "January, 1900."

Mr. CARTER. I ask that the amendments may be separated, and that the one first presented be first voted upon by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana asks that the amendments be separated and that both be separately voted upon. The Secretary will read the first amendment of the Senator from Montana.

The SECRETARY. After the word "made," at the end of line 16, on page 45, it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, discontinue said commission prior to the date named, or remove any member thereof and appoint a successor for the member so removed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment which has just been read.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I do not know that there is any harm in this amendment. Of course none of the members of the commission will be removed, and the commission will not be discontinued, as it ought to be. Under the existing law the commission terminates on the 1st of April, but it ought to terminate before.

Notwithstanding the remarks made by the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] the other day, in which he said this commission had been absolutely useless and never performed efficient or valuable service, he now seems to desire to perpetuate it, so that its members may draw their pay. I am quite surprised that he should desire to continue their existence even for a day, and I am much more surprised that he should seek to continue their existence until January, a year from now.

I agree with all the Senator said on this subject. The commission is absolutely inefficient, utterly worthless, and exists simply that its members may draw their pay, draw their per diem, and draw the perquisites that go with the position. It is a very nice position. It ought to be abolished, and abolished to-day, and I, of course, shall object to perpetuating it any longer than it is possible to prevent it.

Mr. CARTER. I understand that the amendments have been separated, and that the proviso I offered is not objected to by the Senator from South Dakota, the last clause of which provides merely that the Secretary of the Interior may discontinue this commission at any time or may remove at his pleasure any member of the commission. I think it is very important that that provision should be agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt that that can be done without any such provision, but I have no objection to that intimation being given to the Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the first part of the proposed amendment, which has been read by the Secretary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is upon the remainder of the amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 45, line 13, after the words "day of," it is proposed to strike out "November, 1899," and insert "January, 1900."

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to hear from the Senator from Montana on that subject, and have his reasons why this should be done. Then I should like to have him also read his speech of a few days ago on the same subject.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I felt very well convinced a few days ago, and I am convinced now, that this commission is not an efficient commission for the accomplishment of the end it has in view—the negotiation of treaties with these various Indian tribes. I believe now, as I stated then, that this work can be more efficiently and expeditiously done by special commissioners selected from persons who are familiar with the work to be accomplished than by a standing commission continued from year to year as experts in Indian negotiation.

But, Mr. President, as we are advised by the Department that this commission will in the very near future bear some fruit, and that, if discontinued on the 1st day of April, its labors, long since commenced and partially completed, would be rendered entirely valueless to the Government, in view of that aspect of the case, I am perfectly willing that the commission shall be allowed until the month of November to demonstrate whether they can or can not render service to the Government somewhat commensurate with the pay they are receiving under a previous law.

Mr. GALLINGER. How long has the commission existed?

Mr. CARTER. It has existed for a number of years.

Mr. ALLISON. Since 1896.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I certainly hope this amendment will be withdrawn. I think the Committee on Appropriations determined last year to abolish the system of appointing commissions to negotiate with Indians. We found by experience that whenever we appointed a commission it existed so long as there was money to pay them, and that they would contrive to prevent the accomplishment of anything, so that their job would last. We have paid out very many thousands of dollars and even hundreds of thousands of dollars for these commissions and received no service worth mentioning in return.

But this commission has been one of the most worthless, if not one of the most extravagant, of all those we have had heretofore. Knowing these facts fully, appreciating the situation, the Committee on Appropriations increased the number of Indian inspectors from 5 to 8, with the understanding that hereafter all the negotiations with Indian tribes should be through an inspector who has a salary and has no possible inducement to perpetuate the particular work upon which he is employed. The inspector goes out to make a treaty with a tribe of Indians; he makes it promptly; and our experience is that he usually makes a treaty in from thirty to sixty days, while if we send out a commission to make a treaty with a tribe of Indians they will be from one to three years about it. These commissions, consisting of three or more men, are not as well able to deal with Indians as one man, on account of the conflict of counsel, and, above all, by reason of the inducement to perpetuate their existence, which can only continue so long as their work lasts.

This commission is a very shining example of that sort of proceeding. They have perpetuated their existence, making only one or two treaties in several years' time, and making a very unimportant agreement with the Indians. Last fall they visited the Crows in Montana for the purpose of making an agreement with those Indians, and after spending all the fall—for it is very pleasant to live in that country in the fall—they adjourned for the winter and came to Washington, and have been here ever since December doing nothing.

They made an agreement with the Indians that they would hold a council with them next April or May, when the weather gets pleasant again. They are going to go to Montana to spend the summer and return to Washington to spend the winter. It will be rare indeed if we are able to get a report out of them once a year; and for all this they are to receive not only $10 a day apiece, but also traveling expenses, board bills, clerks to wait upon them, etc. So there is not one argument that can be made in justification of their continuance in office or their existence.

In the last Indian appropriation bill we declared this commission should cease on the 1st day of April next. That was a concession to the people who are interested in their appointment. The Senators who are interested in the appointment of these men and who want to continue their existence because they are constituents of theirs persuaded the committee to continue the commission until the 1st of December.

Now, here is an effort to add two months more to their life. There is no pretense that they are of any value to the Government or that their service will accomplish any good. The only reason in the world why the commission is continued for a day is to furnish places for three men; to pay them out of the Treasury of the United States, and collect the money from the people of the United States by taxation to do it. It seems to me, before we continue their existence longer, there should be some reason given here why the money should be paid out of the Treasury. There should be some laudable, proper purpose to be accomplished by the continuance of this junketing commission, or else it ought to be wiped out of existence at once.

The Senator from Montana, two or three weeks ago, when this bill was last under consideration, told us how utterly worthless this commission was, and said he would offer an amendment to abolish it absolutely; and he now comes and wants to continue it two months longer.

Mr. CARTER. If the Senator will permit me to inject a remark at that point, the amendment presented by me on my own motion was that which permitted the Secretary of the Interior to exercise authority without any equivocation or question, discontinuing this entire commission if he elected so to do. The amendment proposing to extend the time or the life of the commission to January 1, 1900, was presented in behalf of an absent Senator, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. FAIRBANKS], and I think I ought, in justice to myself, to make that statement at this time as a part of the Senator's very appropriate remarks.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And the member of the commission from Indiana is, I understand, the most worthless member of the whole commission. [Laughter.] It is reported that in Montana last year when employed upon this work he was constantly intoxicated and utterly unfit to fill any position under the Government. I have this information from a very prominent and important citizen of the State of Montana, and yet it is proposed to perpetuate this commission and continue this commissioner two months longer, in order that he may continue to draw $10 a day, spend his summers in Montana and his winters in Washington, and do nothing.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, in justice to the absent Senator from Indiana, I think I ought to say that that Senator regards the member of the commission from the State of Indiana as one of the most efficient members, if not the most efficient member, of the commission, who ought to be continued, whatever may happen to the other members of the commission. So I trust the Senator from South Dakota will not too freely indulge in criticism against a person who is not able to defend himself here.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I withdraw my remarks [laughter]—which are undoubtedly true—for the purpose of protecting—I do not know whether it is the Senator from Indiana or the commissioner from Indiana that I ought to protect. Certainly, if the Senator from Indiana thinks this man is one of the most efficient members of this commission, there is an additional argument why the commission should be abolished, for I can not imagine what kind of men the other two can possibly be if this man is the most efficient member of the commission. However, I withdraw my remarks.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from South Dakota if this is the commission that was before the Indian Committee some time ago, and which has been endeavoring for a year or two to negotiate a treaty with some Indian tribes?

Mr. PETTIGREW. It is the same commission. They have been swinging around through the West for several years, spending their summers in the mountain regions, where it was cool, and their winters here in Washington.

Mr. ALLEN. Their mission has been, as I understand, to educate the Indians up to a point where they will treat with the Government?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Yes, sir.

Mr. ALLEN. An ordinary treaty can be obtained through the instrumentality of an Indian inspector within two or three weeks, and why not send an inspector there to treat with those Indians?

Mr. PETTIGREW. Certainly, we could send an inspector there and abolish this commission now; and that is what should be done. We should send an inspector to treat with those Indians.

Mr. ALLEN. What will become of these gentlemen if we abolish the commission?

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is the trouble.

Mr. ALLEN. Where will they get their salaries from then?

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is the trouble. That is all the reason in the world and the only argument that can be advanced why they should be continued.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. On the statement made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], it seems to me in all seriousness he ought to move to strike out the whole business, and move an amendment to abolish the commission. If the statement made here be true, it is little short of shameful to continue the commission in existence.

Mr. PETTIGREW. There is no question about it, and I move to strike out the whole provision. Then the existing law will stand, this commission will cease on the 1st day of April, and that is the motion I did make in another place.

Mr. SHOUP. I hope the Senator will not insist on that amendment now.

Mr. ALLISON. I trust the Senator from Montana will withdraw his amendment and allow the provision to stand as we fixed it in the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CARTER. I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to know whether he is correct in supposing that this amendment to the bill has been passed over and is now pending?

Mr. ALLISON. It was passed over without action.

Mr. CARTER. I withdraw my amendment fixing the date on the 1st of January, 1900.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana withdraws that part of the amendment.

Mr. ALLEN. What is the balance of the amendment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. The question will be on adopting the committee amendment. It is not necessary to move to strike it out. If we reject that amendment, the existing law will stand, which will carry the commission through until spring.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. What is the committee amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

Mr. ALLEN. Let the original paragraph be read, and then let it be read as it will stand if amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment, and then the amendment as proposed to be amended.

The SECRETARY. The original committee amendment is to insert on page 45, after line 2, the following:

For continuing the work of the commission appointed under the act of Congress approved June 10, 1896, to negotiate with the Crow, Flathead, and other Indians, $10,500, the same to be available for the payment of salary and proper expenses of said commission from and after the date when the appropriation of $15,000 made by the Indian appropriation act of July 1, 1898, was exhausted; and said commission shall continue its work and make its final report thereon to the Secretary of the Interior on the 1st day of November, 1899, and upon that date the commission shall cease; and no liability shall be incurred under this provision in excess of the appropriation herein made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment which has just been read has been amended in the way which will now be stated by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, discontinue said commission prior to the date named, or remove any member thereof and appoint a successor for the member so removed.

Mr. ALLEN. Now, is it proposed to change this amendment and to fix the date on the 1st of April when the commission is to expire?

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the Senator will permit me, I will explain. This is a committee amendment. If it is rejected by the Senate the existing law will stand. The existing law provides that this commission shall cease to exist on the 1st day of April. A year ago this question was up for discussion in the Committee on Appropriations. The commission ought to have been abolished then, but there was sufficient influence brought to bear to secure a compromise, by which the committee agreed that the commission should cease on the 1st of April. This year influence is brought to bear again, and it is proposed to continue the commission until November next. If the committee amendment is rejected, the commission will cease to exist when the grass begins to grow in the spring.

Mr. ALLEN. What the Senator proposes is to strike out the date when the commission is to expire?

Mr. PETTIGREW. No; to reject the committee amendment entirely, and then the commission will stand under the law as it is at present.

Mr. ALLEN. I merely want to make this suggestion, because this matter has been before the Committee on Indian Affairs and has been discussed: Why not have a proviso inserted in this bill that the Secretary of the Interior may, in lieu of this commission, employ an Indian inspector to negotiate this treaty?

Mr. PETTIGREW. The Secretary of the Interior has that power now. If we abolish the commission he would send an inspector to continue the work, and he would do it much better than this commission will ever do it.

Mr. ALLEN. If that is done, we will then get the work finished in a few weeks.

Mr. ALLISON. This matter was fully considered by the Committee on Appropriations. I agree there was some difference of opinion respecting what should be done with this commission. The final result was that the committee reported an amendment providing that it should be abolished on the 1st day of November of this year.

I desire now to have reread at the Secretary's desk the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior in relation to this question, which governed me and, I think, several members of the Committee on Appropriations, as to the propriety and justice of extending the time of the commission until the 1st of November. I hope Senators will pay attention that letter.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 22, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of a letter of even date from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who recommends the continuance for another year of the commission provided for by the act of July 1, 1898, (30 Statutes, 592), to negotiate with the Crow, Flathead, Northern Cheyenne, Fort Hall, Uintah, Ute, and Yakima Indians.

This commission was organized under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1896 (29 Statutes, 341), and continued by the act above mentioned, which limits its existence to the 1st day of April, 1899. As stated by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the commission has performed very important service, resulting in agreements with two of the tribes; their duties have been onerous and exacting and often perplexing, and it is expected that they will be successful in their negotiations with the remaining tribes—the Crows, Flatheads, and Yakimas—with all of whom preliminary work has already been done; but it is not expected that they will be able to complete negotiations with these tribes within the time fixed by the act of July 1, 1898.

I therefore concur in the recommendation of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs that provision be made in the pending Indian appropriation bill for continuing the aforesaid commission for another year, and respectfully request that the inclosed draft of an item to effect that purpose be embodied in the bill, believing that it would be extremely unfortunate if the work of the commission be suspended by the limitation of law before negotiations with the tribes named should be fully and finally concluded.

Very respectfully,

C. N. BLISS, Secretary.

Hon. WM. B. ALLISON,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
United States Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. It was upon that letter, Mr. President, that the Committee on Appropriations recommended that this commission should continue until the 1st of November of this year. That will give them an opportunity of completing their work, which the Secretary says has been so successfully begun, and to make their report before the beginning of the next session of Congress. I hope the provision will be allowed to stand as reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, with this commission as inefficient as it has been stated to be on the floor of the Senate, and with the fact staring the Senate in the face that while the commission has been in existence for three years it has not yet accomplished an agreement to be made with these Indians, seems to me a sufficient argument why the suggestion of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] should prevail.

The Secretary of the Interior has the power under the law to appoint an inspector to do this work. The Indian inspectors are, as a rule, trained in connection with Indian affairs. They are familiar with all these matters, and they will do this work very much better, much more efficiently, more expeditiously, and more cheaply than it can be done by a commission. I think, after the statements made here and after the showing made of the inefficiency of this commission, that the amendment of the committee ought not to prevail. For one I am not willing to go on record as being in favor of continuing so utterly inefficient and incompetent a body of men in the public service.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator if the letter of the Secretary of the Interior has any weight with him?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It has, and I have the greatest respect for the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior; but I know in many of these things it is utterly impossible for the Secretary of the Interior to give personal attention to them; that he must trust to the subordinates who are below him. These men bring letters to him which he signs in the hurry of the moment. If the attention of the Secretary of the Interior was called to this question, and if, after careful examination, he should say that he believed this commission should be continued, I for one would vote for it. I do not believe there has been a more efficient, a more capable, or a better Secretary of the Interior in the public service than the present one. I have as much respect for him as for any man I have ever seen in that position. I have the greatest confidence in his judgment, but I do not believe he understands the facts of this case as they have been brought to our attention to-day.

Mr. ALLISON. Evidently the Secretary of the Interior did not consult the Senator from South Dakota respecting the work of the commission, as they very much differ as to what has been done. I do not know, of course, what the commission has accomplished, except that they concluded a treaty last year with the Uintah Indians, which was a very important treaty, and it was ratified.

Mr. RAWLINS. The treaty with the Uintah Indians in Utah was utterly insignificant. The law required the commissioners to treat with those Indians for the cession to the United States of all lands not needed for allotments, and they in no sense accomplished the object of that law. They accomplished nothing of any importance whatsoever. What little they did accomplish has not commended itself at all to the Senate or even to the Interior Department. It is not true that that commission or any other commission has accomplished anything in the way of negotiations with the Indians on the Uintah Reservation. There are bills now pending in the Senate to accomplish the object which that commission has utterly failed to accomplish.

Mr. ALLEN. I only speak, Mr. President, in my capacity as a member of the Indian Committee. The letter that was submitted by the honorable Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] from the Secretary of the Interior, it occurs to me, is not entitled to the weight sought to be given to it. It is evident to every Senator here that the Secretary of the Interior never did personally examine this question. The matter referred to in the letter the Senator from Iowa, thas had read was referred to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and by him evidently referred to some clerk in that department of the service. It reflects the sentiments of the clerk and not those of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs or of the Secretary of the Interior. We all understand that is the way the public business of this country is transacted, and while it appears upon the surface to be the result of the investigation of some officer in high authority, it is no more than the result of the investigation of some subordinate.

This commission has existed for several years—about three years. It has accomplished practically nothing, and if the evidence that was before the Committee on Indian Affairs is to be believed, or the representations which were made are to be credited, the commission is absolutely worthless so far as concerns accomplishing any result for this Government. Experience proves that we speedily bring about good results through the instrumentality of experienced Indian inspectors, and perhaps no man in the United States has negotiated more treaties and secured more agreements from the Indians than Major McLaughlin, a man who has spent over thirty years in the Indian service and who is familiar with the tribes.

I venture the remark that if the Secretary of the Interior will send Major McLaughlin among these Indians it will not be six weeks from the day he reaches the ground until he has a perfect and complete treaty with them, and that, too, without additional expense to the Government.

Now, why should this commission be continued in existence for a year longer, three men drawing large salaries from this Government and their expenses besides, to negotiate a treaty which they have failed to secure in the three years of their existence, when that work can be accomplished in three weeks?

Mr. PETTIGREW obtained the floor.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, the members of this commission are estimable gentlemen, undoubtedly, and as to the men personally I have nothing whatever to say in the way of criticism. Whatsoever they may have accomplished in other sections of the country stands to their credit according to the testimony that may be borne by the Senators representing the respective States, but so far as concerns their performances in the State of Montana, where they were commissioned and directed to negotiate with three distinct Indian tribes, I feel constrained to say that their work was inefficient, wholly unsatisfactory, and not to be continued, based upon what they have attempted to accomplish in the past.

They spent the entire summer out there without accomplishing anything at all except to get up a misunderstanding between the Indians on one reservation and their agent. That was done by the chairman of the commission coming to Washington, spending a number of days in the autumn and winter here, and explaining to the Indians, by letter and otherwise, that their agent had not been attending to their business, and that he had secured, by and through his own magnificent efforts, the recognition of certain claims the Indians had against the Government which the agent had neglected.

I do not anticipate any agreement by or through this commission with any tribe in the State of Montana between now and the 1st of April. I do not anticipate the consummation of any agreement by and through them between now and the 1st day of November. I have suggested an amendment which will clearly empower the Secretary of the Interior to remove them at any time, and I am perfectly free to say, judging these men on their merits, according to the record they have made to my knowledge, if I were Secretary of the Interior I would remove them the day after this bill passes and would designate an inspector, as suggested by the Senator from Nebraska, to go out and in a businesslike way negotiate these desirable agreements.

In that State, Mr. President, the Secretary of the Interior directed Major McLaughlin to go forth and negotiate with one of these tribes of Indians, with which tribe negotiations were to be conducted by the commission. The two reservations, the Cheyenne and the Crow reservations, are side by side. McLaughlin concluded a treaty between the Indian tribe and, I believe, 25 or 30 white settlers—my colleague will correct me as to the number; probably 30 white settlers—within a period of from four to six weeks. The agreement has been presented, and is in such excellent shape as to meet the entire approval of the Committee on Indian Affairs of this body, and has been incorporated into the pending bill. During the same season this same Indian inspector, McLaughlin, proceeded to the State of South Dakota, and there rounded up an entire tribe of Indians and concluded another complicated agreement, and that agreement is embodied in the present bill and will be ratified to-day.

Mr. ALLEN. That is one of the most refractory tribes in the United States.

Mr. CARTER. Most assuredly. In both cases complicated questions arose and had to be determined, such as did not exist in either of the other cases. From a businesslike point of view there is no question whatever that the expense relating to this commission ought to be discontinued at this hour if it is in the power of Congress to discontinue it. I have offered an amendment not extending the time, but opening the way for the discontinuance of the commission by Executive order if in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior such action would comport with the public interest.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, in this case there is no public interest. That is perfectly apparent. Why should we tell the Secretary to continue these people? That is practically what we do when we make the appropriation and fix a time when they shall cease to be employed. Of course the Secretary will not act if we do not act. How could he be expected to assume the responsibility if we will not act, possessed with all the facts in the case.

I read the letter of the Secretary of the Interior, and I have great respect for him, and I say with the Senator from Arkansas that the outgoing Secretary, Mr. Bliss, is unquestionably one of the best officers that ever occupied that position since I have been engaged in public duties in Washington.

I do not believe any man has greater ability, integrity, and comprehension of all the duties of that great office than he. But the letter which comes here is simply a pro forma affair. The Indian Department has been solicited by people who are interested in the continuance of these men in some position, perhaps prompted by a desire to keep them out of their States, for it is well known that the distant offices under our system are generally filled by men of little or no character, like the offices in the Territories of the United States, which are filled with broken-down members of Congress, etc. People go to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and solicit and urge a recommendation that these men be continued in office, and he writes the letter influenced by the prominence and power of the person who comes to solicit the favorable recommendation. It goes to the Secretary of the Interior; is reviewed there by a bureau called the Indian division; is presented to the Secretary, and he signs it without ever seeing its substance at all.

I apprehend that if the facts were known the only service these men have performed for the last twelve months is the securing themselves of this letter, for they have been in Washington. They come here as soon as cold weather sets in and the mountains are unpleasant; and I presume the sum total of all their toil, for which we have paid them $10 a day besides clerical hire and traveling expenses, is the securing of this letter recommending their continuance in office.

Mr. ALLEN. And signing vouchers.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Of course they did that promptly. They kept up with that work. That was never left over for their trip to Washington. That was attended to every thirty days, beyond all possible question. They did not have to spend any time upon that work when they arrived here.

The same question was up a year ago, and the Appropriations Committee was so thoroughly convinced of the worthlessness of this commission that it put on a provision that it should cease on the 1st day of April, and with that compromise, without a controversy in the Senate, those who were opposed to continuing the commission yielded. This year persons interested in keeping these people out of their States, I suppose, and in having them secure a job a long ways off which would not bring discredit upon their administration, succeeded in getting the committee to continue the commission until November next. I submit that under these circumstances there can be no possible justification on our part for continuing them a day, and that we at least ought to turn them loose with the coming of spring, by the 1st day of April.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT of Connecticut in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that there is one other amendment which has been passed over, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 46, after the word "Alaska," in line 17, the Committee on Appropriations propose to insert the following:

Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may make contracts with contract schools——

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Before the amendment is read, I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment, to come in after the word "ninety-five," in line 1, page 47, as follows:

The same to be divided proportionately among the said several contract schools.

Mr. GALLINGER. That seems to be provided for on page 46:

apportioning as near as may be the amount so contracted for among schools of various denominations.

I should think that covers it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Where is that language?

Mr. GALLINGER. On page 46, lines 19, 20, and 21.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I had not noticed that provision. I withdraw the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. CARTER. Before this proposition is taken up I have an amendment to offer to which I desire to direct the attention of the chairman of the committee. On page 60, line 1, after the word "herein," insert the words "or heretofore;" in line 3, after the word "persons," insert the words "or for annuities;" after the word "articles," in the same line, insert the words "or money," and at the end of the paragraph to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed to authorize the diminution of the trust funds of any tribe by per capita or other payments direct to the Indians.

Mr. President, the purpose of the proposed amendment I will briefly state. The amendment suggested will have application to a case which arises on the Crow Indian Reservation in Montana. A certain large canal has been completed partially. Funds for its completion are not available. However, certain annuities are paid in cash to those Indians each year. It is desirable that the Government, with the consent of the Indians, may divert the annuities to the construction and completion of the canal projet.

My experience is that the payment of small sums of money to Indians in the way of annuity allowance is, in the main, of little advantage to individual Indians and of no advantage to the tribe. The traders usually get all the annuity payments in cash. It is desired by and through this amendment to secure a condition whereby the Government may take the annuity money for one or two years and complete the canal system with those amounts. I think it will prove advantageous to the Indians. The proviso, which will prove a safeguard in another direction, was suggested by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. ALLISON. I ask to have the amendment read as it will read if the alterations proposed by the Senator from Montana are agreed to.

The SECRETARY. If the amendment be adopted, that portion of the bill beginning on page 60, after the word "engaged," in line 1, would read as follows:

And that the several appropriations herein or heretofore made for millers, blacksmiths, engineers, carpenters, physicians, and other persons, or for annuities, and for various articles or money provided for by treaty stipulation for the several Indian tribes, may be diverted to other uses for the benefit of said tribes, respectively, within the discretion of the President, and with the consent of said tribes, expressed in the usual manner; and that he cause report to be made to Congress, at its next session thereafter, of his action under this provision: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed to authorize the diminution of the trust funds of any tribe by per capita or other payments direct to the Indians.

Mr. CARTER. The proviso is inserted at the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], for the purpose of preventing a possibility of the increase of annuities of certain other tribes.

Mr. ALLISON. Why does the Senator apply the amendment to appropriations heretofore made?

Mr. CARTER. Because the annuities have heretofore been provided for in the ratification of treaties.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I do not understand the amendment. Does the Senator from Montana mean that those annuities can be diverted for other purposes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota desire the amendment to be considered as still before the Senate?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be so understood.

Mr. CARTER. I will say to the Senator from South Dakota that it is with the consent of the Indians.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It seems to me it is a pretty large power to allow these annuities to be diverted even with the consent of the Indians. The question is how that consent can be obtained, whether it will take a majority of the adult males or three-quarters. As to some of the tribes you can not purchase their reservation or make an agreement with them which is binding unless three-quarters of the male adults sign the treaty. In other tribes a majority of the male adults suffices. Here is a provision which would now allow these annuities to be diverted with the consent of said tribes. Under many of our treaties we simply consulted the chiefs and headmen of the tribes, and under this provision a treaty might be made with a very few men, who would gain a personal advantage. I doubt the wisdom of giving that great power and that great latitude unrestricted.

Mr. CARTER. This must be in pursuance of an agreement which shall meet the approval of the President of the United States and the approval of the Indian tribes, expressed in the usual way. In the case I have in mind, the condition which will be met by this amendment meets the approval of all the Indians. After the money has been paid out to them in annuities it is found quite impossible to collect it again into a fund for the purpose of completing a piece of canal work, but they are perfectly willing to sign an agreement that the Government may use the annuity money for the purpose of completing the canal system, so as to bring certain lands under irrigation. I think it is a good amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to have a little further light on the subject. Is this amendment, then, for the purpose of diverting the fund now in the Treasury belonging to the Crows, so as to complete the large ditch which is to irrigate a large portion of their reservation?

Mr. CARTER. A treaty was made with the Crow Indians in 1889 for the cession to the United States of about 1,000,000 acres of land. A considerable portion of the purchase price was used for the purchase of cattle, and a considerable portion of the purchase price under and by virtue of the treaty provisions was to be used for the construction of canals and ditches for the irrigation of their land. The fund set apart for the irrigation of lands has become exhausted, and the system has not been completed.

Unquestionably, if it had been known at the time when the treaty was negotiated that a certain amount in excess of that set apart for irrigation would be necessary to complete the system, the amount would then have been set apart out of the purchase price of the land; but they believed that the amount set apart for that express purpose was adequate. Consequently, a certain sum was set aside to be used for annuities to the tribe. I think each Indian receives about $13 a year in the form of cash annuity. I am informed that the Indians are entirely willing that the Government, instead of paying annuities for two years, shall employ the money in completing the irrigation system which they so much need in order to establish permanent homes upon allotments in the reservation.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will state that if the purpose of this amendment is to allow the use of the $500,000, I believe it is, belonging to the Crows, in order to complete the irrigation system, I have no objection to it whatever. But I would rather have it put in that form. I think there can be no better use of their money than to complete such a system, and then let them be employed in raising crops for their own subsistence and existence. It will be far better for them, and they will be far more likely to advance in civilization if they have no annuity money whatever, but simply the facilities for securing a living by tilling the soil.

There is no question but that we are paying too much money to the American Indians. There is no doubt that we are gradually making them worthless, and, in fact, destroying the American Indians by keeping them in idleness and feeding them. It is true that under the guise of treaties which we have made with them, purchasing their lands, they are lawfully entitled to all they receive, but it seems too bad that we can not make some arrangement by which they would be obliged to earn the money they secure.

There is no doubt in this case that it would be much better for the Crow Indians if the fund were all expended in completing a thorough irrigation system, so that that country would produce the crops to sustain the tribe. I should like to have stated in plain terms the purpose intended to be accomplished rather than to open the door for the making of agreements in this very loose manner, affecting perhaps the annuities of all the tribes. I do not like to have legislation so loose as to allow a diversion of the funds of these people generally. I think that matter ought to be kept within the reach of Congress and under our control.

Mr. ALLISON. My memory is not very clear as respects the irrigation project at the Crow Reservation, but my recollection is that to complete the system which is proposed and as begun will cost a very large sum of money, and I have also an indistinct recollection that it was stated that when this system was completed there would not be sufficient water available to irrigate the land proposed to be irrigated.

I do not like to have a specific appropriation made here for that purpose. I am willing that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana shall be inserted here for the purpose of further examination, in conference, as to its effect upon the funds belonging to the Indian tribes. I would not like to have a specific appropriation made.

Mr. CARTER. If it meets with the views of the committee and of the Senator from South Dakota, I should be perfectly satisfied with an amendment, to be inserted in lieu of the amendment heretofore proposed, which would read as follows:

Provided, That with the consent of the Crow Indians in Montana, to be obtained in the usual way, the Secretary of the Interior may use the annuity money or any part thereof due or to become due said Indians to complete the irrigation system heretofore commenced on their reservation.

Mr. ALLISON. Say "the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion"——

Mr. CARTER. "The Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion."

Mr. ALLISON. Complete that system or any part of it. The Senator from Montana is certainly familiar with this proposed system of irrigation. If I am correctly informed, the beginning of this system is upon a very large scale.

Mr. CARTER. There is no question of that.

Mr. ALLISON. It will cost a large sum of money to complete it. If that be true, I think there ought to be an investigation first by an engineer or some proper authority of the Interior Department as to the propriety of expending money upon this system as proposed.

Mr. CARTER. I suggest that the amendment be permitted to stand as made, and the committee of conference can, I presume, with the approval of the Indian Affairs Committee, substitute some other amendment to accomplish the purpose if this is not entirely satisfactory.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think, under the circumstances, I will withdraw my opposition to the amendment, as suggested by the Senator, with the understanding that it will be put in some form so as not to leave the power in the hands of the Secretary to treat with the different tribes for all the annuity funds in this country. The purpose is to reach this Montana case, and I am willing to do that, because I think it is the right thing to do.

Mr. ALLISON. If that is the only object the Senator from Montana and the Senator from South Dakota have in view, I suggest that the last amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana be inserted in the bill for the purpose of further examination. I will not be willing to insert even that provision without a full investigation of the question through information derived from the Interior Department.

Mr. CARTER. I then withdraw the amendment now pending, and in lieu of it I offer what I send to the desk.

Mr. ALLISON. I will try to take care of it. This is a matter that has not been submitted to either committee; it is proposed on the floor of the Senate, and I do not wish to assent to it, except that it may be examined further by the committee of conference of the two Houses.

Mr. CARTER. Let the amendment I now offer come in on page 60, after line 9.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment now offered by the Senator from Montana will be read.

The SECRETARY. Insert at the end of line 9, page 60, the following proviso:

Provided, That with the consent of the Crow Indians in Montana, to be obtained in the usual way, the Secretary of the Interior may use the annuity money due or to become due said Indians to complete the irrigation system heretofore commenced on said Crow Indian Reservation.

Mr. ALLISON. In his discretion, I should say.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. A few minutes ago I proposed an amendment at the top of page 47. One of the Senators on the other side suggested that the amendment was already covered on page 46, and in hastily glancing at the language I thought it was, but I do not think so now. I offer the amendment that I proposed at that time. I move, after the words "ninety-five," in the first line on page 47, to insert the words "the same to be divided proportionately among the said several contract schools." The provision on page 47 provides that it shall be divided proportionately among the denominations. This would make it apply to a division among the schools.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the committee amendment on page 46 be first read. It was passed over and I am anxious that it should be taken up. Then the Senator's proposed amendment to the amendment can be read.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Yes; I offer it as an amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. The committee propose, on page 46, line 17, after the word "Alaska," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may make contracts with contract schools, apportioning as near as may be the amount so contracted for among schools of various denominations, for the education of Indian pupils during the fiscal year 1900, but shall only make such contracts at places where nonsectarian schools can not be provided for such Indian children, and to an amount not exceeding 20 per cent of the amount so used for the fiscal year 1895: Provided further, That the foregoing shall not apply to public schools of any State, Territory, county, or city, or to schools herein or hereafter specifically provided for.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I proposed to amend the amendment by inserting, after the words "ninety-five," in line 1, page 47, the words:

The same to be divided proportionately among the said several contract schools.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the committee amendment by inserting, after the word "ninety-five," line 1, page 47, the words:

The same to be divided proportionately among the said several contract schools.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment to the amendment, and I am not going to interpose any factious opposition to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Then let the amendment to the amendment be adopted.

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is upon agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before the amendment is acted upon I want to say that I had hoped that this question of making appropriations of public funds for sectarian institutions among the Indians had come to an end. We legislated in that direction and we made a declaration in that direction. We appropriated money liberally to provide Government schools for the Indian children.

Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the testimony that was taken on that subject before the Senate Committee on Appropriations when they had the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Jones, before them. The chairman, Senator ALLISON, said:

We pay now to contract schools 30 per cent of the amounts that we paid in 1895. The House has made no provision for those contract schools. The question with us is, whether we ought to follow the House or whether it is not too sudden a cutting off of the contract schools.

Commissioner JONES. That is for you, gentlemen, to say. All I have to say is, as I told you last year, that we can take care of all the Indian children.

The CHAIRMAN. But that would require their being moved from where they now are to other places.

Commissioner JONES. Some of them might be moved, but in practice I think you would find that there would be no removals—that the schools would go right on.

The CHAIRMAN. At the same places?

Commissioner JONES. Yes; or that if they were removed we would agree to take care of them with the same appropriation.

There is the testimony of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs that under existing conditions the Indian children can all be taken care of in Government schools. The House of Representatives, doubtless with that information before it, left out a provision for the continuance of the appropriation to which I have objected so often in the Senate, and to which I shall continue to object as long as I am a member of this body, if I have occasion to do so. The Senate committee in its wisdom has seen fit to continue this matter in the present bill, and to make an appropriation for contract schools, providing that it shall be apportioned among the denominations, which, of course, is meaningless, inasmuch as there is only one denomination that is now the beneficiary.

Mr. President, I have no disposition, as I said in the beginning, to enter any factious opposition to this amendment. If the House conferees can be brought to agree to it, it will continue for one year more. But I take it, Mr. President, that it is understood, and I ask the distinguished Senator in charge of the bill, if it is not understood pretty generally, that this appropriation is going to be the last appropriation made by Congress for this purpose? That was practically understood last year, I know, but I want it to go on record again that this is to be the last appearance.

Mr. ALLISON. It was understood last year that we would make one further appropriation, and, as I understood it, this is the last appropriation that is expected to be made under the arrangement made some years ago.

Mr. GALLINGER. With that understanding I shall make no further objection. I simply desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we are reaching the end of what I think has been a very pernicious practice.

Mr. ALLISON. I should like to say one word in response to the testimony read by the Senator from New Hampshire. It is true the Commissioner of Indian Affairs did say that they could provide for these schools at this time, and yet we found in the bill not only the usual appropriation of $200,000 for additional school buildings, a general fund, but an insistence upon his part in the same testimony that $100,000 should be added to that appropriation of $200,000 in order to provide buildings for Indian school children.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, this is not a new subject. It has been discussed considerably in the Senate. As far as I am concerned, I do not want it understood that I am bound by the statement of the chairman of the committee in any way that this shall be an end of this appropriation.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then let us have a vote on the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. For my part, I expect next year to advocate the continuance of the appropriation for this purpose, and I believe there is justice in it. I presume that ultimately we shall cease to appropriate for sectarian schools; but many years ago we invited the churches to build schools to educate the Indian children, the Government itself not being willing to go into the work with sufficient appropriations to cover the field.

These people built valuable, excellent school buildings—two, I think, splendid brick buildings—in the State of South Dakota, and gathered these children together. They have been educating them for $108 per capita per year, and they have been doing splendid work. I doubt whether the Government does as good work as they are doing. After erecting the building, furnishing the building, its furniture, etc., it costs the United States in every one of our schools $167 per capita to educate these children; and yet the clamor is set up to take them out of the schools where it costs $108 (and, I believe, gives them better education) and put them into schools where it costs $167.

While I believe that we should divorce church and state, that that is the policy of this Government and the genius of our institutions, I think that justice should be done and that this appropriation should be wiped out gradually enough to enable these people to continue their schools and raise by private collections the amount necessary to do it, if they desire. Therefore, next year, I think, while there should be something of a reduction, the appropriation should be continued, and perhaps the year after.

I want it distinctly understood that I am not bound by any proposition to discontinue this appropriation. The Senate of the United States ought not to act upon this question as a mere matter of prejudice or a mere matter of sectarian zeal. We ought to be governed by what is right and just and fair between us and the people whom we have invited to go into this business, and not say that the appropriation shall arbitrarily be cut off, if a great injustice is going to be done by cutting it off.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota has precipitated a controversy that I have no hesitancy in meeting. I will say now that if it is his purpose, as chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs and a member of the Committee on Appropriations, to have this matter continued, I shall do what I can to defeat this amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me just one word?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I do not desire to precipitate a controversy. If the Senator had not asked the question which he asked I should not have risen to my feet or said anything on this subject.

Mr. GALLINGER. We had a distinct understanding last year, and the RECORD will show it, that certainly not more than one further appropriation should be made for this purpose. That appropriation is contained in the pending bill. I am, of course, wrong, because the chairman of the committee says I am, but my recollection was that it was understood last year we were not to have any further appropriations. I good-naturedly said that if we had an understanding last year that there should be one further appropriation I should coincide in having it made, but if we are to be notified in advance that this controversy is to be continued I shall not shrink from it now or hereafter.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me to make a suggestion to him before he proceeds?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I have taken great interest in this matter. I remember very well, as I suppose the Senator from Iowa does—there are probably only three or four members of the Senate who remember it—the inauguration of this policy by General Grant.

Mr. GALLINGER. We have all read of it.

Mr. HOAR. Yes; we all understand it. It was not because the Government did not want to spend the money wholly, but there was at that time the difficulty of getting trustworthy agents. Whether the difficulty would exist now I do not at the moment know. The Government had been very unfortunate in some places in the character of the agents, and it was thought that at least by turning it over to the religious denominations we would get agents whose honesty and zeal would be assured, whether their capacity were greater than that of others or not. The policy was entered into by President Grant, as I am sure the Senator from New Hampshire agrees with me in thinking, with the purest public motives.

Mr. GALLINGER. Undoubtedly.

Mr. HOAR. It is well known that General Grant himself was a member of a religious denomination the furthest possible removed from the great religious denomination that now is carrying on some of these schools.

What I wish to suggest to my honorable friend from New Hampshire is that in considering the fact that it is understood the Department and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs have given assurance that it is their policy to discontinue this appropriation at the end of this year, and there will be but one more, in accordance with the desire of the Commissioner, and that assurance has also come from the chairman of the committee who has charge of the appropriation bill, whether the mere fact that one Senator, however conversant with this matter, is not quite ready to say that he thinks the time will come next year, though he thinks it will come within a year, would not justify him in adhering to his original purpose to let this matter go without a debate now.

Is it not absolutely certain, with all these authorities in favor of discontinuing the appropriation after twelve months, that it will be discontinued, even if it should happen that the Senator from South Dakota is not quite ready to express his opinion that the time will then have quite arrived?

The Senator will pardon this suggestion, made simply for the sake of saving time and saving strife over a matter which will be apt to lead to strife.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the suggestion of the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts can not be treated lightly by me, and I have no disposition to treat it lightly. I have no disposition whatever to have a controversy over this matter, and I may conclude to accept the suggestion so kindly offered. But before doing that I want to call the attention of my friend from South Dakota, who is very conversant with Indian affairs, but who sometimes makes very broad statements on some points, to the fact that when he says it costs $167 per capita to educate Indian children at the Government schools, that statement is not quite borne out by the record.

I have in my hand the testimony before the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate when a Mr. Slater was before the committee. The Senator doubtless will tell me who Mr. Slater is. I do not know.

Mr. PETTIGREW. He is one of the clerks in the Indian Office.

Mr. GALLINGER. He is one of the clerks in the Indian Office, and he knows all about the money that is appropriated. He shows that it does not cost $167, but that a very considerable portion of that money is turned back into the Treasury.

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is, in some cases.

Mr. GALLINGER. In some cases, and those are the cases the Senator did not think it worth while to allude to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will call attention, if the Senator will permit me, to this provision on page 47, just below the paragraph we are considering:

> For support and education of 300 Indian pupils at Albuquerque, N. Mex., at $167 per annum for each pupil, $50,100.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes; but if it is not spent it is not used.

Mr. PETTIGREW. In some cases it is not all spent, but in very many every dollar of it is spent, and more, too.

Mr. GALLINGER. It seems that at the Grand Junction school we had $5,000 left over last year, and I think it is shown furthermore that they carried more students.

Mr. PETTIGREW. No, at that school they had less students than the number.

Mr. GALLINGER. That does not appear in the testimony.

Mr. PETTIGREW. It appears in the report.

Mr. GALLINGER. Commissioner Jones, who is not a clerk in the Interior Department, says that "Haskell, one or two years ago, turned in about $18,000" of this money.

Mr. PETTIGREW. There they fell very much short of having the number.

Mr. GALLINGER. But Commissioner Jones did not agree, in answer to your question, that they did fall short. He said they did not. Now, Mr. President, I think the Senator ought to be fair about this matter. Commissioner Jones says it costs about $140 a pupil. He says that in express terms, and we had better have the record correct on that point.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. I recognize——

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will wait until the Senator concludes.

Mr. GALLINGER. I want to read that part of the testimony, if the Senator takes issue with it. Let me read it:

> Senator COCKRELL. Would they spend it if the appropriation were increased?
> Commissioner JONES. The cost is but about $140.

I do not know anything about it myself. I take the testimony. Mr. President, I know the power the Senator from South Dakota exercises in these matters connected with the Indians. He holds the responsible position of chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee and he holds a position upon the Committee on Appropriations. The Senator's views and wishes are doubtless deferred to to a very considerable extent, as they are by me in most matters. It is a matter of regret to me that the Senator has announced publicly here to-day that he is to use his influence and power to have this appropriation continued. It is a matter of record well known to every Senator that a very powerful ecclesiast in this country has recently undertaken to reopen this entire matter and that in his fulmination he has very severely criticised the Government schools, and has said some things that I think ought not to have been said in that declaration, because I think his statements are subject to proper criticism and complete refutation.

But, Mr. President, I am reminded by the Senator from Massachusetts that the Interior Department is on record as desiring to put an end to this matter. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs certainly is, and the chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate is, and I am content to let the matter go.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. KYLE. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk. I think it will be acceded to by the chairman of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. Insert on page 44, after line 19, the following:

That not exceeding one-third of the principal sum of $168,335.10, now in the Treasury to the credit of the Sioux Indians of the Crow Creek Reservation, in South Dakota, drawing interest at 4 per cent per annum, may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be used for the purchase of stock cattle, or in any other manner that will best promote their welfare and civilization.

Mr. KYLE. I will state that this passed the Senate last year in the form "all or in any part of the principal sum." This year we have stricken out the first part of the phrase and inserted in lieu thereof—

An appropriation not exceeding one-third of the total sum of $168,335.10 for the purchase of stock cattle for the people of this reservation.

It is recommended by the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and, I believe, will be accepted by the chairman of the committee.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to hear the amendment read again.

The Secretary again read Mr. KYLE's amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I shall not oppose this amendment if it provides for paying this money to these Indians in cash, but I shall oppose it if it proposes to expend it for the purchase of cattle. These Indians are citizens of the United States. They live upon a reservation in one of the counties of South Dakota, and they are entitled, in my opinion, to all the rights of citizenship, the right to vote, etc. This money in the Treasury of the United States is a trust fund. It belongs to them, and they know as well as anybody what they wish to do with it.

I have received a protest from the chiefs of this tribe against expending their money for the purchase of goods or cattle, or expending it in any other way; but they do desire that a portion of it shall be paid to them in cash. I believe if it is disposed of it should be paid in cash, and they should be allowed to handle their own money. If they are said to be citizens of the State of South Dakota, they have reached a point in their civilization when they ought to be allowed to manage their own affairs; the parental system of guidance and control should be abandoned, and their money—trust money—should not, without their consent, be expended in the purchase of cattle or in the purchase of anything else.

If the amendment is amended so as to pay the money in cash to these people, I shall not object to it. Otherwise I shall raise the point of order against the amendment that it changes existing law and provides for a way of disposing of these funds other than is now provided by law.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. President, I want to say that I entirely agree with my colleague in this proposition; and were I sure that it would go through in that form, I certainly should present it in that way, because at the time this agreement was made with this tribe of Indians, in 1889, they could not consummate it until they had reached the agreement I read in these words, which I incorporated in my speech in June of last year:

Unless the Government pay us in cash in our hands—

Notice the phraseology—

Unless the Government pay us in cash in our hands $187,000 in lieu of the 187,000 acres of land reserved for us and extend the treaties of 1868 and 1877 for the term of fifty years (this to be in addition to Sioux bill), our names will be taken from the contract and our reservation (Crow Creek) shall lie unopen to settlement.

That was the agreement made with this tribe of Indians. The money was not set aside for them until 1895. By an act of Congress it was then covered into the Treasury, drawing 4 per cent interest, and it remains there to-day. Under the terms of the agreement they can not get it out. They have wanted the money from that time to this, but it still remains unpaid.

Last year a provision was inserted in the Indian appropriation bill, in the form recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, to spend all or any part of the sum for the purchase of stock cattle, which seemed a very wise provision in his judgment. I do not know but that the Indians will accept that. I had an intimation last year that they would. The chairman of the committee is disposed to accept the amendment in case we provide this year that one-third of the amount shall be expended for the purchase of stock cattle, etc., meaning, I suppose, that next year another third shall be so expended, the following year another third, and so on until ultimately they get all that the agreement calls for.

It was thought unwise by the Secretary of the Interior to give it to the Indians in cash, because they are not supposed to understand how to expend the money after they get it; but if the equivalent should be furnished to them in stock cattle, they will get by this means a start in stock raising, and will probably ultimately be better off as a result.

If the amendment can not go through in the form I have offered it, I should like to have it go through so that the amount may be paid in cash. I certainly would like to have it go through in that way, because I believe it will result to the good of the Indians.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will say in regard to this matter that in 1889 we made a treaty with the Sioux Indians. They then occupied a region of country in South Dakota larger than the State of Indiana. They were one aggregation of tribes, owning that vast region in common. By the treaty of 1889 they were located at six different points upon this area. We entered into an agreement, which was signed by three-fourths of all the males over 18 years of age, by which their reservation was divided into six parts, and an area amounting to about 9,000,000 acres was thrown open to settlement.

The Indians who resided upon the east side of the Missouri River received in that agreement an area of land much less than their kindred people, the Lower Brulés, received who resided on the opposite side of the Missouri River. Therefore they said they would not sign the agreement unless they could receive a dollar an acre in cash for every acre which they received per capita in their diminished reservation less than the Lower Brulés received, who were really members of the same band.

Among the commissioners who made this agreement was General Crook, who was a man highly regarded among the Sioux, because he kept his word and because he never lied to them—and an Indian keeps his word, unless he has been corrupted by civilization. General Crook told these people he would go to Congress, that he had no power to modify the terms of the agreement, and if they would sign, he would come here and recommend that the $187,000 be paid to them in cash. He came here and made a report, and the President of the United States and the Secretary of the Interior recommended that this agreement, or this promise on the part of General Crook, should be carried out; and I offered an amendment to the Indian appropriation bill in 1890 to carry out this agreement, which was adopted by the Senate and rejected in conference.

In 1891 I offered a similar amendment, which was adopted by the Senate on the Indian appropriation bill and was rejected again in conference, the House refusing to agree to it. In 1892 I offered it again, with the same success; in 1893 again; in 1894 again, and in 1895 it was finally adopted with a provision that the money, instead of being paid in cash according to the agreement, should be put into the Treasury of the United States and held as a trust fund for the benefit of these Indians and that they should be paid 4 per cent upon it.

I insist if this money is ever paid it shall be paid according to the contract, according to the promise. I believe in keeping our agreements with these Indians and with all the Indians of this country—a thing which the United States has scarcely ever done. For years, Mr. President, from 1802 to 1889, there was never an agreement made with the bands of Indians called the Sissetons and Wahpetons and Medawakantons that was not altered by this body to the disadvantage of the Indians, and then ratified, and then we proceeded to enforce it. In some instances we took away nearly the entire consideration for which the Indians had made the treaty, then ratified it, and proceeded to enforce it.

These Indians are part of those same bands or tribes on this reservation to-day. With that history before their eyes, because of their great confidence in General Crook they signed this agreement. I insist that even at this late day, if anything is done with that fund, it shall be disposed of as we promised it should be disposed of.

I have received a letter from the chief of this band and signed by several of his council urging that this money be paid in cash and protesting against it being expended for the purchase of cattle or anything else; and he is right about it. Therefore, this amendment will have to be amended, so far as I am concerned, so as to provide for paying this money in cash; and we ought to pay it all.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, the statement of the Senator from South Dakota, the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, discloses an understanding between this band of Sioux Indians and the Government respecting what should be done with this money. I certainly would not be in favor of forcing upon those people, out of their annuity funds, stock cattle if we have promised in any way or if we are under any obligation to pay this money to them per capita. Therefore, I suggest to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE] to allow this matter to go over and have it considered with care by the Indian Committee, which is the proper committee to consider this question; and if there is an understanding that this money shall be paid to the Indians per capita, let a bill be brought in providing for such payment.

I remember now, although it had for the moment escaped my mind, that the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] has on several occasions insisted that this particular fund should be paid to these Indians per capita in accordance with the agreement made with General Crook. I think we ought to do quite as well as the Indians themselves; and if we have made such an agreement we ought to abide by it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I will say that my colleague read an extract from that agreement, in which the Indians said, "We will not be bound by this treaty unless the amount is paid in cash." Yet we have taken their land and we have held it since 1889, for ten years; we have covered it with settlers; the Indians have had no use of it; and still we have not kept our agreement with them.

Mr. ALLISON. Now, I hope the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair does not understand that the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KYLE] has yet been withdrawn.

Mr. ALLISON. I supposed the Senator from South Dakota had withdrawn the amendment.

Mr. KYLE. I want to say that I am always reluctant to force anything upon the Indians which is not agreeable to them; but it was the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Bliss, that they ought to have stock cattle in preference to cash, and that it would be a great deal better for them than to have the cash. For that reason I accepted the amendment last year and offered it. At the same time, I am a stickler for carrying out the exact provisions of all our agreements with all of the Indian tribes. These Indians want cash. They asked for it last year, and they ask for it again this year. If by deferring the matter a short time we can get the cash for them, I am perfectly willing that that shall be done, and will withdraw the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. TURNER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment submitted by the Senator from Washington will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 46, line 9, after the amendment already adopted, it is proposed to insert:

That the Indians of the Yakima Indian Reservation, to whom lands have been allotted under the laws of the United States, may lease their lands so allotted for agricultural purposes for a term not exceeding five years, under such rules and regulations as are or may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, anything in the law now limiting the term to a shorter term notwithstanding.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment which has been read.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I have no objection to that amendment. I think the reasons for it are good. The existing law provides for three years' leases for agricultural purposes. This amendment will increase the term of a lease to five years; and upon this reservation irrigation is required in order to raise crops. It is on the east side of the Cascade Mountains, in the State of Washington--close to the mountains on the east side; in fact, right up against the mountains, where the range is intersected by a high mountain range 8,000 feet high.

Next to the mountains on the east side there is a little range, and the irrigation comes from streams flowing from those mountains. It is impossible, as I understand it, to make leases for three years and secure the building of the necessary lateral ditches to cover the land with water. It is therefore important that this amendment shall be adopted. It will do no harm at least to try the experiment under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Washington [Mr. TURNER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the committee amendment already adopted, following line 15, on page 42, it is proposed to insert:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to appoint a register of deeds for each of the Five Civilized Tribes in Indian Territory, said appointees to be residents of Indian Territory; and the registers of deeds so appointed shall have power, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to appoint deputies, and they shall possess and exercise all the powers of registers of deeds as provided by the statutes of the State of Arkansas; and the statutes of the State of Arkansas in relation to all records kept by registers of deeds shall be in full force in said Indian Territory. The Secretary shall make the rules and regulations necessary to carry this provision into effect.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. This amendment is legislation and ought not to be on an appropriation bill. It ought not to be passed. It is rather too late in the afternoon for the reasons to be discussed, but if the amendment is to be discussed, I hope the Senate will adjourn and let the matter come up to-morrow.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator from South Dakota will withdraw the amendment if there is objection to it. It is legislation and subject to the point of order. I suppose the Senator from Arkansas intends to make the point of order against it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Of course I will make the point of order, but I do not want to make it if the Senator from South Dakota wishes to discuss the amendment. If he can show any substantial reason why this legislation ought to be had I shall be glad to hear it. I am not opposed to it captiously, but I do think it ought not to be passed. It proposes a radical change in the condition of affairs in the Indian Territory without any sufficient reason being given for it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like very briefly indeed to state the reasons why I have offered the amendment. I do not care to take more than a very brief portion of the time of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I hope the Senator from Iowa will allow us to adjourn, and in the meantime I will confer with the Senator from South Dakota regarding the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I will make the point of order myself after the Senator from South Dakota concludes his observations. I want to finish the bill to-night if possible. I think it will take only a few minutes now.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will allow a brief executive session, whenever the time comes, of two or three minutes, for matters of importance.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I do not wish to interfere with the convenience of other Senators, but it is now twenty minutes after 5 o'clock.

Mr. ALLISON. It will take but a few minutes now, I think, to finish the bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I shall not be over five minutes in making my statement in regard to the amendment.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I do not like to make the point of order arbitrarily against the proposition of the Senator from South Dakota, but I do think that it is a proposition which is not wise, and that it ought not to become a part of this bill. At the same time, if I have an opportunity to go over the matter, I might change my mind. I will have no objection to an executive session so as to let this matter be taken up to-morrow morning and then disposed of. In the meantime I will look into the question involved in the amendment, and probably may be willing to have it disposed of without any delay. I certainly shall not delay the Senate longer than will be absolutely necessary. So I suggest to the Senator from Iowa to let us have an executive session.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope we shall finish the bill before we go into executive session. It will only take a few moments now.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, we have done amazingly well with the bill to-day, and it seems to me the Senator from Iowa ought not to insist on longer continuing its consideration. It will certainly take only a short time to conclude it to-morrow morning. I do not like to take any arbitrary course as to the amendment suggested by the Senator from South Dakota, but I should like to have an opportunity to look into it. I think it will take only a few minutes to-morrow, and the bill can then be easily disposed of. I hope the Senator from Iowa will let the bill go over, so that we may have an executive session now, and dispose of the bill to-morrow. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. ALLISON. I am willing to make any reasonable arrangement respecting the bill. I desire to get it into the Senate and have the amendments already agreed to as in Committee of the Whole concurred in. Then I shall be willing to adjourn until to-morrow, or to go into executive session, but just on the completion of the bill it seems unwise for us to now go into executive session. I hope the Senator from Arkansas will not press that motion at this moment.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It seems to me that we have done well this afternoon with the pending bill. We have gotten along rapidly. We have done more than could have been reasonably expected when the afternoon began, and I do not think it will take more than a few minutes to dispose of the bill to-morrow. I do think the proposed amendment of the Senator from South Dakota is of sufficient importance to be examined carefully. I am in good faith about it. I should like to have an opportunity to examine the matter before it is disposed of, and that can not be done now. We have not the time to do it now unless we sit very much longer than I think any Senator is willing to stay here to-day. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to stay if the Senate wants to stay here a sufficient time to examine this question.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the routine business to-morrow morning the pending Indian appropriation bill shall be taken up for consideration and continued until it is completed.

Mr. GORMAN and Mr. JONES of Arkansas. That is right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there unanimous consent to the request from the Senator from Iowa that the pending bill be taken up immediately after the routine business to-morrow morning? The Chair hears no objection, and that is the order.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CARTER. I hope the Senator will withdraw that motion.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I withdraw that motion.

DENNIS FITZPATRICK.

Mr. LODGE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 375) to remove the charge of desertion standing against Dennis Fitzpatrick. It is a bill of only a few lines.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Navy to amend the records on file in the Navy Department so as to show that Dennis Fitzpatrick was honorably discharged as a seaman in the United States Navy from the U. S. S. Wanderer, and to issue to him an honorable discharge, to date from the 17th of July, 1863.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TWELFTH AND SUBSEQUENT CENSUSES.

Mr. CARTER. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate House bill No. 11815 for the purpose of a motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the bill (H. R. 11815) to provide for taking the Twelfth and subsequent censuses.

Mr. CARTER. I move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert in lieu thereof all after the enacting clause of Senate bill 4545, which was passed by the Senate on the 8th of June last.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana.

Mr. HAWLEY. Let us understand distinctly what the motion is.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I suggest to the Senator from Montana that he had better have the House bill printed.

Mr. CARTER. It is desirable to get the bill into conference and have it disposed of as promptly as possible. I will explain the legislative situation which leads to this motion.

Instead of amending the Senate bill, the House of Representatives passed a separate and distinct bill, practically in all respects like unto the Senate bill. The amendments are not of a material character, except in one particular, where the House bill proposes the establishment of an independent bureau. The desire is to get the bill into conference, and for that purpose I move to strike out all of the House bill after the enacting clause, and to insert the Senate bill, which has heretofore passed this body.

Mr. ALLISON. If the House has inserted a bill as a substitute for the Senate bill, all that is necessary is to disagree to the House amendment and then the bill can be got into conference.

Mr. CARTER. But the House of Representatives passed a separate and distinct bill, I will say to the Senator—a House bill—and I desire to get the matter into conference.

Mr. PASCO. This subject is one too important to take up when the Senate is so thin as it is now, and I object to the consideration of the bill at the present time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

WILLIAM D. KURFISS.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8336) to correct the military record of William D. Kurfiss, which was reported unanimously from the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. What has become of the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER]?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection was made to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Montana at this time.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the bill named by me may now be taken up.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to correct the record of William D. Kurfiss, private, Company F, First Ohio Cavalry, so as to show his honorable discharge from the service on December 1, 1864.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

IOWA AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to report from the Committee on Finance a local bill relating to a matter in my own State. It is the bill (H. R. 10398) providing for the entry, free of customs duties, of certain bells presented by Edwin M. Stanton to the Iowa Agricultural College, of Ames, Iowa. As it will take but a moment, I hope unanimous consent will be given to have it considered now.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read.

Mr. ALLISON. It will explain itself.

The Secretary read the bill; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

Mr. COCKRELL. What kind of bells are they?

Mr. ALLISON. They are chimes, purchased by Mr. Stanton abroad and presented to the college.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GORMAN. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, February 8, 1899, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate, February 7, 1899.

COINER.

Mayer Cahen, of Louisiana, to be coiner of the mint of the United States at New Orleans, La., vice H. Gibbs Morgan, removed. The nomination of Mayer Cohen to the above-named office, which was delivered to the Senate on the 4th instant, is hereby withdrawn.

PROFESSOR OF MATHEMATICS.

Mr. Thomas J. J. See, a citizen of Minnesota, to be a professor of mathematics in the Navy (subject to the examinations required by law) to fill a vacancy existing in that grade.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 7, 1899.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

John W. Mix, of Connecticut, to be collector of customs for the district of New Haven, in the State of Connecticut.

POSTMASTER.

Guy C. Toye, to be postmaster at Northwood, in the county of Worth and State of Iowa.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, February 7, 1899.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. BROMWELL. Mr. Speaker, House bill 11195 having been inadvertently and improperly referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, I ask consent that this bill, with all the papers on file relating to it, be withdrawn from that committee and referred to the Committee on Claims.

The SPEAKER. The Committee on Ways and Means can change the reference through the box.

NATIONAL FISHERY CONGRESS.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I have a report from the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. Is it a privileged report?

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is not privileged.

The SPEAKER. Then it is by unanimous consent of the House.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 3,000 copies of the Proceedings and Papers of the National Fishery Congress, held at Tampa, Fla., January 19 to 24, 1898, as contained in the Bulletin of the United States Fish Commission, volume 17, for 1897 (Document No. 561, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session), of which 500 shall be for the use of the Senate, 1,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,500 for the use of the Fish Commission.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Let the report be read. It is very brief, and shows that it will cost only $580.

The Clerk read the report (by Mr. RICHARDSON), as follows:

Your Committee on Printing, having had under consideration Senate concurrent resolution No. 50, to print 3,000 copies of the Proceedings and Papers of the National Fishery Congress, held at Tampa, Fla., January 19 to 24, 1898, as contained in the Bulletin of the United States Fish Commission, volume 17, for 1897 (Document No. 561, Fifty-fifth Congress, second session), recommend that the same be agreed to.

The Public Printer estimates the cost of printing, with paper covers, under this resolution at $580.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I ask for the passage of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The resolution was then agreed to.

On motion of Mr. RICHARDSON, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering bills reported to the House by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Pending that, I move that the general debate in the Committee of the Whole be limited to ten minutes to each bill, and on that I move the previous question.

Mr. DOCKERY. I make the point of order on that, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is sustained. The gentleman from Nebraska moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of bills for public buildings presented under the order passed yesterday.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union (Mr. SHERMAN in the chair) for the consideration of bills making appropriations for public buildings.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

The bill (S. 1964) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Newport News, Va., was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States custom house, post-office, and other Government offices, in the city of Newport News and State of Virginia, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $105,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such other as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reason therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 7 and 11 strike out the word "elevators."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-five."

Mr. MERCER. I ask the adoption of the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask the gentleman to yield to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendments offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER].

Mr. DOCKERY. General debate has not been closed yet.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk reports that the amendments of the committee have been read in connection with the bill. The question is on agreeing to them.

Mr. DOCKERY. General debate has not been closed yet. I hope the rules of the House will be observed by the Chair at the outset.

Mr. MERCER. Well, Mr. Chairman, if it is not desired to have general debate, I suppose we can pass upon the amendments pending.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] ask the floor to discuss this bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask the floor for the purpose of general debate, and I think it will expedite the consideration of these bills if the gentlemen in charge of them will allow some statements to be made——

Mr. MERCER. I desire to say that the committee has given these bills the most careful attention, and if any mistake has been made it has been along the lines of economy rather than along the lines of extravagance. Gentlemen will allow me to say that the bills reported to the House—78 of them—do not carry over $11,000,000.

Mr. BAILEY. Will the gentleman state to the House what principle the committee has followed in determining the order in which these bills will be considered?

Mr. MERCER. We have not followed any——

Mr. BAILEY. Well, has the committee agreed upon the order in which they will be considered?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir; the committee may change the order as we go along.

Mr. BAILEY. Well, has the committee agreed already—do I not make myself plain?

Mr. MERCER. I do not quite understand the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. Does the gentleman from Nebraska intend to call up such bills as he pleases, or has he been instructed by the committee to call them up in a certain order?

Mr. MERCER. I am instructed by the committee, and I intend to follow out those instructions.

Mr. BAILEY. That was my inquiry.

Mr. MERCER. I did not understand the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. Then I ask, upon what principle did the committee determine the order in which these bills should be considered?

Mr. MERCER. According to the best interests of the country.

Mr. BAILEY. That is a very general statement. I presume that every committee in the House determines every action that it takes in accordance with that principle. But I am trying to arrive at this: Is the order agreed upon by the committee according to States or districts, or what? If the gentleman will bear with me a moment——

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. I will at least by illustration make plain what I am trying to arrive at. It seems to me it ought to have been decided that each State entitled to a bill at all should have its bill considered before any other State has two bills considered.

Mr. MERCER. I will say to the gentleman that 38 States are represented in this list as reported.

Mr. BAILEY. That seems to be a fair distribution of favors. But are those bills one after another for different States, or do you give some States two bills before you give other States any?

Mr. MERCER. I will say to the gentleman that we will come to that as we go along in the consideration of the bills.

Mr. BAILEY. I have no desire to interrupt or interfere with the consideration of these bills. It has been a year, I believe, since any bills of this class have passed.

Mr. MERCER. It has been.

Mr. BAILEY. So far as I am concerned, I believe that wherever the Federal Government holds a session of its court it ought to have a court-house.

Mr. MERCER. So do I.

Mr. BAILEY. I carry my doctrine of the separation of the State and Federal governments to the point of separating, if I can, the buildings in which they hold court.

Mr. MERCER. I will say to the gentleman that two of these bills are for public buildings at Beaumont and Abilene, in his own State.

Mr. BAILEY. That appeals to my friend who sits beside me rather than to myself. If there were a bill for a public building in my district——

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman did not ask for any.

Mr. BAILEY. No; and I would never ask for any; and that consideration does not influence my action in regard to any State or district that may be entitled to a public building.

Mr. MERCER. I would not insinuate any such thing.

Mr. BAILEY. But inasmuch as the committee has allowed public buildings to 38 States of the Union, I believe that each State ought to have a hearing for one bill before any other State is heard twice. That is what I am trying to arrive at.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of informing the committee as to the question suggested in regard to the order of consideration of these bills and arranging the Calendar, I will state that the committee endeavored, as far as possible, to distribute the bills not only according to States, but according to representation on this floor. That is to say, we endeavored to give to Democratic districts a fair representation as to the number of bills to be considered and to give them a fair place on the Calendar.

Mr. MADDOX. I understand that there are none of the bills on the Calendar.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It has just been printed.

Mr. MERCER. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of this morning shows the bills.

A MEMBER. But not the order of their consideration in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BAILEY. Of course I presume that, in the consideration of the bills, the members of the committee are first to be served. If the committee has not provided for itself in that way, it is the only committee in the House, I think, that would not have done so.

Mr. MERCER. Oh, well, the committee has not been specially bashful in that regard. [Laughter.]

Mr. BANKHEAD. The committee, I will state, has provided for itself. There are 5 Democrats and 10 Republicans on the committee. Now, the first fifteen bills to be taken up and considered by the Committee of the Whole are distributed as follows: Nine are Republican bills and six Democratic.

Mr. BAILEY. Well, that seems to be almost a fair proportion. [Laughter.]

Mr. BARTLETT. I would like to ask the gentleman if the proceeding in the committee with reference to the consideration of the bills is to be in the order that we find the bills in the RECORD of this morning?

Mr. BANKHEAD. You mean to call up the bills as they appear on the Calendar?

Mr. BARTLETT. None are on the Calendar, I believe.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Well, as they are reported.

Mr. HEPBURN. The RECORD contains the bills reported.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not know that the list as published will be strictly adhered to. But I can say this much, that if gentlemen will be patient, and not purposely or offensively hamper the proceedings of the committee, I think we can dispose of all of the bills which have been placed on the Calendar within the time allotted to the committee.

Mr. BARTLETT. I want to get my bill considered.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I ask a vote upon the motion.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that until after we have concluded general debate.

Mr. MERCER. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to occupy a brief time, not exceeding ten or fifteen minutes.

Mr. MERCER. Then I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman in charge of the bill for his courtesy.

I wish to say at the outset that so far as I am concerned, I have no purpose whatever to occupy one moment of unnecessary time of the committee in what might be termed filibustering methods, or methods employed to unnecessarily delay the consideration of any of the bills proposed by the committee.

But I wish to suggest to the gentleman from Nebraska, in view of the fact that the seventy-eight bills reported yesterday and to-day involve a Treasury liability of $10,923,900, he owes it to the House and to each Representative, and we all owe it to the National Treasury, that there should be a fair consideration of each and every bill that is presented. A statement should be made in each case, either by reading the report or an explanation by some gentleman who introduced the bill or who is familiar with the facts, setting out the salient points, so as to enable the House to reach an intelligent judgment.

Seventy-one bills were reported yesterday, and my information is that they are to be considered in the following order:

S. 1964, Newport News, Va.; H. R. 10969, Blair, Nebr.; S. 1273, Altoona, Pa.; H. R. 1088, Elizabeth City, N. C.; S. 703, Oakland, Cal.; H. R. 11861, Elmira, N. Y.; H. R. 1139, Hot Springs, Ark.; H. R. 521, Fitchburg, Mass.; H. R. 11883, Brunswick, N. J.; H. R. 11314, New Iberia, La.; H. R. 5974, Bluefield, W. Va.; H. R. 10962, Joliet, Ill.; H. R. 447, Brunswick, Ga.; S. 1056, Cleveland, Ohio; H. R. 4076, Topeka, Kans.; S. 925, Beaumont, Tex.; H. R. 484, Dubuque, Iowa; H. R. 6, Omaha, Nebr.; S. 1271, Wilkesbarre, Pa.—

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BERRY. I do not think the gentleman is confining himself to the question under discussion. I do not see the relevancy of the long list of names he is reading.

Mr. DOCKERY. I can state to the gentleman that he will lose time if he begins that——

Mr. BERRY. Oh, I do not know.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from Kentucky suggests the absence of relevancy. Why, Mr. Chairman, the whole question of the expediency of the construction of these public buildings is in order in general debate.

Mr. BERRY. But the matter before the House is the particular bill now under consideration, Senate bill 1964.

Mr. DOCKERY. But it is material to the House to show the number of bills and the amount involved.

But I will continue the reading of this list:

H. R. 5536, Jackson, Miss.; H. R. 4306, Elgin, Ill.; H. R. 11056, Minneapolis, Minn.; S. 164, Butte City, Mont.; H. R. 11360, Creston, Iowa; H. R. 11141, Annapolis, Md.; S. 1806, Salt Lake City, Utah; H. R. 11162, Janesville, Wis.; H. R. 11728, Bridgeport, Conn.; H. R. 2, Indianapolis, Ind.; S. 140, Indianapolis, Ind.

There seems to be two bills reported for Indianapolis, Ind., but I suppose there is an error somewhere.

S. 346, Seattle, Wash.; H. R. 75, Canton, Ohio; H. R. 11530, Springfield, Mass.; S. 88, Hastings and Norfolk, Nebr.; H. R. 9077, city of New York (amendatory); S. 2048, Fergus Falls, Minn.; H. R. 11686, Brooklyn, N. Y.; H. R. 2129, Kansas City, Kans.; S. 710, Baltimore, Md.; H. R. 11965, Clinton, Iowa; H. R. 1663, Carrollton, Ky.; H. R. 10894, Anniston, Ala.; H. R. 524, Lawrence, Mass.; H. R. 2314, Bristol, Tenn.; H. R. 11769, purchase square 235, Washington, D. C.; H. R. 11882, Stockton, Cal.; H. R. 414, Tampa, Fla.; H. R. 4595, Norwich, Conn.; S. 109, Aberdeen, S. Dak.; H. R. 2056, Menominee, Mich.; S. 244, Joplin, Mo.; H. R. 5528, Salem, Oreg.; H. R. 4113, St. Cloud, Minn.; S. 927, Abilene, Tex.; H. R. 2598, Newport, Vt.; H. R. 431, Streator, Ill.; H. R. 2879, Leadville, Colo.; H. R. 4756, system filtration water supply, Capitol; H. R. 4313, Jamestown, N. Y.; H. R. 477, Eau Claire, Wis.; H. R. 10753, Macon, Ga.; H. R. 1859, Winston, N. C.; H. R. 1079, Columbus, Ga.; H. R. 1642, Green Bay, Wis.; H. R. 1631, Rome, N. Y.; H. R. 5013, San Diego, Cal.; H. R. 9088, Evanston, Ill.; H. R. 4096, Portsmouth, Va.; S. 3525, Providence, R. I.; H. R. 84, Freeport, Ill.; S. 1749, Durham, N. C.

Mr. Speaker, I understood from the gentleman in charge of the bill that six other bills were to be reported this morning, so that the total number of bills reported by the committee to be considered during the two days under the special order is 78, carrying, as I have heretofore stated, $10,923,900 of liabilities.

Now, then, the gentleman from Texas has humorously suggested the propriety of the committee taking care of itself, and it must be admitted that it has very cleverly done that. I make no complaint. I find that of the States represented on the committee Nebraska has 2 bills; Pennsylvania, 2; California, 2; New York, 4, with an amendatory act in addition; Illinois, 5; Missouri, 1. Maine has none, although Maine has a member of that committee.

Mr. HOPKINS. The gentleman will understand that Maine has been heretofore provided with public buildings in all of the large places where the public necessities require them, just as they ought to be provided in other sections of the country.

Mr. DOCKERY. I supposed there was some explanation, but the absence of recognition among the bills reported was, for the time, somewhat startling. The explanation offered by the gentleman from Illinois is entirely satisfactory.

Mr. HOPKINS. I am glad that I have satisfied the gentleman.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is as I expected; Maine has already been cared for, Massachusetts has 3 bills; New Jersey, 1; West Virginia, 1; Alabama, 1; North Carolina, 3; Arkansas, 1; Louisiana, 1; Georgia, 2.

Mr. Chairman, I make no captious complaint about the members of the committee caring for their States, provided the bills are proper bills, and let me say in perfect frankness to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] in charge of these bills that so far as I am concerned, and speaking for myself only, I have no desire and no present purpose to occupy an unnecessary moment in the consideration of these measures. I recognize the fact that it has been some time since the House has dealt with the question of public buildings, and a great many buildings may be necessary, but I must insist that when each bill is read, the report be read or some other detail explanation be made.

Mr. MERCER. Oh, I will say to the gentleman that I think his suggestion is perfectly proper.

Mr. DOCKERY. Very well; and as I say, I believe there will be no disposition to delay the passage of the bills unnecessarily. If the fact develops that in a given case, in the judgment of members, the authorization should not be made, then of course it should be rejected or amended. So far as I know, there is no purpose to consume time for the sole object of delaying the passage of these bills.

Mr. MERCER. Does the gentleman from Missouri desire any further information about this bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. We have not had the report read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

Mr. BAILEY. Before the Clerk begins, I should like to say that it seems to me the committee will occupy its two days and will not then half complete its work. Now, I pretend to no experience about these matters, but it seems to me it would have been a good idea to have made a kind of river and harbor bill out of this, and to have reported all these propositions in one bill, and then let the committee undertake the defense of that bill as a whole. So far as I am concerned, without any special knowledge of the subject, I am very much inclined to follow the committee, especially where there is a unanimous report. And I believe if you had pursued that course, and taken the two days, with a fair discussion of it all, the committee would have prepared a bill defensible at every point.

Mr. MERCER. I will state to the gentleman from Texas that if we had taken that course we should have taken from the Treasury of the United States twice the money that we do by these bills.

Mr. BAILEY. I do not mean that you would have given everybody a bill that asked for it, without reference to the merits of the proposition. You have a number of meritorious bills that you expect to pass, among something like 50 bills; and if we are to have increased construction of public buildings, I have no disposition to criticise the way it has been done, and if it be concluded that we would have to spend $11,000,000, I should have selected the most meritorious bills and included them in one bill and passed that bill. In this way you will get some, perhaps, of the meritorious bills, and some other equally meritorious bills will never be heard.

Mr. MERCER. Will the gentleman from Texas consent that we report all bills favorably to the House and have no further consideration in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. BAILEY. I will consent to whatever my political friends on the committee do.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Make that request.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. BANKHEAD) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, having had under consideration the bills (H. R. 4092 and S. 1964) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Newport News, Va., respectfully report:

A bill similar to this passed the Senate in the Fifty-fifth, Fifty-fourth, Fifty-third, Fifty-second, Fifty-first, and Fiftieth Congresses, and was reported favorably from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds of the House of Representatives in each Congress. For the sixth time it comes before this body.

Newport News continually grows, and the demand for a building there grows greater each successive year.

The business transacted at the Newport News post-office is increasing rapidly. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, the total business transacted by the office amounted to $85,678.27; the next year showed the amount increased to $105,084.04. This year it is estimated that the business will reach not less than $150,000.

Since these reports were made Newport News has continually improved, and it is believed that this building can be contracted for now cheaper than heretofore, and that the need for it will continually increase. The shipbuilding plant at Newport News is claimed to be the best in the United States. It was established at a cost of $15,000,000; it employs about 5,000 men; it has built ships for the Government as well as for private parties, and every consideration of public policy would seem to be against a further postponement of a structure which will become more and more necessary each successive year.

Since the last report was made there has been a contract entered into by the Maxim Gun Company and others to establish the largest gun foundry on this continent, employing over 5,000 men. We wish to say further that the cash value of exports for 1898 exceed $93,000,000, notwithstanding the war.

The entrances and clearances have increased 30 per cent over 1895. The imports are increasing about $1,000,000 a year. The largest dry dock in the world is located here.

Since the first recommendation for a public building at Newport News the population of the city has more than doubled. The committee recommend the passage of Senate bill No. 1964, which passed the Senate January 6, 1898, and which is substituted for H. R. 4092, with the following amendments:

In lines 7 and 11 strike out the word "elevators."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-five."

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there any United States port there?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BLAIR, NEBR.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 10969) for the erection of a public building in the city of Blair, Nebr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise provide a suitable site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other offices of the Government at Blair, Nebr. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $50,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor place for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $50,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building independent and unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall remain the owner thereof.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for the reading of the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10969) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Blair, Nebr., have considered the same and make the following report:

Blair, Nebr., is the county seat of Washington County, one of the richest agricultural counties in Nebraska. It is a railroad center of fair proportions, being the junction of the Northwestern system, running from Chicago to the Black Hills country, and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad, running from Omaha to Minneapolis. The post-office facilities in Blair are very poor and do not accommodate the growing business of that enterprising city. For some time complaints have been made by the citizens generally because of the poor post-office accommodations, and the Government could not make a better investment than by securing a site and constructing a public building thereon for post-office purposes. After a thorough investigation of the evidence produced favoring the purchase of a site and construction of a Government building thereon, your committee is of the opinion that the sum of $43,000 is adequate for such a purpose and that such an expenditure will accommodate the business of this city for a great many years. Your committee therefore report the bill back in amended form, with the recommendation that the bill do pass amended as follows:

In line 6, page 1, after the word "building," insert the following words: "with fireproof vaults thereon."

In line 11, page 1, strike out the word "fifty" and insert the word "forty-three" in lieu thereof.

In line 5, page 2, strike out the word "fifty" and insert the word "forty-three" in lieu thereof.

In line 5, page 1, strike out the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

On page 2 strike out all after the word "alleys" in line 9.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the committee amendments be agreed to.

Mr. LACEY. I want to ask the gentleman a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LACEY. I should like to ask the gentleman what the population of Blair was as shown by the last census?

Mr. MERCER. About 5,000 now.

Mr. DOCKERY. How many?

Mr. MERCER. About 5,000.

Mr. LACEY. What were the postal receipts?

Mr. MERCER. Fourteen thousand dollars gross.

Mr. MOODY. Is there a United States court-house there?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir.

Mr. HOPKINS. There probably will be shortly.

Mr. DOCKERY. It seems to me that this is a most astonishing proposition—$43,000 for a public building in a city with a population of only 5,000!

Mr. MERCER. The Treasury Department recommended $43,000 and the bill called for $50,000. We have reported the bill in accordance with the amount recommended by the Treasury Department.

Mr. DOCKERY. Why, Mr. Chairman, I have four or five cities in my district, each one with perhaps 5,000 population, and it never occurred to me that the public service required me to introduce a bill providing either of them with a public building.

Mr. MERCER. Follow out the suggestion of the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. What suggestion?

Mr. MERCER. That the committee recommend some bills. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask——

Mr. DOCKERY. I do insist that it is a wanton waste of the public money to erect a public building in a town of 5,000 inhabitants when it is without a Federal court.

Mr. MERCER. It needs a post-office.

The question was taken; and the committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 95, noes 23.

So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ALTOONA, PA.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (S. 1273) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase by private sale or secure by condemnation a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the United States district and circuit courts, post office, and other Government offices, at the city of Altoona, in the county of Blair and State of Pennsylvania. The plans, specifications, and full estimate for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building, complete, the sum of $125,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will be sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited, after the site shall have been purchased or condemned and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and that no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Pennsylvania shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and the service of civil process therein.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Chairman, I call for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. HICKS) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bills (H. R. 3711 and S. 1273) for a public building at Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor, having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

The city of Altoona, situated in central Pennsylvania, at the eastern base of the Allegheny Mountains, on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, contains an estimated population of about 39,500 and a suburban population of about 12,000, nearly all of whom receive their mail at the Altoona post-office.

The principal shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company are and have been for a number of years located there, and within the past four years these shops have been largely added to by the erection of special works for the building of locomotives which are the most complete of their kind in the country. These, with many other industries, give employment to between 13,000 and 14,000 workingmen, the value of output in the year 1895 amounting to over $25,000,000. The surrounding country is traversed by an electric passenger railway and also by steam railroads, is largely developed, and abounds in iron and coal. The business and population of the city are rapidly increasing. The increase in population during the last fourteen years exceeds 24,000 in the city and its suburbs.

The following table shows the gross and net receipts at the post-office:

Fiscal year ending June 30—	Gross receipts.	Net receipts.
1888	$23,280.36	$10,850.39
1889	26,347.81	12,504.07
1890	32,702.53	15,777.62
1891	32,067.46	13,525.73
1892	34,308.98	13,911.94
1893	36,758.04	15,385.09
1894	34,367.16	12,231.31
1895	34,453.95	11,721.16
1896	36,795.50	14,485.69
1897	37,365.79	14,522.15
1898	41,077.85	17,697.08

At the same time the money-order business has increased, so that for the year ending June 30, 1898, there was received the large sum of $346,071.11 and for the past six months $206,736.64. This magnificent sum of money shows the growth and importance of the city and proves it to be the business center of a large part of the State of Pennsylvania.

The building now in use for post-office purposes costs the Government $1,600 for rent, light, and fuel per annum. Although it is the best that can be procured for that money in the city that is suitable for the purpose, it is entirely inadequate in size for the transaction of the public business. The dimensions of the room were, up to a short time ago, 18 by 56 feet. Public business had grown so that it had to be increased as much as the ground would permit, and an extension was built to the office. The entire space permitted by the location is now occupied, and with the extension the building is too small and is inadequate for the large and increasing business. The rental of a more suitable building near the business center of the city would cost treble the amount now paid.

Altoona is located about 120 miles east of Pittsburg, about the same distance southwest of Williamsport, about 130 miles west of Harrisburg, and a much greater distance from Erie and Scranton, at which places, except Harrisburg, United States courts are held. A building should be erected at Altoona sufficiently large to permit sessions of the court to be held there, and also the offices of the collector of internal revenue could be located in the building, to accommodate the large and increasing population of that part of Pennsylvania, as the great bituminous coal fields in that region are yet to a great extent undeveloped.

A bill providing for a public building at Altoona, at a cost of $150,000 for building and site, was favorably reported in the House in the Fifty-first and also in the Fifty-second Congress, and during the same session a bill was favorably reported to and passed in the Senate, and a similar bill was reported favorably to the House in the Fifty-third Congress, but failed of enactment because not reached on the Calendar. The report on the latter bill stated:

"The committee believes that a suitable site can be secured and a building erected thereon, such as will accommodate for many years to come all Federal business at Altoona, at a total cost not to exceed $125,000."

The bill was again reported to the Fifty-fourth Congress with a like recommendation that the cost of the same should not exceed the sum of $125,000. The present bill provides for that sum, which, in the judgment of your committee, will be sufficient, and is in accord with the reports of this committee in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth Congresses.

The necessity of the building needs no further argument than the figures given herein, and the needs of the Government for the proper transaction of its business are fully demonstrated by the facts recited. The Senate has twice passed a bill recognizing Altoona as a proper place for a public building, and has again, in the present Congress, enacted a similar measure, which is identical, in the sum of money authorized, to the House bill. Your committee therefore substitute Senate bill 1273 for House bill 3711, and recommend that House bill 3711 lie upon the table and that Senate bill 1273 be amended as follows:

Strike out in line 5, page 1, the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

In line 22, page 2, strike out all after the word "alleys."

And being so amended your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that I do not want to be considered as opposing any meritorious bill that these gentlemen have to report; and when we demand an explanation we are entitled to it, I think.

Mr. MERCER. Why, certainly. I tried to give it to the gentleman.

Mr. MADDOX. Yes. We have just passed a bill—I think the one now under consideration is a meritorious bill—evidently so, from the report. But we have just passed one for a town which, according to the census, has a population of 2,208.

Mr. MERCER. It has about 5,000.

Mr. LLOYD. Here is the census report.

Mr. MADDOX. If we are to build a post-office in every town in this country with not more than 2,000 population, I apprehend that it will take all the money we have. I want to say, if the gentlemen want to get along with these bills, and want to get along quickly with them, if they will rise to their feet and give an explanation of the bill and show its merits, giving all its merits, we will not oppose a bill if it is a meritorious bill; but it is our duty to stand here and contend that they give some explanation without members being required to call for it.

Mr. STEELE. Let me remind the gentleman that an explanation was given, namely, that there was a member on the committee——

Mr. MADDOX. Oh!

Mr. STEELE (continuing). That wanted that bill passed.

Mr. MADDOX. A member on the committee! I overlooked that fact. [Laughter.]

Mr. STEELE. The chairman of the committee stated that.

Mr. LLOYD. The unfortunate feature about this matter is that the chairman is mistaken about the population of his own town. He has specifically stated that the census of 1890 showed a population of over 5,000.

Mr. MERCER. I beg the gentleman's pardon——

Mr. WEYMOUTH. He said it now showed a popu'ation of 5,000.

Mr. LLOYD. The question of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] was, "What was the population in 1890?"

Mr. MERCER. I did not look up the population of 1890.

Mr. LLOYD rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD]?

Mr. MADDOX. I will yield.

Mr. LLOYD. I desire to ask if the chairman of the committee knows what were the receipts of that office in 1898?

Mr. MERCER. I understand something like $14,000. This is the Altoona bill that we are considering now.

Mr. LLOYD. Yes; but we are getting at the question whether the gentleman was mistaken about the population of the town of Blair.

Mr. MERCER. I think not, but I may have misunderstood the question of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY].

Mr. LLOYD. I think the gentleman did.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Chairman, I want to say a few words further. All we want is to know what we are doing. Yesterday these bills were reported. Up to that time no information could be had in regard to these matters at all. To-day it lies entirely within the breast of the chairman as to which bill he will call up. Of course, we have not had an opportunity or time to read the report and see what you propose to do. I have no captious objection to offer to any meritorious bill, but it strikes me that if there ever was a time in this country when we could defer the building of public buildings, this is the best time. We are appropriating money far beyond our receipts. We are issuing bonds and borrowing money to pay the legitimate expenses of the Government. The question is, Had not we better pay our honest debts before we appropriate more money to build these luxurious establishments?

A man that has a just claim against the Government can hardly get it through this House; it is almost impossible to do so, but he can get an appropriation by getting up a sort of logrolling concern as we have here, 38 States represented by 71 bills, each one having its influence with various delegations, and in that manner they all get in the combine and these matters can be rushed through. But if you come with an honest claim before the House, one that the Government owes, then it is almost impossible to get it passed.

Mr. HICKS. Will my friend from Georgia permit a question?

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly.

Mr. HICKS. I understand my friend from Georgia has no objection to the present bill under consideration?

Mr. MADDOX. I have said so; I believe it to be a meritorious one. I have said that unless the bills are meritorious, it is our duty to vote them down and not appropriate money under the circumstances.

Mr. HICKS. We agree with the gentleman.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of the chairman of this committee to one or two points. The town of Blair is in the gentleman's Congressional district.

Mr. MERCER. Yes.

Mr. COX. And it has not a population exceeding 4,000?

Mr. MERCER. About 5,000.

Mr. COX. Well, put it 5,000. Are there any Federal courts held there?

Mr. MERCER. I want to say that there are over 1,200 students in the schools.

Mr. COX. That is not my point. Are there any Federal courts held there?

Mr. MERCER. I have said no; but that bill is not now under consideration. We have disposed of that matter.

Mr. COX. I know; but I want to get at this so I can see about some other bill.

Mr. MERCER. I have given the gentleman all the information I have.

Mr. COX. I know that bill has been passed and it is now a back number, but the fact remains that there are no Federal courts, no revenue officers, nothing in the world except to put up a public building there for a post-office. I have got more than three towns in my district larger than that. Do you think it is right?

Mr. MERCER. Why did not the gentleman introduce a bill?

Mr. COX. Oh, you seem to be running the bills, and I am trying to run the objections. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 1088) to provide for the erection of a public building at Elizabeth City, N. C.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, or otherwise provide, a suitable site, and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the courts of the United States, post-office, and other offices of the Government at Elizabeth City, N. C. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $75,000, nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $75,000 for site and building. The site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of North Carolina shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof "fifty."

In line 21, page 2, substitute "fifty" for "seventy-five;" and in line 24, page 2, after the word "sum," insert the following words: "except the ordinary preliminary expenses."

Mr. MERCER obtained the floor.

Mr. SIMPSON rose.

Mr. MERCER. Does the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON] desire to ask a question?

Mr. SIMPSON. I think that before passing this bill we ought to have some further information in regard to the population, business, etc., of this place.

Mr. MERCER. I yield for a question.

Mr. SIMPSON. I should like to know the population of Elizabeth City, N. C.?

Mr. MERCER. I refer my friend from Kansas for information to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SKINNER].

Mr. SKINNER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SIMPSON], my personal and political friend, had imposed upon himself the labor to read the unanimous report of the committee, he would have known and publicly observed that the population of this town or city and its suburbs is about 8,000.

Mr. BRUCKER. How much?

Mr. SKINNER. Eight thousand.

Mr. BRUCKER. In 1890?

Mr. SKINNER. Not in 1890 as indicated by the census, but in the progressive present—now.

If the committee will admit, I will add as an addenda to the report that Elizabeth City is named for and after the good Queen Bess. I can not, I shall not, attempt to compass the time necessary to explain the geographical, historical, or topographical merits of Elizabeth City. This town is situate on Pasquotank River, practically in the center of what is commonly known as the Albemarle section of North Carolina. Elizabeth City is situate on the contemplated canal or inland waterway from Norfolk to Florida, immediately on the Norfolk and Southern Railroad, and I will add there is in immediate contemplation another road leading from Elizabeth City to Gates or Eure Station, N. C., unto, or rather into, the Norfolk and Carolina Railroad, which puts this interior coast country in communication with the State at large.

Mr. BRUCKER. The last road of which the gentleman speaks is only in contemplation.

Mr. SKINNER. Mr. Chairman, I shall be pleased to answer any inquiry about the population and size of this town, and give any other information that may be in my power. These appropriations for public buildings ought to be made along the line of meeting the needs of the public service. This bill has been favorably reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds for five successive sessions, with an appropriation of $100,000, and in that form it has been twice passed by the Senate. But as a member of the committee, in order that the committee might show a spirit of economy in its bills, I submitted to a reduction of $50,000.

The great merits, Mr. Chairman, on which this bill stands are two. First, that there is a Federal court, both district and circuit, held at this town, and that grand juries of the Federal court have more than four times presented the United States Government for not providing means and accommodations proper and sufficient for administering Federal justice in that community. Besides, Mr. Chairman——

A MEMBER. That is enough.

Another MEMBER. That settles it; we will give you the building.

Mr. McDOWELL. I should like to ask the gentleman from North Carolina a question. I observe that in 1890 this town had a population of 3,250. What is it that has boomed the town since that time?

Mr. SKINNER. It is because there have been railroads constructed, canals dug and others contemplated, and the people generally have caught the spirit of enterprise and progress. I will suggest to my friend, and through him to the country, that Elizabeth City is of a progressive, sacred, and historic country.

This Federal building is not contemplated as a convenience and service to the people of Elizabeth City alone, but it is intended as an accommodation, use, and service and convenience of the people inhabiting all this territory bordering on the waters of the Albemarle and Pamlico and their tributaries.

Elizabeth City has grown to be the metropolis of all this territory, and this, I will summarily remind this House, is not only a productive but a historic, and should be and I trust will ever be held as a sacred, territory. In short and substance, it is the cradle of this Government. Within its bailiwick the nation's flag was first unfurled, on its soil the Constitution first made an imprint, and under the cross dedicated this continent first to God and afterwards to liberty, and thereafter and eternally for civilization and humanity.

Within the county of Pasquotank, of which Elizabeth City is the county seat, was first organized legislative government on this continent. I have made an honest effort to have this sacred spot marked, as well as the landing of Sir Walter Raleigh's colony commemorated, by a fitting shaft. Thus far these efforts have proven futile, but now, at the metropolis of this historic and sacred territory, I can ask for a Federal building commensurate at least with the Federal business of that historic country.

[Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT OAKLAND, CAL.

The next business was the bill (S. 706) to provide for the purchase of a site for and the erection of a public building at Oakland, in the State of California.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Oakland and State of California, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $350,000, which said sum of $350,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary, and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site, and for necessary survey thereof, shall be immediately available.

So much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the approval by the Secretary of the Treasury of such site.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of California shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for, and the sketch plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "three" and insert the word "two," making the limit of cost $250,000; amend further by striking out all the words following "dollars," in line 13, up to and including the word "appropriated," in line 16, and strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

Also strike out lines 54 to 61, inclusive.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

Mr. LLOYD. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee some questions.

Mr. MERCER. I yield for a question.

Mr. LLOYD. I presume it would be well to have the report read. That perhaps will give the information we desire.

Mr. MERCER. All right; if the gentleman desires the report read, I have no objection.

The report (by Mr. HILBORN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bills (H. R. 1149 and S. 706) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Oakland, Cal., submit the following report:

Oakland is situated on the eastern shore of San Francisco Bay, being opposite to San Francisco, with which it is connected by ferry lines, which carry millions of passengers each year.

The system of transcontinental railroads has its terminus in Oakland. All the traffic between the Atlantic States and tide water on the Pacific, whether it goes by way of New Orleans and the Southern Pacific, by Kansas City and the Atchison, by Omaha and the Central Pacific, or overland from British Columbia, Washington, and Oregon, centers at Oakland, from which point freight is transferred to San Francisco by ferryboats.

A great part of the local traffic of three-fourths of the State, with the exception of a part of the wheat shipments, also centers here. The city has therefore all the importance of a great railroad terminus.

Oakland is also a shipping point, where business has increased from 154,200 tons of freight in 1874 to 2,623,831 in 1897.

During the year 1898, 155 vessels discharged foreign cargoes at its docks. These cargoes comprised 400,660 tons, composed as follows:

	Tons.
Wood, coal, and coke	189,460
Hay, grain, and flour	8,700
Lumber	107,850
Building materials	53,350
Sundries	41,200
Total	400,660

Its commerce will increase as its many miles of water front is developed and as the great improvements in the inner harbor, now being executed by the United States, are completed.

The city has been recently made a subport of entry, and the revenue officers occupy rented quarters.

Oakland is the county seat of Alameda County, and is the second city in wealth and the third in population west of the Missouri River. There has never been any cessation in its growth.

In 1870 it had 10,500 inhabitants; in 1880, 34,556, and in 1890, 48,682. Since the census of 1890 the limits of Oakland have been extended, and the city has now an area of 23 square miles and a population of 75,000, and with its suburbs, which will ultimately become a part of the municipality, contains a population of upward of 150,000.

The city has 104 miles of macadamized streets and 6¼ miles of bituminized streets. It has 70 miles of electric railroad.

Oakland is an educational center. It is aptly called the "Athens of the Pacific." Within its environs is located the great University of California, with an endowment of $11,000,000 and over 2,000 students, besides five other colleges.

Its public schools number 19, with 15,497 pupils and 238 teachers. The public-school property is worth over $1,500,000.

It has also 27 private schools and academies, 10 libraries and reading rooms, 70 churches, and 15 hospitals.

The taxable property has gradually increased, as shown by the assessment rolls, from $581,121 in 1862 to $28,691,610 in 1880, $39,453,392 in 1890, $44,821,230 in 1893, and $49,279,000 in 1898. The value of property within the present city limits is $100,000,000. The manufacturing interests have assumed equally significant proportions, many of the greatest iron, steel, wood, cotton, and jute plants in California being centered there.

The post-office facilities of Oakland, for a place of its size and importance, have always been most discreditable.

The main office has frequently been shifted from one place to another, and the Government is now paying a rental of $2,850 for the premises used as a post-office.

The total number of square feet used for post-office purposes is at present 6,750, and yet the quarters are inconveniently crowded.

Number of clerks, carriers, etc.:
1888	39
1898	48
Allowance for rent:
1888	$1,200
1898	2,850
Net revenue:
1888	35,722
1898	47,315
Gross receipts:
1897	102,895
1898 (usual ratio of increase), about	105,000

In view of the foregoing facts, your committee recommend that Senate bill 706 be substituted for House bill 1149, and that it pass with the following amendments:

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "three" and insert the word "two," making the limit of cost $250,000, and amend further by striking out all the words following "dollars," in line 13, up to and including the word "appropriated," in line 16, and strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill; also, strike out lines 54 to 61, inclusive.

Mr. LLOYD. Is there a Federal court established at this point?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir.

Mr. HILBORN. It is a city of 75,000 inhabitants.

Mr. LLOYD. It seems to be a meritorious bill. The only question to be determined, I think, would be as to the amount of the appropriation.

Mr. MERCER. This city is a port of entry; and a large custom-house business is done there. It is across the bay from San Francisco.

Mr. LLOYD. On what did the committee, in each of these cases, base the amount to be appropriated for the erection of a public building?

Mr. MERCER. In this case, upon the amount of business done not only by the post-office, but by the custom-house. There is a very large custom-house business at Oakland; an enormous revenue is collected there, and a large number of people are employed.

Mr. HANDY. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether there is a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury recommending the erection of this building. If so, I would like to hear it read.

Mr. MERCER. There is a letter, I will state, from the Secretary of the Treasury, who suggests the appropriation of more money by $15,000 than the bill calls for.

Mr. HANDY. If the gentleman has the letter at hand I hope he will have it read for the information of the committee.

Mr. MERCER. I do not think I have it at hand. It is a very long letter. The substance of it has been already stated, however, in the report.

The committee has not authorized, I will repeat, as much as the Secretary suggests is necessary for the construction of this building.

Mr. HANDY. I notice, in following closely the reading of the report, that it seems to be a large advertisement of various features of Oakland, Cal., features which have nothing whatever to do with the alleged need for the construction of a public building in that city or with the appropriation of the public money for such a purpose. The report tells us the number of inhabitants, and it speaks of other features of the city, none of which have anything whatever to do with the construction of public buildings. It tells also the number of school children in the city, and gives various other similar statistics. It tells about the university located there, and goes on to describe innumerable things which do not relate at all to a public building.

There are only two items in the report, so far as I have been able to observe from the reading of it, which seem in any degree to have anything to do with a public building. One is that this city of Oakland is a subport of entry—not a custom-house city, but a subport of entry. The other pertinent item is in reference to the post-office facilities. The report shows that the post-office facilities are at present costing the Government of the United States the sum of $2,850 per annum. The gentleman proposes now, by the bill before the committee, to put up a public building there to cost $250,000. As far as we can gather from the reading of the report, the only object is to provide post-office facilities. That sum of money even at 4 per cent a year would amount to $10,000, while the present expense is but $2,850.

Mr. MERCER. Has the gentleman from Delaware ever been to Oakland, Cal.?

Mr. HANDY. No, "the gentleman from Delaware" has never been to Oakland, Cal., but he has read the report of the committee, made by the gentleman from California [Mr. HILBORN], and supposes that the author of the report has been at Oakland and knows what he is writing about.

Mr. MERCER. He lives at Oakland.

Mr. HANDY. And I have been discussing this matter from the figures given by the report itself.

Mr. MERCER. How much time does the gentleman desire, may I ask?

Mr. HANDY. I would like to hear an explanation from the gentleman from California who makes the report as to the necessities of the appropriation. I do not think that my having been at Oakland or not having been there has anything whatever to do with the question at issue here. But the needs of the Government service, whether they require a building to cost $250,000 at that point, and whether it is advisable to make provision of this character under the circumstances detailed in the report, are matters that it is our duty to investigate.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HILBORN. Mr. Chairman, Oakland, Cal., is situated on the bay of San Francisco, opposite the city of San Francisco, and has an area of 23 square miles, with a population of 75,000 people. With the contiguous territory which is shortly to be annexed to the city it will have a total population of 150,000 people.

The property value in the city at present is over $100,000,000, and its assessed valuation is nearly $50,000,000——

Mr. HANDY (interrupting). What has that to do with the bill under consideration, which is to provide a public building for Federal purposes in the city?

Mr. HILBORN. It is in order to show the importance of the city and necessity of providing for the wants of 75,000 people who want post-office facilities.

Mr. MADDOX. What are the receipts of the post-office there?

Mr. HILBORN (continuing). The city has been transacting the business of the post-office in various buildings, shifting about from one quarter to another, and necessarily in unsafe quarters; and we believe that a great, rich, important city like that ought to have a post-office building, especially as the postal receipts are steadily increasing and are now very large. We believe the time has come when this building should be erected.

My inquiry, Mr. Chairman, shows me that there is not another city in the United States that has a population as great as Oakland which is without a post-office building and without proper postal facilities, as we are now.

Mr. HANDY. How many employees are in the post-office there now?

Mr. HILBORN. I think 48.

Mr. HANDY. And how many are employed in the subport of entry?

Mr. HILBORN. I do not know. I do know, however, that the receipts of the post-office in 1897 reached the sum of $102,000, and they are estimated this year at $105,000 and over.

Mr. HANDY. It would seem that this $250,000 proposed to be appropriated by the bill is to be spent almost exclusively for the post-office. This city has no Federal court, no Federal offices, and is only a subport of entry.

Mr. HILBORN. It is a subport of entry.

Mr. HANDY. Well, that does not amount to much.

Mr. HILBORN (continuing). The custom-house is at San Francisco, on the opposite side of the bay, and 8 miles off.

Mr. HANDY. As I have said, the city has no court, no marshals' offices, or Federal offices of any kind except a post-office, and yet $250,000 is to be appropriated for a post-office to take the place of an office now secured at a rental of $2,850 per annum.

Mr. HILBORN. I will state further to the committee, Mr. Chairman, that we are completing the harbor there, and last year 155 vessels came in from the sea to that port and discharged cargoes, and every year the commerce is increasing. With a good harbor, which is now being built, Oakland has a great commercial future.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill as amended be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELMIRA, N. Y.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 11861) for the erection of a public building at Elmira, N. Y.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable, commodious, and substantial building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, internal-revenue offices, and United States courts, and for other Government uses, in the city of Elmira and State of New York, the cost of the site and the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $185,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city for at least fourteen days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for opening the proposals.

The proposals made in response to said public advertisement, at the time named in the advertisement, or within ten days subsequent thereto, shall be received, opened, and considered by a commission of three persons, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to forward to the Secretary of the Treasury, within forty days of the date named in the advertisement for opening the proposals, a written report, with the original proposals, maps, etc., and the oaths prescribed by act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, and to definitely state in said report the site selected by them, and their selection of the site shall be final; and each commissioner shall be allowed a compensation for his services of an amount within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, said compensation not to exceed $200 and actual traveling expenses to each member.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum, except ordinary preliminary expenses, shall be expended until a valid title to said site shall be vested in the United States and the State of New York shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to hear the report read.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. MERCER. I am willing that the report should be read.

The report (by Mr. GILLET of New York) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11861) for the erection of a public building at Elmira, N. Y., having considered the same, respectfully reports:

Elmira is situated on the line of the Erie, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and the Lehigh Valley railroads at their point of intersection with the Northern Central Railroad, which runs from Baltimore, Md., to Rochester, N. Y., and at the junction of said roads with the Elmira, Cortland and Northern, running from Elmira to Canastota, on the line of the New York Central Railroad and the Tioga Railroad, running from Elmira to Blossburg, in Tioga County, Pa. The distance from Elmira to Buffalo is 160 miles; to Rochester, 97 miles; to Canandaigua, 69 miles; to Syracuse, 165 miles; to Utica, 179 miles, and to Albany 200 miles.

It is the geographical and business center of territory extending from 75 to 100 miles in all directions therefrom, and there is no Federal building of the United States of any description nearer than the cities above named.

By the census of 1880 the population of Elmira was 20,541; by the census of 1890 it was 30,893, being an increase of 50 per cent in ten years, and the present population is over 40,000, which proves that the city is maintaining its position as one of the leading interior cities of the State of New York. It is the commercial and business center of the territory above described and the largest city in the southern tier of counties of New York, being a distributing point for the mails to most of the towns throughout the territory above mentioned.

The receipts of the post-office have been constantly growing year by year.

The following figures show the gross receipts and net proceeds of the office:

Year.	Gross receipts.	Net proceeds.
1890	$55,529.11	$30,745.61
1892	62,493.66	33,325.55
1894	67,705.05	37,000.64
1896	67,068.11	29,616.64
1898	80,133.97	34,335.04

This represents a rapid as well as a permanent increase of the business of the post-office. Total of money-order business in 1898 was $454,503.83.

There are now on the roster of the office 22 letter carriers, 16 clerks, 1 substitute clerk, 4 stamp agents, and 2 special-delivery messengers; total, 50; and the present office is entirely inadequate for the vast volume of business transacted.

The office of the United States marshal of the northern district of New York is located at Elmira. This district extends over 46 counties of the State, requiring the services of 17 field deputies and 5 clerks. The business is continually increasing, and should have adequate office accommodations.

The office of the deputy collector of internal revenue for the Sixth district is located at Elmira. The office is in charge of a deputy collector and the force consists of two deputies and a gauger. The receipts of the office are about $100,000 per annum, and are constantly increasing.

The importance of the postal and other Federal business at Elmira demands that there should be provided a convenient fireproof building, containing fireproof vaults, built expressly for Government purposes. It is believed that this can be done at an expenditure, including the cost of the site, of $185,000.

Your committee therefore recommends the passage of the bill.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee for a question.

Mr. COX. Well, I rise for another purpose. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska yields to the gentleman from Tennessee five minutes.

Mr. COX. I am not satisfied with that Blair business yet and that Blair bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. I can not understand the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. COX. I am going to make you understand me. Of course you have passed the bill for your Blair post-office.

Mr. MERCER. Now, I will say to the gentleman from Tennessee——

Mr. COX. Let me make my statement.

Mr. MERCER. I am always glad to listen to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. COX. That is very kind.

Mr. MERCER. Always.

Mr. COX. And I am just as kind to you as I can be.
Mr. MERCER. Yes; always.
Mr. COX. Let me show you what you have done——
Mr. MERCER. It is too late now. If you will let me pass this bill——
Mr. COX. Oh, well, if it is too late, let us fix it. Your proposition is to erect a building there in your Congressional district costing forty or fifty thousand dollars——
Mr. MERCER. If the gentleman from Tennessee will permit me, if you will allow this bill that is now before the House to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation, in order to quiet all criticisms and all objections, I will ask unanimous consent of the Committee of the Whole House that House bill 6 be subrogated to all the rights and privileges of the Blair bill, and that the Blair bill be withdrawn from this Committee of the Whole.
Mr. COX. I have not another word to say. That is the way it ought to go.
The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska moves that the bill (H. R. 11861) be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.
Mr. HANDY. Mr. Chairman, before that is done, I should like to ask the gentleman a question.
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Delaware?
Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Delaware.
Mr. HANDY. I should like to know how the public offices at Elmira are now accommodated. The report does not show.
Mr. MERCER. I defer to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILLET].
Mr. GILLET of New York. The post-office is in a rented building, and the deputy collector of internal revenue and the United States marshal are also in a rented building.
Mr. HANDY. There is no public building in Elmira now belonging to the Government of the United States?
Mr. GILLET of New York. None whatever.
Mr. HANDY. Can the gentleman from New York inform the committee what these rented quarters now cost the Government?
Mr. GILLET of New York. I can not.
Mr. HANDY. What is this new building to cost?
Mr. GILLET of New York. One hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars.
Mr. HANDY. The report of the committee utterly fails to show what the Government is now paying for the accommodation of its servants in Elmira. It shows that we are asked to build a post-office costing $185,000, but it does not show, nor does the gentleman representing that district seem to know, how much the Government is now expending for the rent of the post-office, marshal's office, and the office of the deputy collector of internal revenue.
Mr. HICKS. About $2,800, if my friend will permit me.
Mr. MERCER. I should like to ask the gentleman from Delaware what is the population of the city of Wilmington, Del.?
Mr. HANDY. I refer the gentleman to the census report of the population.
Mr. MERCER. I have it not here.
Mr. HANDY. Wilmington, Del., has nothing to do with this bill at all.
A MEMBER. Dover.
Mr. HANDY. Dover has nothing to do with this bill at all.
Mr. MERCER. I will say that $375,000 was spent in Wilmington, Del., for a public building, and it is not near so large a town as Elmira.
Mr. HANDY. Does the gentleman think too much was spent at Wilmington, Del.?
Mr. MERCER. No; I do not think there was too much spent there.
Mr. HANDY. If there was too much spent in Wilmington, that would be no reason why we should spend too much in the city of Elmira. There seems to be a post-office at Elmira, with 28 employees. There are 22 letter carriers besides. I suppose the letter carriers largely do their work on the streets of Elmira and not in the post-office building. There are 28 employees in the post-office building. There is 1 deputy clerk's office, with a force of 2 deputies and a gauger; that is 3. There is a United States marshal there. Whether there is a deputy marshal the report does not set out. All told, there are about 30 employees. We are asked to house these 30 employees in a public building costing $185 000, taking the place of the building now rented, as a gentleman on the committee tells me, for $2,800.
Mr. MERCER. How much time does the gentleman from Delaware want? I should like to have some limit to the debate.
Mr. HANDY. I much prefer the gentleman to explain the bill. I am asking questions.
Mr. MERCER. The statement of the gentleman from New York, taken with the report, seems to me to explain the bill.
Mr. HANDY. It does not seem to be a very meritorious bill. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Nebraska.
The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.
Mr. HANDY. Division.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 90, noes none.
So the bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT HOT SPRINGS, ARK.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1139) to provide for a building for the use of the post-office, office of the superintendent of the Hot Springs Reservation, and other civil offices in the city of Hot Springs, Ark.
The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be constructed on the permanent reservation owned by the United States at Hot Springs, in the State of Arkansas, and at such spot thereon as may be selected and set apart by the Secretary of the Interior and accepted by the Secretary of the Treasury for such purpose, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults, to be used for post-office, office of the superintendent of the Hot Springs Reservation, and other Government offices, not to exceed in cost the sum of $100,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall cause proper plans and estimates to be made, so that no expenditure shall be made or authorized for the full completion of said building beyond the amount herein specified.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 12 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-eight," making the limit of cost $78,000.
In lines 10 and 11 strike out the words "office of the superintendent of the Hot Springs Reservation."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to provide for a building for the use of the post-office and other civil offices in the city of Hot Springs, Ark."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.
Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Chairman, the city of Hot Springs now has a population of more that 20,000 people and is one of the most remarkable health resorts in the world. The Government owns a large permanent reservation, including the famous Hot Springs, also owns a large amount of property in the city, and all this property will be greatly enhanced in value by the erection of this building.
It should not be forgotten that these thermal waters are the property of the Government and intended to be maintained and perpetuated as the common inheritance of afflicted mankind throughout the world. The great problem that confronts the scientific world as to how best to overcome disease and restore health and vigor is here solved by the wisdom of nature.
The wisest philosophers and most learned and scientific men of our age bow in mute silence in the presence of these wonderful waters. They stand where the aborigines stood centuries ago in wonderment at the incomparable blessing of nature and exhaustless kindness of the great Giver of all blessings.
Mr. Chairman, I speak not alone for my State and the city of Hot Springs. I speak for humanity. I speak for the suffering and afflicted wherever dispersed. I speak for the greatest Government in the world, which owns and controls these waters for the benefit of its own citizens, soldier and civilian, and invites the people of all countries to come and share its blessings. I speak in the name of hundreds and thousands who have been restored to health and vigor by the use of these waters.
Mr. Chairman, if our people only knew the everyday cures that occur at these springs, not a drop of the great daily supply of more than a million gallons of these wonderful waters would go to waste, but each gallon would add to the happiness of the suffering and afflicted people. If I could but impress upon this House and the country the history of the thousands who visit these springs burdened with disease, whose lives are darkened by the approaching shadows of death, and yet who, after receiving the benefit of these waters, return to their families and homes, restored in health, radiant with life, and buoyant with hope for the future, I would be a benefactor to my race and add much to the hopes of mankind.
Mr. Chairman, the city of Hot Springs entertains no jealousies toward other famous watering places and health resorts in this and other countries. She bids them all Godspeed, and standing as she does head and shoulders above them all, rests her case upon the generous endowments of nature, her splendid facilities for accommodations, and the unexcelled hospitality of her citizenship.
Mr. Chairman, by consent of the House, I will print certain documents giving information concerning the city of Hot Springs and her waters.
The following statement from the superintendent of the reservation—a Government officer—will be found of interest:

THE HOT SPRINGS.

The whole number of hot springs (73) have their source in the west side of Hot Springs Mountain, and excepting four are all arched over and secured and their waters piped away to supply the reservoirs and bath houses. Of the four open springs, the Hale spring and the Stevens spring have been properly and handsomely improved, and are much resorted to for hot drinking water. Some delay has been experienced in getting stone for the improvement of the Alum spring and the Dripping spring, but it is now on the ground and the improvement well under way. It is the intention to preserve all these as open springs, where the hot waters may be seen issuing from the ground.

The following table, showing the elevation and temperature of all the hot springs on the permanent reservation, is for reasons of general information continued from last report:

[Datum of levels: The lowest point on the Hot Springs Reservation, being on the east side, where the Hot Springs Railroad enters the same, approximates 500 feet above the tide water of the Gulf.]

The Government maintains a bath house for "indigent" persons, and I submit the following extract from the report of the superintendent for 1897, which shows the wonderful work being done for the very poor by the Government. And note the fact that 80 per cent of these desperate diseases are cured by these waters without other proper care and treatment.

The cures effected at the free bath house during the past fiscal year have been equal to if not greater than reported in 1896, while those using the baths have seemed to be more severely afflicted or in a more advanced state of disease than heretofore, a large majority being afflicted with scrofula, syphilis, or rheumatism, or some of the kindred diseases, and almost entirely dependent for medical advice and medicines on whatever they could get contributed by charitably inclined persons. As near as I have been able to determine by constant observation, 80 per cent of the indigent people using the free baths have been either cured or greatly benefited, which, under these conditions, is certainly a flattering testimonial to the value of the waters of these hot springs as a curative agent.

The whole number of baths given during the year was (estimated) 140,160, the average number given daily being shown by the following table:

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I will print the following official facts prepared by the manager of the Hot Springs League:

HOT SPRINGS OF ARKANSAS—OFFICIAL INFORMATION ABOUT THIS FAMOUS HEALTH RESORT—THE ONLY WATERING PLACE OWNED, INDORSED, AND CONTROLLED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT, AND FOR THIS REASON KNOWN AS THE AMERICAN CARLSBAD.

Hot Springs, Ark., is the only health resort owned, recognized, and controlled by the United States Government. On April 20, 1832, Congress set apart the present Hot Springs Reservation as a national sanitarium, and dedicated it "to the people of the United States" for all time, so for more than sixty years the Government authorities have superintended its conduct. The Interior Department has recently declared officially, through the public press, its purpose of developing Hot Springs into a resort of the highest class, and, under the system successfully employed at Carlsbad, Ems, Baden-Baden, and other European spas, making it the leading watering place of the Western continent. In furtherance of this policy, the handsome sum of $175,000 has been appropriated and is now being expended in improving and developing the magnificent natural attractions of the reservation. It is estimated that $500,000 more will be required to fully carry out the Government plans, which will be appropriated by Congress as needed.

THE CITY OF HOT SPRINGS.

Hot Springs, Ark., is a thriving, pleasantly located city of 20,000 resident population, situated near the geographical center of the State of Arkansas, 410 miles southwest of St. Louis, and 65 miles from Little Rock, the capital of the State. Statistics prove it to be the healthiest city in the world, with the lowest average death rate. It is reached quickly and comfortably by rail from every part of the country, and special excursion rates are made to visitors by all American railways. Any ticket agent will furnish all desired information regarding rates of fare, routes to be used, and train service.

Among other features, Hot Springs has 72 hot springs, 22 bath houses, 3 banks, the best of hotel accommodations, 2 daily newspapers, 19 churches, 15 schools, 16 livery stables, good markets, numerous retail establishments, active lodges of the leading secret and charitable organizations, the United States Army and Navy Hospital, the United States Government reservation of 838.7 acres, waterworks, electric lights and electric street railways, an excellent natural sewerage system, a good fire department and police system, and, in short, everything that goes to make up a modern enterprising town. The business portion of the city is of a substantial and permanent character. Many of the residences compare favorably with those of larger cities, and are pleasing evidences of the wealth and refinement which have found their way to this charming city of the Ozarks.

THE HOT WATERS AND THEIR USES.

The Hot Springs of Arkansas are situated upon the United States Government reservation and are under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. They are 72 in number, with a temperature of from 96° to 157° F., and a flow of half a million gallons daily.

It is an accepted theory with most practitioners that the wonderful virtue of the waters lies in their natural heat, which seems to possess peculiar, perhaps magnetic, qualities not characteristic of those of other warm springs or of waters artificially heated. For these reasons this water is not potable, loses its therapeutic qualities entirely when cooled, and is of no value whatever when bottled, either in its natural state or as a basis for patent medicines.

The waters of Hot Springs have been found invaluable in the cure of all forms of rheumatism and gouty conditions, troubles of the stomach, liver and kidneys, skin diseases, diseases of the blood, syphilis, etc., and are especially efficacious in nervous affections, particularly insomnia, nervous prostration, and la grippe, in barrenness in women, and in all the various other female complaints, including those consequent upon the change of life.

THE BATH HOUSES AND COST OF BATHING.

The bath houses, with few exceptions, are located on the Government Reservation Park, at the base of the Hot Springs Mountain, and occupy about three ordinary city blocks on Central avenue. They are of tasteful design, are surrounded by well-kept lawns, and are all equipped with porcelain tubs and the best modern appliances. They are supplied by gravity with the hot water from the springs on the mountain above, the distribution being made under the immediate supervision of a superintendent, appointed by the United States Government, which has also established rigid directions and regulations for the use of the baths.

Every visitor to Hot Springs takes the baths. If an invalid, he first undergoes a thorough examination by his physician, who issues instructions according to the requirements of the case, for the guidance of the patient and his attendant. These directions are usually to bathe from six to twenty minutes, with the water at a temperature of from 95° to 100° F., followed by from two to six minutes in the vapor room and five to twenty minutes in blankets, according to the time required to produce free perspiration. It is never safe for an invalid to use the baths without the advice of some reputable physician, as, should there be an affection of the heart or lungs, the result might be harmful. Those visitors who bathe simply as a luxury or for cleanliness will find the bath-house managements sufficiently experienced to regulate the conditions.

Government statistics show that out of a total of 486 cities and towns in the United States only five have as low a death rate as Hot Springs. There is only one city in British America having one as low, and none at all in England and continental Europe. The death rate in 1894 among the permanent residents of Hot Springs was 7.74 per 1,000 inhabitants. When it is taken into consideration that a large percentage of citizens went there afflicted with disease and, being cured, have since made it their home, this low death rate seems all the more remarkable. The rate among the 50,000 annual visitors is very small, being only a little more than 1.1 per cent; and in nearly all cases of death among visitors the disease causing the same had reached such an advanced stage that recovery, even under the most favorable conditions and with the best medical attention, was an utter impossibility.

HOT SPRINGS AN ALL-YEAR-ROUND RESORT.

The impression has largely prevailed, especially through the North and East, that Hot Springs is purely a winter resort. This is due, doubtless, to its location in one of the Southern States. Nothing, however, could be more erroneous. In fact, it is as an all-the-year-round resort that Hot Springs is gaining its greatest fame. The warmest days are always tempered by the refreshing mountain breezes, which blow constantly, and the nights are invariably cool and pleasant. The highest temperature for the year 1895 was 94°, the lowest 23°, and the mean average for the year 72°. The total number of clear days was 208; of rainy days, 62 (an average of about 5 a month), and of cloudy days, without rain, 5.

Additional evidence that Hot Springs is a desirable summer as well as winter resort is found in the presence, during the months of June, July, and August of large numbers of the best Southern people from every section of the South who select this as their summer outing place in preference to resorts farther north.

An important adjunct to the baths is the drinking of the hot water. It is a well-known fact these waters are the only hot waters in America which can be drunk freely without causing nausea or constipation. This is due to the presence of carbonic-acid gas in large quantities, which renders the water both palatable and exhilarating.

The cost of the baths ranges from $4 to $10 per course of twenty-one baths, according to the class of accommodations furnished by the bath house selected. The attendant's fees are in all cases 10 cents for a single bath and $1.50 per course, payable weekly in advance. These charges are fixed by the United States Government, and any overcharge is illegal and unauthorized and should at once be reported to the superintendent.

HOTELS AND BOARDING HOUSES.

There is no other watering place in the country so well supplied with hotels and boarding houses as Hot Springs, or any place where hotel charges are more reasonable or where hotels and boarding houses are better conducted.

A visitor arriving in Hot Springs will find among its 500 hotels and lodging houses whatever sort of accommodations his purse or his pleasure may incline him to select, at rates ranging from $3.50 a week upward, and when he has settled in his temporary home he may feel reasonably sure of honorable and hospitable treatment while he remains.

If some of the smaller hotels or boarding houses are selected, even remote from the bath houses, the splendid system of electric street railways renders the distance of little consequence. The street-car service of Hot Springs is not surpassed by any of the large cities. Much courtesy and attention are shown by the employees to visitors, especially invalids, for whose convenience the cars are stopped in any part of the street.

A list of hotels and boarding houses from which accommodations may be selected at prices varied enough to suit the convenience of about all classes of persons will be mailed to any person writing for same.

H. DURAND,
Manager Hot Springs League.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FITCHBURG, MASS.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 521) for the erection of a public building at Fitchburg, Mass.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office and for other Government uses at Fitchburg, Mass. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $200,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodation for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $200,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Massachusetts shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments recommended by the committee.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. WEYMOUTH) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 521) for the erection of a public building at Fitchburg, Mass., submit the following report:

Fitchburg is one of the most prosperous of the manufacturing cities of Massachusetts. Its population, of less than 12,000 in 1880, has grown to nearly 30,000 in 1897, while the postal receipts for the fiscal year 1896-97 were $40,689.43. The postal receipts for the year 1888 were $26,222.50; for 1894-95 were $35,129.72, showing a net increase in 1897-97 of $5,260.71. The money orders issued from the Fitchburg office in 1888 were: Domestic, 4,165, foreign, 757; in 1892, domestic, 4,633, and foreign, 1,281; in 1896-97, domestic, 8,669; foreign, 1,340. The domestic money orders paid in 1888 were 3,247, foreign, 72; in 1892, domestic, 4,000, foreign, 88; in 1896-97, domestic, 5,772; foreign, 180.

Twenty-five post-offices deposit their money-order funds at the Fitchburg office. The extraordinary ratio of postal receipts, money orders issued and money orders paid, to population, being here, as almost invariably, an index of its business enterprise and interests.

The extent of the public business at Fitchburg justifies and public convenience in transacting it requires the erection of a public building at Fitchburg. Your committee believe this can be done at a total expense of not to exceed $100,000, and that delay will involve great increase in this cost in the high price which it will be necessary to pay for a suitable site if such is not now secured. The present quarters are totally inadequate and much inconvenience is experienced by the citizens of the city, while the rapid growth shown here justifies, in the opinion of your committee, early action on this bill.

Your committee therefore report back the bill and recommend that it be passed with the following amendments:

Strike out the words "two hundred" where they appear on pages 1 and 2 and insert in lieu thereof the words "one hundred," so that limit of cost for site and building shall be $100,000.

On page 2 strike out all words after the word "alleys," in line 24.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PURCHASE OF SITE AND ERECTION OF PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 11883) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon in the city of New Brunswick, N. J.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, or acquire by condemnation or otherwise, a suitable lot of land in the city of New Brunswick, in the county of Middlesex and State of New Jersey, and cause to be erected on the land so purchased or acquired a building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices and purposes in that city, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000. That said building, when completed, shall be protected by an open space of not less than 40 feet on every side thereof, including streets and alleys. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, after the site for the said building shall have been purchased, to cause a plan and specifications of said building to be prepared, which plan and specifications shall not require or involve an expenditure in the erection and completion of said building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, exceeding the sum that shall remain after the site of said building shall have been paid for. That no plans or specifications for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury which shall require or involve an expenditure exceeding the amount herein limited, nor shall the erection of said building be commenced until after such plans and specifications and full estimate therefor shall have been previously made and approved according to law.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have the report read, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MERCER. I suggest that the report be read, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. HOWELL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11883) entitled "A bill for the purchase of a site, and the erection of a public building thereon, in the city of New Brunswick, N. J.," etc., having had the same under consideration, report as follows:

New Brunswick is a prosperous and progressing manufacturing city of close to 21,000 inhabitants. It holds a position of prominence in the State as an educational center, having within its domain Rutgers College, founded more than one hundred and thirty-two years ago; the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church of America; and a number of high-grade private educational institutions, together with an excellent public-school system. Located on the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, 30 miles from New York and 60 miles from Philadelphia, the terminus of the Raritan River Railroad, and the Delaware and Raritan Canal as well, and at the head of navigation on the Raritan River, it affords excellent shipping facilities for manufacturing concerns. It is the county seat of Middlesex County, and, being connected with the neighboring towns of Bound Brook, Metuchen, Milltown, and South River by an excellent trolley system, it promises to become a city of great importance as a manufacturing center.

At the present time some of the most important industrial plants in New Jersey are located at New Brunswick. Among those are the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company; the United States Rubber Company; the Brunswick Bicycle Tire Company; two important branches of the National Wall Paper Company (Janeway & Carpender and Janeway & Co.); Johnson & Johnson, manufacturing chemists; the National Musical String Company; John Waldron, a large and extensive manufacturer of wall-paper machinery; the Beacon Lamp Company, manufacturers of electric lights; several leather, boot and shoe factories, a large stove foundry, several foundries and machine shops, and numerous smaller manufacturing concerns, which contribute largely to the aggregate yearly business of the post-office.

For some years the business of the New Brunswick post-office has been transacted in quarters entirely inadequate for the amount of business done, and far from being in accord with the importance of the office. The records of the office for the past ten years are an indisputable argument in favor of improved and adequate facilities for handling the continually increasing volume of business. The gross receipts for the ten years ending with the fiscal year of 1898 were $321,732.85, and the expenditures for the same period were $145,706.45, making the net income of the office for that period $176,026.40. As shown in the accompanying statement, the increase in the net income for the year 1898 over that of 1897 was $5,264.22. This extraordinary showing is an index to the activity and enterprise of the business interests of the city, and each succeeding year will doubtless show a corresponding and perhaps larger increase in the volume of the business of the office.

Your committee respectfully recommend that the bill do pass.

Fiscal year.	Receipts.	Expenditures.	Net revenue.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. HANDY. Pending that motion, I would like to get some information from the gentleman from Nebraska.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Delaware?

Mr. MERCER. I always yield to the genial gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. HANDY. I make this request because after reading the report I fail to get any information. The report, like all these reports that I have examined, contains a very beautiful and poetical description of things that have nothing to do with a public building.

Mr. MERCER. I will state to the gentleman from Delaware that I am inclined to think we have pursued a custom that has been followed for a number of years. It is the same custom that was pursued with reference to Dover, Del., a town of 3,000 inhabitants, for which a public building costing over $70,000 was provided. The poetry is going right along.

Mr. HANDY. The building at Dover has been a monument pointed out for years as an example of an extravagant and unjustifiabie expenditure of public money. While the gentleman has referred to that sort of thing, I wonder he points to Delaware.

Mr. BRUCKER. Were you responsible for that appropriation?

Mr. HANDY. I am not responsible for things done when I wore short breeches.

Mr. HICKS. Do you disapprove of that appropriation?

Mr. HANDY. I have explained that it was not entirely justifiable. There is the town of Dover, a city with nothing in the nature of Federal business but a post-office, and there stands a building for which $70,000 of the people's money was appropriated.

Mr. MERCER. It is the capital of the State, is it not?

Mr. HANDY. The fact that it is the capital of the State is no sufficient reason why we should waste the people's money at that place. The fact that the capitol is located at Dover is no more reason why there should be a public building there than the fact that Rutgers College is located at New Brunswick is a sufficient reason for erecting a public building at New Brunswick.

Mr. HICKS. How much did the capitol at Dover cost?

Mr. HANDY. The capitol building cost a few thousand dollars.

Mr. HICKS. Does not the gentleman know how much it cost?

Mr. HANDY. Why, it was built away back in the old colonial days.

Mr. HOPKINS. Then the gentleman ought to remember. [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Why does not the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] have the public building in Dover condemned and sold, if it is of no use?

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Chairman, it is no answer to questions about this bill for the gentleman to bring up what was done a generation ago at Dover. It is not an answer to the proposition that we are wasting public money for the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COOPER] to get up with the absurd proposition that I introduce a bill to condemn and sell the public building at Dover, Del.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Well, if it is useless and unnecessary, it ought to be sold and the money covered into the Treasury for other beneficial purposes.

Mr. HANDY. Perhaps the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COOPER] wants the money so that he can turn over something more to the Southern Book Concern, which got such a large grab here, one-third of which went to the lobbyists.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Did not the gentleman from Delaware vote for that bill? [Cries of "Vote!" "vote!"]

Mr. HANDY. I ask the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] whether the only argument he has to advance for the bill is this cry of "Vote!" "Vote!" "Vote!" that I hear all around me?

Mr. MERCER. I have not said "Vote" since I have been on the floor.

Mr. HANDY. Well, the gentlemen who occupy much of the time on the floor are using it to cry "Vote!" "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. MERCER. I have not heard the gentleman from Delaware say "Vote" yet. [Laughter.] Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. HANDY. Is it possible that I am to be shut off without asking my question? [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. I thought the gentleman was through.

Mr. HANDY. Through? I have not asked my first question yet.

Mr. MERCER. What is it?

Mr. HANDY. My first question is whether——

Mr. BRUCKER. I think the gentleman had better recur again to Dover.

Mr. HANDY (continuing). Are there any Federal courts situated at New Brunswick?

Mr. MERCER. I understand from the gentleman from New Brunswick [Mr. HOWELL] that there are not.

Mr. HANDY. Any collector of internal revenue there?

Mr. HOWELL. There is no office there.

Mr. HANDY. Is there a United States marshal there?

Mr. MERCER. Let the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HOWELL] answer. He lives there.

Mr. HOWELL. We have no United States marshal there.

Mr. HANDY. And nothing to provide a building for except the post-office?

Mr. HOWELL. We have an agricultural college there, and——

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman means the experimental station under the Hatch bill. Are you building a post-office to put the experimental station in?

Mr. HOWELL. No; but the post-office does a large amount of business for that institution.

Mr. HANDY. What are the charges to-day for the postal facilities, the rental charges?

Mr. HOWELL. Nine hundred dollars per annum.

Mr. HANDY. And it is proposed to put in place of that a building which will cost $100,000, and the very janitor to take care of this building when completed will cost the Government of the United States almost as much as the Government now pays for rent.

Mr. HOWELL. I will say to the gentleman from Delaware that we have at this time very poor post-office facilities, entirely inadequate for the business that is done there. The population is about 23,000. The net revenue for the office in 1898 was $27,000.

Mr. HANDY. What is the present population?

Mr. HOWELL. Twenty-three thousand.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman has stated that before.

Mr. HANDY. Perhaps, but the gentleman is speaking in such a confidential tone that I could not hear him.

Mr. HOPKINS. The manner of the gentleman from Delaware is so aggressive that it intimidates him. [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. I am still ignorant of the population.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HOWELL] says it is 23,000.

Mr. HANDY. That is $5 apiece for every man, woman, child, and yellow dog in the city. [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. The net revenue inside of five years will pay for the building.

Mr. HANDY. The gross receipts here, as stated in the report, are only about $32,000.

Mr. MERCER. I beg the gentleman's pardon, about $40,000.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEW IBERIA, LA.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11314) to provide for a public building at New Iberia, La.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of New Iberia, La. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $50,000, nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $50,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Louisiana shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the report be read.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman from Missouri requests that the report be read. I have no objection.

The report (by Mr. BROUSSARD) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11314) providing for the erection of a public building at New Iberia, La., have had the same under consideration and make the following report:

New Iberia is a city of about 10,000 inhabitants. It is the county seat of Iberia Parish. It has more than tripled its population since the census of 1890, and has rapidly grown both in wealth and population. Extensive sawmills, sugar factories, and other manufacturing interests are situated there, a great part of which have just been completed.

The recent construction of a large sugar refinery in the immediate suburbs of the town, with an enormous capacity, in addition to one previously in existence, and 15 other sugar factories within a radius of 10 miles, all of which, without exception, have largely increased their capacity within the last six months, have brought to that town and are now bringing continual large additions to the population.

New Iberia is the center of the Teche Valley, wherein is raised nearly one-third of the entire sugar output of the State of Louisiana. The post-office at that place has been kept in different rented buildings, having been moved from year to year, and most of the time in insecure frame buildings, which has greatly prevented the transaction of mail matters involving the deposit of money. Within the last ten months the building occupied as the post-office burned down, and it has been moved twice since that time.

New Iberia is on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, which has recently established it as the shipping point for the large territory lying between it and the head of the Teche, freight being carried there by regular lines of steamboats, which will of necessity largely increase the business at that point. A branch railroad runs from New Iberia into the interior, taking to that town the salt from the large salt deposits along the Gulf coast. A new railroad is projected to run from that point to the Gulf, and plans have just been completed to establish another large sugar factory there. A canal projected lately, to extend from New Iberia to the Gulf, is now being surveyed, and soon work will begin. This canal is to be navigable at all seasons of the year, and will place the large oyster beds lining the Gulf coast a distance of 10 miles to New Iberia. It is calculated that oyster and dry shrimp factories will be established at that point, which will double, perhaps, both the population and business of that town.

New Iberia is the distributing point for nine other post-offices.

The necessity for the construction of this building is plain.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of this bill with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 9, page 2, and substitute a period for the colon immediately following the said word "alleys."

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 9, page 2, and substitute a period for the colon immediately following the word "alleys."

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to ask whether there is any Federal court at this place?

Mr. BROUSSARD. No, sir; there is no Federal court at that point; in fact, there is nothing but a post-office there.

Mr. DOCKERY. No collector's office?

Mr. BROUSSARD. No, sir.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the population?

Mr. BROUSSARD. About 10,000. We have more than trebled our population within the last eight or nine years. The census of 1890 gave the population as 3,200.

Mr. McDOWELL. Three thousand four hundred.

Mr. BROUSSARD. A census is now being taken, and while it is not completed, it shows that more than 10,000 people live in that city.

Mr. LOW. And it is rapidly growing.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Yes, sir. There is now in course of construction there an exceedingly large sugar factory; also a large rice mill. The rice industry is being developed in that section of the country.

Mr. McDOWELL. A recent report of the Post-Office Department shows that there is in that town a third-class post-office.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I will state that this town is a distributing point for three star-route offices and six railroad offices, besides which there has been opened within the last three or four days—since the writing of the report to which the gentleman refers—a new railroad, with a terminus at that point. There is an application for half a dozen post-offices on that road, the mail of all of which will be distributed from that point. The returns from the registry department show that over two-thirds of all registered packages that go through that office come from these other offices whose distributing point it is.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the limit of cost as fixed in the bill?

Mr. BROUSSARD. Fifty thousand dollars. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendment of the committee was agreed to, and the bill as amended was laid aside to be favorably reported.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BLUEFIELD, W. VA.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 5974) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building thereon at Bluefield, in the State of West Virginia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Bluefield and State of West Virginia, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $75,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after said examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all maps, statements, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site of said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of West Virginia shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

In line 13, page 1, strike out the word "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty-five."

Strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 11, page 3, and up to and including the word "therein," in line 19, page 3.

Mr. HANDY. I ask for the reading of the report.

Mr. MERCER. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. DORR) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5974) for the erection of a public building at Bluefield, W. Va., and appropriating money therefor, have had the same under consideration and report as follows:

Bluefield is a city that has sprung up in a few years and become the most important in the point of commercial activity in southern West Virginia. It is situated at the junction of the Pocahontas, Radford and Clinch Valley division of the Norfolk and Western Railway.

There were weighed, handled, and billed at Bluefield during the month of December, 1897, an average of 25,000 tons of coal and coke per day. In addition to this a large amount of cattle, lumber, and other through and local freight has to be handled at Bluefield, requiring the employment of a large number of men and necessitating a yard with 35 miles of track within the corporate limits of the city.

Bluefield has several large wholesale houses, banks, iron works, lumbering plants, flouring mills, two daily and three weekly papers, besides a large number of retail stores of all kinds.

The city has a handsome brick city hall, street lights, telephone system, and an ample water supply.

One State institution for colored people is located here. This institution was established by the State as a normal school for the colored people of the State and is kept up by the State.

The population of the city in 1896 was 7,280. The estimated population for 1898 was about 8,000.

The following data, showing the post-office receipts, show how remarkable the growth has been:

1887	$50.20
1892	4,192.80
1897	9,916.16

In ten years 20,538 per cent advance.

The present post-office building, which is rented by the Government, is totally inadequate for the service.

A lot on which to erect the building can now, we are reliably informed, be obtained at a very reasonable sum, and in view of the rapid growth of the place, its commercial importance, and the inadequacy of the present rented quarters, we think the best interests of the Government will be subserved by the erection of a public building at Bluefield.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill with the following amendments:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty-five."

Strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 11, page 3, and up to and including the word "therein," in line 19, page 3.

Mr. HANDY. I should like a little time to discuss this bill.

Mr. MERCER. How much time would the gentleman desire?

Mr. HANDY. I should like ten minutes.

Mr. MERCER. Oh, the gentleman surely does not desire that much time.

Mr. HANDY. Otherwise I shall try to obtain the floor in my own right.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Delaware for ten minutes?

Mr. MERCER. I do.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Chairman, this happens to be a report that tells something about the town at which the proposed public building is to be erected. It tells us that this is a new town—a town which has not been in existence more than ten years.

In 1887 the town of Bluefield, W. Va., had postal receipts amounting to $50.20. It was a mere crossroads office. All that there is now at this place has been created in the last ten years. It is in the pine-shanty state of development as yet. Still it comes to the House of Representatives, before it is ten years old, and asks for a public building to cost $75,000. The committee has recommended cutting down the amount to $45,000. Sir, there are villages and towns larger than this, with more public business going on than at this place—towns two hundred years old—that have no public building, yet by the peculiar system of selection adopted here, a system too deep for any ordinary mind to understand, this committee has picked out Bluefield, the bantling Bluefield, the baby Bluefield, before it has come to the brick-and-mortar stage of life, and proposes to erect there a handsome public building. Why? Because—

There were weighed, handled, and billed at Bluefield, during the month of December, 1897, an average of 25,000 tons of coal and coke per day.

In the name of all that is sensible, what has the handling of coal and coke per day got to do with a public building costing $45,000? Yet that is one of the reasons advanced for the erection of this public building. Here is another:

In addition to this, a large amount of cattle, lumber, and other through and local freight has to be handled at Bluefield.

Do gentlemen propose to erect a manger in this public building, a crib out of which to feed cattle? Is this building to be an annex of a lumber yard at Bluefield; and are we to spend $45,000 of the public money there because cows change cars there and lumber has to be transferred from one float to another? Ah, "Thou reasonest well, Horatio!" [Laughter.]

Bluefield has several large wholesale houses.

That is an important feature of the report. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. Three is "several."

Mr. HANDY. Yes; two is several, and two is all that the town possesses, if I can read through the lines, because if there had been three the report would say "many wholesale houses." [Laughter.]

It has lumbering plants, flouring mills, two daily and three weekly papers.

These papers are molding the public opinion of the nation, I presume. Their importance undoubtedly induced the committee to report a sum of $45,000 to be expended by the Government for a public building there.

Why, there are "three weekly papers there," and of course each one will get a proportional share of the appropriation. But this report goes on to tell us that Bluefield has—

Besides a large number of retail stores of all kinds.

There is, no doubt, to be found there a shoe store, perhaps a tin shop, and possibly retail stores of all kinds in this young and growing town. These have doubtless induced the gentlemen of the committee to bring in a bill appropriating $45,000 for its public building.

But, Mr. Chairman, we must go further than that. It seems that there is even "a brick building" in the town. [Laughter.] The report gravely informs us:

The city has a handsome brick city hall.

So important is that fact in the estimation of the committee that they have reported that building to the House—the city hall is built of brick—in order that when the Government puts up a handsome stone building at a cost of $45,000 to the taxpayers of this country it will not be entirely lonely and alone, but can throw its kisses across the street to the "handsome brick building" of the city hall. [Laughter.]

But this report goes further. This report puts this matter upon a question of State importance. We are informed that—

There is one State institution for colored people located here. This institution was established by the State as a normal school for the colored people of the State, and is kept up by the State.

The population of the city in 1896 was 7,280. Come, ye cities of 100 years of age, come all of you with a population of 7,280 or more, and put in your application for your public buildings without delay!

But, Mr. Chairman, by induction we can ascertain at last a reason for this building. It is reported here to keep the building at Blair from being isolated and lonely in its unworthiness. The gentleman from Nebraska does not want to bring in a series of bills in which the town of Blair will stand alone in its peculiarities.

Mr. MERCER. Both of them—both Blair and Bluefield—are larger than the town of Dover, Del. [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. Here comes my friend from Nebraska back again at Dover. My friend is determined that he shall have no higher place as a distributer of public buildings than that which was enjoyed by the chairman who submitted the bill for the construction of the building at Dover.

A MEMBER. Where is Dover, anyway? [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY (continuing). Dover has an excuse, at all events, that can not be given in this case.

Mr. SIMPSON. What is that?

Mr. HANDY. Dover is the capital of a State. I would like to ask of what State Blair is the capital?

Mr. MERCER. Of Washington County.

Mr. HANDY. Of the State of "Mercer" no doubt. [Laughter.] It is therefore entitled to a public building.

But the gentleman from Nebraska, in response to my distinguished friend from Tennessee [Mr. COX] a few moments ago, made a promise, and I wish to quote from my learned friend his exact language in that respect.

He said:

Mr. MERCER. If the gentleman from Tennessee will permit me, if you will allow this bill that is now before the House to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation, in order to quiet all criticism and all objections, I will ask unanimous consent of the Committee of the Whole House that House bill 6 be subrogated to all the rights and privileges of the Blair bill, and that the Blair bill be withdrawn from this Committee of the Whole.

Mr. COX. I have not another word to say. That is the way it ought to go.

And when the gentleman from Nebraska fulfills his promise, and the bill is withdrawn, to which reference is made there, then the Bluefield bill will stand alone in its bare, naked, unjustifiable character before the country.

Is it possible, Mr. Chairman, that the members of this House propose to give to Bluefield, a new mining town with one brick building, a public structure at a cost of $45,000, to be paid for by the people of the nation?

I believe that is all I care to submit at the present time.

Mr. MERCER. I ask a vote on the bill and amendments.

The question being taken on the amendments recommened by the committee, they were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside, as amended, to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANDY) there were—ayes 87, noes 16.

So the motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING, JOLIET, ILL.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 10962) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joliet, in the State of Illinois.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Joliet and State of Illinois, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $150,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for a least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 5, page 1, strike out the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "and fifty."

Strike out the word "elevators" in the bill.

Strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 11, page 3, and up to and including the word "therein," in line 18, page 3.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the report.

Mr. MERCER. I thought that the report had been read. I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10962) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joliet, Ill., having considered the same, make the following report:

Joliet is a city of over 40,000 people. It more than doubled its population between the years 1880 and 1890. It is a great railroad center and the center of a great agricultural section. It is the largest manufacturing city in Illinois, except Chicago and Peoria. It is 48 miles distant from Chicago.

The necessity of a public building at Joliet seems clear. It would not only accommodate the Federal officials residing there, but also the post-office. The post-office is at present located in a building badly situated for the accommodation of the public, and insufficient for the service; nor is there a building in that city which is adapted to the service for the use of the post-office and which would offer proper accommodations to the public.

The receipts of the Joliet post-office in 1896 were $43,309; in 1897, $42,539, and for 1898, $42,848. The expenditures for rent, fuel, and light during the fiscal year 1898 were $1,875. The net revenues for 1898 were $16,624.

To furnish adequate facilities for the post-office at Joliet it is necessary that the Government either contract with a private individual to construct a building for its use there, or that the Government build one for itself. For the convenience of the people and for the orderly transaction of the business of the Government at Joliet, as well as from the standpoint of economy, the Government should construct its own building at that point.

Your committee are of the opinion that $100,000 would secure a site and construct a sufficient building for the use of the Government at Joliet, and therefore report back the bill in amended form, giving the Secretary of the Treasury authority to contract for the whole construction, and fixing the limit of cost at $100,000, with the recommendation that the bill do pass, amended as follows:

In line 5, page 1, strike out the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereof a."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "and fifty."

Strike out the word "elevators" in the bill.

Strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 11, page 3, and up to and including the word "therein," in line 18, page 3.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the committee amendment.

Mr. HANDY. If the gentleman from Nebraska will permit me, I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. HANDY. I notice in the report on the bill it says, speaking of this building at Joliet:

It would not only accommodate the Federal officials residing there, but also the post-office.

I want to inquire whether this is intended to accommodate these officials in the matter of a residence?

Mr. MERCER. Oh, certainly the gentleman does not want to ask that question.

Mr. HANDY. Ah, there is no telling what the gentleman is providing for in bills like this.

Mr. CANNON. I can answer the gentleman's question. I think that is a pretty good report, because I wrote it myself.

Mr. HANDY. What does the gentleman mean by "accommodating the Federal officials residing there"?

Mr. CANNON. I meant exactly what I said. Joliet is a city of 40,000 people, the third city in the State. We have great residence accommodations in Joliet——

Mr. HANDY. And this is in case the Federal officials might get out of the other institution there? [Laughter.]

Mr. CANNON. There are some people from Delaware in that institution, and there is room for more. [Laughter.]

Mr. FARIS. I presume the gentleman refers to the penitentiary?

Mr. HANDY. Who are these Federal officials residing in Joliet?

Mr. CANNON. The deputy revenue collectors and such others as may happen to be there, who are appointed by the revenue collectors, who do not reside there.

Mr. HANDY. Is there any Federal judge there?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no.

Mr. HANDY. Nor any Federal court?

Mr. CANNON. No, sir.

Mr. HANDY. Nor any collector of internal revenue?

Mr. CANNON. The collector of internal revenue, unfortunately, resides in Chicago. I am in hopes that the next one may live there. [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. Any custom-house there?

Mr. CANNON. No; there is no custom-house there, but there is an aggregate population there of over 40,000, of the busiest people in Illinois, and it will compare quite favorably with my friend's particular city of Wilmington, with a greater manufacturing output. I might have made the report stronger and better, but I thought that was good enough.

Mr. HANDY. If the gentleman from Illinois will pardon the suggestion——

Mr. CANNON. Certainly.

Mr. HANDY. Is it possible that these "Federal officials residing there," whom the gentleman put in the report, were fair creatures of his imagination that teemed in front of his eyes at the time he was writing the report?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, no; there are Federal officials residing there.

Mr. HANDY. Other than postmaster and Congressman?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, yes; the Congressman, by grace of a Democratic gerrymander, lives 150 miles south of Joliet; but Joliet is a good town for all that.

Mr. MADDOX rose.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MADDOX. I just rose for the purpose of informing my friend on this side of the House [Mr. HANDY] that there is a part of this business that he has not got onto. The man who introduced this bill is a member of the committee.

Mr. HANDY. Is it possible, sir, that that explains the situation with regard to Bluefield? Is it possible that the member of Congress who represents Bluefield is on the Public Buildings Committee?

Mr. MADDOX. That is exactly what it means.

Mr. HANDY. I am amazed! [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

CUSTOM-HOUSE AND POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT BRUNSWICK, GA.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 447) for the erection of a custom-house and post-office building at Brunswick, Ga.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for and cause to be erected thereon a building to be used as a custom-house and post-office, at the city of Brunswick, in the State of Georgia, which said site and building shall not exceed in cost the sum of $250,000. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be made and approved according to law before any work on said building shall be commenced; and a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, and a cession of exclusive jurisdiction over the same to the United States, during their ownership thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws and the service of the civil processes of said State, shall be made before any money appropriated for said purpose shall be used, except such part as may be required to pay for said site. The building shall contain such fireproof vaults as may be necessary to protect from destruction by fire the custom-house and post-office records.

Mr. MERCER. I ask that the report be read, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. BRANTLEY) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 447) for the erection of a custom-house and post-office at Brunswick, Ga., recommend that the same do pass with the following amendments:

Amend on the first page, in line 8, by striking out the words "two hundred and," so as to make the cost of said site and building not to exceed the sum of $50,000.

Amend on second page, line 18, between the words "site" and "the" by adding the following: "and the ordinary preliminary expenses for examination, investigation, and report."

The committee report that the city of Brunswick is situated on the coast of Georgia, is a port of entry, is the ocean terminus of two great lines of railways, and that a large volume of foreign business goes through this port. The present post-office and custom-house are in separate buildings, both rented, and the present accommodations for the transaction of public business are not creditable to the Government.

The population of Brunswick in 1880 was 2,871, and it is now 12,000, showing a steady growth. The growth in commerce during the past few years, due to increased depth of water on the outer bar, is very great. In 1893 the total commerce of this port was $5,600,000, and in 1898, $21,508,270. The customs receipts for 1893 were $21,599.90, and the post-office receipts $13,891.40. Extensive wharf facilities now being erected and new steamship lines promise a still further increase in the future.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (S. 1056) to provide for a public building at Cleveland, Ohio.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise, the block of land located in the city of Cleveland which is bounded by Rockwell street on the north, by Wood street on the east, by Superior street on the south, and on the west by the land now owned by the United States, upon which the post-office building is located, to be used, in connection with the said land already occupied by the post-office or Government building, as a site for a new public building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, custom-house, internal-revenue office, United States circuit and district courts, signal service, pension office, and other Government offices, in the said city of Cleveland and State of Ohio: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury can purchase said property at a reasonable price.

The cost of the site and building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, shall not exceed the sum of $2,500,000.

The public building now located upon the land belonging to the United States aforesaid shall be torn down before the new building is completed, but the same may be used until a sufficient portion of the new building is finished to make temporary provision for the transaction of the Government business therein.

The building to be erected shall be unexposed to danger from fire for an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1056, being substantially the same as H. R. 1031) providing for a site and the construction of a public building at Cleveland, Ohio, respectfully report, recommending the passage of the same.

The information furnished to the committee clearly establishes the fact that there is urgent need for a new public building at Cleveland. The structure now in use was commenced in 1856, and was erected at a cost of $150,000. To this building some additions were made, beginning in 1881, but the general plan of the structure is practically the same as when first erected.

In 1856, when the building was commenced, the postal receipts were a little over $30,000, while for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, the gross receipts were $775,690.25 and the net receipts were $464,421.95. The city has also grown since the construction of the present building from 30,000, approximately, to nearly 400,000, or, to speak by the census preceding the respective dates given, from 17,030 in 1850 to 261,353 in 1890.

In addition to the post-office, the Government requires at Cleveland an office for a collector of customs; a collector of internal revenue, whose district comprises twenty-seven counties; the United States district attorney; the United States district and circuit courts; United States marshal; headquarters of the ninth division railway mail, being the route from New York to Chicago via New York Central and Lake Shore and Michigan Central, and including, besides, the State of Michigan; an office for the four inspectors of steam hulls and boilers; secret service; immigrant inspector; surgeon of the Marine-Hospital Service; the Government engineer having charge of the eleven harbors from Monroe, Mich., to Conneaut, Ohio; light-house engineers; signal service; weather bureau; examiners for pensions, with two special examiners; a hydrographic office of the Navy Department; and an Army recruiting office. Some of the above officers rent offices outside of the Government building, while all those in the Government building are cramped for room.

The committee accordingly recommend that the above-named Senate bill (S. 1056) do pass with the following amendments:

In line 16, after the word "service," add the words "weather bureau."

In line 23, page 2, strike out the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "two," so that limit of site and building shall be $2,200,000.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments of the committee.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT TOPEKA, KANS.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 4076) for enlarging the public building at Topeka, Kans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the public building at Topeka, Kans., now occupied as a post-office and other Government offices, to be enlarged, so as to make a suitable building, with fireproof vaults and elevator therein, for the further accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices, the plans and specifications to be drawn with respect to the present building, so as to furnish to the post-office more room and better accommodation of the Government offices. The plans, specifications, and full estimation of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not cost to exceed the sum of $100,000: Provided, That said building, so enlarged, shall be unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet.

Mr. MERCER. I ask that the report be read, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4076) to enlarge the public building at Topeka, Kans., submit the following report:

From the showing made there can be no doubt about the necessity of enlarging the Government building at Topeka, Kans. It was built years ago, when the business of the office was small.

Now the business has increased so that the offices in the building are crowded for room. There is not a department in it that has sufficient room to transact the public business.

In the post-office department the postmaster is not able to put in as many desks as are needed by the clerks and carriers.

The office of the clerk of the United States circuit court is crowded to the extent that they are piling some of their furniture in the halls and closets. In many of the rooms valuable papers and court files are piled clear to the ceiling.

The United States land office, which occupies two rooms, has scarcely 6 feet of vacant space in either room. The same is true of the other offices located in the building. During terms of court there is not sufficient room for the juries.

In addition to the crowded condition of the building, the Government pays $2,500 per annum for rent of office room for the United States pension agency located at Topeka. This, by the way, is now the largest pension agency in the United States. The Government is now renting rooms for the Weather Bureau and statistical agent for the Agricultural Department. The collector of internal revenue desires space in the building.

The gross receipts of this office are over $100,000 a year, and there are over 8,000,000 pieces of mail handled by carriers each year.

The net receipts of the post-office amount to from $5,000 to $6,000 per month.

The following offices are located in the building: First floor, post-office; second floor, district court room, clerk of the district court, United States marshal, district attorney, register and receiver United States land office, and United States pension examiner; third floor, circuit court, judges' room, judges' consultation room, clerk circuit court, and vault.

Not a department in the building has sufficient room to carry on public business, and the net income from the post-office and the rent paid for the rooms occupied by the United States pension agency will nearly pay for the enlargement in one year.

In the Fifty-fourth Congress provision was made for the purchase of additional ground for the enlargement of said building, and the ground has already been purchased.

In a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, your committee is advised that "from computations made, based upon the data received, it is approximately estimated that an addition which will meet the requirements of the service at Topeka can be constructed for $85,000."

For these reasons, which the committee deem ample and sufficient, it is respectfully recommended that the bill do pass, with the following amendment:

In line 14 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eighty-five."

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., December 14, 1898.

SIR: Referring to that portion of your letter of the 10th instant, requesting to be advised as to the necessity existing for an addition to the public building at Topeka, Kans., at a cost of $100,000, as contemplated by H. R. 4076, and asking to be informed whether said amount is more than necessary to provide for the needs of the service at Topeka, I have the honor to advise you that from information in the possession of the Department it appears that the post-office is in a very crowded condition. Additional space is required by the United States marshal and for the use of the land office, while the Weather Bureau and internal-revenue offices also desire space in said building.

From computations made, based upon the data received, it is approximately estimated that an addition which will meet the requirements of the service at Topeka can be constructed for $85,000.

In this connection attention is respectfully invited to the fact that there now remains on the books of the Treasury Department an unexpended balance of $13,605.27 of appropriations under act of Congress approved August 18, 1894, appropriating $8,000 for construction of an elevator, etc., and act approved June 4, 1897, appropriating $25,000 for additional land and $10,000 for certain changes and improvements in buildings on said land.

It is respectfully suggested that this balance, namely, $13,605.27, be reappropriated and applied to the erection of the contemplated addition to said building, and that a further sum of $71,394.73 be appropriated for this purpose, making the total amount available for the construction of the addition, as indicated above, $85,000.

Respectfully, yours,

O. L. SPAULDING, Acting Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I will not ask that the letter be read, but I notice a recommendation that an unexpended balance of $13,605 be reappropriated and applied to the erection of the contemplated addition, and the Assistant Secretary also asks that an additional $71,394 be appropriated. Does the bill comply with the recommendation of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in that respect?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. I asked the committee to report the bill at $85,000 instead of $72,000; but the appropriation is not made now, and I thought that when the appropriation is made it could be put in proper phraseology, and the recommendations of the Treasury Department could be followed.

Mr. DOCKERY. The bill does not reappropriate the unexpended balance; so that you make no appropriation by this bill?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Not at all. We leave that for the future; and the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury informed the committee that $85,000 would be required, and there was an unexpended balance of $13,605.27 to the credit of Topeka. When the appropriation is made the clause can be worded so as to carry out the recommendation of the Assistant Secretary.

Mr. MERCER. I would say to the gentleman from Missouri that Governor Sayers, formerly of this House, came to me personally about this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. I have no doubt about the merits of the proposition. That fact seems to be obvious; at least it is apparent that this is another illustration of the exceeding activity and efficiency of the Representative from that district.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Thank you.

Mr. DOCKERY. Perhaps more than that. It occurred to me in this connection that while this authorization may be a proper one, there is another bill reported for the State of Kansas that should have consideration following swiftly upon the heels of this bill. It is a bill reported for Kansas City, Kans.

Mr. MERCER. It ought to pass.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is true it is across the line, but practically a part of Kansas City, Mo. I have a warm sympathy for that bill for the benefit of the city just across the line between Missouri and Kansas. I do not know where the Kansas City, Kans., bill appears in the list of bills to be considered, but I do suggest that the bill, if that great city is to secure a public building at all——

Mr. MERCER. It is full of merit.

Mr. DOCKERY. Ought to be called up and passed. Topeka already has a public building. It is true, according to the report, the offices are somewhat crowded, and I do not make any objection to the additional authorization, but if one of the bills is to fail, it seems to me the Kansas City, Kans., bill should not be the loser, but should be advanced ahead of the other, although I am willing for both to pass.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. That would be very unfair. The Kansas City bill will be reached and passed.

Mr. MERCER. They will both pass.

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand the gentleman to state that he will see that Kansas City, Kans., is recognized.

Mr. MERCER. I know something about the city.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BEAUMONT, TEX.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (S. 926) to provide for the erection of a public building at Beaumont, Tex.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, court-house, and other Government offices in the city of Beaumont and State of Texas, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, not to exceed $100,000. No part of said sum shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Texas shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein. The said building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope we will have the report read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 926) providing for the erection of a public building at Beaumont, Tex., submit the following report:

The city of Beaumont is situated on the Neches River in the southeast portion of Texas. The river is a navigable stream of a great depth of water. The town was but a small village a few years ago, but has increased in population very rapidly and is now a city of more than 10,000 people. It is surrounded by a rich agricultural country.

Large lumber and other manufacturing industries are located there. As large, if not the largest, lumber manufacturing plants in the South are located in Beaumont and in that vicinity. Five railroads run into Beaumont, two of which are transcontinental. The Southern Pacific runs east and west, and the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf Railroad runs north and south. The three other railroads run in different directions, all terminating in Beaumont.

About two years ago there was established at Beaumont a Federal circuit and district court. There are five places of holding court in the eastern judicial district, and there are more cases on the docket at the court in Beaumont than at any other place in the district save one. The Government is now paying rent for a post-office building. The Federal courts are held in the county court-house building, and on account of the large accumulation of business in the State and county courts there is not sufficient room to longer transact the business of the Federal court in the county court-house and furnish the officers with suitable offices.

A bill is now pending to make Beaumont a subport of entry, and if the prospective canal between Beaumont and Sabine Pass is opened it will be an entrepôt for the largest seagoing vessels. There is not a Federal building in the Congressional district in which Beaumont is situated, therefore your committee recommend the passage of the bill, amended as follows:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "one hundred" and substitute therefor the word "seventy-five," so that the limit of cost of site and building shall be $75,000.

Strike out all after the word "dollars" in line 13, page 1, up to and including the word "therein" on page 2 in line 20.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

ADDITION TO UNITED STATES CUSTOM-HOUSE AND POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT DUBUQUE, IOWA.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 484) providing for the erection of an addition to the United States custom-house and post-office building in the city of Dubuque, Iowa.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the public building at Dubuque, Iowa, to be improved and enlarged so as to provide the necessary increase of floor space and accommodations for the custom-house, post-office, and the United States courts, and also so as to provide the necessary accommodations for the Railway Mail Service, Weather Bureau, and inspector of boilers and hulls, and other Government officials, at a cost not exceeding $100,000; and for said purpose the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk informs the Chair the report has not come from the Printing Office.

Mr. HENDERSON. The report is here.

Mr. HANDY. I will furnish the Chair with a report.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is always pleased to have the gentleman from Delaware furnish the Chair with whatever is deficient.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will make a brief statement, if my friend from Missouri will permit me.

Mr. DOCKERY. That will answer. Let the gentleman make a brief statement instead of the reading of the report.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the Committee of the Whole that this custom-house which we have in Dubuque was laid out in 1857, when the population of Dubuque was only 3,108, according to the census of 1850. The building was suspended during the war and was completed in 1866.

We now have a population of about 40,000, and we have in that building, built at that time, a post-office occupying the first floor; also the United States circuit and district courts; the United States district judge; collector of internal revenue, with his deputy; collector of the port of Dubuque, with his deputy; the United States marshal and deputy; clerk of the United States court, district and circuit, with his clerks and stenographer; the United States attorney's office, with a deputy; and we have the superintendent of steamboats paying rent outside, the inspector of boilers paying for rented rooms outside, the inspector of hulls, the chief clerk of the railway service, with his clerks——

Mr. HOPKINS. That is enough, Mr. Chairman; I ask for a vote.

Mr. HENDERSON (continuing). The marine service, weather bureau—all outside, paying rent. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

That is the way, gentlemen, to do business when you have a righteous case. [Laughter.]

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT OMAHA, NEBR.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up House bill No. 6, to increase the limit of cost of the purchase of site and the erection of a public building at Omaha, Nebr.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount heretofore fixed as a limit of cost for the purchase of site and erection of a building for the accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, internal-revenue, and other Government offices at the city of Omaha, in the State of Nebraska, be, and the same is hereby, increased to $2,000,000, which sum is hereby fixed as the limit of cost for the erection of said building, including the cost of a site therefor.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out, in line 8, the words "two million" and insert "one million eight hundred thousand."

Mr. MERCER. I ask that the letter from the Secretary of the Treasury be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., January 11, 1899.

SIR: In reply to your communication of the 20th ultimo, requesting from this Department a report in connection with H. R. 6, providing "that the amount heretofore fixed as a limit of cost for the purchase of site and erection of a building for the accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, internal revenue, and other Government offices in the city of Omaha, in the State of Nebraska, be, and the same is hereby, increased to $2,000,000, which sum is hereby fixed as the limit of cost for the erection of said building, including the cost of a site therefor," I have the honor to advise you that it is estimated that an extension 80 by 200 feet in dimensions, of the same height as the present building, can be constructed for $500,000, including heating apparatus, fireproof vaults, elevators, and approaches. No additional land will be required.

Respectfully, yours,

O. L. SPAULDING, Acting Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives.

Mr. DOCKERY. As I understand the situation, this increases the limit of cost to $1,800,000?

Mr. MERCER. It does.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the limit of cost for the building at St. Paul?

Mr. MERCER. I think it is the same amount, but I may be mistaken. At Milwaukee it is $2,000,000, and at Cleveland, Ohio, it is $2,200,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. This is to complete the building?

Mr. MERCER. Yes; it is to finish out the wing on the Seventeenth street side. The Treasury has asked for it, and it is necessary for the public business and public welfare.

Mr. HANDY. I was going to ask the gentleman from Nebraska whether this was not the opportune moment for substituting this bill in place of the one for Blair.

Mr. MERCER. Yes, Mr. Chairman, I always make my word good, and I ask unanimous consent that the bill for Omaha be substituted for the Blair bill with all its rights and privileges as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, I object to any substitution being made. Both bills are meritorious.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is made. The question is on agreeing to the amendment recommended by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT WILKESBARRE, PA.

Mr. MERCER. I now ask to take up Senate bill 1271 for a public building in the city of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and appropriating money therefor.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase by private sale or secure by condemnation a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices at the city of Wilkesbarre, in the county of Luzerne and State of Pennsylvania. The plans, specifications, and full estimate for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $225,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will have sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum hereinafter limited after the site shall have been purchased or condemned and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and that no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Pennsylvania shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and the service of civil process therein.

With the following committee amendments:

Strike out on line 5, page 1, the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one," making limit of cost of site and building $125,000.

On line 22, page 2, strike out all after the word "alleys."

Amend the title by striking out the words "and appropriating money therefor."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I think some gentlemen desire the reading of the report.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with.

Mr. HANDY. I object, Mr. Chairman. The gentleman from Pennsylvania was very hard on the chairman of the committee a short time ago in objecting to one of his requests. [Laughter.]

The Clerk read the report (by Mr. MERCER), as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bills (H. R. 4793 and S. 1271) for the erection of a public building at Wilkesbarre, Pa., having had the same under consideration, submit the following report:

The need of a public building at Wilkesbarre, Pa., is one that has been recognized for many years. A similar bill has been before several Congresses, and has been favorably reported by each successive committee of Congress since and including the Fiftieth Congress.

The county of Luzerne, of which the city of Wilkesbarre is the county seat, is almost as large in size as the State of Rhode Island, having an area of 909 square miles, while in resources and population it ranks third among the counties of the State of Pennsylvania.

The city of Wilkesbarre is virtually the business center of a great region comprised of Luzerne County, parts of Monroe, Sullivan, Columbia, Wyoming, and Susquehanna counties, containing a population of nearly 500,000, all living within a radius of 50 miles from the city of Wilkesbarre, which is the railroad center.

In 1880 the revenue receipts from this district were $125,000, and in 1895 the receipts had almost doubled or reached the sum of $245,288.10.

The city of Wilkesbarre is one of the oldest of the interior towns of the State. In 1860 it had a population of 23,339. In 1890, 37,718, and in 1896, 52,000; an increase in sixteen years of 28,671, or over 100 per cent. The increase in the voting list was in almost the same ratio, there being 9,182 in 1880 and 15,176 in 1896.

This population is a steady and a permanent one. An evidence of their character is shown in the bank deposits of the city, which aggregate $10,343,732, and in the expenditures for school property, which reach the sum of $302,168.70 for 14 public-school buildings. There are private schools, the property of which is valued at about $400,000, while a fund of $400,000 has been raised to maintain a public library. There are 43 church buildings, worth $1,430,000.

The court-house cost $200,000; the county jail $350,000; the city hospital, exclusive of site, $80,000; the Orphan's Home $40,000; Ninth Regiment Armory, National Guard Pennsylvania, $75,000. There are 61 hotels.

There are 403 business houses (exclusive of manufactures), 45 of which are wholesale. There are 45 manufacturing establishments, including the Hazard Wire Rope Works, one of the largest in America, capital $600,000; the Nottingham and the Wilkesbarre lace factories, the largest ones in the United States, having a capital of $500,000; the Dickson Manufacturing Company, capital $500,000, employed in Wilkesbarre, and besides these the Wilkesbarre Silk Mill, the Sanson Cutlery Company (one of the largest in America; Sheldon Axle Works, the largest in America, employing over 800 hands; the Vulcan Iron Works, capital about $1,000,000; the Wilkesbarre File Works, Wilkesbarre Paper Company; the Dimmick & Smith Company, manufacturers of boilers; the Wilkesbarre Gun Factory, Galland's Underclothing Factory, Newell Clothing Company, and numerous planing and feed mills, two mining drill factories, and two large breweries; 7 banks and banking institutions, capital and surplus $2,700,000, and deposits aggregating $6,000,000; 4 daily and 15 weekly and semiweekly newspapers.

The city of Wilkesbarre has 7½ miles of sheet-asphalt pavement, costing about $400,000; 11½ miles of stone pavement (block and cobble), costing about $300,000; 2½ miles of chestnut block, costing about $60,000; one-fourth mile of cedar block, costing about $6,500; one-fourth mile of vitrified brick, costing about $10,000; have just completed addition to their sewers costing $350,000; has three steel bridges for wagon and passenger travel erected and in process of erection across the Susquehanna River, costing $400,000, and in addition four steel railroad bridges.

The city is furnished with steam heat and electric light from central plants.

The steady increase of business at the post-office is shown by a comparison of the reports of the Wilkesbarre post-office in 1886, when the gross receipts were $27,319.49, and in 1895, when the gross receipts were $58,732.07, while the facilities for handling the business have not kept pace. The statement of the Wilkesbarre postmaster for the year 1895 is given below:

Employees.—Postmaster, assistant postmaster, and 9 clerks, 21 carriers, 4 substitutes, and 8 stamp agents.

The post-office is located at the extreme western end of the city. It is away from the center of commerce and the center of population. Its quarters are narrow, cramped, and dark. The employees and the public are put to actual discomfort in the transaction of public business. These quarters were the best obtainable at the time the Government signed the lease. Better quarters in the center of business, as the post-office should be, would cost a far higher rent than the Government now pays, and the only proper solution of the matter is the erection of a building by the Government.

In view, therefore, of the very sufficient reasons urged for the erection of a public building at Wilkesbarre, Pa., your committee report that the Senate has passed a bill (No. 1271) authorizing the erection of a public building at this place which is similar, except in amount authorized to be expended, to the bill referred to your committee (H. R. 2526). They therefore recommend that House bill 2526 do lie upon the table, and that Senate bill 1271 be amended as follows:

Strike out on line 5, page 1, the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one," making limit of cost of site and building $125,000.

On line 22, page 2, strike out all after the word "alleys."

Amend the title by striking out the words "and appropriating money therefor."

And when so amended your committee recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Chairman, this report, which seems to have been made by the chairman of the committee, is full of information which does not pertain to this bill. There is little or nothing in the report that has anything to do with the bill. Will the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER], who doubtless is entirely familiar with the whole question because he personally made the report, make a brief statement to the House showing why a public building is needed in the city of Wilkesbarre?

I admit it is a beautiful little city, for I am familiar with it. But what has the fact that certain corporations and stock companies are doing business there, and all that sort of thing, got to do with a public building?

Mr. MERCER. The committee has been very unfortunate in not having the rhetoric of the gentleman from Delaware in framing its report, but it has done the best it could. I will admit that we have sometimes introduced surplus matter into the reports, but I did not think the gentleman from Delaware would object to a surplusage of that kind. [Laughter.]

I will say to the gentleman that the gentleman from Pennsylvania who introduced the bill furnished us with a good deal of information, all tending to show the importance of the city, its great population, its different lines of business, and we have followed that in the report because the gentleman from Pennsylvania wrote the report himself. I take great pleasure in fathering a report of that kind which comes from so enterprising a city. If they can construct a court-house for $200,000 and a hospital for $80,000——

Mr. HANDY. Do not forget the jail.

Mr. MERCER (continuing). And having an enormous business there besides, it seems to me that the gentleman from Delaware should not object when it only asks $100,000, and especially when the Congress of the United States once gave Dover, Del., a town of 3,000 inhabitants, more than $70,000. I have to refer to Dover, Del., once in a while to keep the gentleman in trim. [Laughter.] [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. HANDY. Does the bill ask for $100,000? The report says $125,000.

Mr. MERCER. One hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. It asked for $250,000, but the committee cut it down to $125,000.

Mr. HANDY. Did it cut it down because, as the report says, "the city is furnished with steam heat and electric light?"

Mr. MERCER. They cut it down because they thought the gentleman from Delaware would ask these questions, and they cut it down out of deference to him.

Mr. HANDY. Is there any Federal court there?

Mr. MERCER. There will be.

Mr. HANDY. Depending upon legislation?

Mr. MERCER. Yes.

Mr. HANDY. Is there any internal-revenue office located there? [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Ah, my friends who cry "Vote!" "Vote!" have returned. If a gentleman asks whether a Federal court is situated there, it is sufficient answer to cry "Vote!" "Vote!" If a gentleman inquires whether a collector of customs has an office there, it is sufficient to meet that inquiry with cries of "Vote!" If a gentleman asks whether a post-office has sufficient facilities, it is enough for some gentleman, as an answer, to cry "Vote!"

Are such replies considered sufficient? Because gentlemen have decided to pass these bills anyway; because gentlemen have decided to pass these bills where buildings are necessary and where they are not necessary. And when gentlemen are in that condition of mind and purpose, they cry, "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman will do me the justice to acknowledge that I have tried to treat him courteously. I did not cry "Vote!"

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman from Nebraska has thrown perfume over me all the afternoon. [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. I have tried to drown you with it; but I can not.

Mr. HANDY. But the gentleman's immediate supporters are not following him well. Why, sir, even when he asks for unanimous consent to withdraw a measure on this floor, a member of his own committee, from the great State of Pennsylvania, objects to his request.

Mr. MERCER. I will say to the gentleman from Delaware that while I think the committee may, in the course of time, see fit to make a favorable report upon the bill pending on the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, introduced by the gentleman, asking the United States to give to a city in Delaware a Government building there, to be used as a public school. But we will wait till we get that far along. [Laughter.] I ask for a vote on the amendment.

Mr. HANDY. I wish to say to the gentleman from Nebraska——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield?

Mr. MERCER. Always to my friend.

Mr. HANDY. I wish to say to the gentleman that if he will apply to me the same kind of statesmanship that has been applied to so many other gentlemen here who shout, "Vote!" "Vote!" perhaps hereafter he will hear me shout "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. MERCER. Well, I did not think the gentleman was so cheap; but I reckon we shall have to take him. [Laughter.]

The amendments of the committee were agreed to, and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT JACKSON, MISS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 5536) appropriating money for an annex to the Federal building at Jackson, Miss.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is, authorized and directed to cause to be erected an addition to the Government building at Jackson, Miss., occupied as a post-office and other Government offices, for the better accommodation of the Federal court, land, and other Government offices, and to supply said building with the necessary fireproof vaults, elevator, and other fixtures and appliances for the more convenient, safe, and ready dispatch of public business, at a cost not to exceed $40,000, for which said addition and fixtures the sum of $40,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That the plans, specifications, and estimation of addition of said building and improvements or fixtures shall be made and approved according to law: And provided further, That said building so enlarged shall be unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet on all sides, including streets and alleys.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 11 strike out "forty" and insert "thirty-one."

In lines 11, 12, 13, and 14 strike out the words "for which said addition and fixtures the sum of $40,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill providing for an annex to the Federal building at Jackson, Miss."

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported favorably.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. MADDOX. Just a word.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield?

Mr. MERCER. I am delighted to do so.

Mr. MADDOX. I am assured by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] that all these bills that are now to follow are meritorious and that he has one down at the foot of the list. [Laughter.] I want to know whether that is so.

Mr. MERCER. We thought they were all full of merit. I will say to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] that our only regret is he did not introduce a bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. Now, I want to show how little the gentleman from Nebraska knows about what is going on. I did introduce a bill, and I am told that the gentleman promised my friend from Delaware that if he would keep quiet the committee would report his bill next. Now, I want to know whether I am to have a promise of that kind?

Mr. MERCER. Why in the world did you not come before the committee and have a hearing?

Mr. MADDOX. Well, I was really ashamed to do so. I would have come, however, if I had known anything about Blair and Bluefield. It seems that these bills are increasing in merit all the time. [Laughter.]

The motion of Mr. MERCER was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELGIN, ILL.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 4306) for the erection of a public building in the city of Elgin, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise provide a suitable site, and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other offices of the Government at Elgin, Ill.

The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $100,000, which said sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor place for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $100,000 for site and building. And the site purchased shall leave the building independent and unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall remain the owner thereof.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out, in lines 12, 13, and 14, the words "which said sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 26.

Mr. HANDY. I should like to have the report read.

Mr. MERCER. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4306) providing for the erection of a public building at Elgin, Ill., have had the same under consideration and make the following report:

Elgin is a city of about 25,000 inhabitants. It has nearly tripled its population since 1880, and is rapidly growing both in wealth and population. Large manufacturing interests are located there, and many have been established within the last few years, which will add many thousands to the present population. The Elgin watch factory is located there—the largest watch factory in the world—which has on its pay rolls over 3,000 employees.

Elgin has large boot and shoe manufactories, besides many other productive industries, employing a large number of mechanics and laborers. The Cook Publishing Company is located there, which largely increases the receipts of the post-office. The urgent necessity for a public building at Elgin seems clear.

The post-office business at Elgin during the five years 1891-1895—the expenditures and the net revenue to the Government for each of said years—is as follows:

Year ending June 30—	Gross receipts.	Gross expenditures.	Net revenue.
1891	$38,308.71	$15,850.76	$22,457.95
1892	41,870.71	17,619.82	24,250.89
1893	45,467.83	19,058.37	26,409.46
1894	47,247.59	20,451.38	26,796.21
1895	56,009.95	22,413.14	33,596.81

These statistics clearly show that the net revenue to the Government from that office has been increasing constantly, the year 1895 showing a gain in net revenue as compared with the year 1894 of $8,800. From the thrift and steady growth of the city there is no doubt that this will continue.

The Government pays an annual rent for the building now occupied of $1,500. The building in which the office is now conducted can not long be used for the purpose to which it is now put, and wise economy would require that the Government should select a site at as early a day as practicable, and construct a post-office building in which to transact this large and increasing postal business.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill with these amendments:

Strike out, in lines 12, 13, and 14, the words "which said sum is hereby appropriated for that purpose, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated."

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 26.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

Mr. HANDY. Before the amendments are voted on, will the gentleman yield a moment?

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. HANDY. I should like to know (because the report does not show the fact) whether there is a Federal court held at Elgin?

Mr. MERCER. No Federal court.

Mr. HANDY. Is there a marshal's office?

Mr. MERCER. No marshal's office.

Mr. HANDY. Is there a collector of internal revenue?

Mr. MERCER. No collector of internal revenue.

Mr. HANDY. Is there a collector of customs or any other Federal officer besides the postmaster?

Mr. MERCER. They have the post-office and weather bureau [laughter]; and I think a deputy marshal. There is also a deputy collector of internal revenue.

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman who prepared the report in this case indicates, at all events, that the present post-office is suitable for temporary purposes, and that there is no present necessity for this change, as the bill suggests, because he says:

The Government pays an annual rent for the building now occupied of $1,500. The building in which the office is now conducted can not long be used for the purpose to which it is now put, and wise economy would require that the Government should select a site at as early a day as practicable and construct a post-office building in which to transact this large and increasing postal business.

There is, therefore, no question as to the fitness or suitability of the post-office at the present time.

Mr. HOPKINS. If the gentleman from Delaware will allow me——

Mr. HANDY. Certainly.

Mr. HOPKINS. I am quite familiar with the locality to which the bill refers, and I will state to the committee that the post-office now used is in the business part of the city, and the property is only under a short lease. If the Government should fail to get a new lease, Uncle Sam would have great difficulty in securing a proper location at all in that city. Now, the revenues of the office are sufficient to pay for the construction of the building before it can be constructed, if they should commence the work on the plans and specifications to-morrow.

The gentleman will see, on an investigation of the matter, that in 1895 the receipts of the post-office at Elgin, Ill., which went into the Treasury of the United States were over $35,000. Since that time the revenues have increased until in 1898 the amount turned over to the Post-Office Department from this office was $40,000, after paying all other expenses.

Mr. LOUD. Oh, no; the gentleman is mistaken about that.

Mr. HOPKINS. And they want only $100,000 for the construction of this building.

Mr. HANDY. The net revenues of the office being so great, I am somewhat astounded at my friend's moderation.

Mr. HOPKINS. I am astounded at my own moderation.

Mr. HANDY. But I find in the report, if the gentleman will permit me, the following:

Elgin has large boot and shoe manufactories, besides many other productive industries, employing a large number of mechanics and laborers. The Cook Publishing Company is located there, which largely increases the receipts of the post-office. The urgent necessity for a public building at Elgin seems clear.

Now, it is evident, Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman who prepared this report reasons in this manner, that because there are boot and shoe manufactories, and because the Cook Publishing Company's office is located in the town of Elgin—somebody living near there knows perhaps what that company is—therefore they need a public building in the city, and hence he recommends the appropriation for that purpose.

Mr. HOPKINS. I am not surprised that the gentleman from Delaware is not familiar with the Cook Publishing Company because it is a religious publication. [Laughter.]

Mr. HANDY. That is no reason why the whole population of Elgin should be stirred up to steal public funds from the Treasury. I mean that, of course, in a Pickwickian sense. I do not mean that as individuals they would take public money for private purposes, but that all are joined together in support of this appropriation for an unnecessary public building.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I ask a vote on the bill and amendments.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

UNITED STATES POST-OFFICE, MINNEAPOLIS.

Mr. MERCER. Now, Mr. Chairman, I call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 11056) authorizing and directing the construction of an addition to the United States post-office in the city of Minneapolis, Minn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be constructed a building for the accommodation of the United States post-office, including all necessary changes and alterations in the present building, a basement and one-story addition to the United States post-office building, in the city of Minneapolis and State of Minnesota, at a cost not exceeding $55,000, which sum is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; and the provisions of act of Congress approved April 11, 1882, entitled "An act appropriating money for the purchase of a site and the erection of a suitable building for a post-office and other Government offices in the city of Minneapolis, State of Minnesota," are so far modified as to permit the erection of said addition within 16 feet of any adjacent building.

Mr. MERCER. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, before the question on the amendment of the committee is taken, I desire to ask the limit of the cost of the present public building.

Mr. MERCER. I will state to the gentleman from Missouri that this action, recommended by the committee, is based on an urgent letter from the Treasury Department.

Mr. DOCKERY. I was about to ask if the addition proposed by the committee is recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. MERCER. Yes; and it is owing to the overcrowded condition. Urgent relief is necessary. They must have the relief at once.

Mr. DOCKERY. And the Secretary of the Treasury recommends it?

Mr. MERCER. He does, strongly.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the amount of the appropriation fixed by the bill?

Mr. MERCER. Fifty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. I suggest that the report of the committee be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. MERCER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that the report of the committee be printed in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) is as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred House bill 11056, having had the same under consideration, respectfully report as follows:

The present post-office building in the city of Minneapolis, Minn., was commenced in 1883 and completed in 1889. The needs and requirements of the structure were based upon the census returns of 1880, which gave Minneapolis a population of 46,887. Within one year after the building was completed the census showed that Minneapolis had increased in population to the number of 164,738—an enormous increase of 251 per cent.

We find that the business of the post-office has kept pace with the rapid increase in population. The number of employees in 1883 was 52; in 1889, 123; in 1897, 241. The accommodations for this large force of employees are so inadequate that the lower basement of the building, designed originally for steam and lighting plant, has been pressed into service, and for a long time has been occupied by a large number of the force. It is dark, damp, and not at all fit to work in.

The increased business of the Minneapolis office is phenomenal. We have been presented with facts and figures tending to show that the volume of business now transacted is double that done when the building was first completed.

Gross receipts, 1883, $177,599; in 1889, $309,400; in 1898, approximated, $598,000. Weight of outgoing mail, 1891, 2,422,405 pounds; in 1897, 6,653,259 pounds—a remarkable increase of 270 per cent.

Money orders issued and paid in 1889 were 180,126, aggregating $1,587,059.63. In 1898 there were issued and paid 288,074, aggregating in the total $4,507,885 85—an increase in nine years of 247 per cent.

Minneapolis stands sixteenth in the list of cities in the amount of postal receipts and fifth in amount of second-class matter mailed.

The Treasury Department is convinced of the necessity of making the addition to the building, and the letter from the Assistant Secretary is attached and made part of this report.

Your committee recommend that the bill do pass, with the following amendment:

Strike out all of line 10 and all of line 11 up to and including the word "appropriated."

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., December 14, 1898.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant, referring, among other things, to House bill 11056, introduced by Hon. LOREN FLETCHER, providing for an appropriation of $55,000 for the construction of an addition to the post-office building at Minneapolis, Minn., and requesting to be advised as to the necessity for this addition, and as to whether the amount mentioned is fair and reasonable.

In reply, you are advised that after a full and careful consideration of the matter, an addition to this building is considered absolutely necessary to provide accommodations for the service, the present building being in an overcrowded condition; and the amount above mentioned, namely, $55,000, is considered, approximately, to be a fair and reasonable amount for the purpose intended.

Respectfully, yours,

O. L. SPAULDING,
Acting Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BUTTE CITY, MONT.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (S. 164) to provide for the construction of a public building at Butte City, Mont.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable, commodious, and substantial building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, internal revenue, and other Government offices in the city of Butte and State of Montana; the cost of the site and the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $300,000; which said sum of $300,000 is hereby appropriated for said purpose out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, upon the following provisions:

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city for at least fourteen days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for opening the proposals. The proposals made in response to said public advertisement, at the time named in the advertisement or within ten days subsequent thereto, shall be received, opened, and considered by a commission of three persons, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to forward to the Secretary of the Treasury, within forty days from the date named in the advertisement for opening the proposals, a written report, with the original proposals, maps etc., and the oaths prescribed by act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, and to definitely state in said report the site selected by them, and their selection of the site shall be final; and each commissioner shall be allowed a compensation for his services of an amount within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, said compensation not to exceed $300 and actual traveling expenses to each commissioner.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, compensation and actual traveling expenses of the commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection, of the site shall be immediately available; so much of said appropriation as may be necessary for the preparation of sketch plans, drawings, specifications, and detailed estimates for the building by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department shall be available immediately upon the receipt of the report of the commissioners selecting the site; so much of said appropriation as may be necessary to make payment for the site shall be available upon the receipt of the written opinion of the Attorney-General in favor of the validity of title to the site selected and when the State of Montana shall have ceded to the United States jurisdiction over the site selected, during the time that the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein; or so much of said appropriation as may be necessary to acquire title to the site by condemnation shall be immediately available; and after the site shall have been paid for and the sketch plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches. The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 13, page 1, strike out "three" and insert in lieu thereof "two."
In line 1, page 2, strike out "three" and insert "two."
Strike out all of page 3, being lines 1 to 25, inclusive.

Strike out, on page 4, lines 1, 2, and 3 and the first three words in line 4, and renumber the pages to correspond to these amendments.

Mr. MERCER. I think the gentleman from Montana [Mr. HARTMAN] could perhaps state the substance of the report in this case, and that it would be better than to have the report read.

Mr. HARTMAN. Mr. Chairman, I think that in about one minute I can state the substance of it.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. HARTMAN. Butte is a town of from forty-five to fifty-five thousand people. It is probably the largest business point between St. Paul and Portland on the Northern Pacific, with the possible exception of Spokane. The circuit and district courts of the United States are located there, and a deputy collector and a deputy United States attorney. It is the largest commercial point in the central Northwest. This bill is substantially the same as H. R. 440, introduced by me. If any gentleman desires to ask any questions, that will be the quickest way.

Mr. MADDOX. What are the post-office receipts now?

Mr. HARTMAN. The post-office receipts for 1895 were $38,976.66. They are now probably about $45,000.

Mr. SHATTUC. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HARTMAN. Yes.

Mr. SHATTUC. Does the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. HANDY] approve of this bill?

Mr. HARTMAN. I have not submitted it to the gentleman from Delaware, but I have no doubt he does. [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I understand the committee intended to strike out the appropriation clause in that bill. I am just informed that that was overlooked. I move that the appropriation clause be stricken out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Nebraska.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 1, page 2, strike out the remainder of the paragraph, lines 1, 2, 3, and 4.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CRESTON, IOWA.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 11360) for the erection of a public building at Creston, Iowa.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Creston, Iowa, and cause such building to be erected thereon. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $50,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Iowa shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendment:

After the word "alleys," in line 1, page 2, strike out the remainder of the bill.

Mr. MADDOX. Let us have the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11360) providing for the erection of a public building at Creston, Iowa, report as follows:

Such a building would be of great use to the postal service and to the other Federal offices located there.

Creston is the largest town in southwestern Iowa, with the exception of Council Bluffs (which is more western than southwestern), which section includes 23 counties, or a full fourth of the area of the State.

Creston is the only inland town in southern Iowa which is an important railroad center, save Ottumwa, to which city it ranks next in population. Ottumwa and Creston are the only inland towns in southern Iowa having a population above 10,000.

Creston is the largest city in the Eighth Congressional district, consisting of 11 counties, the Eighth district being the only one of the 11 districts in the State which has not in its limits a Federal building.

Creston is located 75 miles southwest of Des Moines, 90 miles east of Council Bluffs, and 105 miles west of Ottumwa. It is the most important division center of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway in Iowa, it being a division point for both passenger and freight traffic, headquarters officials having residence and office there, with shops employing from 400 to 600 men, and as many more being employed in the various lines of the company's business.

A passenger station and office building costing $60,000 is now nearing completion—the finest building of its class on the Burlington road between Chicago and Omaha.

Two branch lines of railroad diverge from this point, one running to Kansas City, Mo., and the other northwest nearly a hundred miles to a terminus at Cumberland, in Cass County, and traversing a rich agricultural region. There is no city in that quarter of the State so accessible to all other points in that section as Creston.

The city has a population of 10,000, and is growing; it has several miles of paved streets; it has a waterworks plant, installed at a cost of between $200,000 and $300,000; it has a fine electric light and gas plant; the city is underlaid with a thorough system of sewerage; United States court will be held in Creston at an early day; it has the largest postal business of any town in southwestern Iowa; it is the most considerable commercial center of the section, this with reference to both the wholesale and retail trade; it has two evening and one morning paper, all long established; it has a thoroughly organized and well-equipped fire department; it is the seat of the public buildings of Union County; the business buildings of the city are all of brick and stone; it is a center of the fine stock industry, several importers being located there; Creston is seated in a fine agricultural country; the city was platted and laid out in 1869, in which year the first house was built; the town never had a "boom," and its growth has been regular and constant.

Your committee recommend that the bill pass with this amendment: Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 14, page 1.

Mr. MADDOX. I should like to ask the chairman of the committee what that report means when it says "a Federal court will be held there at an early date?"

Mr. MERCER. I understand steps have been taken to procure the holding of terms of the United States court at Creston. I think that movement has been agitated by the courts themselves.

Mr. MADDOX. Is there any law authorizing it?

Mr. MERCER. No; and I might say that no bill has yet been introduced.

Mr. MADDOX. What are the receipts of this office?

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] can, perhaps, answer the question more readily than I can.

Mr. HEPBURN. I do not know that I can state the postal receipts accurately, but I venture to say that they are something less than a quarter of a million dollars annually. [Laughter.]

Mr. DOCKERY. That is specific information.

Mr. MADDOX. Something less than a quarter of a million dollars! And there is another fact—that it is the only Congressional district in Iowa that has not already a public building.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside, to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ANNAPOLIS, MD.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 11141) for the erection of a public building at Annapolis, Md.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Annapolis, Md., and cause such building to be erected thereon. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $100,000: Provided, That no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Maryland shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendment:

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 11.

Mr. MADDOX. I should like to have the report read.

Mr. MERCER. I ask to have the report read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11141) for the erection of a public building at Annapolis, Md., submit the following report:

Annapolis is a city of approximately 8,000 inhabitants. It is the seat of the United States Naval Academy, and has also a college of very fair standing, and several less pretentious educational institutions outside of its regular public-school system. It is also the seat of government of the State of Maryland, where the legislature meets, where the court of appeals sits, and other State officials have business offices for the transaction of public business.

With this increment of transitory population, added to the number already stated, and the suburban population who patronize the office included, it may be fairly considered that the postal facilities are furnished for from 15,000 to 20,000 people. The United States Government maintains a port of entry at this place, and a United States commissioner is located there. For both of these quarters are now rented by the Government. The bill contemplates a building for post-office and "other Government offices" to the extent that quarters may be needed for such other Government offices.

It has been the policy of the Government to appropriate money for public buildings at State capitals, and Annapolis is the only State capital in the United States to-day, with the exception of the capitals of several States recently admitted into the Union, that has not a Federal public building.

For the reasons stated herein the committee recommend that the bill do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the word "dollars" in line 11.

Mr. MADDOX. I should like to inquire of the chairman whether the postal receipts here also are "less than a quarter of a million?"

Mr. MERCER. I think so. I ask for a vote.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PURCHASE OF SITE AND ERECTION OF PUBLIC BUILDING AT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (S. 1896) to provide for the purchase of a site and for the erection of a public building thereon at Salt Lake City, the capital of the State of Utah.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States court, post-office, and other offices in the city of Salt Lake, the capital of the State of Utah. Such site shall contain at least 108,900 square feet of ground. That the cost of such site and building, including the vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, shall not exceed the sum of $500,000.

That proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in three or more of the newspapers of largest circulation in said city for the period of at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals. That thereafter the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause examination to be made of the said bids and the said proposed sites, and shall cause statements, maps, and plats thereof to be taken and submitted to him; and thereupon the Secretary of the Treasury shall finally determine the location of said building and the amount to be paid for the site thereof.

And the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause appropriate sketches, plans, drawings, and specifications, and detailed estimates for the building to be prepared by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department. That there shall be available for the purposes of the said building, of the money of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury in the purchase of site, in the preparation of plans and specifications, and the commencement of the construction of the building during the fiscal year, the sum of $100,000.

Mr. MERCER. I desire to say, Mr. Chairman, that this bill provides for the sale of some Government property in Salt Lake City. A bill is pending in Congress providing for its donation to the city of Salt Lake, but the committee in its investigation thought it better that the property be sold and the proceeds covered into the Treasury. A provision of that kind is inserted in the bill. I know that will please my friend from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the value of the property?

Mr. MERCER. We have been unable to learn the exact value of the property; but it amounts to from $25,000 to $60,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. Do you make any provision for appraisement?

Mr. MERCER. The Secretary of the Treasury is fully empowered.

Mr. GAINES. I notice this bill provides for the purchase of property. Why do you limit the right of the Government to a simple purchase? Very often you can buy property better by simply condemning it.

Mr. MERCER. Provision is made that the Secretary of the Treasury can exercise his discretion in that respect. The bill so states. I ask for a vote on the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT JANESVILLE, WIS.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 11162) to provide for the construction of a public building at the city of Janesville, Wis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site for a suitable building for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Janesville, Wis., and cause such building to be erected thereon. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building, the sum of $75,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in neighboring buildings by an open space of not less than 30 feet, including streets and alleys, and that no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Wisconsin shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be and remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and the service of civil process.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $75,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the purposes above mentioned, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be available until expended.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for the reading of the report, Mr. Chairman.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11162) for the construction of a Federal building in the city of Janesville, Wis., have had the same under consideration and respectfully report as follows:

The city of Janesville is the county seat of Rock County, and has a population of 13,000. It is situated on Rock River, at the junction of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway and the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, and is the distributing center for Rock County, which, by the last State census, has a population of 48,414, and is one of the wealthiest counties in the State.

The city is surrounded by an agricultural country of great fertility, and is the principal banking and business center of the great tobacco district of Wisconsin. It has about twenty large tobacco warehouses. Its manufacturing industries are many and important, including among others the establishments of the Janesville Cotton Mills, the Rock River Woolen Mills, the Rock River Cotton Company, the Janesville Carriage Works, the Janesville Machine Company, the B. F. Crossett City Mills, and the Hall Furniture Company. These establishments employ a very large number of operatives, and manufacture upon a large scale.

The city has a very superior system of waterworks, the plant of which cost nearly $300,000. The public-school system is most excellent, requiring the use of seven large school buildings, including a $60,000 high-school building, which is one of the best in the State. In addition to these there are two parochial schools and the Wisconsin State Institute for the Blind.

Three daily and five weekly newspapers are published in the city.

Among the many fine public buildings at Janesville, the county court-house and the building of the Young Men's Christian Association may be mentioned.

Janesville has four banks, two national and two State, all of which are prominently numbered among the strong financial institutions of southern Wisconsin.

The gross receipts of the post-office for the fiscal year 1897 were $24,782.23, and the total expenses, including free delivery, were $13,433.93, leaving the net receipts $11,348.30.

The salary of the postmaster, which is based upon the receipts of the office, is $2,600, and indicates with certainty that the amount of business transacted at the post-office is, relatively speaking, exceptionally large, and further indicates the great commercial and manufacturing prosperity of the community.

The post-office of this flourishing and enterprising city is now located in a single room, for which an annual rental of $1,000 is paid. There are no modern conveniences, such as fireproof vaults, water-closets, or private rooms of any kind. All the business of the office, including that of the registry department and the free-delivery system, employing seven carriers, has to be conducted at great inconvenience in one room, and despite the free-delivery system the office is still largely patronized by the general public.

In view of the size of the city, its marked business character and advantages, the exceptionally large amount of business done at the post-office, the annual net receipts of which are approximately $11,500, the want of modern conveniences and appliances in the present rented room used for the purposes of the office, and the urgent need of adequate facilities for the proper transaction of the public business, your committee are of the opinion that the city of Janesville should have a Federal building in keeping with its character as a commercial center, and they report back the said bill with the recommendation that it do pass, amended as follows:

In line 11 strike out "seventy-five" and insert "fifty," and strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 14.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PURCHASE OF A SITE AND ERECTION OF A PUBLIC BUILDING AT ROME, N. Y.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1631) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Rome, in the State of New York.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Rome and State of New York, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $50,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall within thirty days after such examination make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of New York shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Nebraska if the report has been printed in this case?

Mr. MERCER. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there a Federal court there?

Mr. MERCER. There is no Federal court there.

Mr. DOCKERY. What are the postal receipts?

Mr. MERCER. They are in the neighborhood of $40,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the population of the city?

Mr. MERCER. I would ask the gentleman in the chair what is the population?

The CHAIRMAN. About 18,000. [Laughter.]

Mr. MERCER. About 18,000. Now I ask for a vote on the amendments, Mr. Chairman.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

TO REMOVE THE FIRE LIMIT FROM THE POST-OFFICE AT BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 11728) to remove the fire limit from the post-office at Bridgeport, Conn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That chapter 421 of the acts of the first session Fiftieth Congress, entitled "An act for the erecting of a public building at Bridgeport, Conn.," is hereby amended by striking out the words "and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the committee to this bill. It is legislation that does not provide for an addition, enlargement, or a new building, but it removes the usual 40-foot fire limit, and it is recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury owing to circumstances surrounding the purchase of a site in this city.

Mr. LOUD. Can you do that?

Mr. MERCER. This is the second time we have done it. It is urgently demanded by the Treasury Department.

Mr. LOUD. How much does the bill appropriate?

Mr. MERCER. It does not appropriate a cent.

Mr. LOUD. How much do you propose to appropriate?

Mr. MERCER. We do not propose to appropriate.

Mr. LOUD. What do they want the bill for, then?

Mr. MERCER. It is to save the Government some money.

Mr. LOUD. I think the bill is entirely out of place.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 2) to provide for the erection of a public building at Indianapolis, Ind., and yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to substitute in place of the House bill the Senate bill.

Mr. OVERSTREET. It is the next bill on the Calendar.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is it for the same amount?

Mr. OVERSTREET. It is for the same amount.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 146) to provide for the erection of a public building at Indianapolis, Ind.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, court-house, custom-house, internal-revenue office, pension office, and other Government offices in the city of Indianapolis and State of Indiana, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $1,500,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $5 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money appropriated for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of this act shall be available, except for the purposes of paying for the preliminary expenses of acquiring title to a site and preparing plans and specifications for a building, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Indiana shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

SEC. 2. That if, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury, it shall be deemed in the best interest and economy of the public service, he is hereby authorized and directed, in lieu of the provisions of section 1 of this act, to purchase, at a cost not exceeding $200,000, 15,200 square feet of ground adjoining the present site, and to cause the present United States court-house and post-office and other buildings to be torn down and removed, and to cause to be erected on the site of said buildings, with the additional ground purchased, a new public building for the use and accommodation of the Government offices, upon sketch plans, drawings, and detailed estimates to be prepared and approved as specified in said section 1 of this act, at a cost not exceeding said sum of $1,500,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. I understand the gentleman from Georgia wants to make some remarks on this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. I should like to get in first. I would be pleased to have the gentleman give the House a concise statement of just what this bill proposes. It imposes a liability of a million and a half.

Mr. MERCER. One million two hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would be glad to have a brief explanation of what the bill accomplishes.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Chairman, I can explain the reasons for this bill in less than two minutes.

Mr. DOCKERY. Take time enough.

Mr. OVERSTREET. The building now occupied by the Government at Indianapolis was constructed in 1860, when the population of the city was 18,000. There were less than 25 clerks employed by the Government at that time. The receipts of the office the last day of December, 1898, showed $430,758.83 for the year.

The expenditures for the same calendar year were $168,315.47, leaving a net profit to the Government for the year ending December 31, 1898, of $262,443.36. There are now employed by the Government, in the various branches of the Government work in that city, 554 clerks. The mailing department of the Government to-day is in a building formerly occupied by a livery stable, having long since been crowded out of its original possession.

The purchaser of a stamp for mailing a letter is required to go from the main building and pass down a part of a square and enter an additional building before his letter can be mailed.

Mr. SULZER. How much appropriation does this bill carry?

Mr. OVERSTREET. It called for a million and a half originally, but it is cut down to $1,200,000.

Mr. SULZER. When was the old post-office built?

Mr. OVERSTREET. I have already stated that; in 1860. I may say to the gentleman that there are at the capital of the State three courts, the district, the circuit, and the appellate. The present building provides only one set of rooms for the judges of those courts. The records of the courts are stored in a garret and store-rooms removed from the clerk's present surroundings, so as to make access to them almost impossible.

The marshal's office is in a different building from that occupied by the court, and that is true of the pension bureau.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment recommended by the committee to the Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 13, page 1, and line 14, page 4, strike out "five" and insert "two."

In line 58 on page 3 strike out the word "exclusive" and insert in lieu thereof the word "concurrent."

At the close of section 2 of the bill add the following new section, viz:

"SEC. 3. That in the event a site shall be purchased as provided for by section 1 of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to sell, for the highest and best bid obtainable, after advertising said sale for at least twenty days immediately preceding in at least two daily papers published in the city of Indianapolis, Ind., and upon such terms of payment as said Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, the real estate now known as the Indianapolis, Ind., post-office site, comprising the real estate, with all buildings thereon situated, now owned and occupied by the United States Government, and located on Pennsylvania and Market streets, in the city of Indianapolis, Marion County, Ind. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to apply the proceeds derived from said sale toward the payment for the purchase of the site provided for in section 1 of this act, and the sum of $1,200,000 in this act authorized, together with the unexpended balance, if any, of the proceeds derived from the sale of the present site, may be expended in the construction of the building as provided for in section 1 of this act."

Mr. LOUD. I would like to ask the gentleman how large a population there is at Indianapolis?

Mr. OVERSTREET. From letters recently received, and as shown from recent estimates, the population is 200,000. The census of 1890 shows but 105,000, but since that date some of the surrounding suburbs, which were separate organizations, have been annexed to the city.

Mr. LOUD. I want to make one suggestion to the gentleman, and it may be applicable to the whole House. When we claim population, we claim all in sight. Did I understand the gentleman to say that there were 500 clerks there?

Mr. OVERSTREET. Five hundred clerks? There are.

Mr. LOUD. In the post-office?

Mr. OVERSTREET. No; in the post-office, pension agency, internal revenue, collector's, United States courts, secret service department, water bureau, and all of the Government business there are 554 employees. There are 246 railway postal clerks who have had quarters there.

Mr. LOUD. Oh, well, Mr. Chairman, gentlemen get ambitious when they make statements on the floor, when they might as well confine themselves to the moderate truth. I was somewhat struck by the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS], who, having got his bill passed, has left the Chamber. In his exuberance, giving as the net proceeds of the post-office at some office—Elgin, I think—he took the post-office receipts as if they were all profits.

Mr. OVERSTREET. The gentleman is not calling attention to this bill under consideration?

Mr. LOUD. No; I will get to this bill in a moment. I was making this suggestion to show how ambitious gentlemen get when they desire to show the House the necessity of a public building at their place, when the abstract facts would perhaps answer quite as well. Gentlemen must know that 254 railway mail clerks have about as much connection with the Indianapolis post-office as I have. Now, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] referred to the Elgin post-office, assuming there was $38,000 or $39,000 net revenue in that city. I want to call the attention of the House to the postal receipts and net revenues.

The net revenues of the Postal Department to-day appear to be $30,000,000, and yet there is a deficit of more than $15,000,000, because when we figure the net receipts and the profits at a post-office, we simply credit to that post-office just the expense of the management of that particular office. I thought the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. OVERSTREET], when he made the statement, said that there were 500 postal clerks in the Indianapolis office, which would be one twenty-sixth of the postal clerks in the country. Let me say to the gentleman, while he may need a public building, it is unnecessary to endeavor to befog and cloud the case by an assumption that 254 railway mail clerks have any connection with the necessity for a post-office at Indianapolis.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California, some time after the Elgin bill had passed this committee, has seen fit to criticise some remarks made by me in explanation of the reason why this bill should be favorably considered by the committee. I will say to the gentleman from California that there was no exuberance in my remarks at all. They were the plain and unvarnished statement of a truthful story. The gentleman assumes, because he has been connected with the Post-Office Committee for some years, that there is no information on that subject outside of that which he contains.

Now, I will say to him that when I said the net revenue was $40,000 I meant what I said. The gross revenues for 1898 were $62,183, and the expense is only about $20,000, as I remember the amount. So that my statement was absolutely correct, that the net revenues of that office aggregated in the year 1898 more than $40,000.

If the gentleman before criticising my remarks had taken occasion to look at the revenues of that office from year to year, he would have seen that they are gradually increasing at the rate of eight or ten thousand dollars per annum. The post-office at Elgin belongs to the first class; and if any meritorious bill has been considered here to-day, this is one. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. STEELE. As the gentleman's bill has already passed, I hope he will not occupy time now in discussing it.

The question being taken, the amendments reported by the committee were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

Mr. MERCER. I ask unanimous consent that House bill No. 2 be laid aside with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

The CHAIRMAN. In the absence of objection, that order will be made.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT SEATTLE, WASH.

The next business was the bill (S. 346) for the erection of a public building at the city of Seattle, in the State of Washington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to purchase, or acquire by condemnation proceedings, a site for a building to be erected thereon, and to cause to be erected at the city of Seattle, in the State of Washington, a suitable building for the use and accommodation of the United States courts, custom-house, land office, post-office, and other Government offices in said city, with fireproof vaults extending to each story; the site, and the building thereon, when completed according to plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, not to exceed the cost of $500,000; and the sum of $500,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purchase of said site and the completion of said building.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

So much of the appropriation herein made as may be necessary to defray the expenses of advertising for proposals, actual traveling expenses of said agent, and the compensation and actual traveling expenses of said commissioners, and other expenses incident to the selection of the site and for necessary survey thereof, shall be immediately available.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Washington shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building to be erected shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 13, page 1, substitute "three" for "five."

In line 14, page 1, strike out "and the sum of five hundred thousand," and strike out all of lines 1, 2, and 3, on page 2.

Strike out lines 16 to 25, inclusive, on page 3, and lines 1 to 4, inclusive, on page 4.

Mr. MERCER. I suggest that in lieu of the reading of the report the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LEWIS] make an explanation as to this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] yields to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LEWIS].

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, Seattle is the imperial city of the oriental seas. She is the great way station at which the ceaseless caravan of civilization will rest on its march from London to Manila.

She is the most deserving city to have been the most neglected in the Federal Union. I have heretofore, in committee, made such extended argument and presented such a multiplying army of statistics that I can but repeat a portion of them. I shall limit my observations to replying to the inquiries addressed by my friend from Delaware, Major HANDY, and my ever-solicitous friend from California, Colonel LOUD. First, the principal Federal court is held there, having more cases upon the docket for disposition at one term, in that one district, being one of four districts, than there were in a year in all the Federal courts of the State of Massachusetts.

Her customs demands and necessities for collection of internal revenue exceed those of the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis combined.

Her post-office receipts for the year 1898, inclusive of the mail going to Alaska, were only little less than $100,000. She has arriving and departing from her ports daily more than 100 water crafts, going to all portions of the world.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Many of them for Japan and China.

Mr. LEWIS of Washington. As my watchful colleague suggests, many palatial vessels plying between Hongkong, China, and Yokohama, Japan, carrying and bringing the exchange commerce of that now newly explored commercial futurity. A public building is the necessity of justice, a great public building is the demand of that city now approaching 100,000 people. No other information being sought, I thank the House for its jovial temper and its generous treatment of that community more endeared to me than any other spot on earth—my home!

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the committee.

The amendments were agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

ADDITION TO PUBLIC BUILDING AT CANTON, OHIO.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 75) providing for the erection of an addition to the United States public building at Canton, Ohio.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to cause to be erected, at a cost not exceeding $15,000, on land now owned by the Government, an addition to the United States public building at Canton, Ohio; such addition to be so constructed and arranged as to provide additional accommodations for the post-office in said city.

Mr. MERCER. Let the report be read, if any gentleman desires it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. DOCKERY. Oh, Mr. Chairman, let us have a brief explanation. The RECORD, I fear, is being punctuated too freely with cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"

Mr. MERCER. I suggest that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] give an explanation of the bill,

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have an explanation.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman, in the absence of my colleague [Mr. TAYLER] who represents the district in which this building is located, I can simply state that the public building at Canton was built about twenty-five years ago, at a time when the population of that city was only 25,000. It was a small building, far too small even then for the public uses. Since that time the population of the city has increased to something like 40,000, and the business transacted at that public building has enlarged 75 per cent. This is simply a proposition to put an addition to the building at a cost not to exceed $15,000.

The question being taken, the bill was laid aside to be favorably reported.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING AT SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11530) authorizing the extension of the post-office building at Springfield, Mass.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the post-office building at Springfield, Mass., to be extended and enlarged, so as to provide necessary accommodations for the post-office, at a cost not to exceed $20,000, including all necessary changes in and repairs to the present structure.

The bill was laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS AT HASTINGS AND NORFOLK, NEBR.

The next business was the bill (S. 88) to provide for the purchase of sites for public buildings in the cities of Hastings and Norfolk, in the State of Nebraska, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire title, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, to sites in the cities of Hastings and Norfolk, respectively, in the State of Nebraska, on which to erect suitable buildings, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in said respective cities, the cost of said sites, respectively, not to exceed the sum of $10,000.

Proposals for the sale of lands suitable for said sites shall be invited by the Secretary of the Treasury, by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said respective cities of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, at Washington, in the District of Columbia, and he shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the Treasury of the result of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals, and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary. The said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the said respective sites.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $5 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a perfect title to said respective sites shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except for the purpose of the administration of the criminal and civil laws of said State and the service of processes therein.

And the sum of $25,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "elevators."

Strike out the word "respectively," in line 11; and in same line, after the word "exceed," add the words "in the city of Hastings;" and in same line strike out the word "ten" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirteen."

After the word "dollars," in line 13, add these words: "and in the city of Norfolk, $7,000."

Strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 51.

Mr. DOCKERY. Does this bill authorize the construction of two buildings or one?

Mr. MERCER. It authorizes the construction of no building—simply the purchase of sites.

Mr. DOCKERY. Sites for two buildings?

Mr. MERCER. Yes, sir.

Mr. DOCKERY. And it makes no provision for the construction of the buildings?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the reason of that?

Mr. MERCER. A bill was passed by Congress providing that United States courts should be held in these two cities; that act made provision for both cities at the same time. Senator ALLEN in the Senate, in view of that fact, introduced a bill to take care of both sites, in pursuance of the legislation theretofore had, both being embraced in the act of establishing United States courts.

Mr. DOCKERY. But how do you take care of them?

Mr. MERCER. By providing for sites both at Norfolk and at Hastings.

Mr. DOCKERY. Only the sites?

Mr. MERCER. That is all, and making appropriations of $10,000 at each place for the sites.

Mr. DOCKERY. Then what about the buildings?

Mr. MERCER. That will have to be looked after by the people who introduced the other bills.

The amendments, as stated by the Clerk from the desk, I wish to say, Mr. Chairman, are incorrect. The amendments read were, in line 8, to strike out the word "elevators." Then make no further change in the bill until line 17 is reached, on page 3; and strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 16, to the end of the bill.

The only amendment, I will state, that is not right, as read from the desk, is the amendment striking out the words "elevators" and "respectively" where they occur in the bill and inserting the words "in the city of Hastings, $13,000," and "in the city of Norfolk, $7,000."

Mr. MADDOX. How did the elevator get into the "site" of the public building?

Mr. MERCER. Oh, if the gentleman from Georgia had paid attention to the reading of the bill and my response to the gentleman from Missouri, he would not have needed to ask that question.

Mr. MADDOX. I did pay attention to the gentleman's statement.

Mr. MERCER. This provides for the purchase of sites and for the erection of these two Government buildings at the places named, and for the construction of buildings of such a character, but makes no provision for their construction.

Mr. MADDOX. That is the reason I was curious to know how the elevators got in.

Mr. MERCER. I ask a vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend on page 1, so that the bill will read as follows: "The cost of said sites, respectively, not to exceed the sum of $10,000.

Mr. MERCER. That is right, with the exception that the rest of the bill, after line 16, is stricken out.

The question was taken on the amendments recommended by the committee, and they were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

NEW CUSTOM-HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 9077) to supplement and amend an act entitled "An act for the erection of a new custom-house in the city of New York, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, for customs purposes, the premises heretofore selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, under the act of September 14, 1888, as a site for a custom-house building, and known as the Bowling Green site, in the city of New York and State of New York, and the sum of $750,000 in addition to the balance in the Treasury remaining unexpended under the provisions of the act of Congress approved September 14, 1888, entitled "An act for the erection of an appraiser's warehouse in the city of New York, and for other purposes," is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and made immediately available for such purpose.

"SEC. 2. That upon the acquisition of said site the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause to be erected thereon a substantial, commodious, and fireproof building for the purposes of a custom-house, at a cost not to exceed $3,000,000, exclusive of the cost of the site, and for the preparation of the plans and the commencement of the work the sum of $1,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and made immediately available for this purpose; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to contract for the completion of said building, including heating and ventilating apparatus, fireproof vaults, elevators, and approaches complete, within the limit of cost prescribed by law, subject to the appropriations which may hereafter be made by Congress.

"SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, invite not less than five architects to compete for the preparation and furnishing of plans, drawings, and specifications, and the local supervision of the construction of said new custom-house building, under the direction and general supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"SEC. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to sell at public or private sale, to the highest bidder, after due advertisement, but for not less than $3,000,000, the present custom-house property in the city of New York, bounded by Wall, William, and Hanover streets, and Exchange place, and to deposit the proceeds of the sale, after the payment of the usual incidental expenses, in the United States Treasury as miscellaneous receipts derived from the sale of Government property; and in case of such sale the Secretary of the Treasury shall lease said premises from the purchaser or purchasers thereof, at a rental which shall not exceed 4 per cent per annum on the purchase price, for use as a custom-house until the new custom-house shall be ready for occupancy, upon such terms as he may deem advantageous, and such sale shall be subject to such right of lease; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to accept the said purchase price in several payments, from time to time, as he may deem most advantageous: Provided, however, That the use, occupation, and possession of said property shall not be surrendered until the new custom-house is ready for occupation and final payment is fully made.

"SEC. 5. That the appropriation of $750,000, made in section 1 of this act, in addition to the balance in the Treasury remaining unexpended under the provisions of the act of Congress approved September 14, 1888, for the acquisition of the Bowling Green site, and the further sum of $1,000,000 for the preparation of plans and the commencement of the work of construction, appropriated in section 2 of this act, shall be reimbursed out of the proceeds of the sale of the present custom-house property, provided for in section 4 of this act, when such proceeds have been covered into the Treasury.

"SEC. 6. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed."

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, I hope the provisions of this bill will be explained. It is quite an important matter.

Mr. MERCER. I suggest that the report be read first.

Mr. LOW. I will explain the bill.

Mr. QUIGG. I think I can save time if the gentleman will yield to me.

Mr. LOW. I will explain the bill. This is my bill——

Mr. QUIGG. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to me?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. QUIGG].

Mr. QUIGG. Mr. Chairman, this bill is offered to complete certain legislation on the subject of the New York custom-house, adopted in 1888. A bill was passed at that time—twelve years ago—which appropriated the sum of $2,000,000 for the purchase of a site for a custom-house building and for appraiser's stores in the city of New York. It was then intended that the building should embrace both of these branches—that is to say, the custom-house and the appraiser's stores—on the same site. That policy it was found impossible to carry out, however, and in 1891 permission was given for the purchase of a site for the appraiser's stores in another place.

This site was purchased in pursuance of that legislation, and the appraiser's stores building was erected on a site near the old property the Government was then using for this purpose, which required the expenditure of $600,000, or near that, of the two millions appropriated for the two sites. Then in 1892 Congress passed an act directing that the custom-house should be erected on the Bowling Green site, and directing that the balance of the appropriation should be made available for the purchase of a site and the appointment of a commission to condemn it, and also directing the sale of the present property for a sum not less than $4,000,000.

Now, it is that bill which this bill proposes to amend. The commission of appraisal was appointed and condemned the property at $2,100,000, or about $700,000 more than was available under the act of 1888. Under the act of 1888 there was a balance of $1,400,000, which balance remains at this minute, appropriated for the purchase of that site. But Congress has never since then completed the necessary legislation by giving the remaining $700,000 which is necessary under the condemnation proceedings for the acquisition of the Bowling Green site.

Now, this act gives that further $750,000. It also gives a million dollars for the purpose of going ahead with the construction of the building, and it requires that the building now occupied by the Government as a custom-house shall be sold for not less than $3,000,000, and that the proceeds of that sale shall be covered into the Treasury, reimbursing the advances made under this bill. That is really the whole of this bill. The work is to be done by the Treasury Department. There is to be no commission or other scheme for supervision except by the Treasury Department. The substitute bill is submitted here with the recommendation of the Department.

Mr. MERCER. I desire to say that this bill was introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LOW], and the bill reported by the committee is a substitute for the bill introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LOW]. The substitute is recommended by the Treasury Department. In fact, it was drawn by the Treasury Department. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. LOW] desire to say anything?

Mr. LOW. I desire to say that I was fully prepared to explain the situation and to give the reasons for the passage of this bill; but since the gentleman from New York [Mr. QUIGG] has seen fit to usurp my privilege and to explain the matter, I will not detain the House any longer.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the substitute offered by the committee.

The substitute was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING, FERGUS FALLS, MINN.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (S. 2048) for the erection of a public building at Fergus Falls, Minn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire by gift, purchase, or condemnation or otherwise a site for, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, and other Government offices at the city of Fergus Falls, in the State of Minnesota. The site and building thereon, with its appurtenances, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in the aggregate the sum of $175,000; that no money appropriated for the purpose aforesaid shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Minnesota shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the State and the service of civil process therein.

That the sum of $175,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purposes of this act.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 7 strike out the word "elevators."

In line 14 strike out the words "one hundred and," so that limit of cost of site and building shall be $75,000.

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 14.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

POST-OFFICE, ETC., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 11686) providing for the purchase of additional property for the use of the post-office and other Government offices in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, the property known as lot 36, block 20, Ward 4, lying on the east side of Washington street, 175 feet north of Johnson street and 122 feet 10 inches south of Tillary street, in the city of Brooklyn and State of New York, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in said city of Brooklyn.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to appropriate a sufficient sum of money, not otherwise appropriated, for this service.

SEC. 3. That no money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for the said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of New York shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 12, after the word "Brooklyn," add, "Provided, That the purchase price shall not exceed $20,000."

Strike out section 2 in the bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let the report be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11686) providing for the purchase of additional property for the use of the post-office and other Government offices in the city of Brooklyn, State of New York, report the same and recommend its passage.

The bill provides for the purchase of a piece of ground immediately adjoining the property of the Government, rendered necessary by the development of the Railway Mail Service by the substitution in Brooklyn of the trolley mail car, so far as possible, in place of the mail wagon, a commendable step toward a modern and speedy method of transporting the mails.

The additional space provided for will not necessitate an extension to the post-office building.

The bill is approved by the Postmaster-General in the following letter:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., December 19, 1895.

SIR: I invite your attention to correspondence attached, and especially to the communication of Postmaster Sullivan, bearing date of the 13th instant, addressed to yourself, relative to the above subject.

The inauguration of the trolley-car system of handling mails in Brooklyn has necessitated the construction of a spur from the main track of the Atlantic avenue line into the driveway of the Brooklyn post-office. This very materially reduces the space to be occupied by mail wagons, so that now there is not sufficient room.

In my opinion lot 36, in block 20, Ward 4, should be purchased, as suggested by Mr. Sullivan, the postmaster, and I trust that you may be instrumental in securing the necessary appropriation for that purpose.

Very respectfully,

W. L. WILSON, Postmaster-General.

Hon. CHARLES G. BENNETT,
House of Representatives.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill amended as follows:

In line 12, after the word "Brooklyn," add "Provided, That the purchase price shall not exceed $20,000."

Strike out section 2 in the bill.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING, KANSAS CITY, KANS.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 2129) to provide for the erection of a public building at Kansas City, Kans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Kansas City, State of Kansas. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $250,000. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, after the site for said building shall have been purchased, to cause a plan and specifications of said building to be prepared, which said plan and specifications shall not involve an expenditure in the erection and completion of said building and approaches thereto exceeding the portion of said $250,000 remaining after the site for said building shall have been paid for; and no plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum so remaining after paying for the site of said building: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Kansas shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. MERCER. The amendments recommended by the committee are incorrectly printed. The first amendment proposed by the committee was to strike out the word "two," in line 11, and insert in lieu thereof the word "one."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as the committee intended it.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 11, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. We offer the same amendment in line 6, page 2.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In line 6, page 2, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "one."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next committee amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 14, page 2.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. PETERS] introduced this bill, and I should like to ask him if there is a Federal court at Kansas City, Kans.?

Mr. PETERS. There is not. There is no place for one. We need this building for that purpose.

Mr. DOCKERY. You are simply providing a place for a Federal court.

Mr. PETERS. Yes; and post-office also.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the population?

Mr. PETERS. Something over fifty thousand.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the amount of the postal receipts?

Mr. PETERS. In 1897 the gross postal receipts were $64,000 and the net $31,000. In 1898 the gross receipts were $75,000 and the net receipts $38,000. Recently we have arranged so that we receive some of the postal benefits that were formerly given to our sister city across the line, and the net receipts are now about $5,000 a month.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING, BALTIMORE, MD.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (S. 710) to provide for the purchase of additional land in the square now occupied by the custom-house in the city of Baltimore, Md., and for the erection of a new public building thereon for the accommodation of the Government service in said city.

The bill was read, as follows.

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to acquire title to additional property in the block or square upon which stands the United States custom-house, in the city of Baltimore, State of Maryland, and to give additional space for the accommodation of the Government service in said custom-house building, the Secretary of the Treasury, acting for and on behalf of the Government of the United States, is hereby authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase or condemnation, a certain lot or piece of ground, with the buildings thereon, in the said city of Baltimore, State of Maryland, now owned and lately occupied by the Merchants' National Bank of Baltimore; and the sum of $125,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for that purpose out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 2. That after having acquired the lot or parcel of ground specified in the preceding section, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby further authorized and directed to cause to be erected upon the enlarged site, consisting of the property already owned by the Government, and the additional lot authorized to be purchased as aforesaid, reserving such space as it may be deemed necessary to reserve for approaches to said building, a substantial and commodious new fireproof building, including heating apparatus, vaults, elevator service, and approaches, adequate for the use and accommodation of the United States custom-house service, internal-revenue service, subtreasury, and other Government offices, excepting the post-office, in the said city of Baltimore. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, according to law, and the cost of said building, exclusive of the site, shall not exceed in the aggregate the sum $1,500,000; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall not approve any plan or plans for said building the cost of which will exceed, when completed, the said sum of $1,500,000.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read as follows:

In line 13, page 2, section 1, strike out all after the word "Baltimore," up to and including the word "appropriated," in line 16, all in section 1, and insert in lieu thereof the following words: "and the Secretary of the Treasury shall not pay for such additional property an amount in excess of the sum of one hundred thousand dollars."

Strike out section 2.

Amend the title by striking out the words, "and for the erection of a new public building thereon."

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from Nebraska a question.

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. PAYNE. Only a short time ago there was a proposition made to Congress to allow the old building, the old United States building, to stand in Baltimore and to be rented for the use of the county court. It was stated then that it might just as well be used for that purpose, for there was plenty of land, and it did not make any fire risks, or anything of that kind; that it was far enough removed from the new building so that there was no risk. Now, has the chairman of the committee investigated that matter and found it absolutely necessary to purchase this land for an addition to the Government property?

Mr. MERCER. I will state to the gentleman from New York that the land in the city of Baltimore owned by the Government of the United States is in the shape of a letter H, and the Government has title to all that letter H except this one leg. It is this one leg the bill provides for the purchase of, and unless this bill pass there is nothing to prevent any private corporation or any individual from erecting any kind of a building on this particular leg of the H. If it were done, it would destroy the beauty, the harmony, and the usefulness of such Government buildings as would be erected on the present site.

Mr. PAYNE. Has the old Government building been removed?

Mr. MERCER. The old Government building is there and is occupied—one of the worst rookeries I ever saw.

Mr. PAYNE. Is it occupied by the county and city courts of the city of Baltimore?

Mr. McINTIRE. The gentleman refers to the old court-house building of that city. It is remote from the proposed construction for the new custom-house, and there is a provision requiring that when the city courts get through with that building it shall be torn down. It is a small square structure, built over sixty years ago. It is remote from the present custom-house.

Mr. PAYNE. Is it not on the same site?

Mr. McINTIRE. It is seven blocks off, adjoining the new post-office. It is quite remote from this ground.

Mr. PAYNE. Can they not get enough money out of the sale of that old building to buy this ground, or must the city of Baltimore have the use of that building forever?

Mr. McINTIRE. It is expected that when they get done with it it will be pulled down, and perhaps some time will be annexed to the post-office itself, which shortly will be required for post-office purposes.

Mr. PAYNE. They were to tear it down in two or three years. [Cries of "Vote!"] Then I understand it is not all beauty and harmony.

Mr. MERCER. Not exactly.

Mr. McINTIRE. It is an absolute necessity, as the gentleman has told you.

Mr. CANNON. Is there a building there now?

Mr. PAYNE. Is the report a lengthy one? [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. MERCER. There is a report, I will say to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HICKS. The gentleman from Nebraska might state the result of our investigation.

Mr. PAYNE. I think I had better have the report read in my time.

Mr. MERCER. It is better to have the report read.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to know whether it is all for beauty and harmony.

Mr. MERCER. It is for usefulness as well.

A MEMBER. I heard the gentleman use that word.

Mr. PAYNE. I will not ask for the reading of the report.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CLINTON, IOWA.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 11965) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Clinton, in the State of Iowa.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Clinton and State of Iowa, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

On page 1, strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventy-five."

Mr. CURTIS of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I believe the House will permit this bill to go through without the amendment recommended by the committee, and I trust that the committee will also give its consent. I can state the reason, if the House desires me to do so, why, in my opinion, the bill should be allowed to pass as it was introduced.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think that Western face ought to have its own way without any speech.

Mr. CURTIS of Iowa. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that this bill was reported in three former Congresses. As it was introduced in each Congress it provided for $150,000, and in every instance, I believe, it was reported at $100,000. Therefore, believing that $100,000 would be the amount that this Congress would allow, I introduced the bill with a provision for $100,000. The committee saw fit to recommend $75,000. I reside in that city. It has a population of from 27,000 to 30,000. It is the fourth or fifth in the State in commercial importance and located on the greatest trunk line of railroad, perhaps, west of Chicago.

Mr. STEELE. It is the only city of Iowa that has not a public building?

Mr. CURTIS of Iowa. Of its size.

Mr. HENDERSON. If my colleague will allow me, it was pretty well understood the committee cut a little hard when they cut it down to $75,000. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The question was taken on the amendment of the committee; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CURTIS of Iowa. Division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 31, noes 68.

So the amendment of the committee was rejected.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House without amendment and with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT CARROLLTON, KY.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1663) for the erection of a public building at Carrollton, Ky.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise provide a site for and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, with a fireproof vault therein, for the accommodation of the post-office at the city of Carrollton, Ky. The plans, specifications, and full estimates of said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for the site and building complete the sum of $25,000: Provided, That the site leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided further, That no part of said sum shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Kentucky shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be the owner of the same, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the word "alleys" in line 14.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to inquire for what purpose this building is to be used?

Mr. MERCER. I will refer the gentleman from California to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY].

Mr. LOUD. Does not the chairman of the committee know?

Mr. MERCER. Yes; but the gentleman from Kentucky can give the gentleman more information.

Mr. BERRY. What does the gentleman want to know?

Mr. LOUD. I ask for what purpose the building is to be used?

Mr. BERRY. It is for a Government post-office and a stamp depot. There are three or four large distilleries there, and the receipts of those distilleries for a week would build the building. [Laughter.]

Mr. LOUD. What is the population of Carrollton?

Mr. BERRY. About 3,500.

Mr. LOUD. And I see it has the enormous postal receipts of $3,197.

Mr. BERRY. They pay $600 a year rent for a post-office and $200 rent for a stamp depot and a place for the board of pension commissioners. It will be thorough economy for the Government to build a building there.

Mr. LOUD. Of course. I think this is a departure, Mr. Chairman, that never has been taken by this House. Here is a little country town doing a business and should have a population of 2,500 or 3,000 people, as is apparent from its postal receipts. Just contemplate the erection of a post-office building in a town with the total postal receipts of about $3,000 a year. I suppose, of course, that the bill will go through, because the committee has reported it; but I want to say in perfect candor to the chairman of the committee and to the committee that it is an outrage upon the public Treasury greater than has been perpetrated by this House or any that will succeed it.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to ask if it is the policy of the Committee on Public Buildings to erect public buildings in towns of 2,500 inhabitants having no court-house? If that is so, I have at least 20 towns in my district better entitled to a public building than this is. I would like to understand on what theory the committee reported a bill of this kind.

Mr. BERRY. Let me say to the gentleman from New York that the town of Carrollton lies at the mouth of the Kentucky River; that it has four great distilleries, which bring a revenue to the Government of $4,000 or $5,000, and it has the largest tobacco warehouse in the country. There is slack-water navigation of the Kentucky River there, which is being carried on under the auspices of the United States and is almost completed, which extends 235 miles into the most fertile portion of the State, and Carrollton will be the base of the supplies in that large and beautiful country.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I have nothing more to say, except to protest against passing a bill of this kind. Gentlemen cry, "Vote!" "Vote!" The gentleman from Kentucky is a popular member of this House, a friend to all of us; but I do not think for that reason we ought to pass a bill of this kind. It may be a pretty city, as he says; there are thousands of such cities, but that does not entitle them to a public building at the Government expense. It may be that there are large receipts from the distilleries, but it is not the people of this town that pay those receipts. They are paid by people all over the United States.

If there is any good reason for a public building there, I am willing to vote for the bill, but if there is no reason beyond what has been stated to this House, we ought to vote the bill down. We ought to stop and draw the line somewhere on these public buildings.

Mr. BERRY. The gentleman from New York makes a mistake when he says this is not a county town. It is the county seat.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman from Kentucky is mistaken. I did not say it was not a county seat; I said that it had no United States court there.

Mr. BERRY. This town is situated at the mouth of the Kentucky River, which is being improved, as I have said, by slack-water navigation for over 200 miles, and when that is completed it will be a large entry port of trade for this portion of the country and from the Indiana side of the river. It is one of the oldest towns in the State. The valley of the Kentucky River for hundreds of miles will make its base of supplies the town of Carrollton. The gentleman has not in New York any territory that will produce what this territory does about the city of Carrollton. I think this is a reasonable amount and it will be economy for the Government to erect a building there of its own.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment recommended by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PAYNE) there were 85 ayes and 15 noes.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the Committee of the Whole now rise and report back to the House the various bills acted upon by the committee, with the action thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SHERMAN reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration bills of the House of the following titles, had directed him to report the same favorably with amendment and that, as amended, they do pass:

A bill (H. R. 10969) for the erection of a public building in the city of Blair, Nebr.

A bill (H. R. 1088) to provide for the erection of a public building at Elizabeth City, N. C.

A bill (H. R. 1139) to provide for a building for the use of the post-office, office of the superintendent of the Hot Springs Reservation, and other civil offices in the city of Hot Springs, Ark.

A bill (H. R. 521) for the erection of a public building at Fitchburg, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 11314) to provide for a public building at New Iberia, La.;

A bill (H. R. 5974) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building thereon at Bluefield, in the State of West Virginia;

A bill (H. R. 10962) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joliet, in the State of Illinois;

A bill (H. R. 447) for the erection of a custom-house and post-office building at Brunswick, Ga.;

A bill (H. R. 4076) for enlarging the public building at Topeka, Kans.;

A bill (H. R. 484) providing for the erection of an addition to the United States custom-house and post-office building in the city of Dubuque, Iowa;

A bill (H. R. 6) to increase the limit of cost for the purchase of site and the erection of a public building at Omaha, Nebr.;

A bill (H. R. 5536) appropriating money for an annex to the Federal building at Jackson, Miss.;

A bill (H. R. 4306) for the erection of a public building in the city of Elgin, Ill.;

A bill (H. R. 11056) authorizing and directing the construction of an addition to the United States post-office in the city of Minneapolis, Minn.;

A bill (H. R. 11360) for the erection of a public building at Creston, Iowa;

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, February 8, 1899.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on motion of Mr. RAWLINS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

BRAZOS RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, in response to a resolution of the 28th ultimo, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, together with a report from Col. Henry N. Robert, Corps of Engineers, president of the Board of Engineers appointed under the provisions of the river and harbor act of June 3, 1898, containing information relative to the survey and estimates for the improvement of the mouth of the Brazos River near Velasco, Tex., etc.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

WASHINGTON, ALEXANDRIA AND MOUNT VERNON RAILWAY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Railway Company, of the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution to print 1,000 additional copies of the Report of the Superintendent of Indian Schools for 1898, etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

A bill (S. 4571) to extend Rhode Island avenue; and

A bill (S. 4709) to receive arrearages of taxes due the District of Columbia to July 1, 1897, at 6 per cent per annum, in lieu of penalties and costs.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE SENATOR MORRILL.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. President, I wish to announce that at the close of the reading of Washington's Farewell Address by the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], made the special order for February 22 next, I shall request that the legislative business be laid aside that Senators may pay fitting tribute to the memory of the late Senator MORRILL, of Vermont. This announcement is made after an understanding with those who have in charge the paramount business of the Senate, and it is agreeable to them.

Mr. GORMAN. We did not hear on this side the date named by the Senator from Vermont.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. February 22, at the conclusion of the reading of Washington's Farewell Address.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas presented the petitions of T. C. Potter and 202 other citizens of Picayune, Ark., and the petitions of A. R. McKinney and 200 other citizens of Cherry Valley, Ark., praying for the establishment of postal savings bank depositories; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. ROSS presented the petitions of Z. T. Austin and 216 other citizens of Burlington, Vt., praying for the establishment of postal savings bank depositories; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. GRAY presented a petition of the legislature of Delaware, praying that an appropriation be made to provide a channel in the Delaware River of the depth of 30 feet; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint resolution urging the Congress of the United States to provide a channel of the depth of 30 feet in the Delaware River.

Whereas the commercial and industrial interests of States bordering on the Delaware River require that the channel of said river should be such as to permit modern deep-draft steamships to navigate the waters thereof, thereby placing the ports of entry upon said river on an equality with other ports on the Atlantic coast which now have channels of 30 feet or more: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the State of Delaware in general assembly met, That the senate and house of representatives of the State of Delaware hereby urge and request the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation at its present session as will provide a channel in the Delaware River of the depth of 30 feet.

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States.

Passed at Dover, January 23, 1899.

CHAS. H. SALMON,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

THEODORE F. CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Approved this the 2d day of February, A. D. 1899.

PERSONNEL OF THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. HALE. I move, by the direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs, to recommit to that committee the bill (H. R. 10403) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States.

The motion was agreed to.

LAKE SCHUTTE CEMETERY CORPORATION.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5431) granting the south half of northwest quarter of section 30, township 162 north, range 72 west, to the Lake Schutte Cemetery Corporation, of Dunseith, N. Dak., for cemetery purposes, to report it with an amendment, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. It is a very short bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendment of the Committee on Public Lands was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the following described tract of land, situate in the county of Rolette, State of North Dakota, namely, the south half of northwest quarter of section 30, township 162 north, range 72 west, be, and the same is hereby, granted and conveyed to the Lake Schutte Cemetery Corporation, of Dunseith, N. Dak., upon the payment of $1.25 per acre by said corporation to the United States, to have and to hold said lands to its use and behoof forever, for cemetery purposes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LANDS AT VICTOR, COLO.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11142) granting to the mayor of the city of Victor, in the county of El Paso and State of Colorado, the right to enter certain lands, therein described, for city purposes, to report it back favorably without amendment.

Mr. TELLER. I ask that the bill may be put on its passage. It is simply to allow the city of Victor to take about 160 acres for water purposes where a dam has already been erected.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SARAH K. M'LEAN.

Mr. DAVIS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3200) for the relief of Sarah K. McLean, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Nathaniel H. McLean.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish the Senator would let us get through with the morning business. I have no objection to the bill, but I have a bill that I would like to introduce.

Mr. DAVIS. This bill has passed the Senate three times at previous sessions.

Mr. ALLEN. All right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill called up by the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. TILLMAN. Is the morning business closed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is not concluded.

Mr. TILLMAN. Had we not better get through with that before we undertake to pass bills?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota has asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. DAVIS. It is a bill which has passed the Senate heretofore three times.

Mr. TILLMAN. Could not the Senator wait until we get through with the routine business?

Mr. DAVIS. I will be very much obliged to the Senator if he will yield.

Mr. TILLMAN. I want to submit an amendment to an appropriation bill; but of course I will give way to the Senator.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the proper accounting officers to settle and adjust to Sarah K. McLean, widow of the late Lieut. Col. Nathaniel H. McLean, all back pay and emoluments that would have been due and payable to Nathaniel H. McLean as a major from July 23, 1864, to the date of his reinstatement, March 3, 1875, and appropriates the amount found due by that adjustment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

REMOVAL OF SNOW AND ICE.

Mr. McMILLAN. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12009) to provide for the removal of snow and ice in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, to report it with amendments; and as it is a matter of great importance just now, I ask that the bill may be put on its passage. It will take but a moment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The amendments of the Committee on the District of Columbia were, in line 8, page 1, before the word "dollars," to strike out "two thousand" and insert "ten thousand;" and in line 1, page 2, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one" and insert "two;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, for the following objects, namely: For cleaning snow and ice from cross walks and gutters, under the act approved March 2, 1895, $10,000; one-half of said sum to be paid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, and the other half out of the Treasury of the United States.

For the removal of snow and ice, to be disbursed under the direction of the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in and around Washington, D. C., $2,000.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask that a letter from the president of the Board of District Commissioners be read. It explains the necessity for having this amount put at their disposal. The bill passed the House before the recent heavy snow fall.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, COMMISSIONERS DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, February 7, 1899.

DEAR SIR: The Commissioners of the District of Columbia have the honor to state that, owing to the additional heavy snow falls, the appropriation of $2,000, passed by the House February 5, will be utterly inadequate to carry out the law for the removal of snow from the cross walks and gutters, etc.

An appropriation of at least $10,000 should be made to properly execute the law; and the Commissioners earnestly request your committee to use its best endeavors to have such an amount appropriated.

With the heavy fall of snow and the accompanying cold weather the demands for charity have been enormously increased. The charity organizations have sent to the contractor for removal of the snow at least 500 more men than can be put to work under the small appropriation pending, and therefore, besides meeting a public necessity, the appropriation requested would be a most potent factor in allaying the cries of poverty.

Very respectfully,

JOHN B. WIGHT,
President Board of Commissioners, District of Columbia.

Hon. WILLIAM B. ALLISON,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MAPS OF ALASKA.

Mr. LODGE. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 239) authorizing the Director of the Geological Survey to prepare a map of Alaska, showing all known topographic and geologic features, etc., to report it with amendments, and I ask for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The amendments of the Committee on Printing were, in line 4, to strike out the words "a map" and insert "maps;" in line 8, to strike out "forty" and insert "twenty;" in line 9, to strike out "map" and insert "maps;" in the same line, after the word "printed," to strike out "ten" and insert "five;" in line 10, to strike out "twenty" and insert "ten;" in line 11, to strike out "ten" and insert "five;" in line 12, to strike out "map" and insert "maps;" and in line 14, to strike out "$3,000" and insert "$4,200;" so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the Director of the Geological Survey is hereby authorized and directed to prepare maps of Alaska, showing all known topographic and geologic features, including what is known of the gold-bearing rocks, and a text of the same, the text to contain also an explanation of the best known routes and methods of reaching the gold fields; 20,000 copies of the maps and text to be printed, 5,000 for the use of the Senate, 10,000 for the use of the House of Representatives, and 5,000 for distribution by the Geological Survey; and the Director is authorized to have said maps and text prepared and printed in the engraving and printing division of the Geological Survey; and $4,200 is hereby appropriated for the purpose; and that this appropriation be made immediately available.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to ask from what committee this comes?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Committee on Printing.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should like to ask if it has been referred to the Special Committee on the Geological Survey for action?

Mr. LODGE. It has not. It is a bill simply for printing; that is all.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Printing if it is solely a matter for the Committee on Printing? No such sturdy beggar ever comes before Congress as the Geological Survey. It is always something somewhere for which an appropriation of money is to be made.

I should like to know if all these surveys have been so made that there will be no further expense except a publication of the map itself. Will there be any expense incurred in making this survey or planning these routes? We have had all this for years.

Mr. President, years ago I tried unsuccessfully for two years to limit these appropriations or to help cut down the vast sums that the Geological Survey takes from the Treasury of the United States every year, more than half of which is for exact duplication of the mapping of the Geodetic Survey, and there is always something toward the end of a session that comes in, even outside of the vast appropriations that come through the Interior Department, for the Geological Survey. I should like to ask if $4,200 covers all the outlay the Government is going to be under for these maps? It is only a year ago that we had a pretty good map of the Yukon district and the Alaskan country.

Mr. LODGE. I will explain, Mr. President. Last year a map was published covering all the region that had then been surveyed. The print of that report and map was entirely exhausted. There was a very great demand for it, as the Senator will easily understand. Last summer a very much larger survey was made, covering a large tract of country up to the line of the Yukon and covering a great deal of country that had never been surveyed before. This is simply to print the result of the surveys that have been made. It has nothing to do with any future survey. It is only to print a new edition of the old map with the additional information gained in the recent surveys.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I ask the Senator a question? Is the Senator certain that it is not accompanied in its passage through the Senate by some provision in one of the appropriation bills that there shall be some sum expended for the purpose of making some of these maps?

Mr. LODGE. It relates only to surveys in the past. Of course the Committee on Printing has absolutely no authority to authorize the printing of anything that is not prepared and ready. All of this material is ready; it is all made.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President——

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the Senator from Nebraska will pardon me a moment, as the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has just come in, I ask him whether or not it is a fact that the Geological Survey are asking increased appropriations this year on account of Alaska work? Of course they are for some work, but are they asking it for Alaska work?

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt they are asking for increased appropriations.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Neither have I.

Mr. ALLISON. But to what extent I can not state. I am not quite familiar with the items at this moment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. It is a sure thing that wherever they are surveying they are asking for additional appropriations.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if since the publication of the last map and the last report of the survey there have not been extensive additional surveys made?

Mr. LODGE. There have been. It is for the publication of a new edition with all the additional surveys and with the maps brought up to the results of the additional surveys that this is asked. It provides for nothing in the future; it authorizes nothing in the future. It is simply to print the results of the work done last year under last year's appropriation.

Mr. ALLEN. Then, with the permission of the Senator from Colorado, I desire to submit that it is entirely proper and in keeping with the acquisition of necessary knowledge that the maps should be revised and the report of the surveys published from time to time, until the work in Alaska is complete.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If this appropriation has passed the eagle eye of the Senator from Nebraska, I will withdraw my objection, Mr. President.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, it has passed my eagle eye.

Mr. CARTER. As I understand the Senator from Massachusetts, it is the purpose of this resolution to make available for public use information heretofore collected in addition to that which appears on the former map.

Mr. LODGE. It is to make available for public use material collected in the surveys of last summer, appropriated for in the last act. It is to make useful and available and within reach of the public the surveys which we have caused to be made, and which have been made under existing appropriations. The joint resolution was introduced by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS], whom I do not see here this morning. I went into the matter very thoroughly, and I have an exact estimate of the cost, which is embodied in the appropriation, and which I do not think is excessive. It is not a large amount. Of course I know nothing about the Geological Survey appropriations. All the committee are called to pass upon in the matter of printing is whether the document seems to them to deserve publication and whether there is a demand adequate for its publication. There certainly is a great demand for this information.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I can say to the Senator from Massachusetts that none of us know much about the appropriations for the Geological Survey except that they increase with giant strides year after year, and somehow they always get through.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator from Massachusetts allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. If we are not to print the result of the surveys, had we not better stop the surveying?

Mr. LODGE. I should think it useless to make surveys unless we were going to make the information that is acquired available to the public, when the public desires to have it.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will say to the Senator from Colorado that I think he should direct his attention to curtailing the work of the Geological Survey rather than to curtailing the printing of that work.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that this is $4,200 to print maps of work for which appropriation was made, we are told, last year. Next year there will be another increased appropriation to extend the roads a little farther to where there may be some other gold fields possibly, or some other stage routes. This work has been done only at the threshold of Alaska. They will have Alaska platted as carefully as the city of New York is with streets and alleys if we let them keep on. This map simply marks one stage in the internal progressive development of the Geological Survey; that is all.

Mr. ALLEN. I submit that it is perfectly proper that the revised work of the Survey should be published from year to year as the work progresses. How else can it be completed? It is impossible to make a complete survey of the district of Alaska in one year. A map that was valuable a year ago has no special value this year unless it contains the additional surveys and a report upon those surveys.

Mr. President, I regard the work done by the Geological and Geodetic Surveys as the most valuable done in the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope I may interrupt the Senator long enough to ask him not to connect the two. The Geodetic Survey is making a plan of the United States upon a certain scale. The Geological Survey is making identically the same map upon an entirely different scale.

Mr. ALLEN. I know; but they are cooperating to a large extent.

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; I do not think they are cooperating. They are overlapping to a very large extent, but not cooperating.

Mr. ALLEN But we have large possessions in Alaska about which but little is known to the public at this time. I would regard it as an important and necessary work for the Government of the United States to take up the whole subject of providing accurate maps of the different States, Territories, and districts of the United States for the public at a minimum cost. Each year as these surveys progress, as new information comes into the possession of those charged with acquiring it, the maps should be revised, and the information should be published, although it costs many thousands of dollars to do it.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A joint resolution authorizing the Director of the Geological Survey to prepare maps of Alaska, showing all known topographic and geologic features, and so forth."

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. RAWLINS, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2408) to remove a suspension upon the disbursement of an appropriation, reported it without amendment and submitted a report thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. WOLCOTT, from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. MORGAN February 7, 1899, extending the franking privilege to all mail matter transported between any of the Hawaiian Islands and the United States, intended to be proposed to the Post-Office appropriation bill, reported it with amendments, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. By direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs, I report back the bill (H. R. 10403) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States with additional amendments. I ask that the bill be placed upon the Calendar. It will, of course, be reprinted with the new amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar and the order to print will be made as requested.

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself February 4, 1899, proposing to appropriate $100,000 for construction along Piney Creek, Wyoming, of three reservoirs, and $150,000 for the construction of a reservoir on the South Platte River, in Colorado, etc., intended to be proposed to the river and harbor appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Commerce and printed; which was agreed to.

He also, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4870) for the relief of George W. Weston, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5000) for the relief of the owners of the British ship Foscolia and cargo, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SPOONER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7094) providing an additional circuit judge in the Third judicial circuit, reported it without amendment.

BENJAMIN F. JONES.

Mr. TELLER. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5717) for the relief of Benjamin F. Jones, to report it without amendment. The bill involves only $97, and I ask that it may be put on its passage.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Benjamin F. Jones, late postmaster at Beauregard, Miss., or his legal representatives, $97, in consideration of loss and services.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. BERRY. I should like to ask unanimous consent to put upon its passage a short bill to change the time of holding courts in Arkansas.

Mr. BATE. Is the morning business over?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is not concluded. Reports of committees are still in order.

CHARLES T. PLUNKETT.

Mr. MARTIN. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 886) for the relief of Charles T. Plunkett, of Lynchburg, Va., to report it without amendment, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. It will take a very few moments.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Charles T. Plunkett $104.50, being amount of sundry drafts, all dated January 26, 1893, to the following-named parties: R. B. Coffman, $1.70; E. H. Price, $1.90; R. E. Carroll, $28; J. H. Mowatt, $18; J. H. Mowatt, $21.90; J. H. Mowatt, $11.10; J. H. Mowatt, $21.90. But said drafts must be surrendered to the Secretary of the Treasury. Plunkett must give bond in the penalty of double the amount, with security approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, conditioned to indemnify the United States against any loss arising out of the payment of the drafts.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RENEWAL OF PENSIONS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to report an original bill from the Committee on Pensions, and to ask for its immediate consideration. The purpose of the bill is to restore to the pension rolls the men who lost their pensions in consequence of enlisting in the war with Spain.

The bill (S. 5465) authorizing the renewal of pensions to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines who served during the war with

Spain was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all pensions suspended by reason of enlistment in the military or naval service or Marine Corps of the United States during the war with Spain shall be renewed to the respective pensioners on application after discharge from the service aforesaid, the renewal to commence from the date of discharge: Provided, That the application therefor be filed within one year after such date.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to occupy but a moment in making a statement. This bill was drafted at the Bureau. It is a fact that the soldiers who were drawing pensions and who enlisted and performed service in the war with Spain not only lost their pensions during the time of that service, but they have permanently lost their pensions. The bill provides that they shall be restored to the rolls at the rate they were receiving when they enlisted for that service.

Mr. COCKRELL. From what date?

Mr. GALLINGER. From the date of their discharge.

Mr. HOAR. May I have the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Pensions for a moment?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. I suppose every Senator will approve the purpose of the bill, but it has occurred to me whether it could require an application for restoration.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator that the Commissioner of Pensions so rules. He says the existing law absolutely compels him to remove from the rolls the names of those men.

Mr. HOAR. I understand; but their names are already on the rolls. Everyone knows without imputing any delay to anybody in the Pension Office that these applications sometimes do not get attended to for months and years, at any rate not for a long time, and the man and his family suffer for want of the pension. I know of one case, that of a man the nature of whose disability was such that it multiplied by five the risk of his dying in the recent war. I will not undertake to state the nature of his disability, but he was a very frail man. He was among my own near neighbors. He went into the late war in spite of this infirmity of his, where the chances were very great indeed that it would be made fatal by the hardships of the war. Now, why should not all men be put right back, and if hereafter there is any evidence that they are not really infirm and under disability the office will do what they have done in other cases.

Mr. GALLINGER. As I understand the Senator, he would have the words "on application after discharge from the service aforesaid" stricken out?

Mr. HOAR. And that it shall be done by the office.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am inclined to agree with the Senator that that is desirable, and I will move to strike out the words "on application after discharge from the service aforesaid," so that the bill will read:

That all pensions suspended by reason of enlistment in the military or naval service or Marine Corps of the United States during the war with Spain shall be renewed to the respective pensioners, the renewal to commence from the date of discharge: Provided, That the application therefor be filed within one year after such date.

Mr. HOAR. When is the application to be renewed?

Mr. GALLINGER. From the date of the discharge.

Mr. HOAR. Yes; from the date of the discharge.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should like to have some information from the Senator from New Hampshire as to how this thing comes about and how many men are affected by this proposed legislation. In other words, it looks to me as though no man who served in the civil war and who got a pension would be able to enlist in the war with Spain.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator is technically right on that point, but there were a few who did enlist. It is a very small number.

Mr. TILLMAN. Do you mean privates?

Mr. GALLINGER. Privates. I know a few cases of that kind, perhaps two or three.

Mr. TILLMAN. Down our way they would not take men in the recent war volunteers above a certain age, nothing like 50 years of age, and there is no man——

Mr. HOAR. They were officers.

Mr. TILLMAN. But the Senator from New Hampshire said enlisted men. He did not say volunteers.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is no difference that I can see between enlisting and volunteering. They have to enlist in order to volunteer. There was no drafting.

Mr. TILLMAN. Are any of these officers?

Mr. GALLINGER. The cases that I am familiar with are not officers; but my attention has been called to one officer.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. HARRIS. I will state, for the information of the Senator from South Carolina, that I personally know of a number of officers who have lost their pensions by service in the recent war. They were not subjected to any very great physical examination; in fact, to none at all. The officers were volunteers, and they lost the pensions which they were receiving by reason of disabilities incurred in the civil war.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am not objecting to that; but it simply occurred to me that it was an anomalous proposition, that a man who had been disabled in the other war, thirty-five years ago, should be able now to resume active service in this war. That is something I do not understand.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the fact is, that a few have been accepted by the Government under those circumstances. It is no fault of the men.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course it is no fault of the men; but the question is whether there was any fault in granting them pensions.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not know how that may be.

Mr. HOAR. If it at any time appears that a man is not disabled so that he is entitled to a pension, the Pension Office always had a right, and still possesses the right, to inquire into the facts of the case; but there are cases like those stated of persons who, having severe physical disabilities, went into this war and incurred the hardship and the danger incident to war, the danger being multiplied fivefold by the fact of the disability previously incurred. I know of one such case myself.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, we will assume that General Butler had been a Union soldier instead of a Confederate soldier and lost a limb on the battlefield, yet he was appointed in this war. His pension would have been taken from him if he had been drawing one, and I think in such a case it ought to be restored.

Mr. TILLMAN. I am not objecting, and I do not propose to object. I simply rose to get some information as to how it was that a man who was drawing a pension by reason of disability incurred thirty-five years ago could go into this last war and be able to enter the service at all.

Mr. SPOONER. Take the case of General Butler.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have just suggested that.

Mr. SPOONER. If a one-legged Union soldier went into the war who was drawing a pension from the United States, should he be punished if he enlisted again?

Mr. TILLMAN. I was just trying to get some information about it; that is all.

Mr. ALLEN. If the Senator will permit me, I wish to inquire what would be the pensionable status of General Butler at the conclusion of his service in our Army, and the pensionable status of other Confederate veterans who served during this war?

Mr. GALLINGER. That, I think, has not been adjudicated. I presume that if they incurred disabilities in the war with Spain they would then become pensionable under our law.

Mr. ALLEN. Has any bill been framed by the Pension Committee or by the Military Committee, that the Senator knows of, for the release of such a disability?

Mr. GALLINGER. I am not aware of any such action being taken. It is not the function of the Pension Committee to do that.

I desire to offer an amendment to the bill, if I am in order. I send the amendment to the desk.

Mr. TILLMAN. Inasmuch as an illustration has been brought up here as a possible justification for this proceeding as to General Butler, from my own State, who volunteered, although he was minus a leg, which he lost in the other war, I would ask now whether General Butler, being disabled, undoubtedly, is eligible to a pension for his service in this recent war? I do not know that he is asking for it; I know he is not; but at the same time I merely want to find out what his status would be.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, Mr. President, when we reach that we will consider it. The Government will deal justly with General Butler, no doubt.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, after the word "enlistment," it is proposed to insert "or service."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all pensions suspended by reason of enlistment or service in the military or naval service or Marine Corps of the United States during the war with Spain shall be renewed to the respective pensioners, the renewal to commence from the date of discharge: Provided, That the application therefor be filed within one year after such date.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. ALLEN introduced a bill (S. 5466) for the erection of a public building at the city of York, in the State of Nebraska; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. MORGAN introduced a bill (S. 5467) for the relief of B. G. Chandler; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MONEY. I introduce a bill with the request that it may be appropriately referred. I think it should go to the Committee on Military Affairs, but as I am not sure, I ask that it be read in full.

The bill (S. 5468) providing for exhuming and the return to the United States for proper burial of the remains of the captain, crew, and passengers of the Virginius, executed in Cuba November 7 and 8, 1873, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the operation of the act approved July 8, 1898, making appropriation "to enable the Secretary of War, in his discretion, to cause to be transported to their homes the remains of officers and soldiers who die at military camps or who are killed in action or die in the field at places outside of the United States," be extended to include the exhuming of the remains, if the graves can be identified, and returning for sepulture to the United States of the captain and 36 of the crew of the Virginius and 16 others captured on that ship, who were shot under color of military condemnation at Santiago de Cuba November 7 and 8, 1873, though claiming and claimed to be American citizens: Provided, That if the graves of these unfortunates are identified and it is impracticable to return their remains to the United States, measures shall be taken for careful reinterment in a plat properly inclosed and marked.

Mr. MONEY. I think the bill should go to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, in the absence of objection.

Mr. KENNEY introduced a bill (S. 5469) granting an increase of pension to Edwin S. Anderson; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CARTER introduced a bill (S. 5470) authorizing the placing of the name of Johnson V. D. Middleton upon the retired list of the United States Army with the rank of colonel; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. GEAR introduced a bill (S. 5471) granting a pension to Jacob E. Wilson; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 5472) granting a pension to Ferdinand Buckholz; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HARRIS introduced a bill (S. 5473) granting to the Wichita and Southern Railway Company a right of way across the Kansas, Osage, Creek, and Choctaw reservations, in the Indian Territory; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. PENROSE introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 242) authorizing foreign exhibitors at the Commercial Exposition to be held in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1899, to bring to this country foreign laborers from their respective countries for the purpose of preparing for and making their exhibits, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Finance.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment directing the Secretary of the Treasury to cause the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to reopen and reexamine the refunding claims of the Eastern Railroad Company, of the State of Massachusetts, for taxes erroneously paid by them, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $4,460 for the printing of 9,000 copies of a "Calendar of Miscellaneous Letters" by the Department of State, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SEWELL submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $18,000 for the improvement of Beach Thoroughfare, at and near the meeting of tide from Absecon and Egg Harbor inlets, New Jersey, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for the improvement of Absecon Inlet, New Jersey, and a further appropriation, not to exceed $500,000, for the completion of the improvement in accordance with the plans submitted by the Board of Engineers, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GORMAN submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Senate to pay the sum of $1,500 to Annie E. Maccubbin, widow of William M. Maccubbin, who was killed in the discharge of his duties as a painter in the Capitol, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for continuing the improvement of the Sacramento River, California, from $184,000 to $214,000, and further proposing to appropriate $35,000 for the maintenance of that river, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CARTER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000,000 for continuing the improvement of reservoirs and canals to conduct water thereto from streams in the respective arid and semiarid land States and Territories, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KENNEY submitted an amendment proposing to pay $625.85 to the adjutant-general of the State of Delaware for use and damages done to armory and personal property belonging to that State by the United States Army, intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TILLMAN. I present an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the river and harbor appropriation bill, proposing to appropriate $50,000 for the improvement of Congaree River from Columbia, S. C., to Granby, S. C., a distance of 2 miles, by the construction of a lock and dam at Granby. I move that the amendment, together with the accompanying paper, be printed and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GEAR submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 to complete a levee along the west bank of the Mississippi River, commencing at the mouth of Flint Creek, in Des Moines County, Iowa, along the west bank of that river to the mouth of the Iowa River, in Louisa County, Iowa, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 to construct a levee on the west side of the Mississippi River, commencing at the bluff above the city of Fort Madison, Lee County, Iowa, along the west bank of that river to the mouth of Skunk River, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000 to construct a levee along the west bank of the Mississippi River, from the mouth of the Iowa River, in Louisa County, Iowa, to the city of Muscatine, Muscatine County, Iowa, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $6,500 for improving Inland Waterway between Beaufort Harbor and New River, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for continuing the improvement and maintenance of the Neuse River, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,000 for improving Black River, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for improving Neuse River, North Carolina, at and below Newbern, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $8,500 for improving Town Creek, Brunswick County, N. C., intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,750 for continuing the improvement and maintenance of Fish Creek, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate

$200,000 for continuing the improvement of Cape Fear River, North Carolina, at and below Wilmington, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for continuing the improvement and maintenance of Contentnea Creek, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,500 for improving Trent River, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for continuing the improvement and maintenance of Pamlico and Tar rivers, North Carolina, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for continuing the improvement of and $2,500 for the maintenance of Cape Fear River, North Carolina, above Wilmington, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. STEWART submitted an amendment proposing to aid the public-land States in the reclamation of the desert lands therein, and more especially to enable them to secure a revenue wherewith the lands granted to them by section 4 of the act of Congress approved August 18, 1894, may be fully and effectively reclaimed, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands, and ordered to be printed.

PERSONNEL OF NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. STEWART submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10403) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

RESERVOIRS FOR IRRIGATION PURPOSES.

Mr. WARREN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and hereby is, requested to furnish for the use of the Senate such information as he may possess regarding the practical usefulness of reservoirs to agriculture in the irrigated region of the United States, especially as affecting the distribution of water to crops, the area and value of reclaimed land, and the stability and profitableness of farming where irrigation is practiced.

NATIONAL CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the select committee on so much of the President's message as relates to the celebration in 1900 of the establishment of the Government in the District of Columbia be authorized to act in relation thereto with any committee that may be appointed by the President, the House of Representatives, or the citizens of said District to make arrangements for said purpose.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. In view of the pendency of the census bill and the absence of several Senators on this side of the Chamber who are members of that committee, it is important that some temporary appointments shall be made in the room of those Senators who are absent. I ask unanimous consent that the absent Senators, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE], and the Senator from Utah [Mr. CANNON] may be excused from service on that committee during their absence, and that in the room of Senator TURPIE, Senator TURLEY be put on the committee temporarily; that in the room of Senator WHITE, Senator TILLMAN be placed on the committee, and that in the room of Senator CANNON of Utah, Senator RAWLINS of Utah be temporarily appointed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate has heard the suggestion of the Senator from Arkansas of filling temporary committee vacancies. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLEN. Is that the Census Committee?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Yes, sir.

Mr. ALLEN. That, I think, leaves the Census Committee composed exclusively of Republicans and Democrats, with no Populist member. Does the Senator from Arkansas think that an act of justice?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I am willing that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] shall serve upon the committee.

Mr. ALLEN. No; I do not want to serve.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Then, I hope the Senator will suggest the name of somebody else who will go upon the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the order asked for by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] will be made.

Mr. ALLEN. I was simply making the suggestion.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] is a member of the committee.

Mr. ALLEN. If that is so, very well.

COURTS AT BATESVILLE, ARK.

Mr. BERRY. I again ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 5319) to change and fix the time of holding the terms of the district and circuit courts at Batesville, Ark. I made the request some time ago, and I hope the bill will now be considered, as it is very short.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] has made a request.

Mr. BERRY. I have asked unanimous consent for the consideration and passage of a bill which is of interest to my State. Two other bills have been passed since I gave way, and if the Senator from Nebraska objects——

Mr. ALLEN. No, sir; I recognize that the Senator from Arkansas has the right of way. He has been on the floor two or three times, and I withdraw my objection as to him.

Mr. ALLISON. Is the morning business concluded, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is not concluded. The Senator from Arkansas has asked unanimous consent to take up the bill (S. 5319) to change and fix the time of holding the terms of the district and circuit courts at Batesville, Ark. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLISON. If the bill takes no time, I shall not object.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides that the United States circuit and district courts shall hereafter be held at Batesville, Ark., on the fourth Monday in May and the second Monday in December of each year instead of the times now fixed by law.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN SCHOOLS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 1,000 additional copies of the Report of the Superintendent of Indian Schools for 1898, the same to be delivered to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the use of his office.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. By virtue of the unanimous-consent agreement made yesterday, the bill referred to by the Senator from Iowa is before the Senate.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11217) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the committee amendment already adopted, following line 15 on page 42, it is proposed to insert:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to appoint a register of deeds for each of the Five Civilized Tribes in Indian Territory, said appointees to be residents of Indian Territory; and the registers of deeds so appointed shall have power, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to appoint deputies, and they shall possess and exercise all the powers of registers of deeds as provided by the statutes of the State of Arkansas; and the statutes of the State of Arkansas in relation to all records kept by registers of deeds shall be in full force in said Indian Territory. The Secretary shall make the rules and regulations necessary to carry this provision into effect.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, it seems to me that this would be an entirely improper provision in this bill. In the first place, the law already provides for the registration of all papers that should be matters of record in the Indian Territory. To change the present system would not be wise. It had best be consistent and uniform. The people of that country understand where the registrations take place now, and I think it would be unwise to make any modification of the plan. Besides that, within the last few weeks the commission which we have down in the Indian Territory have made an agreement with the Cherokees, and one of the provisions of the agreement is that—

All instruments of writing required by law to be recorded shall be filed with the clerk or deputy clerk at the court in Cherokee Nation nearest the property to which such instrument relates, and it shall be the duty of such officer to file or record the same.

This agreement, negotiated by what is known familiarly as the Dawes Commission, and agreed to by the Cherokee Indians, has been overwhelmingly ratified by a popular vote in that nation, and it remains for the Government of the United States to determine whether or not it will ratify the agreement. If it does, then here is a provision for the registration of deeds which is directly antagonistic to the one now proposed to be put in this appropriation bill. For that reason I think it will be unwise and improper to have this change made, and I hope the Senator from South Dakota will withdraw the amendment.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. May I ask the Senator from Arkansas a question as to his understanding of the amendment?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. As I heard the amendment read, it provides for appointing registrars for the Five Civilized Tribes. It does not say how many, or at what points, or at how many points, or how many deputies, or where they shall be located.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. So I understand. It will be absolutely in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior to appoint as many as he pleases and at whatever places he pleases. None of these would be put where the courts are held unless the Secretary chose to so order. It seems to me that the plan is altogether impracticable from every standpoint.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. It is very crude, to say the least. If there is going to be any change there, it ought to be defined as to where the places should be, and how many registrars there should be.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I fully agree to that.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, the Senator asserts that the law already provides for recording deeds. I should like to know what that statute is, if the Senator has it convenient. I was not aware of any such provision.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I think the law provides that the clerks of the courts shall be the registrars.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. They are the recorders ex officio.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I think that only applies to chattel mortgages, etc., though I am not sure about it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I think it covers all registrations. That is my recollection of the law, though I have not looked at it especially during the last day or two. Registration is being had there of all papers necessary to be recorded. There can be no doubt about that. There has been no complaint whatever from that Territory that I have ever heard of on this matter. If the registration is not entirely satisfactory, I do not know of it.

Mr. PETTIGREW. There are a good many things the Senator from Arkansas does not hear, although I am well aware that he is many-eared and argus-eyed, and this is one of them.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I am quite willing to admit that there are many things down there that I do not know of.

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the Senator from Connecticut can find the statute which has been referred to, I shall be glad to see it.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I may not be able to find it in a moment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. My impression is that there is no provision made for the recording of deeds. The land in that country has heretofore been held in common, the patents running to the tribe, and therefore there were no conveyances. There were leases made, and we have provided for a record of chattel mortgages and liens upon personal property. I am not aware, although I may be mistaken, of any provision of law for the registration or recording of deeds.

Recent legislation provides for a division of those lands among the members of the tribes, and the treaties and agreements with the Chickasaws, Choctaws, and Creeks provide that these Indians may sell one-quarter of their holdings in a limited term of years, another quarter within a limited term of years thereafter, and so on until they have sold within twenty years three-quarters of their lands. The remaining quarter they can not alienate until after twenty years. During that time that portion shall be held inalienable, untaxable, and it can not be used as security for debt. Therefore the necessity for a registration of the deeds is apparent and exists; and if these transfers are made, some place should be provided where a record can be kept.

I understand the entire Territory is divided into counties, and an amendment to my amendment providing that each county shall have a register of deeds would be entirely appropriate, so as to be convenient, and so that the people there can examine titles—for instance, town lots. We provide for the platting and sale of town lots all over that country, and there are a great many towns, some of them having a population of several thousand. These town lots, which have heretofore been held and acquired under leases or held by sufferance, are now to be divided up and sold to the people who have improvements upon them. Some provision should be made and some place designated for the recording of these deeds. There is no question about it, and there is no time for delay in regard to it.

It seems to me the provision is, therefore, exceedingly important and a matter of great convenience to the people of that Territory.

Mr. RAWLINS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. PETTIGREW. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. RAWLINS. Is there any provision of law relating to the Indian Territory, that when deeds are recorded such recording shall impart notice?

Mr. PETTIGREW. This amendment will cover that by enacting that the provision of the laws of Arkansas shall apply.

Mr. RAWLINS. The whole scope of the amendment is simply to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to appoint these registrars.

Mr. PETTIGREW. To appoint one registrar for each of the five tribes. It also provides for the appointment of deputies, and then provides that the laws of Arkansas shall be extended over that country as to the duties of the officers, as to the force of record, notices, etc. The amendment covers all those questions.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. My impression is, although I can not now turn to the law, that that is already the case, that the laws of Arkansas relating to registration are applicable in that Territory, that in the first act extending the laws of Arkansas over the Territory that was embraced. I have never heard any complaint of this sort being made about registration.

As to the point suggested by the Senator from South Dakota, that there is to be very soon a change in the condition of things down there, the Senator must bear in mind that that can not be within a year, nor within two years; that there must be a division of that land before any title can go to any of these Indians, and until then there will be no occasion for the recording of a solitary deed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Oh, no; the town sites will be at once platted and conveyances made.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The provision which was made for that is amply sufficient.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Of course, if the laws of Arkansas have heretofore been extended over that entire Territory, it obviates the necessity of this provision, but if that be the case, I am not aware of it. Perhaps it is true. I admit that I have not carefully examined that question.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I believe it is true, and this is a matter of so much importance that I can not consent to its going in without further examination than it has had. I therefore make the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Of course, that is an argument which I can not overcome. It is undoubtedly subject to the point of order because it is legislation.

That point is made as a last resort always. Whenever a Senator is run into a hole absolutely on the merits of the question he raises a point of order, and, of course, I have to succumb.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. That part of the Senator's argument does not require any reply, so far as I am concerned.

I offer an amendment now to come in after line 9, on page 46, and I hope the chairman of the committee will be willing to permit it to go into the bill. I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the amendment I offer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair calls attention to the fact that the last amendment has not been disposed of. What does the Senator from South Dakota desire to have done with his amendment?

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the Chair is going to decide that the amendment is in order, I should like to have it adopted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is about to decide the other way.

Mr. PETTIGREW. If the Chair is about to decide the other way, I should like to have the amendment withdrawn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] will now be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 46, after line 9, it is proposed to insert:

That the attorneys employed by the Cherokee Nation to defend the suit now pending in the Court of Claims, brought by the Delaware Indians against said nation, may appear and defend said suit under any authority conferred by said Cherokee Nation, and with the consent of said nation the Court of Claims may determine the compensation to be paid said attorneys and with the consent of the Cherokee Nation jurisdiction is hereby conferred on said court for this purpose: Provided, That no liability shall be incurred by the United States on account of such employment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. It has the favorable report of the Committee on Indian Affairs. I shall ask at some later time to amend the amendment, if it becomes a part of the bill, and after the bill is reported to the Senate, by striking out the provision on page 5 of the printed amendment for the payment of attorneys' fees.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert at the end of the bill the following:

That the annuities of the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Dakota or Sioux Indians arising under the treaty of July 23, 1851, between said bands of Indians and the United States, which annuities were declared forfeited by the act of Congress entitled "An act for the relief of persons for damages sustained by reason of depredations and injuries by certain bands of Sioux Indians," approved February 16, 1863, be, and the same are hereby, restored and continued to July 1, 1902, the date of the expiration of said treaty of July 23, 1851, as though said act of Congress had never been passed: Provided, That from the amount of the unpaid installments of annuities arising under the said treaty of July 23, 1851, as found by the Secretary of the Interior in his "Statement No. 13," on page 21 of Senate Document No. 68 of the second session of the Fifty-fifth Congress, there shall be deducted the sum of $579,741.29, being the amount expended for the benefit of said Indians in pursuance of the treaty with them proclaimed May 2, 1867. There shall also be deducted from the amount of the unpaid installments of said annuities, as found in said "Statement No. 13," the sum of $615,778.37, being the amount of annuities arising under said treaty of July 23, 1851, provided for by the agreement with said Indians of December 12, 1889, and the amount of the unpaid installments of said annuities as found by the Secretary of the Interior as aforesaid, after making the deductions therefrom as herein provided, shall be placed to the credit of said bands of Indians on the books of the Treasury and bear interest at the rate of 3per cent per annum and shall be subject at all times to appropriation by Congress for the use and benefit of said Indians: Provided, That of the amount placed to the credit of said Indians on the books of the Treasury as herein provided there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $400,000, out of which sum so appropriated the Secretary of the Interior shall pay attorneys' fees, in accordance with contracts with said Indians, on the amount placed to their credit up to July 1, 1902, as herein directed, and the balance remaining after payment of said fees shall be paid, per capita, to said Indians or expended for their benefit, as the Secretary of the Interior may direct: Provided further, That this act and all its benefits shall apply to and include all Dakota or Sioux Indians who were members of said Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Dakota or Sioux Indians at the time of the making of said treaty of July 23, 1851, and their descendants, whether of the full Indian or mixed blood, who are living in any part of the United States.

SEC. 2. That the annuities of the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota bands of Sioux Indians, otherwise known as the Santee Sioux Indians, arising under and by virtue of the treaties with them of September 29, 1837, and August 5, 1851, between said bands of Indians and the United States, which annuities were declared forfeited by the act of Congress approved February 16, 1863, be, and the same are hereby, restored to said Indians and their descendants residing in the United States, to the full extent and effect as if said act of Congress attempting to forfeit the same had never been passed, all of said annuities so restored to commence from the last payment of the same actually made and not diverted to other uses under any of said treaties and to continue until the expiration of the same by the terms of said treaties; and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to state an account between the United States and the said bands of Indians, giving them credit for the unpaid installments of annuities arising under and by virtue of the abovenamed treaties made with them, and charging them under and by virtue of said treaties since the passage of said act of Congress of February 16, 1863, and the amount, if any, found due them under and by virtue of the treaties of August 5, 1851, up to and including the 1st day of July, 1902, and the amount, if any, found due them by virtue of the said treaty of September 29, 1837, shall be placed to their credit on the books of the Treasury, of which amount found due and placed to their credit as herein provided there shall be, and hereby is, appropriated the sum of $300,000, to be immediately available, and out of which sum so appropriated the Secretary of the Interior shall pay attorneys' fees on the amount found due said Indians and placed to their credit on the books of the Treasury in accordance with contracts with said Indians approved by the Secretary of the Interior and on file in the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the balance of the sum so appropriated remaining after paying attorneys' fees as herein authorized shall be paid per capita to said Indians, and the balance of the amount found due to said Indians and placed to their credit on the books of the Treasury as herein provided and not hereby appropriated shall bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, and shall at all times be subject to appropriation by Congress for the use and benefit of said Indians: Provided further, That this act and all its benefits shall apply to and include all Dakota or Sioux Indians who were members of said Medawakanton and Wahpakoota bands of Dakota or Sioux Indians at the time of the making of said treaty of August 5, 1851, and their descendants, whether of the full Indian or mixed blood, who are living in any part of the United States: And provided further, That no person who was actually and openly engaged in hostilities during the Sioux outbreak of 1862 shall be entitled to share in the benefits of this act.

Mr. ALLISON. This is clearly new legislation and general legislation, and I make the point of order that it can not be offered to the pending bill.

Mr. PETTIGREW rose.

Mr. ALLISON. I will withhold the point of order until the Senator from South Dakota shall have addressed the Senate.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I wish simply to discuss briefly the point of order.

Mr. President, this amendment carries an appropriation. It comes from the Committee on Indian Affairs. It relates to a subject as to which an investigation was provided for in the Indian appropriation bill two years ago, and therefore is carrying out the provisions of existing law, and I think comes within the rule.

On April 7, 1898, I find certain statements in the RECORD. An amendment was offered to the sundry civil bill. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] raised the point of order. The amendment offered was as follows:

For the deepening and widening of the canal leading through the bay of Mobile, from the wharves at Mobile to the lower bay, to provide a harbor of refuge for ships in time of war, $200,000, to be immediately available.

This amendment carried not only an appropriation, but also legislation. The Senator from Iowa raised the point of order against the amendment on the ground that it had not received a favorable report from the Committee on Commerce. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] said:

It has been reported and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. So if this matter is a matter connected with the national defense it has gone now by the order of the Senate to the proper and appropriate committee having that subject in charge.

The rules of the Senate are reasonable rules, not only for the convenience of the Senate but for the procuration of adequate information respecting the subjects which are brought before the Senate. We are told now, and I am notified as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that if this amendment is allowed to go into the bill it will be followed by numerous similar amendments, all placed upon the ground that they are justifiable and necessary for the national defense. Therefore the Senator from Alabama now opens a new field of investigation, wherein it will be necessary for the Senate, without the intervention of a committee, to decide as between all the harbors and all the rivers and all the lakes of our country, with a seacoast of 6,000 miles in extent, as to which of those harbors, which of those rivers, and which of those lakes are necessary to be improved for the purpose of national defense.

Mr. President, the reason of the rule is clear and adequate to exclude this amendment from this appropriation bill. I repeat what I said last night at the close of the session, that if any of these things are necessary to be done for the national defense there is not a Senator on this floor or a member elsewhere who will for a moment hesitate to grant all that may be necessary to promote that national defense.

Then the Senator from Iowa further said:

But if the Secretary of War does recommend the amendment, that does not make it in order in any sense, because if that were so, then all that would be necessary in order to secure the adoption of an amendment upon this appropriation bill would be for the Secretary of War to say that this or that improvement ought to be made under such limitations and conditions as to the Secretary of War might seem wise and proper. So by putting this amendment upon this bill we open up the entire field of river and harbor appropriations. Therefore, whilst I sympathize with the Senators from Alabama in their desire for the adoption of the amendment, I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations unanimously to make the point of order against it, it not being an amendment which comes here under the rules of the Senate with the consent of a standing committee of the Senate, and it not having been referred, as it should have been, to a standing committee and reported favorably to the Committee on Appropriations.

Therefore the point of order was well taken in that case, but in this case the amendment has been referred to a committee of the Senate—the Committee on Indian Affairs—and by that committee reported favorably by a unanimous vote of the committee and referred several days ago to the Committee on Appropriations.

Then the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] made this statement:

Mr. President, there are two ways under our rules of getting an amendment before the Senate and making it in order. One is by the recommendation of a standing committee and the other is by the recommendation of the head of a Department. The head of a Department, looking at this precise amendment, indorses his recommendation on the back of it with a single qualification, which, of course, we are willing to accept by way of amendment. So if that does not bring it in order, it is impossible to get anything in order before the Senate which does not meet the consent of the Committee on Appropriations, which have not anything to do with recommending amendments.

I wish to make a point right there, Mr. President. The Committee on Appropriations is a committee for the expenditure of money, limited to such expenditure by the laws as they exist. This committee continually puts on new propositions which are not provided for by the laws as they exist, and it has no right to do it. It is not one of the powers of that committee to make a recommendation for an appropriation. It is one of the regular standing legislative committees of this body that has that right, and not the Appropriations Committee. Still they violate that rule continually and with impunity. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] quotes that committee as being opposed to this amendment, and supposes, or leaves the inference very clear, that unless the Committee on Appropriations shall also recommend an amendment it is not in order before this body.

Now, I wish to say to the honorable chairman of that committee—for whom I have the most intense respect, and whose administration of that high office I have looked upon with admiration for many years—that he had better look out when he and his committee, which undertake to monopolize all the powers of this Senate, go to the point of insisting that their recommendations are of value and that nobody's else is; they had better look out.

I do not think it is necessary to read what follows, for it is with regard to the distribution of appropriation bills.

Mr. ALLISON. That has been disposed of.

Mr. PETTIGREW. As the Senator from Iowa says, that has been disposed of by distributing the appropriation bills among various committees of this body. The Senator from Iowa on that occasion further said:

Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator wholly misapprehends what I stated, or what I intended to state, if he assumes that the Committee on Appropriations expects to make a point of order upon every amendment which does not meet its own approval. On the contrary, when, under our rules, a standing committee of this body recommends an appropriation and has it referred under the rules for a single day to the Committee on Appropriations, it is in order.

Now, this amendment carries an appropriation; it was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and afterwards reported by it favorably, and then sent to the Committee on Appropriations within the rule.

Mr. President, before the ruling of the Chair is announced upon the point of order, I desire to present the facts which reach to the merits of this amendment.

In 1851 the Government of the United States made an agreement with the Sioux Indians of Minnesota, the Sisseton, and Wahpeton Indians, who are interested in this amendment. By that agreement those Indians ceded to the United States between seventeen and eighteen million acres of land, embracing the best part of the State of Minnesota agriculturally and a large portion of the State of Iowa.

The price that we agreed to pay was 10 cents an acre, and we agreed to make the payments in installments of so many thousand dollars every year for fifty years, not as interest upon the principal sum, but as an extinguishment of the obligation of the Government. We agreed to pay the Sisseton and Wahpetons about $75,000 a year, and we took possession of the property which they ceded to the United States, they ceding all the lands which they owned in Minnesota and Iowa except a narrow strip about 10 miles in width upon the upper waters of the Minnesota River, retaining their right, their title—whatever an Indian title is—the right of possession to a vast area in North and South Dakota. We made the payment of $75,000 a year until 1862, and then the Minnesota outbreak occurred, and in 1863 the Congress of the United States passed a bill forfeiting the right of these Indians to the annuities, confiscating the property of the Indians, on the ground that they had engaged in the Minnesota massacre, confiscating the payments to become due and covering the sum back into the Treasury. Under that act this sum of money which belongs to these people will in the year 1901 be covered back into the Treasury of the United States.

These Indians, the Sisseton and Wahpetons, were not engaged in the Minnesota massacre. So great was the wrath owing to the horrible and atrocious acts by the Indians of Minnesota at that time that Congress did an injustice to these people without stopping to investigate the question. Not only that, but they moved the Winnebagoes, not one of whom was engaged in the Minnesota massacre, from their homes in the Blue Earth country in Minnesota, taking them by force and confiscating their property also.

The Sissetons and Wahpetons, as a band, not only did not engage in the Minnesota massacre, but their chief enlisted 275 of the Indians of the tribe and they fought under General Sibley against the other Indians of Minnesota and Dakota in defense of the frontier and as allies of the United States. Some of the young men of this band, a few in number, did undoubtedly join the hostile forces, as well as some of the young men of the Santee tribe, the Medawakantons and Wahpakootas. Quite a large number of the two latter tribes were engaged in the massacre. But as far as the Sissetons and Wahpetons are concerned, practically but a very few of them were engaged in the Minnesota massacre. Upon this subject I propose to read a letter of General Sibley, who was in command of the United States troops during the outbreak. In a letter of January 13, 1878, he says:

> I have the best reason for knowing that as a general rule the chiefs and headmen of these divisions not only had no sympathy with those of their kindred who took part in the massacre, but exerted themselves to save the lives of the whites then in the country and joined the forces under my command as scouts, and rendered signal and faithful service in my campaign against the hostile Sioux and subsequently in guarding the passes to the settlements against raiding parties of their own people.
> I have always regarded the sweeping act of confiscation referred to as grossly unjust to the many who remained faithful to the Government and whose lives were threatened and their property destroyed as a result of that fidelity.
>
> Having been in command of the forces which suppressed the outbreak and punished the participators in it, I became, necessarily, well informed as to the conduct of the bands and the individuals who took part for or against the Government during the progress of the war, and I have repeatedly, in my official dispatches, called the attention of the Government to the great injustice done the former class by including them in the former legislation which deprived them of their annuities.
>
> H. H. SIBLEY,
> Late Brevet Major-General, United States Volunteers.

This letter refers to the Sissetons and Wahpetons, of whom I speak. Not only that, but Chief Renville fought under General Sibley, and from the day this conflict was over Renville and these Indians have protested against the unjust confiscation of their property and have asked to have it restored. Yet, in spite of this fact, these Indians were driven from the confines of Minnesota, and they escaped to the prairies of Dakota. They did not dare to join the hostile Indians, because of their course and conduct in fighting their relatives, the other tribes of Sioux. They were afraid to return to Minnesota, because of the hostile feeling against all Indians. For several years they wandered as homeless, starving people over those prairies, finding it very difficult to secure subsistence, many of them dying of starvation; and yet for years they guarded by their presence the frontier and prevented the inroads of hostile Indians upon the sparse settlements of western Minnesota and of southeastern Dakota.

Recognizing this fact, in 1867 Congress appointed a commission to make an agreement with these people, and that agreement was made and submitted to the Senate. I read the preamble to the agreement and a portion of the treaty, which will be found in the Statutes of the United States for 1868:

> Whereas it is understood that a portion of the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands of Santee Sioux Indians, numbering from 1,200 to 1,500 persons, not only preserved their obligations to the Government of the United States during and since the outbreak of the Medawakantons and other bands of Sioux in 1862, but freely periled their lives during that outbreak to rescue the residents on the Sioux Reservation, and to obtain possession of white women and children made captives by the hostile bands; but that another portion of said Sisseton and Wahpeton bands, numbering from 1,000 to 1,200 persons, who did not participate in the massacre of the whites in 1862, fearing the indiscriminate vengeance of the whites, fled to the great prairies of the Northwest, where they still remain.

This accounts for nearly 2,500 of these Indians. One thousand six hundred and fifty live on a reservation in South Dakota and between 1,000 and 1,100 live upon a reservation in North Dakota. I read further from this treaty, which was adopted by the Senate of the United States:

> Whereas Congress, in confiscating Sioux annuities and reservations, made no provision for the support of these, the friendly portion of the Sisseton and Wahpeton bands, and it is believed that they have been suffered to remain homeless wanderers, frequently subject to intense suffering from want of subsistence and clothing to protect them from the rigors of a high northern latitude, although at all times prompt in rendering service when called upon to repel hostile raids and to punish depredations committed by hostile Indians upon the persons and property of the whites.

This treaty, of which I have read the preamble, was adopted unanimously by the Senate, and the facts therein related were therefore agreed to. The treaty was made by commissioners representing the United States. Article III of said treaty provides:

> For and in consideration of the cession above mentioned—

Which I have not read—> and in consideration of the faithful and important service said to have been rendered by the friendly bands of Sisseton and Wahpeton Sioux here represented, and also in consideration of the confiscation of all their annuities, reservations, and improvements.

The treaty provides as follows:

> To enable said Indians to return to an agricultural life under a system in operation on the Sioux Reservation in 1862, it is agreed that there shall be expended for the benefit of the Indians entitled to locate farms on the Lake Traverse Reservation for the year 1867, $350,000; for the year 1868, $250,000; for the year 1869, $100,000; for the year 1870, $50,000, and $30,000 annually thereafter; and to enable the Indians on said reservation to return at once to their agricultural habits and life, and be enabled to cultivate a crop the coming season, the expenditures set forth in the schedule hereunto attached shall be made at as early a day as possible.

We made then, in 1867, with those people a treaty by which, in consideration of the confiscation of their annuities, we agreed to pay them these large sums of money. If this provision had been carried out, it would have furnished the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians with $2,800,000 up to the present time. The payment of $30,000 a year under this stipulation was to continue forever.

In consideration of this treaty the Indians came in and went upon their lands in eastern Dakota and undertook to obtain a living by tilling the soil. The treaty came to the Senate of the United States, and the Senate of the United States did what it has done with those Indians since 1802, since the first treaty was ever made; they struck out that provision and ratified the treaty. They struck out the provision giving them compensation for their forfeited annuities, which the Senate of the United States, by the preamble which they adopted, agreed were unjustly and wrongfully forfeited and confiscated, and then proceeded, after taking away the compensation, to adopt the treaty and except from the Indians all the grants made under it; for under the treaty of 1867 they had granted the right of way for railroads and wagon roads across the vast area of land which they owned in North and South Dakota.

These Indians could not again go to war. They never had been at war with the United States. They had waited patiently from 1863 to 1867 and suffered untold hardships, as was well known. Then when the Government commissioners made a treaty which did them partial justice, the Senate of the United States violates the treaty and strikes out the provision.

I say we have done this with every treaty made with these people since 1802. It would hardly have been marveled at if they had gone to war, and it is astonishing that they did not. Yet they remained in peace with the Government in spite of the bad faith, in spite of broken promises, in spite of violated pledges.

The treaty also provided in Article VII, that for the Indians at Devils Lake in North Dakota, who were also Sissetons and Wahpetons and Santees or Medawakantons—

> An agent shall be appointed for said bands, who shall be located at Lake Traverse; and wherever there shall be 500 persons located permanently upon the Devils Lake Reservation there shall be an agent or other competent person appointed to superintend the agricultural, educational, and mechanical interests of said Indians, and thereafter there shall be expended to aid said Indians in their agricultural improvements and civilization, for the first year, $100,000; for the second year, $200,000; for the third year, $100,000; for the fourth year, $50,000; and $30,000 annually thereafter—making a total sum up to the present time of $1,250,000. The Sissetons and Wahpetons under the provision which I have previously read would have received up to the present time $1,550,000, making the total amount $2,800,000, a very much larger sum than they will receive if their annuities are restored and the treaty of 1851 carried out at this late day. But the Senate struck out that provision for the Indians at Devils Lake and then ratified the treaty. Congress took everything that these Indians ceded to the Government under this treaty and struck out every single consideration for the cession on the part of the Indians.

It is simply another chapter of our dealings with the Indian nations. It has been marked by bad faith on the part of the white people. I never knew a wild Indian to tell a falsehood or break a promise until he had been partially civilized by coming in contact with the white people of this country.

It seems to me that all our recent talk about the good we are going to do with the partially colored races of the Tropics can be reasonably looked upon with grave suspicion on their part if they have ever acquired any knowledge of the good we have done the American Indian. If we are no better adapted to the civilization and Christianization of the people of the Philippines than we have been to the civilization and Christianization at short range of the American Indian, if we pursue a course so dishonest, so full of broken pledges and perfidy, with regard to these newly acquired countries as we have pursued with regard to the American Indian, we can expect to have, during all time, continued war in those countries, as we have had, nearly all the time since our history commenced, with the few scattered tribes of Indians on this continent.

It appears to me the time has come, if we are going to reach out into the conquered countries of the world to give them a government which we think is better than the one they are able to furnish for themselves, when we should begin to carry out in good faith our agreements and our contracts with the Indians of our own country. There is not one single page in all the history with regard to our dealings with the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians that is not a discredit to the Government of the United States.

In 1872 these Indians, having moved to a reservation in the State of South Dakota embracing a tract of land of about one and a half million acres and laying claim to a country of about 8,000,000 acres outside of this reservation, made another agreement with the Government of the United States.

It was said that they had no title to the 8,000,000 acres, and we appointed a commission who were to investigate the question of their title to that country and report to the Senate of the United States; and if they decided that they had a title, to treat with them for the extinguishment of the title. This commission made an exhaustive report. They went into the whole question of the rights of these people to the area of land which they claimed and decided that their title was as complete as any Indian title to any country in the United States, and they made an agreement with these same people by which we were to pay 10 cents an acre in installments of $80,000 a year for ten years. That agreement came to the Senate of the United States and was ratified, for a wonder, without amendment which took away the consideration to be paid the Indians while accepting all of the benefits which accrued to the Government from the ratification of the treaty. It was the first instance where we have made a treaty with these people and did as we agreed. We ratified the treaty and we paid for ten years $80,000 a year to these people.

In 1882, that payment having all been made, it left these Indians with a tract of country of about a million and a half of acres. In 1889 we made an agreement with these people by which they sold to the Government nearly 1,000,000 acres of what remained. Chief Renville was then living. He had led his Indians, under General Sibley, in the war which followed the massacre of 1862, against the other Indians of the plains, and when we approached him for the purpose of purchasing the remaining lands, they having taken lands in severalty, they refused to sell; they refused to hold a conference; they refused to enter into any agreement. Chief Renville said that he would not talk with our commissioners until justice had been done and their rights restored and their property returned to them.

Finally a compromise was reached by which we agreed to pay them $350,000 and $18,000 additional each year until 1901; that is, our commissioners finally agreed with Renville that they would take his band of 275 soldiers who fought under Sibley and calculate how many and what relation they held to the whole number of Indians. It was decided that they were equal to one-fourth, and therefore one-quarter of the amount of money which was due the tribe, and so, reluctantly forced by the position taken by Chief Renville, we agreed to pay and have paid these Indians one-quarter of the amount of these forfeited annuities.

Mr. DAVIS. And that is to be deducted from the remainder.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And that is to be deducted, under this bill, from the remainder of the sum due the tribe. Under that treaty, then, we simply recompensed only the soldiers and their families, leaving out three-quarters of the tribe, who were entirely loyal; leaving out the balance of the tribe, who were as loyal as these men. We made a compromise, drove a hard bargain, and bought the remainder of this reservation.

There was nothing in that treaty that in terms provided that this should be a settlement of the whole question, but when the bill reached the Senate of the United States, when it came in here for ratification, the Senate of the United States placed in the law ratifying the treaty a provision that the payment should be a settlement of the whole controversy; that it should be a complete settlement for the claim of these Indians for all these annuities. That never went back for ratification on the part of the Indians.

We never pretended to ask their consent. We simply wanted to place once more upon the statutes of the United States an illustration of the manner in which we have heretofore dealt with the Indians of this country, and so we have again placed this provision in law intending to bar these people. We did not ask their consent; there is nothing of the sort in the treaty or agreement; but we undertake to bar their future claim. At the time when the agreement was made, one of the parties who made the agreement was a practicing attorney in the city of Washington, and these Indians, back in 1889, entered into a contract with this attorney to prosecute their claim for the remainder of these annuities, for the other three-fourths justly and fairly due them, and they have been pushing this matter ever since. No more just claim was ever presented to the Senate of the United States.

By the act of purchase of 1889 these people became citizens of the State of South Dakota. They are voters. They have the same rights and privileges of any white citizen of that State. They are my constituents. They have a right to my services and my assistance. I would press their claim and their rights with the same zeal and energy that I would press the claim and the rights of an equal number of white settlers in that country. If an equal number of white settlers had been treated by any other body than the Congress of the United States as these Indians have been treated, it would have aroused the indignation of the world—it would have attracted the attention of the civilized world—and yet, because they are Indians, we refuse to restore their rights and grant to them that which they are entitled to receive.

Some one has said that these people are not entitled to this money because they were rebels engaged in armed resistance to the United States. I think the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], when this question was up in the last session of Congress, took this position. If it were true, Mr. President—and it is not true—that these people were engaged in war against the Government of the United States, still I know of no provision by which we have any right to forfeit their property. Under the Constitution of the United States no forfeiture for treason can extend beyond the lives of the persons engaged in the treasonable act.

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from South Dakota permit me to call attention in this connection to the fact that there are now only 17 of the persons alive who participated in the massacre of 1862, and they are all beyond 70 years of age?

Mr. PETTIGREW. That is, who live within the limits of the United States.

Mr. ALLEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. PETTIGREW. There are some of the Indians who belong to the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota bands, who escaped to Canada and have remained there since, who were engaged in the Minnesota massacre. Twenty-nine were hung at Mankato, not the Sissetons and Wahpetons, for no Sisseton or Wahpeton was ever hung or punished for his connection with the Minnesota massacre, because they were not connected with it, but of the other two bands, quite a large number of their young men having been engaged in the massacre, 29 were hanged at Mankato, their women and children were taken to Keokuk, Iowa, and afterwards returned to the State of Nebraska. Then the other Sissetons and Wahpetons, who were not engaged in the massacre, who had been peaceable and had rescued women and children, the other Medawakantons and Wahpakootas, or, as we now call them, the Santees, were gathered together in the State of Nebraska, and it is proposed to restore the annuities to them. But this amendment provides that no Indian engaged in the massacre shall receive one dollar of this money. Nearly all of those who were not killed by the forces of the United States or hanged escaped to Canada and have remained there ever since, and to them we offer no relief.

So I say that even if it can be construed that an Indian tribe can commit treason against the Government of the United States, the forfeiture of property can not extend beyond the life of the person committing the act of treason. But these Indians, the Sissetons and Wahpetons, committed no act against the Government of the United States. They fought on our side against their own kindred. They enlisted in the Army of the United States. Therefore our act in forfeiting these annuities was particularly outrageous and unjust, and certainly that unjust act ought to be rectified. I have examined this question with great care, and I am unable to find one single scintilla of proof which justifies this forfeiture in any particular.

I listened to the remarks of the Senator from Iowa during the last session of this Congress, and I must say that he absolutely misapprehends the facts in this case, and it seemed to me did not touch the question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair must call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the hour of 2 o'clock has arrived, and it is his duty to lay the unfinished business before the Senate, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1575) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce."

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside until the completion of the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request?

The Chair hears none, and the unfinished business is informally laid aside. The Senator from South Dakota will proceed.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss this question further. Of these Indians, about 1,700 are located in South Dakota; in Nebraska, about 1,000; in North Dakota, about 1,000, and in the State of Minnesota, about 1,000. Every representative from every one of those States having examined this question agrees with me in regard to the facts. The Senators from Minnesota, both of them residents of that State since the Minnesota massacre, or since a very short period after the Minnesota massacre, look upon this question as I look upon it. Every person who has investigated this question acknowledges that injustice has been done.

General Sibley, in his letter of 1878, said explicitly that he had means of knowing (and he did know it, because these men served under him against their own people) that a great injustice had been done in the sweeping forfeiture of their property. The Senate of the United States, in making the treaty of 1867, proceeded to declare that the forfeiture was an outrage, and although they struck out all the compensation which was to go to these people, they ratified this treaty and allowed the declaration that the forfeiture of 1863 was wrong. The only reason that can be given to justify that act—for there is nothing in the debates—is that they would keep the money in the Treasury, whether it belonged there or not. And, Mr. President, I venture to say that no other argument can be made to-day against the passage of this amendment. The only argument that can be presented is that this money wrongfully in the Treasury, belonging to these people, shall stay there because the sum is large.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I do not care to enter, and of course I will not enter, into an argument as to the merits or demerits of this question. Here is a plain and absolute repeal of three or four statutes at least upon this question. It is general legislation, and therefore it can not be considered upon an appropriation bill for the current expenditures of the Government.

Mr. PETTIGREW. I should like to hear from the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] and the Senators from Minnesota on this subject before the point of order is disposed of.

Mr. ALLISON. I of course do not wish to cut off a reasonable discussion of the merits of this claim.

Mr. ALLEN. I have some constituents who are deeply interested in this matter.

Mr. ALLISON. I know the Senator has; I understood that.

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to be heard before final action is taken on it.

Mr. ALLISON. Therefore I will withhold the point of order for the time being; but I hope the Senator will not go so much into the merits of this matter as to consume the day.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I think this matter ought to be discussed fully. It is not a light matter. It is not a matter that ought to be whistled down the wind with a wave of the hand.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not propose to wave it down in that way. It is not a new matter. It is a matter that has been discussed over and over again for the last twenty years. I am perfectly willing that the Senator from Nebraska shall occupy whatever time he chooses. I can not, of course, cut him off. I waive the point of order.

Mr. ALLEN. Without undertaking to be in the slightest degree offensive or personal, I will say that the point of order is the usual resort of the Committee on Appropriations in masking behind a rule that does not mean what it is construed to mean.

The Senator from Iowa and every lawyer in this body knows that the proposed amendment is not general legislation. If a man should walk into any court of this country and speak of a provision of law that applied to a specific tribe of Indians or a specific individual or specific corporations as general legislation, his education, as a lawyer at least, would be looked upon with some degree of suspicion.

Mr. President, the distinction between general legislation and specific legislation is as distinct and well marked as the distinction between the North and the South Pole. I have known the Senator from Iowa for over a third of a century, and I know he is a good lawyer, or at least he used to be, and he recognizes these distinctions.

General legislation, according to the law books, is that kind of legislation which takes up a general subject affecting a general class, or all persons within the sovereignty of the legislative branch affected or that may be affected by its provisions. For instance, a bill to regulate and control transportation companies in the State of New Jersey or in the State of Nebraska, all companies—not one, but all similarly situated—having similar interests and where the necessity for controlling all of them exists as much as for controlling one, is general legislation; or a bill within either of those jurisdictions that would apply to all persons, that was general, universal, extending to all individuals and all interests, would be general legislation.

But suppose the legislature of one of those States should pass an act granting a charter to certain specific individuals or conferring on them certain franchises, or regulating the affairs of a particular subdivision, would my honorable friend from Iowa claim that to be general legislation? If he would——

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator ask me a question?

Mr. ALLEN. I say, would the Senator claim that to be general legislation?

Mr. ALLISON. Undoubtedly. A public-building bill is excluded from these appropriations. All matters that require statutory provisions are general legislation in the meaning of this rule.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, there is no precedent of the kind. I beg to differ from the Senator upon that point, although he has had much more experience in legislative life than I. My experience has extended over thirty years at the bar. I realize fully that the Senator from Iowa intends to mask himself behind this flimsy, rickety rule. He wants an opportunity to escape responsibility, and here is a good chance to do it. I say to him that the distinction I make between general and specific legislation is universal and without an exception in this country or in any other country where the English language is spoken and English jurisprudence in force. Is a law that pertains to a particular tribe of Indians general legislation? The Senator knows it is not, unless this rule is in violation of all the rules laid down by the courts. I think this is the most convenient rule for the Committee on Appropriations to enable it to escape the performance of its duties that could possibly be adopted.

But before I refer to the rule, Mr. President, I want to refer to another matter in connection with this subject that is generally understood. It seems to be taken for granted by the Committee on Appropriations, whether it be in charge of the Republican or the Democratic party (there is no distinction so far as that is concerned), that it is their duty to prevent the allowance of all honest claims that are presented to either branch of Congress, as far as that can be done by twisting and warping and dislocating the rule, so that at the end of a Congress their particular political party may be said by the world to have administered the Government a little cheaper than the other party. There is the animus. There is the motive. The sparring for political advantage, for party advantage, is the mainspring to these objections. Does it not occasionally dawn upon that great committee that they owe an obligation to the honest claimants of this Government, to which even partisan advantage should give way?

What is this wonderful Rule XVI?

1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except bills making appropriations for rivers and harbors, which shall be referred to the Committee on Commerce; and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill, the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of some one of the Departments.

Every sentence is in the disjunctive conjunctive form.

This amendment was moved "by direction of a standing committee of the Senate," the Committee on Indian Affairs, and therefore comes clearly within the language and purpose of the first subdivision of this rule.

What is the next subdivision?

2. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation; shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received, in like manner amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

This proposed amendment was referred more than one day to the Committee on Appropriations before it was offered, and that subdivision of the rule has been complied with.

The third subdivision is:

3. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject-matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under his rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any amendment to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill.

The other, subdivision 4 of the rule, applies to private claims, and has no bearing whatever upon this question. It is, then, behind the third subdivision of that rule that the distinguished Senator from Iowa has planted his batteries upon the supposition that this is general legislation.

Mr. President, it does seem to me that neither the Senator from Iowa nor any other man who has given attention to the distinction between general and private or general and specific legislation can for one moment stand in this presence and claim this to be general legislation. Here is a provision that applies simply to one tribe of Indians as to their particular status with reference to certain property or certain claims against the Government of the United States. It is not a provision extending to all the Indians within the United States, but it has reference to the estate, to the tribal rights and the individual rights of a given tribe of Indians, and any law that it undertakes to repeal or to modify is no broader in its scope and purpose than the proposed amendment itself; and the distinguished Senator from Iowa, to sustain his point of order, is compelled to take the ridiculous and nonsensical attitude that it is general legislation.

I do not know that anything is to be gained by arguing this question. When a man denies absolutely that 2 and 2 make 4 and declares that they make 5 or 3, he is hardly in a frame of mind to be reasoned with. The only thing to do, I suppose, is to permit him to persist in his false conclusion.

Mr. President, I want to speak briefly upon the merits of this question, and see if I can not convince the Senator from Iowa that he ought to withdraw his objection.

The history of what is called the New Ulm massacre of 1862 would furnish a very fruitful subject for a novel. It is interesting from a historic standpoint, and I shall undertake before I conclude to lay the circumstances of its inception before the Senate and before the country.

These Indians are the only tribe of Indians in all the history of this country, from the landing of the Pilgrims to this time, who rest under the ban of the displeasure of this Government. The Modocs in their treacherous war upon the settlers and soldiers of this country and all the cruelties of the Sioux, the Apaches, the Arapahoes, and other savage tribes have been forgiven, and this Government has extended amnesty to every tribe of Indians in this country except the Santee Sioux and the Sissetons and Wahpetons. They alone incur the displeasure of the Government because it will cost two or three million dollars to pay them what is justly due them under treaty stipulations. If it were only two or three hundred thousand dollars, Rule XVI might be viewed in an entirely different light.

I propose to read the affidavits of two of the individuals who participated in the Sioux war in Minnesota in 1862.

STATE OF NEBRASKA, KNOX COUNTY,
Santee Agency, ss:

Joseph Kitto, being first duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is 70 years of age and resides at the Santee Agency, Nebr., and is a member of the Mdewakantonwan tribe of Sioux Indians, who formerly resided at Redwood Falls, Minn., before the Sioux outbreak of 1862.

Let me say here that the Medawakantons and the Wahpekootas form now a confederacy known as the Santee-Sioux Indians, and I shall speak of them as Santees hereafter. The affidavit continues:

He does give this testimony to the best of his knowledge and memory regarding the event herein recited: That there were 8 different companies of Sioux Indians who were bound together under the name of Mdewakantonwan and Wahpekute by Government treaties; that there were 7 bands of Sioux Indians, as follows: Magayuteani, Kiyuska, Heminican, Hoyatatonwanna, Tintatonwan, Oyatesica, and Kapoja, together called Mdewakantonwan, and 1 band called Wahpekute, making 8 bands under two names as Mdewakantonwan and Wahpekute Sioux Indians; that at the time of the outbreak of 1862 three of the bands of the Mdewakantonwan of Sioux Indians were at the east end of the Redwood Agency and did not know of the outbreak and were not participants in the massacre at the agency. They are as follows: Wahpekute, Heminican, and Kiyuska, who were innocent of the outbreak. While the bands Kapoja (their chief being Little Crow by name), who lived next to the agency, and right west of it, were the first band who made a charge upon the agency, and the band of Tintatonwans were the second to take part in the massacre.

This affiant was sick at the time, and had to lean upon a crutch for support, and as he woke up on the morning of the outbreak he saw people going to the agency to exterminate the whites who came to his house and asked him to join in the massacre; but he refused to do so, and asked them not to take any part in this hard task.

I may say that this affidavit is drawn by an Indian, which accounts for some of its peculiarities. The affidavit continues:

But his efforts were all in vain, and as he was unable to be about everyone that he met he tried to prevent from participating in the massacre, but the deed was done before he could get force enough procured to prevent it. Affiant further saw at that time some men who were members of the Wahpetonwans and Sissetons, who were foremost in the massacre, and they were Ahanzi, chief of the Wahpetonwan, Bad Lightning, Wasicuntanka, Wahacukamaza, etc. Affiant further testifies that he was an eyewitness to the massacre, and saw Sissetons and Wahpetonwans who bore arms and engaged in the massacre, and this affiant further states that he was at Mankato, Minn., when General Sibley was making an investigation in regard to the outbreak, and by witnesses.

Thirty-eight men were hung as murderers, and out of that number 13 were Wahpetonwans, and not one Sisseton was hung, because the Sissetons were all living at the west extreme of the reservation, where they could and did get away; and many of the Sissetons who took part in the massacre fled to the British Possessions, and are there to-day; and many were shot down as they returned from the British Possessions at Fort Wadsworth by scouts who were left in charge of said fort. Affiant further states that he is one of the men who was sentenced to be imprisoned at Davenport, Iowa, for a term of four years, and while there there were over 100 deaths occurred among the prisoners on account of hard usage and improper diet. And further affiant saith not.

The next affidavit was made by a man having more experience than Mr. Kitto. The affidavit is as follows:

THE STATE OF NEBRASKA, COUNTY OF KNOX,
Santee Sioux Agency, ss:

Robert Hakewaste, being first duly sworn, deposes and says that he is 67 years of age and resides at the Santee Sioux Agency, Nebr.; that he is a member of the Mdewakantonwan tribe of Sioux Indians, who formerly resided at Redwood Falls, Minn., before the Sioux outbreak of 1862; that he recollects the treaty of 1851 that was entered into between the United States Government and the tribe of Mdewakantonwan Sioux Indians in which he was a party to the agreement. After the agreement or treaty was ratified, he recollects having received an annuity of $20 per annum, and which was paid to all members of the Mdewakantonwan and Wahpekute Sioux Indians for eight years until the outbreak occurred. According to the best of his knowledge and belief, the outbreak was caused by four young men. One of these young men, who was a distant relative of affiant, Kaomdeniyeyedan by name, made the following statement regarding the cause of the outbreak.

And here is the interesting part of it:

There were eleven of us who started out to trap about the lake regions in Minnesota. As we were going along we came to a farmhouse where by the roadside a hen was setting. A young man by the name of Pazaiyapa said he was going to take the hen and eggs to eat, which Nagiwicakte did not think was right, as there was not a very friendly feeling between the Indians and the whites, at which Pazaiyapa was enraged and said that Nagiwicakte was a coward, and there was a hot conversation between them, and finally they were divided into two companies—Nagiwicakte, Kaomdeniyeyedan, Sungigidan, and Waste formed one party and Pazaiyapa and six others made the other party. They parted, calling each other cowards, and left each other. Nagiwicakte, who took pains to prevent Pazaiyapa from disturbing the setting hen, came to a farm and with his friends sat down by the road to smoke. As they were smoking they heard rapid firing of guns in the direction which Pazaiyapa took, at which Nagiwicakte grunted for disappointment, and thinking that Pazaiyapa after all was a brave man had charged upon some white people. This was about noon when they came to the farm, and just as the successive reports of the guns ceased there were two white men came out of the woods, each with an ax on his shoulder, and came by Nagiwicakte and his companions. The white men said "how" and we said "how" in response, and just as they passed us Kaomdeniyeyedan took his gun and shot at one of them. He shot him dead and shot the other also as he started to run, and then we all started toward the barn and took some horses that stood in the barn and rode them home by midnight.

Now, while we were thinking that Pazaiyapa had charged upon some white people, they had, as a matter of fact, come to a covey of prairie chickens, which they were shooting, and we heard the rapid reports of the gun, but Kaomdeniyeyedan thought that Pazaiyapa was braver than himself and had shot some white people before Kaomdeniyeyedan; that to the best of my knowledge and belief, and according to my memory, this statement was related to me by Kaomdeniyeyedan as I have repeated it. And, furthermore, inasmuch as these young men were relatives of both Mdewakantonwans and Wahpetonwans, all of the four bands started in together to do the fatal deed on the morning of August 18, 1862, called the Sioux outbreak; that he was in the midst of the outbreak during the whole time, which lasted about seven weeks, and he is one of the few who did not participate in the trouble, but tried to prevent said outbreak with all of his influence and energy; that the outbreak occurred on the morning of August 18, 1862, at Redwood Falls, where the Mdewakantonwans and Wahpekutes were residing, and that the outbreak occurred at Yellow Medicine on the next morning, where the Sissetons and Wahpetonwans were residing. As we were forced along the Minnesota River by the soldiers, those who desired to be friendly and have peace stopped and put up their tents and sent two mixed bloods—Thomas Robinson and Thomas A. Robertson, who were both Mdewakantonwans by birth—to make peace with the United States officers.

When it was accomplished by them we gave ourselves up into the hands of Gen. H. H. Sibley; and to the best of my knowledge and belief and according to my memory none of the Sissetons and Wahpetonwans were in our midst to make peace with the United States officers. As we were in the hands of General Sibley, we were brought back to Mankato, Minn., and 38 men were sentenced to death at Mankato, Minn.; and I remember that there were some Wahpetonwans among those who were hung, but do not remember just how many, and all those who were not condemned to death were sentenced to be imprisonad at Davenport, Iowa, for a term of four years. There were 400 persons imprisoned, and many were Sissetons and Wahpetonwans. After the term of imprisonment had expired the prisoners were returned to their respective agencies, and are there to-day as living monuments, and are there to testify that the Sissetons and Wahpetonwans are just as guilty as the Mdewakantonwans and Wahpekutes were; and to the best of my knowledge and belief there were only 22 men who participated in the massacre of 1862, or were eyewitnesses to the outbreak, living at the Santee Agency.

And further affiant saith not.

ROBERT (his x mark) HAKEWÁSTE.

Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me this 31 day of January, A. D., 1890.
[SEAL.] B. J. YOUNG, Notary Public.

(Expiration of my commission, January 9, A. D. 1900, in and for Knox County, Nebr.)

At another place it is made to appear from the testimony of Rev. James Garvie, a graduate of one of the Indian schools and a gentleman of a good deal of learning, that there are eighteen or nineteen of these men alive. Now it is proposed to make all these Indians responsible for the act of their ancestors, when there is only a handful of those ancestors now living, all old men, who are living upon the charity not only of this Government, but upon the charity of the people among whom they reside. All the others, all the membership of these tribes of Indians are those who were children and noncombatants at the time of this affair of 1862. Of course they were dealt with severely, and properly so. No one makes any excuse for them in that respect. Those who were guilty were tried and condemned and hanged. But, Mr. President, it was not the proper thing for this Government to do, without consulting those who were innocent of any participation in the unfortunate affair of New Ulm, to undertake to repeal the treaty rights and take away from those people, and especially from those who had nothing to do with the massacre, the property interests that came to them by virtue of the treaty.

These Indians at one time held hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest land in Minnesota. That was recognized by the Government. At a time when they knew nothing of the value of their land, when they had not come in contact to any great extent with the white man, and, therefore, had not been corrupted, this Government undertook to treat with them, and secured their land for 10 cents an acre, never to be paid, but they were to receive the interest on 10 cents an acre for those lands. It was a legalized larceny; it was larceny according to law. You could not punish anybody for it, because there was an understanding between the tribe and the officers of the Government.

Then the conscience of some of the officers of this Government quickened a little, Mr. President—and I have always been curious to know who they were, for it seems to have been the single exception in our entire history—and the Government was induced to allow those Indians 30 cents an acre, or the interest on 30 cents an acre, to be paid annually. Yet the Government of the United States took all those hundreds of thousands of acres of the finest land that lies within the body of the Commonwealth of Minnesota and sold them to actual settlers for $1.25 an acre, thus defeating the Indians out of 95 cents on every acre. Is it not just that the Government should allow these Indians at least what it received for their lands?

Then, what became of the Indians? They were taken to the banks of the Missouri River and placed upon sand bars, upon places impossible of cultivation, and they are there to-day, struggling and eking out an existence, while the Committee on Appropriations is skulking and hiding around behind Rule XVI to get rid of an obligation to pay them.

The history of these Indians, Mr. President, is a very attractive history. They were probably one of the last bands of Indians to be overcome and conquered by the Government. They are not the bloodthirsty creatures they have been held up to be. I have known some of them for over forty years. They are kind, hospitable, and, I am glad to say, the most of them intelligent. They are peaceable and law abiding, but they have been shattered, reduced, and humiliated by this Government.

If this Government ever owed an honest dollar in the world, it owes these Indians at least two million and a half of dollars. Why does not the Government pay this money? Is there anything brave or manly, or anything to be commended, in the conduct of the dominant race of this country in refusing justice to these people, simply because they have the physical power to do so? No man is brave or generous or just in the true sense who takes advantage of his physical power to inflict wrong and injustice upon the weak and the humble; yet that is just exactly what we have been doing for years.

The Senator from Iowa does not question the correctness of this claim. He does not insinuate that these people are not justly entitled to the money that would go to them under the provisions of this amendment. He simply hies himself to the labyrinths of Rule XVI and gets behind it and occasionally peeps out, expecting the Vice-President to help him out on the rule, that his party may be saved from the disaster and disgrace of being charged with appropriating more money than the Democratic party appropriated heretofore.

There is a party in this country which has some honesty instead of too much politics, and that party, Mr. President, is the Populist party. It is a game of hide and seek, shuttlecock and battledoor, the Republican party skirmishing to keep the appropriations down, regardless of the merits of claims, that they may go to the country and sing their praises, saying, "Look at us; we beat the Democrats; we administered this Government for less money than the Democrats did." When the chairmanship of the Appropriation Committee changes from the distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] to my honorable friend the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] the same game goes on. There is a change nominally in the chairmanship of the committee. There is no change in the policy. The Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Missouri keep the chairmanship in the family.

If there were any question about the honesty of the pending claim, I would not insist upon its adoption. If the Senator from Iowa or any other member of the Committee on Appropriations can offer a word in objection to the honesty of the claim, I say frankly I will withdraw any advocacy of its allowance. It is an honest claim. These poor people are dependent upon this Government to do justice to them. They are looking forward from time to time, hoping and expecting that a great political party, which says it stands at the head of civilization and leads the march, will be able to yield some kind of justice, some kind of recognition of their rights.

Mr. President, has it come to this, that in the Congress of the United States honesty counts for nothing, fair dealing counts for nothing? Are honesty and fair dealing to be set aside and the man who would advocate their application to be regarded as a fogy, if nothing worse, that mere party advantage may be secured? I had supposed, sir, that in dealing with great questions like this, where we were convinced that the people were at our mercy, we could at least break the bonds of partisan allegiance long enough to do them justice, but it seems not. What the Sioux Indian wants to do is to get into politics, and he ought to go to voting against some of the gentlemen who are voting against his interest.

Every one of these men is a citizen. They are voters. The Senator from South Dakota is right when he says they are voters and citizens, with all the rights and all the obligations of citizenship. If they only numbered a million or two and voted on the right side or held the balance of power and made some slight menace, you would see the Democratic party and the Republican party, like rats, scudding to safety and voting for the allowance of the claim. But they are a broken, humble, humiliated people of an inferior race, and their rights are to be discarded because they have no political power or insignificant political power.

Mr. President, I have made a thorough study of the rights of these people since I have occupied a position in this Chamber. Many of them are constituents of mine. I think I know individually almost every male adult Indian of the Santee tribe. They reside in the judicial district over which I used to preside. I have been brought in contact with them for years. It would be a marvel to the people of the East to see the progress those people have made in point of civilization through the agency of Christianizing influence. The course of this Government to the Indian tribes forms one of the most disgraceful chapters of American history. They have been systematically robbed. They have been driven from their homes from time to time. They have had their property rights taken from them without the slightest excuse and without the slightest compensation. They have been driven from jungle to jungle and from fastness to fastness, until their ranks have been decimated by war and their property taken by plunder; and they are broken, helpless, and humble.

Mr. President, the removal, through or by the instrumentality of the troops of the United States, of the Ponca Indians from their reservation in northern Nebraska, a reservation they had occupied for years and where the great majority of them had been born, is a thing as to which every honest man ought to feel that he and the nation of which he is a part have been disgraced. There was not the slightest cause for the removal. They were not a warlike people. They were always the friends of the whites. They had performed arduous service for our Government during our wars with the Sioux. They had been as faithful, as honest, and as true to the people of this nation as a child is honest and true to its parents; and yet, Mr. President, this Government sent troops to the Ponca Reservation and forced many of the men, women, and children there to leave for a new home in the Indian Territory.

If you, sir, had witnessed that scene it would have brought tears to your eyes. They fell down upon their breasts, and cried and moaned and begged the troops to leave them there. There were the memories of their birth; there were their homes, as dear to them as the home of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is to him, or my home is to me; around their cabins clustered the memories of the family. They were taken by military force and carried to the Indian Territory. But I thank God they had the courage to come back. There they have rebuilded their homes; there they are staying; from there it will never be within the power of the Government of the United States to remove them again.

Mr. President, I have report after report, as you can see, amounting to dozens, document after document, giving the whole history of the rights of these Indians against the Government. I do not know what will become of their claim. I have hoped heretofore that Congress would rise to a sense of the duty of the Government to these people and take up this claim and allow it, or at least a portion of it. But I say honestly I am very doubtful if these people ever get anything. They are at the mercy of this Government. They have no means of enforcing their rights in court. We hold them like Mohommed's coffin, suspended between heaven and earth. We will not let them go to court, nor will we grant them the money to which they are entitled. If that is not the highest species of grand larceny known to the history of the world, I should like to know what it is. If there were any doubt about the honesty of this claim, if that question were mooted, there might be some cause for the Committee on Appropriations to resort to some subterfuge, as they usually do in resorting to this rule, to get rid of the amendment. But there is no doubt about its honesty.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I am so appreciative of the importance of proceeding with the utmost dispatch with all business that I shall be very brief in discussing the pending question. I will premise by saying that it is a matter which concerns the people of four States only, the two Dakotas, Minnesota, and Nebraska. It is a subject upon which the Senators from those States are entirely agreed. It is one with which most of them have had perfect knowledge concerning the merits and equities of the case. If it can be left to them or if their opinions are entitled to due weight, there can be no doubt entertained.

Mr. President, the substance of the situation is just this: By the treaty of 1851 the United States agreed to pay in installments to the Sioux Nation a certain sum of money, the last payment to be made in 1901, I think. The Sioux Nation was divided into four bands, and in 1862 one of those bands went to war with the United States and a scene of great devastation and slaughter was exhibited in my own State. In the following year, in the indiscriminate indignation which was visited upon all the Sioux Nation of Indians, the Congress, without any process of law whatever, arbitrarily confiscated the payments to be made between that date and 1901.

Now, the fact was, and nothing is better known in the history of my own State where the tragedy occurred, that three of those bands took no part in the massacre. It was perpetrated entirely by the Santees, and as public opinion and knowledge have become better acquainted with the subject, the conscience of those States, and my own State especially, has been aroused to the conviction that reparation shall be made and justice be done.

I knew Gabriel Renville very well. He first called my attention to this subject when I was governor of Minnesota, in 1874 and 1875. He was a great man in his way, and was a good man from any point of view. His young men fought on our side in the same Indian war. They rescued sixty white women and children from the hands of Little Crow and his band, then waging war against us. He sent his young men into the armies of the United States during the war of the rebellion. Mr. President, with the knowledge of the people of those States upon this subject, a subject which has been deliberated upon by them for more than twenty-five years, concerning which there is not a shadow of a doubt as to the fact or the merits, where is the justice or fairness of endeavoring to interpose between the execution of an act of justice a special rule invoked by the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. President, I do not want to take any time; it is very important that nobody should, beyond what is strictly necessary. But I wish to ask, in all fairness, is this general legislation? What is this amendment? It purposes to deal with a special fund, nothing general in its character, but with a special fund in the Treasury of the United States, dedicated by the treaty of 1851 to a particular tribe of Indians. It is nothing which in the least degree tends to affect any general interest or any general considerations in this country. There are a great many things which can be perceived a great deal easier than they can be defined, and who would say, looking to a measure of this kind, if it came up as an abstract proposition, or what court would say that an amendment of this character was general legislation concerning two or three thousand Indians about equally divided upon various reservations in four States? What general proposition or feature is there about it? Take the bill itself now under consideration. On page 31 there is this clause:

> For twelfth of thirteen installments of $18,400 each, to be paid per capita, as per third article of agreement with the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians—

So much money.

Would anybody call that general legislation? That gives these Indians a fourth of the money. This amendment proposes to give the three-fourths that we claim has unjustly and inequitably been withheld.

Mr. President, I will not—it would be impertinence for me to undertake to enlarge upon the consecutive and exceedingly clear statement of these facts which has been made by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW]. It will pass into history as a perfect historical statement of these events. It is perfectly certain, from the want of denial of the concurrent testimony of all people who know anything about this matter—about the equities of this claim—that it is going to pass some time. Why not do it now? What is the use of putting up the bar of a rule of doubtful application in this case, and of very doubtful equity in its interposition in many cases?

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] makes a very strong appeal to the Committee on Appropriations to withhold the point of order as respects the pending amendment. I do not wish to go into this question. It will be one of serious debate when it comes before the Senate. The Senator from Minnesota himself states that for twenty-five years this matter has been before the public, before the Congress, before the people of these States. It is one that should be treated as other subjects are treated in this body and in the other House. We have an Indian Affairs Committee that deals with questions of legislation in respect to Indian affairs. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] and the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] have been members of that committee for years, and now in the expiring days of the session they ask that there shall be put on the pending appropriation bill one of the most important private matters of legislation presented during this session.

With sympathy for those Senators as to this important question, which I am willing and ready to debate with them at any time when it is properly before the Senate, I must insist upon the point of order which I have made.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, on page 31 of the bill is a provision as follows:

> For twelfth of thirteen installments of $18,400 each, to be paid per capita, as per third article of agreement with the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians, dated September 12, 1889, ratified by act of March 3, 1891, $18,400.

The history of that item is this: When we made the treaty of 1889 with these Indians, Chief Renville would not make the treaty or would not talk with us until we had at least restored the annuities to those Indians who fought under General Sibley. Therefore we estimated the amount due the 275 who fought under Chief Renville and who were entitled to this money, and we appropriated three hundred and fifty or three hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars in cash and then provided that they should receive $18,400 each year until 1901. In other words, we appropriated in a lump sum one-fourth of the annuities due these Indians up to 1889, and then we provided that we would appropriate each year until 1901 the sum of $18,400, which is just one-quarter the annual payment due these Indians under the old agreement.

My amendment simply restores the other three-fourths to the Indian tribe. It does not seem to me to be general legislation, and it does come within the rule. The Committee on Indian Affairs have reported this measure unanimously, not only as a separate bill, but as an amendment to the pending bill. Two years ago we reported an amendment to accomplish this same purpose, and in conference it was agreed that we should investigate the matter. A committee of the Indian Department or the Secretary of the Interior detailed some one, and he investigated this matter and reported the amount due these people. That report is here. Now, in pursuance of that report, we propose to make the payment, carrying out the provisions of the existing law and carrying out the provisions of this law to its fullest extent. Here is a recognition that one-fourth of it is due. Now we propose to place the other three-fourths upon the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment has the appearance of being in order in respect to that provision of the first section of the rule which provides that certain items may be admitted in an appropriation bill "when moved by direction of a standing or select committee," etc. This amendment is not thus admitted under that reference from the Committee on Indian Affairs, because the point is made by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] that it is new and general legislation, and therefore obnoxious to the third section of the rule.

The first section of the proposed amendment repeals the statute of 1863, which forfeited certain annuities, and now restores by this amendment those old forfeited annuities and continues them and makes appropriations for them.

The second section restores annuities which were also declared forfeited February 16, 1863, as if that act had never been passed, and makes new appropriations therein, and legislates generally upon the subject.

Every provision of the amendment indicates general legislation of the broadest character on this whole Indian subject, and the amendment is therefore obnoxious to the rule, and can not, in the opinion of the Chair, be properly considered.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11414) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the first formal reading of the bill be dispensed with and that the committee amendments be first considered and disposed of as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, that course will be pursued.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Senate," on page 7, line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert "skilled laborer, $1,000;" and in line 11, before the word "thousand," to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" so as to make the clause read:

> Document room: For superintendent of the document room (Amzi Smith), $3,000; first assistant in document room, $1,600; two assistants in document room, at $1,440 each; clerk to superintendent of document room, $1,440; skilled laborer, $1,000; in all, $9,920.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 24, to increase the number of conductors of elevators under the Architect of the Capitol from three to five; and on page 8, line 3, to increase the total appropriation for chief engineer, assistant engineers, etc., under the Architect of the Capitol from $20,125 to $22,525.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. I was instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, on page 8, line 5, before the word "annual," to strike out "thirty-five" and insert "forty;" so as to read:

For 40 annual clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. Then the total at the end of the paragraph should be changed. I move to strike out "$52,500" and insert "$60,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment was, on page 10, line 1, to increase the number of privates on the Capitol police force from seven to twenty-five; and in line 3, page 10, to increase the total appropriation for the force of the Capitol police from $52,120 to $69,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, after line 24, to insert:

To continue the appointment of a special messenger named in and authorized by the resolution adopted by the House of Representatives December 18, 1897, from March 4, 1899, to January 4, 1900, inclusive, at $100 per month; in all, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 1, to increase the salary of the stenographers to committees, House of Representatives, from $4,000 to $5,000; and, in line 3 to increase the total appropriation for stenographers to committees, House of Representatives, from $9,200 to $11,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Library of Congress," on page 20, line 16, to insert "one assistant (in charge of Smithsonian deposit), $1,500;" so as to read:

For Librarian of Congress, $5,000; chief assistant librarian, $4,000; assistant librarian (superintendent of reading room), $3,000; assistant, $2,000; two assistants, at $1,500 each; one assistant (in charge of Smithsonian deposit), $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 9, to reduce the number of assistants at $1,500 each for the Library of Congress from four to three; so as to read:

Three assistants, at $1,500 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 12, after the word "clerk," to insert "who shall also be superintendent of art gallery;" in line 13, after the word "thousand," to strike out "two hundred and fifty" and insert "five hundred;" so as to read:

Chief clerk, who shall also be superintendent of art gallery, $2,500.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senate will disagree to that amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 15, before the word "assistants," to strike out "superintendent of art department, $2,000."

Mr. CULLOM. I hope that amendment will be disagreed to also.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Illinois to line 14, where the word "three" is stricken out and "four" inserted, so as to read: "Four assistants, at $900 each."

Mr. CULLOM. That is a part of the amendment which I desire to have disagreed to.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 18, to increase the apporpriation for superintendent of periodical department from $1,500 to $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum in the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested by the Senator from South Carolina, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Deboe,	McBride,	Rawlins,
Allison,	Fairbanks,	Mallory,	Ross,
Bacon,	Foraker,	Mantle,	Sewell,
Bate,	Gear,	Martin,	Shoup,
Berry,	Gray,	Mills,	Simon,
Burrows,	Hale,	Mitchell,	Smith,
Butler,	Hanna,	Money,	Spooner,
Carter,	Hansbrough,	Morgan,	Stewart,
Chandler,	Harris,	Murphy,	Teller,
Clay,	Hawley,	Perkins,	Tillman,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Platt, Conn.	Turner,
Cullom,	Jones, Ark.	Platt, N. Y.	Warren.
Davis,	Jones, Nev.	Pritchard,

Mr. TILLMAN. My colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] is absent on account of illness.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Fifty-one Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. CULLOM. I understand that there is a desire for an executive session. I will ask the Senate to let the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill go on until we get through with the Library items. There is only a page or two more, and I think it will take but a few minutes. The Secretary will read, beginning in line 17, page 21.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment was, on page 21, line 24, to increase the appropriation for assistant to superintendent of music department from $900 to $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, line 6, to reduce the total appropriation for the Library of Congress from $96,510 to $96,260.

Mr. CULLOM. The total there should be $97,110 instead of $96,510. I move that amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to page 23, line 4, the last clause read being the following proviso:

Provided, That on and after the 1st day of July, 1899, no person shall be entitled to a copyright, unless the copies deposited with the Librarian of Congress, of such copyright book or other article, or the photograph deposited of a work of the fine arts, shall be of such substantial and permanent paper or substance and ink or impression as shall be according to such standard as shall be from time to time established and approved by the said Librarian.

Mr. HOAR. My attention has been called at this moment to the clause just read. If my recollection be not at fault, the present copyright law does not deprive a person of a copyright who has innocently failed to comply strictly with the conditions, but imposes a certain fine equal to double the value of the book, or something of that sort. There was one very interesting case which came up, the case of Mrs. Jefferson Davis, whose copyright got into the power of the publisher, and it required special relief from Congress to avoid the doubt occasioned by one part of the old copyright law. I think, however, the law was with her.

This clause seems to provide that it is an absolute forfeiture of the copyright unless the photograph or book be of a substantial and permanent character as to paper or substance and ink or impression, according to a standard to be from time to time established and approved by the Librarian. I should like to inquire of my friend from Illinois if that is quite safe or just to citizens.

Mr. CULLOM. It appears that under the present law the person who wants a copyright upon a book or any other thing entitled to be copyrighted, in making the application has to file his book or whatever it may be, and the substantial difference, I think, between this provision and the present law is the word "substantial." The proviso reads:

Provided, That on and after the 1st day of July, 1899, no person shall be entitled to a copyright, unless the copies deposited with the Librarian of Congress, of such copyright book or other article, or the photograph deposited of a work of the fine arts, shall be of such substantial and permanent paper or substance and ink or impression as shall be according to such standard as shall be from time to time established and approved by the said Librarian.

I do not remember how different the present law is, but that would seem to be a reasonable requisite in order to entitle a man to a copyright. This provision, I might say, was inserted by the House, and the committee on the part of the Senate did not see any reason why it should be changed.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I do not at this moment, my attention having been first called to this provision, know whether it ought to be allowed to stand in the bill or not. The whole matter of copyright is quite technical; that is, the conditions which authorize a person to obtain a copyright. I think this illustrates, or may illustrate, one of the difficulties of having committees that do not have such matters in charge, to wit, the Committee on Appropriations, undertake to amend laws like the copyright law.

The thing that strikes me about this provision is that it is not right to deprive a man of a copyright of his book, of his magazine article, of his newspaper article, of his dramatic or musical composition, and of the various other things as to which he is entitled to copyright unless he complies with such a "standard as shall be from time to time established and approved by the said Librarian" as to the quality of paper on which his book or his dramatic or musical composition shall be printed—and I think that may be in typewriting—or as to what shall be the substance and character of the board on which the photograph is printed or affixed; and that unless he complies with those arbitrary regulations, issued from time to time by the Librarian, he shall not be entitled to a copyright. For instance, the Librarian may say that in order to entitle a person to a copyright for a book it shall be printed on paper of such a weight, be made according to a certain formula, and be glazed or unglazed or partially glazed, otherwise he shall not have a copyright for his book.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator from Connecticut, I believe, is chairman of the Committee on Patents?

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. Which has charge also of copyrights.

Mr. CULLOM. I should be glad if the Senator would state exactly what the law is.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] has the law before him.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I had occasion to go over this matter very carefully a few years ago, and I think I can answer the question myself.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I am quite willing the Senator from Massachusetts shall do so, because he has the Revised Statutes before him and I have not.

Mr. HOAR. If I can have the attention of the Senate for a moment——

Mr. CULLOM. Before the Senator makes his explanation let me give the reason which was given in another body why this provision should be made:

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is technically but not substantially subject to a point of order. The present law provides that two copies of every copyrighted book and a copy or photograph of works of art which may be copyrighted shall be deposited in the Library. Of late chemical and other improvements have resulted in the deposit of publications printed upon such paper as rots after a year or two, publications printed with inks which change and fade, and photographs which do not endure. In this way the object of the law, which was to provide for permanent records, is defeated. There is no difficulty in printing as permanent records for the Library at least one or two copies of any copyrighted work, and I think that when we grant a copyright this requirement should be made. For this reason, and because of the urgent desire of the Librarian of Congress for the enactment of such a provision, I have submitted this amendment.

I thought I would read that so as to show the basis on which the provision was adopted by the House of Representatives.

Mr. HOAR. If I can have the attention of my friend from Illinois and of the Senate, I think I can satisfy them that the excellent gentleman who made that argument in another place did not quite get hold of the whole case.

It is not necessary to say that a copyright may be of extreme importance and value. It may be the only property of some man of genius or some woman of genius. Nobody wants, for the limited time for which our copyrights last, to curtail the right of another in what is the most absolute product of a human being, the product of his brain. Nobody doubts about that. The present law is this:

SEC. 4959. The proprietor of every copyright book or other article shall deliver at the office of the Librarian of Congress, or deposit in the mail addressed to the Librarian of Congress at Washington, D. C., within ten days after its publication, two complete printed copies thereof, of the best edition issued, or description or photograph of such article as hereinbefore required, and a copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial changes shall be made.

That might make it a question whether the failure to deliver the copies would forfeit the entire copyright, or whether, if the man or woman had made a mistake, or there had been accidental delay, or the thing had failed to get to the Library through the post-office within two months, that omission might be supplied. That is made clear by the following section of the Revised Statutes, which is:

SEC. 4960. For every failure on the part of the proprietor of any copyright to deliver or deposit in the mail either of the published copies, or description or photograph, required by sections 4956 and 4959, the proprietor of the copyright shall be liable to a penalty of $25.

We have changed that, I think, in a later statute which makes the penalty double the value of the article. So it is clear that the owner continues to be the proprietor of the copyright within the intent of the law; and even if he had accidentally failed to do this thing he does not by this accident forfeit his copyright property, which may be worth $10,000, but only has this penalty of $25 attached to him, or, as the law is now, double the value of the book or other article.

This bill provides:

That on and after the 1st day of July, 1899, no person shall be entitled to a copyright unless the copies deposited with the Librarian of Congress of such copyright book or other article, or the photograph deposited of a work of the fine arts, shall be of such substantial and permanent paper or substance and ink or impression as shall be according to such standard as shall be from time to time established and approved by the said librarian.

So if, in absolute ignorance, or if by mistake or accident, the owner of the copyright fails within the time to make this deposit, and to deposit a book printed in ink which will not change, or on paper which will not rot, although the author knows nothing about it, he loses his entire property.

It is not the requisition that I object to; it is extending, what I do not think the gentleman who offered this amendment intended, the penalty from a mere fine of $25 to the absolute forfeiture of the whole property.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the Senator whether, in his judgment, a person making application for a copyright, if he fails to file the proper copy, and so forth, in the first instance, would not have another chance?

Mr. HOAR. He would have no chance, according to this provision; and if I can have the attention of Senators for one moment there is a very interesting bit of history which is worth relating.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis prepared a very elaborate life of her husband. It is delicate to speak of such things, and perhaps I should not do so; but her property in that copyright was a very important resource to her in her old age. General Gordon, formerly a very distinguished and honored member of this body, came into the Senate just before he left the Senate—at any rate it was during the last moments of President Harrison's Administration—and stated that the publishers of that work had themselves failed to make the proper deposit to save the copyright of Mrs. Davis, and they claimed, although it was their business to make the deposit and she trusted them to do so as her agents, that the copyright was gone and that she was absolutely in their power, and they undertook to compel her to submit to some very hard and onerous terms.

She was in great distress. She came to Congress, and a bill was passed relieving her from that disability, which was signed by President Harrison, in the President's room out there, within thirty seconds of 12 o'clock, and the bill, with the President's signature affixed, was brought to General Gordon, who sat, I think, in the very seat at which I am now standing, waiting for the inauguration of the new President; and the lady's property was saved.

It is a question of some doubt, I think, whether the property could have been held to be forfeited, but it would have exposed this lady to a very severe and uncomfortable lawsuit for recovery.

This provision enacts the injustice which the act of Congress passed at that time was intended to remedy. If I recollect aright, it was to the effect that the failure to make this deposit should not be treated as a forfeiture of the property, but only that the Government might recover a penalty of double the value of the book sought to be copyrighted. Inadvertently, I have no doubt, this proposition of the House of Representatives repeals the law passed at that time and makes clear what seems to me a most flagrant injustice, to wit, that a mere accidental failure to file a work with the Librarian should forfeit the entire property.

Mr. CULLOM. As some Senators wish an executive session, I desire to say that that proviso may be passed over for the time being until we see whether we can not agree upon something more definite.

Mr. HOAR. Very well, but why not strike out the provision and let it go to conference?

Mr. CULLOM. We can consider the matter when the bill again comes up. I desire that the reading of the bill shall proceed, so that I may have one or two more amendments disposed of before we get through with the portion of the bill which is now being read.

The reading of the bill was resumed at line 4, on page 23, and continued to the end of line 19 of the items for "Increase of Library of Congress."

Mr. CULLOM. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk, to come in after the word "dollars," at the end of line 19, on page 23.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURROWS in the chair). The amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois will be stated.

Mr. GORMAN. Before that amendment is read, I should like to know what became of the provision which was under consideration in relation to copyrights?

Mr. CULLOM. That has been passed over for the present.

Mr. GORMAN. It is already incorporated in the bill as it came from the other House.

Mr. CULLOM. Certainly.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. An amendment can be offered at a later stage.

Mr. CULLOM. Certainly; an amendment to that provision can be offered later.

Mr. GORMAN. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 23, after line 19, it is proposed to insert:

For binding and replacing law books damaged or destroyed in the recent explosion in the Capitol, $2,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 23, line 21, after the word "business," to strike out "one thousand five hundred" and insert "two thousand;" so as to read:

For contingent expenses of the Library, including the copyright business, $2,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of the clauses making appropriations for "Custody, care, and maintenance of Library building and grounds," on page 25, line 6.

Mr. CULLOM. I yield now to allow an executive session to be had, if desired.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to report a bill before the Senate goes into executive session. It is a bill which the Judiciary Committee authorized me to report some time ago and which I have not been able to do, because of the absence of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. It is merely a bill changing the place of holding terms of the courts in Indiana.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I yield to the Senator for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, the Chair will receive the report at this time.

COURTS AT HAMMOND, IND.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10563) to provide for the holding of terms of the district and circuit courts of the United States at Hammond, Ind., to report it favorably. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD] yields to me to make a request. I ask unanimous consent that on Saturday next after the routine morning business, the time intervening until 2 o'clock, if so much time shall be necessary, be devoted to the consideration of the Pension Calendar, with the understanding that if the Committee on Appropriations desires to have an appropriation bill considered, the order will not be regarded as in force.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that on Saturday next, after the regular routine morning business of the Senate, the time from the close of that business until 2 o'clock may be devoted to the consideration of pension cases on the Calendar, not to interfere with appropriation bills. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I now renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I ask the Senator to yield to me for a few moments.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I withdraw the motion for the present.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. Mr. President, during my absence from the Senate yesterday some statements were made while the Indian appropriation bill was under consideration reflecting upon the character of an eminent and honored citizen of my State, and I think it due to him that the statements should not stand uncorrected.

In the course of the debate the following colloquy occurred with reference to the commission to negotiate with the Crow, Flathead, and other Indians:

Mr. CARTER. If the Senator will permit me to inject a remark at that point, the amendment presented by me on my own motion was that which permitted the Secretary of the Interior to exercise authority without any equivocation or question, discontinuing this entire commission, if he elected so to do. The amendment proposing to extend the time or the life of the commission to January 1, 1900, was presented in behalf of an absent Senator, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. FAIRBANKS], and I think I ought, in justice to myself, to make that statement at this time as a part of the Senator's very appropriate remarks.

Mr. PETTIGREW. And the member of the commission from Indiana is, I understand, the most worthless member of the whole commission. [Laughter.] It is reported that in Montana last year when employed upon this work he was constantly intoxicated and utterly unfit to fill any position under the Government. I have this information from a very prominent and important citizen of the State of Montana, and yet it is proposed to perpetuate this commission and continue this commissioner two months longer, in order that he may continue to draw $10 a day, spend his summers in Montana and his winters in Washington, and do nothing.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, in justice to the absent Senator from Indiana, I think I ought to say that that Senator regards the member of the commission from the State of Indiana as one of the most efficient members, if not the most efficient member, of the commission, who ought to be continued, whatever may happen to the other members of the commission. So I trust the Senator from South Dakota will not too freely indulge in criticism against a person who is not able to defend himself here.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I withdraw my remarks [laughter]—which are undoubtedly true—for the purpose of protecting—I do not know whether it is the Senator from Indiana or the commissioner from Indiana that I ought to protect. Certainly, if the Senator from Indiana thinks this man is one of the most efficient members of this commission, there is an additional argument why the commission should be abolished, for I can not imagine what kind of men the other two can possibly be if this man is the most efficient member of the commission. However, I withdraw my remarks.

Later the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW] further said:

They (the commissioners) have been swinging around through the West for several years, spending their summers in the mountain regions, where it was cool, and their winters here in Washington.

Mr. President, I would not say for one moment that the statements made by the honorable Senator from South Dakota reflecting upon the character of a citizen of my State were made with the intention of injuring him. They were undoubtedly made upon the Senator's impression as to their truth, but I say deliberately, Mr. President, that they are absolutely without foundation in fact.

The impression conveyed that the member of the commission from Indiana has been spending his winters in Washington is also unfounded.

It is no slight matter, Mr. President, for a Senator of the United States to stand here upon this floor and strike down the character of any man within the limits of the Republic, however humble he may be. I do not have it in my heart to lightly strike at the characters that other men have sought to build up.

The reputation of the gentleman referred to is as dear to that gentleman as is the reputation of any Senator to himself, and I shall not permit the insinuation to pass without, in as public a manner as the charge was made, pronouncing it unfounded in fact. It is perhaps due to the commissioners concerned that a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs covering their work should be read. I offer it for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary proceeded to read the letter.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD] informs me that he has some pressing business in executive session, and while I should like to have the letter read in the hearing of the Senate, as it is somewhat lengthy, if the Senate consents, I am willing that it shall be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD. The Chair hears none, and that order is made.

The letter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, January 17, 1899.

SIR: I am in receipt of your communication dated January 16, 1899, in which you request information as to the duties performed by the Crow, Flathead, etc., Commission, the length of time in service, and whether or not it is necessary that said commission should be continued, and if so, how long.

In reply you are advised that said commission was appointed under a clause in the Indian appropriation act approved June 10, 1896 (29 Stats., 341), for the purpose of negotiating with certain Indians in the States of Montana, Idaho, Utah, and Washington for the surrender of portions of their respective reservations, and for such modifications of existing treaties as might be deemed desirable.

Instructions were given to the commission, composed of Mr. John B. Goodwin, Mr. Charles G. Hoyt, and Mr. Benjamin F. Barge, on August 31, 1896, and these gentlemen entered upon duty soon thereafter.

This was an entirely new commission, composed of gentlemen who had not theretofore been connected with the Indian service.

The commission opened negotiations with the Fort Hall Indians in Idaho, in September, 1896, and was engaged on that reservation and on the Yakima Reservation, in Washington, until November, 1897. During this time one council was also held with the Flathead Indians in Montana. In May, 1897, Mr. James H. McNeely was appointed on the commission in the place of Mr. John B. Goodwin, resigned.

In November, 1897, the commission was directed by the Secretary of the Interior to commence negotiations with the Uintah Indians in Utah with the view of securing lands for the settlement of the Uncompahgre Indians thereon. In January, 1898, an agreement was concluded with these Indians, which agreement was satisfactory to this Department.

Mr. Barge was then ordered to come to this city with the agreement and for consultation. Mr. McNeely was granted leave of absence without pay, and Mr. Hoyt returned to the Fort Hall Reservation, where he concluded an agreement in February, 1898. This agreement also received the approval of the Department. The commission then returned to the Yakima Reservation. There are a large number of Indians belonging to the Yakima Nation who have never resided upon that reservation, but have lived on the public domain in the State of Washington, in the vicinity of the reservation, and elsewhere in that State. It was deemed important by this office that as many of these Indians as possible should be induced to remove to the reservation and take allotments there, to which they were entitled under their treaty. The commission was therefore instructed to visit these nonreservation Indians in their various localities for the purpose of persuading them to make their home upon the reservation, and a special agent was assigned the duty of alloting lands to such Indians as could be induced to take them.

As a result of these efforts, between four and five hundred Indians took allotments upon the reservation. This work was performed on the part of the commission by the chairman, Mr. Barge, while the other two members of the commission, Messrs. Hoyt and McNeely, proceeded to the Flathead Reservation, which they reached in the latter part of April, 1898. They held various councils with the different bands of Indians located on that reservation. This work occupied their time until October of last year, when they went to the Crow Reservation, holding their first council with the Crow Indians October 31, 1898, Mr. Barge being still engaged in his duties on the Yakima Reservation. Soon afterwards Mr. Hoyt was ordered to come to this city for the purpose of consultation regarding certain complaints made by the Crow Indians with reference to the actions of one of their former agents, Mr. McNeely being granted leave of absence without pay.

A part of these matters have been satisfactorily adjusted during Mr. Hoyt's presence. While the commission has actually concluded but two agreements, they have unquestionably done much work which will bear fruit in the coming year if they be allowed to continue in the service. To those who are familiar with the methods of the Indians the difficulty of inducing them to surrender their lands, of overcoming their prejudices, and removing their various causes of complaint, it is not surprising that no more tangible results have been secured. Negotiations with Indians are always tedious and require great patience and perseverence. There is nothing in this office to indicate that this commission has been dilatory in the work or has failed to prosecute it with diligence and faithfulness. The Department has been kept advised of their movements and of their work by weekly reports.

As already indicated, very considerable progress has been made with the Yakimas, Crows, and Flatheads, negotiations with whom are deemed the most important of all those which were authorized, with the possible exception of the Fort Hall Indians. It can not be expected, however, that a successful termination of the negotiations with each of these tribes can be completed within the time fixed by existing law, the 1st of April next. It is deemed important that this commission should be continued until these negotiations can be brought to a termination. The length of time required for this purpose, in the opinion of this office, is one year from the 1st of April next.

Very respectfully,

W. A. JONES, Commissioner.

Hon. J. A. HEMENWAY,
House of Representatives.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I renew my motion, Mr. President.

Mr. PETTIGREW. In view of what has occurred, I think I am entitled to make a very brief explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina withdraw his motion?

Mr. PRITCHARD. I will withhold the motion, Mr. President, but I hope the Senator from South Dakota will be brief.

Mr. PETTIGREW. Mr. President, I am still of the opinion that what I said in regard to the commissioner from Indiana is correct, except as to the statement of spending the winter in Washington. I was informed, however, on credible authority, that he was here, and that he had solicited indorsements for a continuance of this commission.

I was also informed, on good authority, that he was intoxicated in Montana, and I know of my own knowledge that this commission has performed no valuable service to the Government.

While I dislike very much to assail the character of any man, yet, when a public servant is employed to do a public duty and fails to do that duty, but, on the contrary, disgraces the position which he occupies, he has a right to expect to be assailed and to have his course criticised, especially if he undertakes to continue in the service and to draw money from the Treasury of the United States.

I do not believe that I have done this man any injustice; and until I am thoroughly convinced that I have I shall allow my statement to stand. When I am convinced that I have done an injustice I shall be very glad to make amends, to withdraw what I have said, and to apologize, for that matter. I would not do him any injustice intentionally or purposely; but I do believe that this commission, or two members of the commission at least, have pursued a course which has withdrawn from them the right to expect the respect of the Senate of the United States or anybody connected with it.

Mr. FAIRBANKS. I think it would be only fair for the Senator from South Dakota to give the names of his informants for the information of the Senate.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. PRITCHARD. I now renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and forty-two minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 9, 1899, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, February 8, 1899.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

L. O. MADDUX.

On motion of Mr. EVANS, by unanimous consent, the Committee on Ways and Means was discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11195) for the relief of L. O. Maddux, doing business as Maddux, Hobart & Co.; and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPRINT OF REPORT, ETC.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries on the shipping bill, together with the views of the minority of the committee, be reprinted, the entire supply having been exhausted.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

UNITED STATES COURTS IN TEXAS.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 11495.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11495) entitled "An act to amend section 3 of an act entitled 'An act to change the time and place for the district and circuit courts of the northern district of Texas,'" approved June 11, 1896.

Be it enacted, etc., That all actions or proceedings now pending in the courts of the northern or western district of Texas against parties residing in either of the counties from which process is made returnable to the courts to be held at Fort Worth, San Angelo, and Abilene, respectively, may, on the application of either party to such actions or proceedings, be transferred to the court at which said proceedings would be returnable as provided in this act; and in case of such transfer all papers and files therein, with copies of all journal entries, shall be transferred to the office of the deputy clerk of the said court, and the same shall proceed in all respects as if originally commenced in said court.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

After the word "assembled," in line 2, insert these words: "That section 3 of the act entitled 'An act to change the time and places for the district and circuit courts of the northern district of Texas' be so amended as to read as follows."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend section 3 of an act entitled 'An act to change the time and place for the district and circuit courts of the northern district of Texas,' approved June 11, 1896."

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SLAYDEN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH INDIAN TERRITORY, ETC.

Mr. FISCHER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 9946.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9946) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Muskogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other purposes."

Be it enacted, etc., That said railroad company shall cause maps, upon a scale of 1 inch per mile, showing the route of its located main line and branches through said allotted lands, and through the lands of the several Indian nations in the Indian Territory through which its main line and two branches are authorized to pass, to be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Interior and also in the office of the principal chief of such Indian nation; and when any map or maps are so filed showing the route of said railroad or either of its two branches, as herein provided, it shall be lawful for said railroad company to begin the construction of its railroad or either of its two branches through the lands of any Indian nation in the said Indian Territory where its map or maps are so filed, and where it is authorized to construct its railroad or its two branches: Provided, That the chief engineer of said railroad company shall certify, under oath, to the Secretary of the Interior the date of completion of said railroad or either of its two branches through the lands of any Indian nation through which it is authorized to construct its railroad; and said railroad company shall begin the work of constructing its railway in any Indian nation through which it is authorized to pass within six months from the time of filing its plat through that Indian nation with the Secretary of the Interior and with the principal chief of said nation, or such location shall be null and void: And provided further, That the said railroad and its two branches shall be constructed within the time limited by the act to which this is amendatory.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Add as a new section the following:

"SEC. 2. That section 1 of the act of which this act is amendatory is hereby amended by striking out the following words: 'The eastern boundary of the Oklahoma Territory, south of the Canadian River,' and insert in lieu thereof the words 'On the Red River near the confluence of said Red River and the Wichita River.'"

Mr. SULZER. I wish to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISCHER] whether this bill has been favorably reported from a committee of this House?

Mr. FISCHER. It has been unanimously reported, and I am instructed to call it up.

Mr. SULZER. Is this the merely formal kind of a bill usually passed with regard to eminent domain through Indian reservations?

Mr. FISCHER. It complies with all the usual requirements. The amendment has been attached to the bill by the committee, so as to make it conform to all other bills of similar character.

The SPEAKER. It is a public bill.

Mr. FISCHER. Yes, sir. It simply amends a bill heretofore passed and permits this railroad company to file its map in sections rather than to file a map of the entire system, a requirement which would make it impossible under present conditions to build the road. The Indian Bureau favors the bill.

Mr. COWHERD. The gentleman will allow me to state that the bill definitely locates one end of the road.

Mr. SULZER. Will the bill in any way take away, without consent of the Indians, any of the Indian lands in the reservation? I am opposed to any infringement on the property rights of the Indians. They have no one to speak for them here, and we should be just and fair.

Mr. FISCHER. On the contrary, it requires a deposit of $50 a mile before condemnation proceedings may be entered upon.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. FISCHER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN SCHOOLS FOR 1898.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the concurrent resolution I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read, subject to objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 1,000 additional copies of the Report of the Superintendent of Indian Schools for 1898, the same to be delivered to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the use of his office.

Mr. PERKINS. There is a letter from the Secretary of the Interior accompanying this resolution, which I will not ask to have read, but will ask consent to have printed in the RECORD, as explanatory of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the letter will be printed, to accompany the resolution.

There was no objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 26, 1899.

SIR: I have the honor, at the request of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to inclose herewith, for consideration by the Committee on Printing, the draft of a concurrent resolution providing for the printing of additional copies of the report of the superintendent of Indian schools for 1898. In making this request the Commissioner says that "The entire edition of this report already published has been exhausted, while there are already on hand a large number of unfilled applications for it, and they keep coming in each day. The edition is hardly large enough to provide the copies needed for Indian school employees and for libraries which are on the regular mailing list."

Under existing laws only 1,000 copies of this report can be printed for the use of this Department, except upon the special order of Congress. The work has already been stereotyped, so that the expense of printing another edition will be small.

In view of these facts, I concur with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in recommending that an additional edition of a thousand copies be printed for the use of his office, and will be glad to have the resolution introduced in the House in order that it may be properly referred.

Very respectfully,
C. N. BLISS,
Secretary.

Hon. GEORGE D. PERKINS,
Chairman of the Committee on Printing, House of Representatives.

Mr. PERKINS. This resolution, I will state, Mr. Speaker, involves an expenditure of only $182.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, and agreed to.

On motion of Mr. PERKINS, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ELECTION OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I am requested by the Committee on the Election of President and Vice-President and Members of Congress to call up from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 5088) to amend section 27 of the Revised Statutes, relative to the apportionment and election of Representatives, a similar bill having been reported favorably by the committee, and ask its present consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill called up by the gentleman from Michigan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 27 of the Revised Statutes of the United States of 1878 be amended so as to read as follows:

"All votes for Representatives in Congress must be by written or printed ballot, or voting machine the use of which has been duly authorized by the State law; and all votes received or recorded contrary to this section shall be of no effect."

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I would like, before consent is given to consider this matter, for the gentleman to explain in what particular this changes the law as it now exists?

Mr. GROSVENOR. The right to object should be reserved.

Mr. CORLISS. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS] who introduced the bill to explain it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the right of objection is reserved.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, this bill was introduced by myself at the request of a number of gentlemen interested in the introduction of voting machines in the various States. The only change in the present law is as follows:

The statute as it now stands reads as follows:

All votes for Representatives in Congress must be by written or printed ballots, and all votes received or recorded contrary to this section shall be of no effect.

This proposed amendment provides this addition to the statute, after the word "ballots:"

Or by voting machine the use of which has been duly authorized by the State law.

Now, the reason is, that the statute as it now exists makes it doubtful whether or not voting machines can be used at Congressional elections. Quite a number of the States have a provision allowing the use of such machines, but they are not used to any large extent, because it has been considered doubtful whether or not they can be used, as I have said, in Congressional elections.

The question has been raised in one of the contests pending before this House, and was considered by the Committee on Elections No. 2 in the contested-election case of Ryan vs. Brewster, in which case the committee considered the use of such machines as doubtful.

Mr. KLEBERG. Is the use left optional to the State?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Yes; to States and municipalities.

Mr. GAINES. Did I understand the gentleman to say that this question had been determined by Elections Committee No. 2 in the case he refers to?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. That is my recollection.

Mr. GAINES. The gentleman is mistaken as to the committee, at all events. That case was before Elections Committee No. 3, of which I happen to be a member.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I thought it was the other committee, No. 2.

Mr. GAINES. And besides that, we did not pass on the question to which the gentleman has referred at all, but settled the case on another point. Since that case has been determined by the House the supreme court of the State of New York held the law allowing the use of these machines to be unconstitutional.

Mr. SULZER. That is right.

Mr. GAINES. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not want to appear at all obnoxious or disagreeable in a matter of this kind. But I do not think that we have time to-day to give consideration to a question so important as this is. I say candidly and frankly to the gentleman that this question is one that will and should require considerable time for discussion in the House, in my judgment.

Mr. SHAFROTH. As the matter is left optional with the States, I do not see what possible objection there can be to the request. What harm can possibly result from it? There is nothing contained in the bill that imposes the obligation of the use of these machines upon the States.

Mr. GAINES (continuing). And further, Mr. Speaker, as far as I have investigated the matter, I do not believe that any State, outside of New York, has adopted the use of these machines, and there it has been declared unconstitutional. The committee did not pass on the question of the propriety of the use of these machines under the statute, but found in favor of the contestee on other grounds.

Mr. SULZER. And let me state, in addition, that the State of New York has not adopted a voting machine.

Mr. GAINES. I regret exceedingly that I will have to object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CORLISS. Then, Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order, unless the special order is called for, will be the further consideration of this bill, which has just been read by the Clerk.

Mr. CORLISS. I want members to understand that the only change made by this bill is this: The present law provides that in the election of members of Congress the ballot must be either written or printed. The proposed amendment simply adds the words "or machine lawfully adopted by a State." In Massachusetts the use of voting machines has been authorized, and in the last election in the city of Boston machines were about to be used, having been authorized by the State and city, but in consequence of this Federal statute the project was discontinued. In several States in this country, particularly in New York, the machine has been successfully used. It has been used in one precinct in my city. This law recognizes no particular machine, but simply permits the use of a machine instead of a printed or written ballot, if the State authorizes its use.

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan has the floor, unless the parliamentary inquiry relates to his speaking.

Mr. CORLISS. The present Federal statute interfered with the use of machines in the election in the city of Boston, and compelled that city to dispense with the use of a machine that had been adopted. I can see no harm and much good to result from the adoption of this measure. The committee having it under consideration were unanimous in recommending the adoption of this bill. It has passed the Senate. It will jeopardize no interests, and will preserve the rights of the State in controlling the use of the machine. It is optional with the State, and can not be used until the State adopts that method. This does not attempt to say what kind of a machine shall be used. There are five or six States, Massachusetts, New York, Minnesota, Michigan, and, I think, California, as well as other States, which have authorized the use of machines, and in municipal, county, and State elections they have been used, but this statute forbids their use in the election of members of Congress. I trust the bill will be passed.

Mr. BARLOW. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CORLISS. I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. BARLOW] five minutes.

Mr. BARLOW. I hope there will be no objection to this bill. It simply authorizes the States to use voting machines if they wish to do so. In the State of California we have appointed a commission, and they have investigated the machine and reported to the legislature, and their report is now under consideration. They are anxious that this bill shall be passed, so that the question can not be raised as to the legality of a Congressional election where machines are used.

Mr. McRAE. Why should we authorize the States? Can not the States control their own elections and say how the ballots shall be cast?

Mr. BARLOW. That question was considered in the committee, and they thought the passage of this bill could do no harm.

Mr. GAINES. Did the committee have the opinion of the supreme court of New York upon this question?

The SPEAKER. To whom does the gentleman from California yield?

Mr. BARLOW. One at a time; any of them. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GAINES. Did the committee have the opinion of the supreme court of New York on this question before them?

Mr. BARLOW. I do not believe that question was raised in the committee.

Mr. GAINES. You ignored the opinion of the supreme court of New York entirely, did you?

Mr. BARLOW. I believe it was raised by one of the members of the committee from New York.

Mr. GAINES. You are not familiar with the opinion, are you?

Mr. BARLOW. No, sir.

Mr. GAINES. Well, that machine and the manner in which it worked was held by the court to be unconstitutional.

Mr. BARLOW. I do not see how there can be any objection to letting the States adopt the system that they want, and in order to do this we must pass this bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. If this bill becomes a law, it becomes somewhat important to control the machines, does it not?

Mr. BARLOW. This bill does not touch that question at all.

Mr. CORLISS. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH].

Mr. SHAFROTH. I hope there will be no objection on this side of the House to the passage of this measure. As the law stands at the present time, I understand that votes cast for a Representative in Congress can not be counted unless they are by printed or written ballots. This bill simply provides that the States may be permitted to use machines, or any machine that they desire, for casting votes in Congressional elections.

Mr. GAINES. Have not the States already the right to prepare the ballots?

Mr. SHAFROTH. There is a statute of the United States that does not authorize this mode.

Mr. GAINES. Have not the States the right and power to prepare their ballots?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Certainly.

Mr. GAINES. Then what right have Congress to say that a machine shall be used, if the State has the sovereign control over the question?

Mr. SHAFROTH. What harm can it do to pass this bill?

Mr. GAINES. The State already has the power.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I am not sure, as a matter of fact, that it has the power.

Mr. GAINES. Is it your judgment the State has not the power?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not care whether my opinion is one way or the other. There is respectable authority that holds that a State has not that power as against the statute of the United States which provides that votes for Representatives must be only by printed or written ballots, and all doubt in the matter ought to be removed. We ought not to have members of Congress voted for by a system under which they may not be entitled to a seat here. This bill simply authorizes the States to adopt a machine of this kind. If the State wants to adopt that system of election, and wants to go to that expense, it ought to have that privilege.

Mr. GAINES. You want to impose a burden on the State for these machines.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I never heard of this bill until it was called up. I do not care anything about the machines. I do not know the name of any of the machines or who owns them. It seems to me that this law, which only authorizes the State to adopt a system of balloting it may desire, is an absolutely safe measure.

Mr. GAINES. Have not the States already that power?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Under the statutes of the United States the votes for Representatives can not be counted when recorded by a machine.

Mr. GAINES. If you are not undertaking to compel the States to pay for these machines, why do you want to give them a right that they already have?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It is a question as to whether they have the right.

Mr. GAINES. The State——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee is out of order.

Mr. LACEY. I wish to ask the gentleman from Colorado a question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Colorado yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do.

Mr. LACEY. Have you any machines in Colorado?

Mr. SHAFROTH. No.

Mr. CORLISS. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important matter, sprung suddenly upon the House. I had a promise from a member that an objection should have been made, or I certainly should have objected, because I know no more about the bill than I can learn here.

Mr. SULZER. Objection was made.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York is not in order.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I am not complaining. Now, it is stated a State may provide by law for using these machines in certain localities. It would certainly occur, I think, on every hand that to force by law voting by a machine in the rural districts of the country would be absurd; yet, under a provision of the constitution of Ohio, the law can not be put into one precinct unless it is put into every voting precinct in the State. The provision of the constitution is that the laws shall be uniform in their operation throughout the State. That is the great fundamental law of Ohio and of many other States in the Union. So you are limited by the very terms of the constitutional provision to either exclude the balloting machine from the State or else give it to every voting place in the State.

Mr. SIMPSON. Will this law compel the State of Ohio to adopt that machine?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I do not so understand it.

Mr. SIMPSON. It leaves every State free to adopt this system if they want to.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I believe there is machine politics enough in this country now without any more of it.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman from Ohio, I want to state that in the Fifty-fourth Congress a contest was made in consequence of the use of a machine in the State of New York, but fortunately the written and printed ballots cast gave the member a majority as well as the ballots that were cast by the machine, and that question did not affect his right to a seat in this House. Now, the gentleman from Tennessee says that the States ought to control the law of Congress. The law of our nation provides how members of this House shall be elected——

Mr. GAINES. Mr. Speaker, I can not hear what the gentleman says.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee makes the point of order that the House is not in order. Gentlemen will cease conversation.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to emphasize the difference between the present statute and this amendment. The present statute provides how members of this House shall be elected. That controls the State so far as an election for Congress is concerned. The States desire to elect their officers in a different way, and I and the committee, recognizing the right of a State to dictate in an election of their Representatives here, have recommended this law, in order that a State may elect members to this House by the same method as they elect their governor or any other officer of the State——

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. CORLISS (continuing). The State to adopt this at its option.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Michigan yield to the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. CORLISS. I do.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. If the section of the Revised Statutes is repealed, will not the States have authority to regulate their own elections?

Mr. CORLISS. I for one am not prepared to repeal national legislation in reference to the election of Congressmen; and that question is not here. The question is whether we will permit States to elect members of Congress as they elect their officers in the States.

Mr. GAINES. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. CORLISS. No; I can not yield to the gentleman from Tennessee. He has occupied——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan declines to yield.

Mr. CORLISS. He has occupied more time in the consideration of this measure than I have, or any other member of this House, and I think the House has got tired of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GAINES. I do not doubt the gentleman is tired of hearing the truth.

Mr. CORLISS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan demands the previous question.

The question was taken on ordering the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in doubt.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 117, noes 33.

So the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the bill to a third reading.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. SULZER. Division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 97, noes 44.

So the bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. GAINES. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The question was taken on ordering the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Twenty-four gentlemen have arisen—not a sufficient number; the yeas and nays are refused, and the bill is passed.

On motion of Mr. CORLISS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. CORLISS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House bill lie on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the House bill will lie on the table.

WAR REVENUE ACT.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the present consideration of H. Res. 358, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act passed June 13, 1898, entitled "An act to provide ways and means to meet war expenditures, and for other purposes," be amended by adding to the end of Schedule A, section 25, the following: "Whenever any bond or note shall be secured by a mortgage, but one stamp shall be required to be placed upon such papers: Provided, That the stamp duty placed thereon shall be the highest rate required for said instruments, or either of them."

The SPEAKER. This requires unanimous consent.

Mr. HOPKINS. Then I ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. SWANSON. I object to that and call for the regular order.

Mr. HOPKINS. This will take but a moment.

Mr. SWANSON. I must object, and I call for the special order.

Mr. HOPKINS. Very well, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the resolution.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the special order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the revenue bills were not excepted out of the regular order; only appropriation bills.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, by the action of the House on yesterday in Committee of the Whole certain bills with amendments were reported to the House with a favorable recommendation. I am informed by the clerks at the desk that those bills have been arranged with reference to a certain classification, and in order to save the clerks any inconvenience, I desire to take the bills up in the order in which they appear in the RECORD, page 1588, and I ask that House bill 10959, with the amendment recommended by the Committee of the Whole, be now placed upon its passage, and I ask for the previous question upon the bill and amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I reserve the point of order.

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to ask the gentleman whether it is proposed to first consider the bills reported from the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. MERCER. Yes.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is not the gentleman's purpose to offer a motion that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the other bills for public buildings on the Calendar?

Mr. MERCER. It is; just as soon as we finish the consideration and the passage of these bills reported to the House by the Committee of the Whole yesterday.

Mr. DOCKERY. All of them?

Mr. MERCER. Yes.

Mr. RICHARDSON. That will take the remainder of the day.

Mr. MERCER. It will not take the remainder of the day unless the gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from Tennessee take up too much time talking.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska moves for the previous question on the bill and amendments.

Mr. RICHARDSON. A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The point of order I make is that under the special order reported these two days should be devoted to the consideration of these bills, and I take it for granted that a regular motion would be to go into Committee of the Whole to consider the bills.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear any argument upon that.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have no argument to make. I am addressing myself to the general consideration for the special order.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Nebraska, the chairman of the committee, a question. The special order provides that we shall consider such bills as are indicated by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and I would like to ask the gentleman whether that committee has indicated to him that it desires the passage of these bills at this time. I understand it is controlled by the wishes of the majority of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and consequently the procedure had under the special order should be according to the wishes of a majority of that committee.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that he will accept the action of the chairman as the action of the committee.

Mr. SWANSON. I simply ask the chairman that question whether the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has indicated the method of procedure this morning.

Mr. QUIGG. Mr. Speaker, I suppose this discussion is by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. QUIGG. I object.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HENDERSON. If the House should go into Committee of the Whole now, and continue in session until half past 5, and then recommend certain bills to the House, under the rule will the bills so recommended be unfinished or privileged, afterwards to be considered in the House?

The SPEAKER. That has not been the custom of the House.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Speaker, if this motion should be adopted, it would practically prevent the remainder of the bills being considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. QUIGG. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the remark of the gentleman from Missouri is not a parliamentary inquiry and hardly an observation to be made. The question is, Will the House order the previous question?

Mr. PAYNE. The title of this bill has not been read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10009) for the erection of a public building in the city of Blair, Nebr.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I make the point of order that the bill has not been read. We are entitled to hear the bill.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman say that after a bill has been reported by the Committee of the Whole it must be read?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I think so, sir.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman will furnish an authority to the Chair——

Mr. RICHARDSON. If the reading of the bill is demanded in the House, I understand it should be read.

The SPEAKER. It would be read, if demanded, after being ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I understand that before the House is ever called upon to vote on any paper the paper must be read, if the reading is demanded.

The SPEAKER. But this bill has been twice read.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Not in the House. It has never been read in the House.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman can produce any authority in support of his position, the Chair will sustain his point; if the gentleman can not produce any such authority, the Chair will adhere to his own opinion.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The authority I adduce, Mr. Speaker, is the rule providing that before the House can be called upon to vote upon any proposition it must be read to the House. This bill has not been read to the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has seen so many appropriation bills passed without reading, after having been reported from the Committee of the Whole House, that the Chair thinks he should recognize at once the custom of the House in this regard.

Mr. RICHARDSON. The reading in such cases is waived by unanimous consent. We scarcely ever read an appropriation bill even the first time.

The SPEAKER. This is not a question of unanimous consent.

Mr. COOPER of Texas. Would it be in order, Mr. Speaker, to ask unanimous consent that all bills reported from the Committee of the Whole yesterday and now on the Calendar may be considered in bulk and passed?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it would not be in order.

Mr. DOCKERY addressed the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Missouri on the point of order.

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not desire to discuss the point of order raised by the gentleman from Tennessee, but merely to ask whether there are any amendments reported to this bill.

The SPEAKER. There is an amendment. The question is on ordering the previous question on the bill and amendment.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I understand it is the intention of certain members to filibuster anyway; but at the request of a large number of gentlemen on the floor, I withdraw the motion I have made, and instead I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of public-building bills as reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. [Applause.] And I give notice, Mr. Speaker, that I will ask the committee to rise at 4 o'clock.

Several MEMBERS. Oh, no!

Mr. MERCER. Yes, I will.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska moves that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the consideration of bills under the special order.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, Mr. SHERMAN in the chair.

WASHINGTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering bills reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. MERCER. I call up House bill 11712.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I understood that the chairman would call up bills in the order in which they appear on the record.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill (H. R. 11712) to provide a site for a building for the Washington Public Library was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That authority is hereby conferred upon a commission, to consist of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds, and the president of the board of trustees of the Washington Public Library, to cause to be erected upon Mount Vernon square, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, a building for the use of the Washington Public Library, with funds to be contributed by Andrew Carnegie: Provided, That such building shall be commenced within twelve months and completed within two years from the passage of this act: And provided further, That no liability shall be incurred by the United States or the District of Columbia for the cost of the erection of said building.

SEC. 2. That said commission shall invite 10 architects or firms of architects, of conspicuous ability and experience, to submit competitive designs for the said building, upon a carefully drawn programme, said competition to be adjudged by said commission acting with two other persons to be selected by the competing architects. The architect, or firm of architects, whose design shall thus be adjudged most acceptable shall be employed as architect of the building, to act under the direction of the office of construction hereinafter provided for, and to furnish all designs and drawings required for the construction of the building and personal services requisite for their artistic execution. Said architect shall receive as full compensation for the said designs, drawings, and personal services the sum of 3 per cent of the total cost of said building, to be paid from time to time as the work progresses; and all designs and drawings furnished by him for the said building shall become the property of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. That the construction of said building shall be placed in charge of an officer of the Government especially qualified for the duty, to be appointed by the aforesaid commission, who shall receive for his additional services an increase of 40 per cent in his present salary, to be paid out of the appropriations made for the said building, and he shall disburse the funds under rules to be prescribed by the said commission, make all contracts, and employ all necessary personal services not herein otherwise provided for.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 12, page 1, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "three."

In line 21, page 2, strike out the word "in" and insert in lieu thereof the word "of."

In line 22, page 2, strike out the words "the appropriation made for the said building" and substitute therefor the words "any available funds."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11712) providing for a site for the Washington Public Library, have considered the same and report:

Washington City until recently has been without a public library. Mr. Andrew Carnegie, in response to an application made on behalf of the trustees of the Washington Public Library, agreed to give $250,000 for the erection of a suitable building, provided Congress would furnish a site. Much discussion has been had in the public press and by individuals regarding the selection of a proper location. The trustees of the library have appeared before the committee and stated that the location proposed in this bill is a most excellent one for the purpose named. It seems to be the most suitable public ground available for library purposes. Mount Vernon Square, although used for some time past as a public park or reservation, seems to be free from the rule to which Congress has heretofore adhered, that public parks shall be exempt from occupancy by the erection of buildings.

Your committee have visited this site personally and are of the opinion that such a library building as is contemplated to be located in the center of this square would improve the appearance of the same. A large majority of the residents on the borders of the square and on the streets and avenues radiating from it are heartily in favor of the erection of the library building. Since Mr. Carnegie's offer was made thousands of volumes have been donated for its use, not only by local residents but by distinguished people from various sections of the Union. It is confidently expected that as soon as space is furnished the accumulation of books will be very rapid. Present accommodations of the library are already entirely inadequate for the demands upon it. The selection of the site named involves no appropriation from the public Treasury.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. I have not kept close watch on the proceedings in this regard, but it seems that a bill has already passed on this subject. Has not the Senate passed such a bill?

Mr. MERCER. No; such a bill is pending, but it has not yet been passed.

Mr. DOCKERY. This is an exceedingly important measure, and I am not prepared to say that this bill is not an entirely wise one. Before we adjourn on the 4th of March Congress should make some provision for the purpose of utilizing this donation for the city, and I hope, therefore, the gentleman will make a full statement of this measure.

Mr. MERCER. I desire to make such a statement, Mr. Chairman, and took the floor for that purpose.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman will do so.

Mr. MERCER. If the committee will give me its attention for a few moments I will state all the facts in my possession in relation to this proposition.

As you know from the daily papers, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, of Pittsburg, has stated to the library trustees of the city of Washington, and to the citizens generally, that if Congress will provide a site for the purpose, he will construct at his own expense a library building on such site, to cost not less than $250,000. Mr. B. H. Warner, one of the trustees of the library here, says that it is possible that this sum may be raised even to $500,000.

The proposition now before the committee was reported favorably by the District Committee in the Senate and reported to the Senate, and, after being argued in that body for one day, still remains unacted upon.

As to the site suggested, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia recommend the use of Mount Vernon Square for this purpose. The library people recommend the selection, nearly all of the citizens of Washington recommend and indorse the selection of this site, and the committee, after a personal inspection, is of opinion that it is the very best in the city of Washington available for the purpose of building such a library as Mr. Andrew Carnegie contemplates erecting.

Gentlemen will notice by the diagram that I hold in my hand that the inside square of Mount Vernon, within the paving lines, contains 112,500 square feet, and the library building, at a maximum, will not exhaust of that area over about 37,500 square feet. So that if the erection of the building is permitted at that point it will not interfere with the parking on either side.

This square does not come under the head of the ordinary park reservations in the city. It is made up from the intersection of various streets which converge at that point, namely, K street, between Seventh and Ninth, New York avenue, and Massachusetts avenue, all of these streets intersecting at that point, and have been turned into a park, constituting what is known as Mount Vernon Square.

At one time it was a market place. Those persons who were familiar with Washington some years ago will remember that Mr. Shepherd, famous then and since for public improvements in the city of Washington, in the nighttime tore down the market buildings, razed them—every house—to the ground, and made a vacant space of the locality where the market formerly stood.

It may be said also in this connection that more street railways converge at this point than at any other point in the city of Washington. It is, therefore, convenient of access from all parts of the city. It is centrally located, in an almost exclusively residence portion of the city. There are some business houses on Seventh street and Ninth street, but at this point where the building is proposed to be erected it is almost entirely surrounded by residences.

The construction of the library building in the center of this square will give magnificent light on all sides of the building, and will not at all injure the reservation as a public park, because it only occupies a few thousand square feet in the center, so that the park will remain as before, all around it.

In addition to that, there is no real-estate speculation in a proposition of this kind, although there may be in the opposition to it.

And I desire to say, Mr. Chairman, that when the sentiment of the people of Washington can harmonize so completely on a proposition of this kind, it would seem to demand favorable consideration at the hands of Congress. This building is something that the people of the city of Washington need and should have had many years ago—I mean an available city library. It is a shame and a disgrace that the capital of the nation is not in possession of a public library building at this time. Every city in the United States, even of one-half the population of the city of Washington, is blessed with such a structure; and there is no reason why this city should not share in the enjoyment of that privilege, especially as it does not cost the Government a cent, coming as this does as a gift from a public-spirited citizen.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Let me ask the gentleman if the people at large are expected to pay their proportion of this expense?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir; nobody will be required to pay a cent. It is to be paid for out of a contribution made by Mr. Carnegie.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. And the site is to be paid for by the citizens of Washington?

Mr. MERCER. The property belongs to the Government. There is a proviso of law already controlling the existing city library here, a small structure where some books are packed away in an old building, which is inconvenient and unsuitable in every respect.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. And the expenses are not to be paid by the public Treasury?

Mr. MERCER. No, sir; by the people here.

I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY].

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman, of course, desires to be accurate. The Washington Public Library is supported out of the joint revenues of the people of the United States and the District of Columbia.

Mr. MERCER. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I misunderstood. I was told that it was maintained exclusively out of the revenues of the District of Columbia. I will say to the gentleman from Indiana that the expense of this library, year by year, is paid from the revenues of the United States and the District of Columbia jointly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana. Each one pays half.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am in full sympathy with the Carnegie proposition, as I have understood it. This contemplates, as I understand, the acceptance of Mr. Carnegie's gift for the establishment of a library here.

Mr. MERCER. Yes.

Mr. DOCKERY. Acting as a board of aldermen for the city, we should make the necessary provision to utilize that gift, but I do not sympathize with the criticism of the gentleman when he says that this District is without the privileges of a library.

Mr. MERCER. I meant a library which was accessible to the public.

Mr. DOCKERY. We not only have the great National Library, but five or six of the Departments have libraries. A large part of this population are employed in the Government service, and there are now, as I recall it, about 1,000,000 volumes in the different Departments of the Government, which are available and accessible to the employees of the Government. But aside from that, I am very anxious to take the necessary steps to secure for the people of this splendid capital city the donation that is proposed to be made by Mr. Andrew Carnegie. I have not had an opportunity to examine carefully the provisions of this bill, and know nothing personally of the desirability of the proposed site, but I suppose that the bill has been properly guarded and the site fairly well selected. Unless something to the contrary is shown, I shall favor the bill.

Mr. MERCER. I will say that the amendments submitted by the committee were recommended by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia after conference with the trustees. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the committee amendments.

Mr. MUDD. Will the gentleman yield to me for one minute?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. MUDD. I rose for the purpose of offering an amendment to this bill. My amendment contemplated the selection of a site on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, instead of the site proposed in the bill; but as the chairman and other members of the committee are unanimously of the opinion that any change in the site at this time will unduly delay and possibly jeopardize the reaching of an agreement upon the question of a site, I, of course, not wishing to place any impediment in the way of an early agreement by which we may avail ourselves of the munificent donation of Mr. Carnegie, will refrain from offering an amendment.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING, JOPLIN, MO.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. BANKHEAD. The next bill in order is the only bill reported from the State of Alabama. In my anxiety to oblige gentlemen who had bills in which they were very much interested I, as a member of the committee, consented that this bill should take a low place on the Calendar. At the same time, I had promised my friend from Missouri [Mr. BENTON] that I would endeavor to secure a favorable place on the Calendar for a bill for a public building at Joplin, Mo. I was unable to do that at the time, but I want to make amends now by asking the chairman of the committee to substitute the Joplin bill for the Alabama bill, and I will take his place on the Calendar.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (S. 244) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joplin, in the State of Missouri.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Joplin and State of Missouri, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in the said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendations thereon, and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as herein before provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Missouri shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein. The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever the same appears in the bill.

In line 12, page 1, strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty," so that the cost of site and building will be limited to $50,000.

On page 3 strike out all after the word "expenses," in line 10, up to and including the word "therein," in line 18.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MADDOX. How much time?

Mr. MERCER. I thought the gentleman desired to ask a question.

Mr. MADDOX. I want about fifteen minutes, and you will save time by allowing me that much.

Mr. MERCER. Would not ten minutes do the gentleman?

Mr. MADDOX. Possibly I may conclude what I have to say in ten minutes.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] ten minutes.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Chairman, as I said yesterday, these bills were reported night before last and appeared in yesterday morning's Journal. It was impossible then to investigate these bills and see whether there was real merit in them or not. The chairman of the committee informed us that he had given all these matters very careful consideration; that if he had erred at all it was on account of the economy that they had exercised in the preparation of the bills. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want to call the attention of gentlemen of the House to what I think is of interest to every man in the House, because since last night I have studied this question somewhat.

Now, it seems from yesterday's proceedings that so far as the action of this committee is concerned there is no regularity; there seems to be no rule by which this committee has acted. You remember one reason that our chairman gave us why a bill should pass was that a member of the committee had introduced it! Now, it occurs to me that if this committee had a rule, as all other committees have, by which they are controlled, we could understand them better. If these buildings are to be erected on a basis of the receipts of the office, it would seem that every first-class post-office in this country that has no public building, unless there is a Federal court required to be held there, or it is a port of entry, should first have a public building; the second-class offices should have them in the next place. A second-class office should have a public building before a third-class office. Now, it seems to me that is a matter that could be regulated and done with some system. But what has been done? I want to call your attention to a few facts that probably you do not know.

I have before me the Postal Guide of 1899, issued within the last month. It will be understood that the salary of a postmaster is determined by the amount of gross receipts of the office; also the class to which it belongs. Up to a certain point they are third-class offices; up to another point they are second-class; beyond that they are first-class offices. Now, what is the condition of affairs? I find upon examination we have 170 first-class offices in the United States. We have 134 public buildings in those cities, and we have 48 first-class offices that have no public building at all. Now, next we have 785 second-class post-offices. Out of that 785 second-class post-offices 97 have public buildings; there are 698 that have no public buildings. Of 3,017 third-class post-offices 26 have public buildings, leaving 2,991 without any public building.

Now, gentlemen, the first building that was to be called up in this logrolling scheme to put these bills through was Blair, Nebr. It pays its postmaster $1,700, and is a third-class office. Now, in fixing the salary for a first-class office they have to pay over $40,000 in annual receipts before they can rank as first class. I will ask the gentleman from California if I am not correct?

Mr. LOUD. Forty thousand dollars.

Mr. MADDOX. Now, here are 43 first-class offices that are not provided for, and yet Carrollton, Ky., with a salary of $1,400, and Bluefield, W. Va., where the salary is $2,000, are provided with public buildings among these bills, when there are so many of these first-class offices that pay $40,000 in receipts that have none.

Mr. MERCER. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly.

Mr. MERCER. Your residence is Rome, Ga.?

Mr. MADDOX. That is right. They have a public building, and I did not have the honor of securing the appropriation.

Mr. MERCER. You are not sorry about it?

Mr. MADDOX. I am not.

Mr. MERCER. No!

Mr. MADDOX. I want to say another thing. We have 17,000 people there now.

Mr. MERCER. You only had 6,000 when you got the public building.

Mr. MADDOX. We have them now, and we had them before that building was complete, and the income of that office has long since paid for it. I am trying to give you the facts. And they have already reported a bill favorably for Carrollton, that pays $1,400 to its postmaster.

Now, I want to know what my friends from Kentucky will have to say to their constituents when they go back home and say they did not get an appropriation for a public building. There are 28 offices in the State of Kentucky that pay from $1,000 to $1,200 more than Carrollton, Ky., pays its postmaster. You Kentuckians, what are you going to say to your constituents when you go back home and say you could not get a public building, when you put far more into the Treasury than Carrollton? Twenty-eight offices alone in that State pay more than Carrollton. In my own State there are 45 offices that pay from one hundred to a thousand dollars more. In my own Congressional district there are three cities that pay more than Blair or Carrollton. What am I to say to them?

Mr. HANDY. If the gentleman will pardon me a suggestion, I have found a reason why Bluefield should have a public building that I did not know yesterday. The building is located in West Virginia in the county of Mercer [laughter], and I believe that the building ought to be there on account of that city being in Mercer County.

Mr. LOUD. I want to say the gentleman from Georgia has not got offices enough in Kentucky. There are 38 out of a total of 60.

Mr. MADDOX. I am informed there are 38. I ran over this matter hurriedly. Now, the question is, gentlemen of the House, How is it that a man can go to this committee—I do not understand that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BERRY] is a member of the committee—how is it that he can go down to that committee with that little town and get an appropriation for a public building when here are 43 first-class post-offices that are overlooked in this country?

Mr. POWERS. He told them about the distilleries. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. I am informed that he told them about the distilleries. Every member of this House is interested in this transaction. If it is the business of men to come here simply because they are popular and have got a pull, and that they can work in with the Committee on Public Buildings and have money appropriated for little towns, I want to know it. If that is the way to do it, we will know how to represent our people.

Mr. LOUD. Gentlemen urge this as a matter of economy to build a public building in places of this size. Under the law the Department is prohibited from paying more than $400 a year for rent of a third-class office.

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly; and here we are making appropriation without any system, without any method, simply gathering influence enough to rush these measures through this House.

Mr. MOODY. I would like to ask the gentleman a question, if he will yield.

Mr. MADDOX. Certainly.

Mr. MOODY. Has the gentleman investigated these bills sufficiently to inform the House how many are for first-class post-offices, how many for second-class post-offices, and how many for third-class post-offices?

Mr. GROSVENOR. And how many for fourth-class offices?

Mr. MADDOX. Of those bills now pending?

Mr. MOODY. Yes.

Mr. MADDOX. I am sorry to say I have not gone through them, but there are a large number that are not for first-class offices.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. MADDOX. I would like to have a few minutes more.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask that the gentleman's time be extended five minutes.

Mr. MERCER. I will yield five minutes more to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. MOODY. I trust the gentleman from Georgia will put in his remarks something that will show the classification of these buildings in respect of whether they are first, second, third, or fourth class offices.

Mr. MADDOX. I will endeavor to do that. I have a list of the offices here, the first-class offices, which have no public buildings at present. Now, I say to gentlemen that of all the times in the world when this Congress ought not to appropriate money for public buildings, this is the time. There is no doubt about that.

I have never captiously objected to any meritorious bill in this House; but how is it, when we are borrowing money, issuing bonds, when we have got a stamp on every contract in the country—and there is no effort being made to repeal these direct-tax laws, and it is not at all probable that they will be in the near future—how is it that gentlemen can justify themselves in coming in here with a log-rolling scheme and propose to give ten or twelve million dollars, no knowing how much it will eventually cost, for these public buildings, when an enormous deficiency is staring us in the face in spite of the sale of bonds and the highest tax rate the country ever knew?

I am astonished at another thing. The great watchdog of the Treasury on the other side of the House, who has been sitting on the money bags and guarding them with such vigilance—we have not heard a word from him to stop this business.

Mr. LLOYD. He is in Joliet. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. It is said he has got a slice of the pork, and he is horned off. I noticed another thing yesterday, but I do not know why the gentleman did it. After the committee had under consideration and reported favorably three bills for the State of New York, then the leader on that side came walking into the Hall and proposed to stop these appropriations. [Laughter.] Now, that was a little singular, that he should have caught on to the business just at that time. [Laughter.] After New York had got out of it all she wanted, then it ought to be stopped right there.

Now, I have to say that if all members were in their seats in this House they would pick out the meritorious bills here presented, and those they would pass and the others they would kill. That is what I think they would do, and I have confidence enough in the members of the House that if they understood the situation as it is they would do that; and I do hope and trust that enough of them will be here when it comes to the passage of these bills and defeat those that ought not to pass.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, all I desire to say is that Rome, Ga., the home of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX], had $50,000 appropriated when it had a little over 6,000 population and was a second-class post-office. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. What reply is that to the argument I have made? I have stated that when that building was erected we had 17,000 people.

Mr. MERCER. I did not know whether the gentleman from Georgia was angry because of the comparison or on account of the editorial in this morning's Post.

Mr. HANDY. Let me suggest to the gentleman from Georgia that any argument he may make against these bills is answered by pointing to the public building at Rome, just as any argument that I made yesterday was answered by pointing to the public building at Dover, Del. It all depends on where the gentleman lives who makes the objection. [Laughter.]

Mr. MADDOX. I submit some statements that I think will throw some light on the question. Exhibit A shows the rules for classifying the offices and determining the salary. Exhibit B shows the bills favorably considered and reported to the House and the amount of the appropriations proposed. Exhibit C shows the amount of money proposed, by States. Exhibit D shows the amounts proposed to be appropriated by some of the bills and the amounts previously appropriated for the same cities or towns.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman from Delaware is uneasy again this morning, I see.

Mr. HANDY. "The gentleman from Delaware" is on the rampage again this morning.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BENTON].

Mr. BENTON. Mr. Chairman, in view of the remarks made a few moments ago by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX], I feel that I ought to make a short statement of the facts as to this bill. It may be true, as I have been told, that it is the intention of the powers to permit but few bills to pass. The town of Joplin, Mo., was, twenty-five years ago, merely a wide place in the road. In 1890 it had a population of 10,000. According to the vote there last fall, which was about 4,400, there are 22,000 people in the city. There are four great trunk lines of railway running through this town—the Missouri Pacific, the St. Louis and San Francisco, the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham, and the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf. The town is the center of the great zinc-producing part of the country. Last year there was marketed from that place $7,000,000 worth of zinc and lead. The business of that town last year was $15,400,000.

The Government is now paying for a post-office there $800 rent, and for offices of United States commissioner, United States marshal, and United States revenue collector $700, making the rent paid there by the Government $1,500 a year.

The increase of the town in population and business has arisen from the discovery of immense deposits of zinc in that locality. Within a radius of 15 miles from the town there is a population of 100,000. The business of the post-office is a pretty fair indication of the growth of the place. Three years ago the post-office business was $11,200; in 1897 it was $13,046, and for the fiscal year ending last June, as I was informed yesterday by a telegram from Assistant Postmaster Heath, the post-office business was $17,313. This is one of the few places in the West where we have prosperous times. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, a moment ago the gentleman from Georgia said that "the gentleman from New York"—referring to myself—had waited until after the passage of three bills giving public buildings to the State of New York, and had then made objection to a bill authorizing a public building in the State of Kentucky. The fact is that neither "the gentleman from New York" nor his district is any more interested in any of those bills passed for the State of New York than is the gentleman from Georgia or his district. The passage of any of those bills makes no difference to the people of my district. So that what the gentleman from Georgia said in that respect was entirely gratuitous. I happened to hear the report read in regard to the Kentucky bill, which prompted the remarks I made; and I have no apology for making them. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The question being taken, the amendments reported by the committee were agreed to; and then, on motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was laid aside to be favorably reported.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT LAWRENCE, MASS.

Mr. MERCER. I call up House bill 524.

The bill (H. R. 524) to erect a public building at Lawrence, Mass., was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office and for other Government uses at Lawrence, Mass. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $200,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodation for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $200,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Massachusetts shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 11 and 20 strike out "two" and insert in lieu thereof "one;" so that limit of cost of site and building shall be $100,000.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 24.

Mr. MADDOX. I should like to have the report read.

Mr. MERCER. Certainly; let the report be read.

Mr. LLOYD. I suggest that in these cases instead of having the report read the Representative from the locality where the building is to be erected should make a statement of the facts of the case. That would save a great deal of time.

Mr. MERCER. The suggestion is a very good one. I am willing to do anything to accommodate the House and save time. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KNOX].

Mr. KNOX. Mr. Chairman, I am very glad indeed to have an opportunity of making a statement here instead of having this case rest entirely upon the report. A favorable report for a post-office building in Lawrence, Mass., was made as early as the Fifty-first Congress, and the report now before us is substantially the same as that report, made as long ago as 1890. Sir, if there is a meritorious bill among all these public-building bills which have been reported, I am perfectly willing to submit this bill as such. Lawrence is to-day a city of 60,000 people. We have the same post-office building there that we had thirty-five years ago. Our city is one of the largest manufacturing cities not only in Massachusetts, but in the United States. It is the sixth city in size in our Commonwealth. Haverhill, on the one side of it, with considerably less population than our city, has a public building, and Lowell, on the other side of us, has also a public building. Since 1847, when our city was founded, the population has grown to 60,000.

I wish I could take the time to explain to the committee the condition of the present post-office building. It is in the rear part of an old building, and has no front entrance, and is not in any respect large enough to accommodate the business. It has been condemned by every inspector who was ever there; and the last time the lease was renewed the inspector went around through the city and endeavored to find some more commodious quarters for the office.

And a word now in answer to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX]. The receipts of the post-office there are over $50,000 a year, and it is a first-class office.

Mr. MADDOX. I have it here on the list. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MERCER. I ask a vote on the amendments.

The question being taken on the amendments of the committee, they were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, STREATOR, ILL.

Mr. MERCER. I call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 431) to provide for the purchase of the site and the erection of a public building thereon at Streator, in the State of Illinois.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Streator and State of Illinois, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusions in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

In line 7 strike out "elevators."

In line 13 strike out "one hundred" and insert "fifty;" thus limiting cost of site and building to $50,000.

On page 3 strike out lines 12 to 19, inclusive.

Mr. MERCER. There is an additional amendment which should be included, in line 1, page 2, to strike out the word "elevators." I ask the reading of the report, as it is very brief.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 431) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Streator, Ill., having considered the same, make the following report:

Streator is a city of from 18,000 to 20,000 people; it is only 30 years old; it is a railroad center, having six railroads entering it; it is a mining and manufacturing city; its mines employ from 3,000 to 4,000 men, and its manufacturing institutions about 2,000; about 1,400 people are engaged in manufacturing glass, there being the largest bottle factory at this city to be found in the United States; it is in the midst of a great agricultural section; it is 90 miles from Chicago, in the most populous county in the State of Illinois outside of Cook County (Chicago), and is the largest city in the Eleventh Congressional district of Illinois.

The necessity for a public building at Streator is evident. There is no building in the city suitable for post-office necessities. Property in the city is valuable and rents are high. The city is a very prosperous one and rapidly growing.

The receipts for the year ending June 30, 1896, were $14,483.86.

To furnish reasonable and adequate facilities for the post-office at Streator it is necessary that the Government either contract with a private individual to construct a building for its use there or that the Government build one for itself. For the reasonable convenience of the people and for the proper and orderly transaction of the business of the Government at Streator, as well as from the standpoint of economy, the Government should construct its own building at that point.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 4313) for the erection of a public building in the city of Jamestown.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable, commodious, and substantial building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Jamestown and State of New York, the cost of the site and the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $150,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city for at least fourteen days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for opening the proposals.

The proposals made in response to said public advertisement, at the time named in the advertisement or within ten days subsequent thereto, shall be received, opened, and considered by a commission of three persons, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to forward to the Secretary of the Treasury, within forty days from the date named in the advertisement for opening the proposals, a written report, with the original proposals, maps, etc., and the oaths prescribed by act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, and to definitely state in said report the site selected by them, and their selection of the site shall be final; and each commissioner shall be allowed a compensation for his services of an amount within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, said compensation not to exceed $200 and actual traveling expenses to each commissioner.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 25 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

Strike out, in line 13, the words "one hundred and fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the words "seventy-five," making limit of cost of site and building $75,000.

In like 37 strike out "twenty-five" and insert "forty."

The amendments were considered and agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, STOCKTON, CAL.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 11882) to increase the limit of the cost for the erection of a public building at Stockton, Cal., and making provision for the acquisition of additional land or a new site therefor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount heretofore fixed as the limit of the cost for the erection of a public building by the United States Government in Stockton, Cal., be, and the same is hereby, increased by $81,900, making the aggregate cost thereof $156,900.

SEC. 2. That the officers of the United States Government having charge of the erection of public buildings are authorized and required to be governed by the limitation hereby prescribed in making contracts for the erection of said building: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, an additional piece or parcel of land adjacent to the present site of said building, of such size as may be necessary to provide for the site of said building or the future extension thereof, at a cost not to exceed $10,000; or if, in his judgment, the interests of the Government will be better subserved thereby, in case such adjacent lands can not be procured for a reasonable sum, to exchange the present site for one of suitable size, or to sell the present site and with the proceeds thereof to purchase a suitable site, using, in connection with such exchange or purchase, so much as may be necessary of said sum of $81,900, not to exceed the sum of $10,000, which shall be available for that purpose.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I suggest, in view of the fact that the report accompanying this bill is quite lengthy, that the gentleman from California who introduced the bill be allowed to explain its provisions.

Mr. DE VRIES. Mr. Chairman, the city of Stockton is situated in San Joaquin County, Cal., and has a population of approximately 25,000 people. The Stockton post-office is a second-class office with a free-delivery system. The employees of the office number 15 and the receipts of the office are something over $32,000 per annum.

There is also located at Stockton a United States land office, which will be likewise accommodated by the proposed building. It has been recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury repeatedly to the Appropriations Committee of this House. I will not trespass further upon the time of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. McDOWELL. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. McDOWELL. I have no doubt that the bill now before the House is a meritorious one. I do not rise to speak against it; but I want to say some things concerning some questions that have already arisen this morning and that arose about the bills yesterday. First, I will refer to the RECORD of yesterday. When the bill for Blair, Nebr., was under consideration, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] propounded this question to the gentleman from Nebraska, the chairman of the committee:

Mr. LACEY. I want to ask the gentleman a question.
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Iowa?
Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman.
Mr. LACEY. I should like to ask the gentleman what the population of Blair was as shown by the last census?
Mr. MERCER. About 5,000 now.
Mr. DOCKERY. How many?
Mr. MERCER. About 5,000.
Mr. LACEY. What were the postal receipts?
Mr. MERCER. Fourteen thousand dollars gross.

Now, in examining the Postal Guide, the post-office report for the last fiscal year, and the census reports, I obtain these facts: The population of Blair in 1890 was 2,069. The post-office is a third-class post-office, the salary for the last fiscal year was $1,600, with clerk hire $56.56. The amount paid for rent, fuel, and light for the last fiscal year was $295. The gross receipts, according to the postmaster's report for the last fiscal year, were $5,690.75. It therefore shows that the chairman has been in error to the amount of about $9,000 in the gross receipts.

Mr. LOUD. That is not much.

Mr. McDOWELL. I am not opposed to passing bills here that are meritorious, but it does seem to me that there are several bills in this lot that ought to be cut out.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY] asked a question as to the number of bills for third-class post-offices. Favorable recommendation was given yesterday to four of such bills: Blair, Nebr.; Elizabeth City, N. C.; New Iberia, La., and Carrollton, Ky., all third-class post-offices. Upon an examination of the facts as to the first two, it shows that they are the worst bills in their character. They were placed high up on the list undoubtedly because it was thought they would probably have a better chance to get through. Now, the facts in regard to Elizabeth City, N. C.——

Mr. LOUD. Before the gentleman passes over the case of Blair, of course, he wants to be absolutely accurate. The facts are bad enough. The receipts of the post-office called Blair were $5,690.75.

Mr. McDOWELL. That is true, by the 1898 report. The 1898 report for Elizabeth City, N. C., shows that the amount paid for rent, fuel, and light was only $308, and the gross receipts were $6,235.57. I am satisfied that if the members would give careful consideration to these bills recommended for third-class post-offices, they would not pass this House.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FREEPORT, ILL.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 84) to provide for the erection of a public building at Freeport, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other governmental uses at Freeport, Ill. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $100,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site or plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $100,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and for the service of civil process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 11 strike out "one hundred" and insert "seventy-five."
In line 20 make the same amendment.
Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 23.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BARTLETT. I understood yesterday that when these bills were acted upon they were to be considered in the order in which they were reported to the House, as shown on pages 1519 and 1520 of the RECORD. Now, I notice that course is not being pursued this morning. May I ask the gentleman what peculiar merit this bill has that it should be taken out of its order as reported in the RECORD?

Mr. MERCER. We are taking these up in the order in which we think they should be considered.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman stated yesterday that they were going to take them up in the order in which they appeared in the list printed in the RECORD. The gentleman stated that in answer to a question which I put to him. Of course, if there are reasons which are satisfactory to the chairman of the committee and the members of this committee why this bill should have preference over others, I have nothing to say, but it looks to me as though we all ought to take the same chance and have the same opportunity.

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, let me suggest to the gentleman from Georgia that his complaint seems to be somewhat reasonable, inasmuch as it may be true that the report in this case has not been printed. I do not know about that.

Mr BARTLETT. Oh, yes, it has.

Mr. DOCKERY. At 11.30 yesterday morning I applied at the room of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and at that time was unable to secure a single report upon any of the 71 bills reported yesterday, and I noted that this bill, which has been called to my attention, is perhaps the last but one of those reported.

I do not know in whose district the public building is located;

but I do suggest to my good friend from Nebraska, for whom I have the very kindest feelings, that this method of procedure will inevitably, whether justly or unjustly, put the committee under suspicion of favoritism. I know something of the large heart of my distinguished friend from Nebraska, and it does seem to me that these bills ought to come up in the order in which they are reported.

Mr. MERCER. If the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HITT] could be permitted to make some remarks upon this bill the members might better understand its merits.

Mr. DOCKERY. I did not know whose bill it was, but if you are going to favor anybody, I do not know of any gentleman whom I would prefer to favor rather than the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BARTLETT. I had the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I beg your pardon.

Mr. BARTLETT. I yielded to you.

Mr. HITT. May I give you a word of explanation?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska had the floor and yielded to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. MERCER. I yield now to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman from Nebraska yielded to me, and I yielded to the gentleman from Missouri for a moment.

Mr. DOCKERY. I will yield the floor and take my chance of recovering it, because I am not quite through.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the statement of the gentleman from Georgia is correct. The gentleman from Nebraska yielded to the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Georgia yielded to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BARTLETT. He asked me if he could interrupt me.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, when the gentleman from Missouri shall have finished the gentleman from Georgia will retain the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand the gentleman from Illinois desires to make a statement.

Mr. HITT. I will make a brief statement. There are special reasons, I may state, for considering that bill, it being one of the first brought before the committee. It was one of the first introduced in Congress this session, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], former chairman of the committee, had reported it favorably to a previous Congress. It was placed by the chairman first, he advised me some time ago, on the list at a place—I have forgotten the number, but nearer the top—and I called attention to the fact that it had been misplaced by some accident and put near the bottom. He said he could not then replace it where it had been, but would place it as nearly as possible where it had been.

Mr. BARTLETT. Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to withdraw any criticism that I may have made. The gentleman's statement is satisfactory to me.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois is incapable of doing anything that could be properly criticised as favoritism, and I think the members of the committee would not desire to take any such action, and never indicated that they had any such purpose.

Mr. MERCER. I think the gentleman from Missouri never thought of doing it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I know. I merely suggested that members of the committee were possibly in that situation. Yet I have no reason for saying that they are; but gentlemen are familiar with the method of transacting business here, and know that along the line of consideration some bills will not reach the stage of final passage. It is now 2 o'clock.

Mr. MERCER. Time is going.

Mr. DOCKERY. I know it is going, and I want it to go long enough so that the House can impartially consider every bill reported from that committee.

Mr. MERCER. We seem to be considering them very carefully, do we not?

Mr. DOCKERY. I do; but I want to suggest to the gentleman that he realizes from the pressure here and there that a number of the bills can not reach the stage of final passage. He knows that some of the bills of necessity will require a little further consideration in the House, and I shall not hold myself responsible for any——

Mr. LOUD. I would like to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman from Georgia was stating that they should be taken up somewhat in the order of their merit. This is evidently a very meritorious bill, for the receipts were $29,000; and when we take one for Blair, and another for Carrollton, I think it was, where there was a $3,000 office, I think that this bill of merit ought to go into its proper place.

Mr. DOCKERY. I want to apologize as to the bill offered in behalf of Freeport, Ill. My own opinion is, to come down to serious statement, that this bill, in view of the statement of the gentleman from Illinois, should have been advanced very much farther up on the list than it has been.

Mr. MERCER. I now ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. The report has not been read.

Mr. HITT. I will make a short statement.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT TAMPA, FLA.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 414) for the erection of a public building at Tampa, Fla.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site for, and cause to be erected, a suitable building, with proper fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the courts of the United States, post-office, custom-house, and other Government offices, at the city of Tampa, Fla. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed the cost of $300,000, nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $300,000 for site and building: Provided, That no money to be appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site of said building shall be vested in the United States, to be approved by the Attorney-General, and until the State of Florida shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys, around the same.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 12 strike out the word "three" and insert "one."

In line 21 on page 2 strike out the word "three" and insert "one."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, the report is comparatively short and it can be read in a few moments, unless the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] desires to make a statement. I will yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Chairman, the bill provides for a public building for the use of the court-house, the customs department, internal-revenue department, and the post-office in the city of Tampa. Tampa is a port of entry and delivery. It has the United States court—two sessions there each year. It has a custom-house and an internal-revenue department from which something in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 are collected each year and turned into the United States Treasury. It also has a post-office from which forty-odd thousand dollars were collected and turned into the Treasury last year. I am sure no one can find any fault with this b ll on account of the large amount that may be appropriated for its construction. If any error has been committed at all, it has been in making the limit $100,000 instead of $300,000, as originally mentioned in the bill. I can myself see no reason why the bill should not receive a favorable recommendation from the committee.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BRISTOL, TENN.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 2314) to erect a custom-house and post-office building in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to purchase suitable grounds in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable public building for the custom-house, post-office, and United States commissioner's office. The cost of the site and buildings thereon, when completed, shall not be more than $100,000, the plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title for the grounds for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Tennessee shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, except in the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the purposes aforesaid, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site has been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by said Secretary involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $100,000 for the site and building. The site so purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by a space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended in the purchase of said grounds and erection of said building.

With the following amendments recommended by the committee:

In line 4 strike out the word "purchase" and insert in lieu thereof the words "accept as a donation."

heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $150,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city for at least fourteen days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for opening the proposals.

The proposals made in response to said public advertisement, at the time named in the advertisement or within ten days subsequent thereto, shall be received, opened, and considered by a commission of three persons, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to forward to the Secretary of the Treasury, within forty days from the date named in the advertisement for opening the proposals, a written report, with the original proposals, maps, etc., and the oaths prescribed by act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, and to definitely state in said report the site selected by them, and their selection of the site shall be final; and each commissioner shall be allowed a compensation for his services of an amount within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, said compensation not to exceed $20 and actual traveling expenses to each commissioner.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 25 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendments:

Strike out, in line 13, the words "one hundred and fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the words "seventy-five," making limit of cost of site and building $75,000.

In like 37 strike out "twenty-five" and insert "forty."

The amendments were considered and agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, STOCKTON, CAL.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 11882) to increase the limit of the cost for the erection of a public building at Stockton, Cal., and making provision for the acquisition of additional land or a new site therefor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the amount heretofore fixed as the limit of the cost for the erection of a public building by the United States Government in Stockton, Cal., be, and the same is hereby, increased by $81,900, making the aggregate cost thereof $156,900.

SEC. 2. That the officers of the United States Government having charge of the erection of public buildings are authorized and required to be governed by the limitation hereby prescribed in making contracts for the erection of said building: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, an additional piece or parcel of land adjacent to the present site of said building, of such size as may be necessary to provide for the site of said building or the future extension thereof, at a cost not to exceed $10,000; or if, in his judgment, the interests of the Government will be better subserved thereby, in case such adjacent lands can not be procured for a reasonable sum, to exchange the present site for one of suitable size, or to sell the present site and with the proceeds thereof to purchase a suitable site, using, in connection with such exchange or purchase, so much as may be necessary of said sum of $81,900, not to exceed the sum of $10,000, which shall be available for that purpose.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I suggest, in view of the fact that the report accompanying this bill is quite lengthy, that the gentleman from California who introduced the bill be allowed to explain its provisions.

Mr. DE VRIES. Mr. Chairman, the city of Stockton is situated in San Joaquin County, Cal., and has a population of approximately 25,000 people. The Stockton post-office is a second-class office with a free-delivery system. The employees of the office number 15 and the receipts of the office are something over $32,000 per annum.

There is also located at Stockton a United States land office, which will be likewise accommodated by the proposed building. It has been recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury repeatedly to the Appropriations Committee of this House. I will not trespass further upon the time of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. McDOWELL. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. McDOWELL. I have no doubt that the bill now before the House is a meritorious one. I do not rise to speak against it; but I want to say some things concerning some questions that have already arisen this morning and that arose about the bills yesterday. First, I will refer to the RECORD of yesterday. When the bill for Blair, Nebr., was under consideration, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] propounded this question to the gentleman from Nebraska, the chairman of the committee:

Mr. LACEY. I want to ask the gentleman a question.
The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield to the gentleman from Iowa?
Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman.
Mr. LACEY. I should like to ask the gentleman what the population of Blair was as shown by the last census?
Mr. MERCER. About 5,000 now.
Mr. DOCKERY. How many?
Mr. MERCER. About 5,000.
Mr. LACEY. What were the postal receipts?
Mr. MERCER. Fourteen thousand dollars gross.

Now, in examining the Postal Guide, the post-office report for the last fiscal year, and the census reports, I obtain these facts: The population of Blair in 1890 was 2,069. The post-office is a third-class post-office, the salary for the last fiscal year was $1,600, with clerk hire $56.56. The amount paid for rent, fuel, and light for the last fiscal year was $295. The gross receipts, according to the postmaster's report for the last fiscal year, were $5,690.75. It therefore shows that the chairman has been in error to the amount of about $9,000 in the gross receipts.

Mr. LOUD. That is not much.

Mr. McDOWELL. I am not opposed to passing bills here that are meritorious, but it does seem to me that there are several bills in this lot that ought to be cut out.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY] asked a question as to the number of bills for third-class post-offices. Favorable recommendation was given yesterday to four of such bills: Blair, Nebr.; Elizabeth City, N. C.; New Iberia, La., and Carrollton, Ky., all third-class post-offices. Upon an examination of the facts as to the first two, it shows that they are the worst bills in their character. They were placed high up on the list undoubtedly because it was thought they would probably have a better chance to get through. Now, the facts in regard to Elizabeth City, N. C.——

Mr. LOUD. Before the gentleman passes over the case of Blair, of course, he wants to be absolutely accurate. The facts are bad enough. The receipts of the post-office called Blair were $5,690.75.

Mr. McDOWELL. That is true, by the 1898 report. The 1898 report for Elizabeth City, N. C., shows that the amount paid for rent, fuel, and light was only $308, and the gross receipts were $6,235.57. I am satisfied that if the members would give careful consideration to these bills recommended for third-class post-offices, they would not pass this House.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FREEPORT, ILL.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 84) to provide for the erection of a public building at Freeport, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office and other governmental uses at Freeport, Ill. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $100,000; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site or plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $100,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the said State and for the service of civil process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 11 strike out "one hundred" and insert "seventy-five."
In line 20 make the same amendment.
Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 23.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BARTLETT. I understood yesterday that when these bills were acted upon they were to be considered in the order in which they were reported to the House, as shown on pages 1519 and 1520 of the RECORD. Now, I notice that course is not being pursued this morning. May I ask the gentleman what peculiar merit this bill has that it should be taken out of its order as reported in the RECORD?

Mr. MERCER. We are taking these up in the order in which we think they should be considered.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman stated yesterday that they were going to take them up in the order in which they appeared in the list printed in the RECORD. The gentleman stated that in answer to a question which I put to him. Of course, if there are reasons which are satisfactory to the chairman of the committee and the members of this committee why this bill should have preference over others, I have nothing to say, but it looks to me as though we all ought to take the same chance and have the same opportunity.

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, let me suggest to the gentleman from Georgia that his complaint seems to be somewhat reasonable, inasmuch as it may be true that the report in this case has not been printed. I do not know about that.

Mr BARTLETT. Oh, yes, it has.

Mr. DOCKERY. At 11.30 yesterday morning I applied at the room of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and at that time was unable to secure a single report upon any of the 71 bills reported yesterday, and I noted that this bill, which has been called to my attention, is perhaps the last but one of those reported.

I do not know in whose district the public building is located;

but I do suggest to my good friend from Nebraska, for whom I have the very kindest feelings, that this method of procedure will inevitably, whether justly or unjustly, put the committee under suspicion of favoritism. I know something of the large heart of my distinguished friend from Nebraska, and it does seem to me that these bills ought to come up in the order in which they are reported.

Mr. MERCER. If the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HITT] could be permitted to make some remarks upon this bill the members might better understand its merits.

Mr. DOCKERY. I did not know whose bill it was, but if you are going to favor anybody, I do not know of any gentleman whom I would prefer to favor rather than the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BARTLETT. I had the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I beg your pardon.

Mr. BARTLETT. I yielded to you.

Mr. HITT. May I give you a word of explanation?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska had the floor and yielded to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. MERCER. I yield now to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman from Nebraska yielded to me, and I yielded to the gentleman from Missouri for a moment.

Mr. DOCKERY. I will yield the floor and take my chance of recovering it, because I am not quite through.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the statement of the gentleman from Georgia is correct. The gentleman from Nebraska yielded to the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Georgia yielded to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BARTLETT. He asked me if he could interrupt me.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, when the gentleman from Missouri shall have finished the gentleman from Georgia will retain the floor.

Mr. DOCKERY. I understand the gentleman from Illinois desires to make a statement.

Mr. HITT. I will make a brief statement. There are special reasons, I may state, for considering that bill, it being one of the first brought before the committee. It was one of the first introduced in Congress this session, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], former chairman of the committee, had reported it favorably to a previous Congress. It was placed by the chairman first, he advised me some time ago, on the list at a place—I have forgotten the number, but nearer the top—and I called attention to the fact that it had been misplaced by some accident and put near the bottom. He said he could not then replace it where it had been, but would place it as nearly as possible where it had been.

Mr. BARTLETT. Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to withdraw any criticism that I may have made. The gentleman's statement is satisfactory to me.

Mr. DOCKERY. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Illinois is incapable of doing anything that could be properly criticised as favoritism, and I think the members of the committee would not desire to take any such action, and never indicated that they had any such purpose.

Mr. MERCER. I think the gentleman from Missouri never thought of doing it.

Mr. DOCKERY. I know. I merely suggested that members of the committee were possibly in that situation. Yet I have no reason for saying that they are; but gentlemen are familiar with the method of transacting business here, and know that along the line of consideration some bills will not reach the stage of final passage. It is now 2 o'clock.

Mr. MERCER. Time is going.

Mr. DOCKERY. I know it is going, and I want it to go long enough so that the House can impartially consider every bill reported from that committee.

Mr. MERCER. We seem to be considering them very carefully, do we not?

Mr. DOCKERY. I do; but I want to suggest to the gentleman that he realizes from the pressure here and there that a number of the bills can not reach the stage of final passage. He knows that some of the bills of necessity will require a little further consideration in the House, and I shall not hold myself responsible for any——

Mr. LOUD. I would like to make a suggestion to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman from Georgia was stating that they should be taken up somewhat in the order of their merit. This is evidently a very meritorious bill, for the receipts were $29,000; and when we take one for Blair, and another for Carrollton, I think it was, where there was a $3,000 office, I think that this bill of merit ought to go into its proper place.

Mr. DOCKERY. I want to apologize as to the bill offered in behalf of Freeport, Ill. My own opinion is, to come down to serious statement, that this bill, in view of the statement of the gentleman from Illinois, should have been advanced very much farther up on the list than it has been.

Mr. MERCER. I now ask for a vote on the committee amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. The report has not been read.

Mr. HITT. I will make a short statement.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT TAMPA, FLA.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 414) for the erection of a public building at Tampa, Fla.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase, acquire by condemnation, or otherwise provide a site for, and cause to be erected, a suitable building, with proper fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the courts of the United States, post-office, custom-house, and other Government offices, at the city of Tampa, Fla. The site and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed the cost of $300,000, nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $300,000 for site and building: Provided, That no money to be appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site of said building shall be vested in the United States, to be approved by the Attorney-General, and until the State of Florida shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys, around the same.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 12 strike out the word "three" and insert "one."

In line 21 on page 2 strike out the word "three" and insert "one."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, the report is comparatively short and it can be read in a few moments, unless the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] desires to make a statement. I will yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Chairman, the bill provides for a public building for the use of the court-house, the customs department, internal-revenue department, and the post-office in the city of Tampa. Tampa is a port of entry and delivery. It has the United States court—two sessions there each year. It has a custom-house and an internal-revenue department from which something in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 are collected each year and turned into the United States Treasury. It also has a post-office from which forty-odd thousand dollars were collected and turned into the Treasury last year. I am sure no one can find any fault with this bill on account of the large amount that may be appropriated for its construction. If any error has been committed at all, it has been in making the limit $100,000 instead of $300,000, as originally mentioned in the bill. I can myself see no reason why the bill should not receive a favorable recommendation from the committee.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BRISTOL, TENN.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 2314) to erect a custom-house and post-office building in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to purchase suitable grounds in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable public building for the custom-house, post-office, and United States commissioner's office. The cost of the site and buildings thereon, when completed, shall not be more than $100,000, the plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title for the grounds for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Tennessee shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, except in the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the purposes aforesaid, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site has been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by said Secretary involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $100,000 for the site and building. The site so purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by a space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended in the purchase of said grounds and erection of said building.

With the following amendments recommended by the committee:

In line 4 strike out the word "purchase" and insert in lieu thereof the words "accept as a donation."

In line 8 strike out the letter "s" in the word "buildings."
In line 9 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty."
In line 25 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty;" so that limit of cost of site and building shall be $50,000.
Strike out all after the word "Treasury," in line 11, up to and including the word "therein," in line 17.
Strike out section 2.
In lines 17 and 18 strike out "purchased" and substitute "accepted."
In line 21 substitute "accepted" for the words "purchased and paid for."
In lines 22 and 23 strike out the words "purchase of site nor."
In line 26 substitute "accepted" for "purchased."
Amend the title by adding after the word "to" the words "accept a site as a donation and," and after the word "erect" add "thereon."

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BROWNLOW].

Mr. BROWNLOW. Mr. Chairman, Bristol is a city of 13,000 population. It has a second-class post-office, a free-delivery system, and is a large manufacturing town, with a business last year amounting to $14,000,000. It is the terminal point of five railroads, three of which are trunk lines, aggregating 18,000 miles. There is one tobacco factory there which pays to the Government $95,000 annually in revenue, besides other sources of revenue to the United States Government.

Mr. LOUD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee how much of a custom-house there is at Bristol?

Mr. BROWNLOW. We have none.

Mr. LOUD. The bill provides for a post-office and custom-house.

Mr. BROWNLOW. It was intended originally to have a collector of customs there, and there is a bill pending for that purpose before the present Congress. This is a growing wholesale town, and very rapidly growing. This place had a population in 1880 of 3,600; in 1890 the population had grown to 9,550. A local census now gives over 13,000.

Mr. LOUD. I see the receipts of the post-office there are $12,000. Rent, light, and fuel cost the Government now $600.

Mr. BROWNLOW. I will say to the gentleman from California that the post-office building now is in an out-of-the-way part of the city, wholly inadequate for the business of the post-office, and if it is attempted to rent a suitable building in a proper and convenient part of the city it will cost $1,200 or $1,500 per annum.

Mr. LOUD. Perhaps so, but this is not in the line of economy, because it will cost more than the $600 to take care of it and furnish light and fuel.

Mr. BROWNLOW. I will say further to the gentleman from California that the city government at Bristol has donated a lot for this public building which cost $10,000 or $12,000.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ANNISTON, ALA.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 10804) for the erection of a public building at Anniston, Ala.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or otherwise provide a site, which shall cost not exceeding $10,000, and cause to be erected thereon a substantial and commodious building, with fireproof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office, and for other Government uses, at Anniston, Ala. The building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in cost the sum of $50,000, nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the sum of $50,000, after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the said sum of $60,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Alabama shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 5 strike out the words "which shall not cost exceeding $10,000."
In line 12, after the word "dollars," insert "including cost of site."
In line 1, page 2, after the word "dollars," insert "including cost of site," and strike out "after the site shall have been purchased and paid for."
In line 5, page 2, strike out "sixty" and insert "fifty."
Strike out all after and including the word "Provided," in lines 8 and 9.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for the erection of a post-office simply in the city of Anniston. There are no United States courts there and no other public department except the United States commission. The post-office receipts in 1887 were about $12,000; in 1898 they were $21,000—almost double. It is a very rapidly growing city in mineral development, is a large railroad center, and its future is a very bright one. The people of Alabama are contemplating having the Federal court held there, but I do not know whether that will be done or not.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NORWICH, CONN.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 4595) for the erection of a public building at Norwich, Conn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Norwich and State of Connecticut, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to said proposed sites.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money appropriated by this act shall be available, except as hereinbefore provided, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Connecticut shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

After the said site shall have been paid for and the sketch plans and detailed estimates for the building shall have been prepared by the Supervising Architect and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Postmaster-General, the balance of said appropriation shall be available for the erection and completion of the building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would be glad to hear the report read.

Mr. MERCER. I will yield to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. RUSSELL] to make a statement.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like to have some explanation.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Chairman, the city of Norwich is the largest city in eastern Connecticut. According to the census of 1890 it had a population of more than 24,000. It has considerably increased since, both in business and population. The net receipts of the post-office there are from $15,000 to $16,000 per annum. It has a large money-order department, the money-order business amounting to $160,000 per annum. It is a large manufacturing town and a railroad center. This bill has been favorably reported in two or three Congresses. The location of the present post-office is unsatisfactory and the office is insufficient; it has been increased in accommodations by change of lease once or twice in five years, and the Department is now seeking additional accommodations.

Mr. DOCKERY. What did the gentleman state the post-office receipts were?

Mr. RUSSELL. The net receipts of the post-office, according to the last report, which I have here, are about $16,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there any Federal court there?

Mr. RUSSELL. No Federal court.

Mr. DOCKERY. Any United States collector there?

Mr. RUSSELL. There is a deputy collector, and there is an internal-revenue collector.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the amount of the annual collections by the deputy collector?

Mr. RUSSELL. I can not answer that question. This town is the headquarters of the deputy collector for the district of Rhode Island and Connecticut. The amount of the whole collections in that district I can not state.

Mr. DOCKERY. Any United States marshal there?

Mr. RUSSELL. There is a deputy United States marshal. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendments reported by the committee were agreed to; and the bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ABERDEEN, S. DAK.

Mr. MERCER. I call up Senate bill 109, for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, S. Dak.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or acquire by condemnation proceedings, or otherwise, a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Aberdeen, S. Dak.

The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for the site and building complete the sum of $100,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of South Dakota shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain owner thereof, for all purposes, except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purpose provided in this act.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 11 and 12 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof "eighty-seven;" so that limit of entire cost shall be $87,000.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 15.

Mr. KNOWLES rose.

Mr. DOCKERY. I prefer that the report be read in these cases.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the report will be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 109) for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, S. Dak., have considered the same, and append hereto the report from the Secretary of the Treasury on the bill when the same was pending in the Senate, which is adopted by this committee and made a part of this report.

Your committee recommend that Senate bill 109 do pass with the following amendments:

In lines 11 and 12 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof "eighty-seven;" so that limit of entire cost shall be $87,000.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 15.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. KNOWLES].

Mr. KNOWLES. Mr. Chairman, Aberdeen is the second city in South Dakota. It has about 6,000 population. It is the seat of the United States circuit and district courts, United States land office, post-office, United States commissioner, and deputy collector of internal revenue. The gross receipts of the post-office last year were $13,279, nearly one-half of which were net receipts. The city has three trunk lines of railway, reaching every point of the compass in South Dakota and adjoining States, and is the natural distributing point for that section. It has a very large wholesale trade with all the cities and towns of the Northwest.

The Government is now paying nearly $4,000 per year as rent for very poor accommodations for its courts, post-office, and land office. The rents paid represent interest upon an investment of $125,000, while we only ask $87,000. I believe it will be good economy to pass this bill. That is all I care to say.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

The question being taken, the amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT MENOMINEE, MICH.

Mr. MERCER. I call up House bill 2056, for the erection of a public building at Menominee, Mich.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase or acquire by condemnation a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at Menominee, State of Michigan. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $50,000, which sum is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for the purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out, beginning in line 11, after the word "dollars," all down to and including the word "appropriated," in line 13.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 16.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have the report read.

The CHAIRMAN. In the absence of objection, the report will be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2056) for the erection of a public building at Menominee, Mich., respectfully report as follows:

Menominee, the county seat of Menominee County, is situated on Green Bay, at the mouth of the Menominee River, and has a population of 16,000, being the metropolis of what is known as the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and ranking twelfth in size among cities of the State. It is a point of great commercial importance, but is noted chiefly for the manufacture and shipment of timber products, in which it stands first in the United States. Three hundred million feet of lumber, besides laths and shingles, are annually manufactured here, and 4,000 men are employed by the sawmills and other factories within the city limits.

The city has the Holly system of waterworks, an efficient paid fire department, electric lighting throughout the city, 15 miles of electric street railway, and 10 miles of paved streets.

Four railroad lines touch at Menominee, 11 trains arriving and departing daily, and 3 steamboat lines make regular trips to this port during season of navigation.

There are 2 daily and 4 weekly newspapers published in the city, which have a large circulation.

Menominee is a second-class free-delivery post-office, employing 6 carriers and 3 clerks. The office now occupies a single storeroom containing about 2,000 square feet, half of which is set apart as a lobby, the balance being used for the entire business of the office, including money-order and registry departments.

By reference to the report of the Auditor for the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, the following will be observed regarding the business of the Menominee office for that year: Gross receipts, $14,256.29; salary, $2,400; clerk hire, $1,900; rent, light, and fuel, $608.94; other incidental expenses, $22.72; free delivery, $4,919.28; total expenses, $9,850.94; leaving a net revenue of $4,405.35. It is believed that a space of about 5,000 square feet, properly arranged with separate compartments for each department of the service, will soon be actually required for carrying on the rapidly increasing business of this office. The rent of the present quarters is $700 per annum.

Menominee has a customs office, which is in charge of a deputy collector and inspector, and at present has no place of business owned by the Government.

The city is situated on an excellent harbor, is surrounded by a fertile farming country, and is rapidly growing in population and business.

Your committee believe that the efficiency of the public service will be advanced by the passage of the bill, and therefore report same to the House with the recommendation that it pass with the following amendments:

Strike out, beginning in line 11, after the word "dollars," all down to and including the word "appropriated," in line 13.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 16.

Mr. LLOYD. Are there any United States officers located at this place?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SHELDEN] that he may answer any inquiries.

Mr. SHELDEN. There is a deputy collector of customs at Menominee.

Mr. LLOYD. Is there any Federal court?

Mr. SHELDEN. No, sir. The Federal courts are located at Marquette.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT SALEM, OREG.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (H. R. 5528) to provide for the construction of a public building at Salem, Oreg.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building for the accommodation of the post-office and other Government offices at the city of Salem, in the State of Oregon; and plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for the site and building complete the sum of $100,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site of said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Oregon shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein; nor shall any site be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan for said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an exenditure exceeding the said sum of $100,000 for site and building.

The amendment reported by the committee was read, as follows:

Add after the word "purpose," in line 14, the following: "except for the ordinary preliminary expenses."

Mr. LLOYD. I call for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5528) to provide for the construction of a public building at Salem, Oreg., submit the following report:

This bill is for a public building at Salem, Oreg. It has been favorably reported by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department. Like bills have several times passed the Senate, and several times this committee has recommended in former Congresses the construction of a public building at Salem, Oreg.

In the Fifty-first Congress the committee reported in favor of $100,000, as follows:

"The city of Salem is the capital of Oregon, a State larger than New York and Pennsylvania combined. Salem has within its immediate post-office delivery 20,000 people. The city enumeration shows an increase of population within the past two years of 50 per cent. All the State buildings are here, and required to be for the future by the terms of the State constitution. Large and costly State buildings are provided for all the departments of the State. The supreme court holds its sessions in Salem. It is the second city of the State in population and wealth. It has miles of street railways, numerous banking, educational, business, and manufacturing institutions. It has a letter-carrier system. Its commerce from its steamboat and railway traffic is large. It is in the great Willamette Valley. Efforts will be made for the establishment of United States courts here. In view of the foregoing facts the committee beg leave to report Senate bill No. 78 with amendments, and recommend that it do pass."

In the Fifty-second Congress the committee again favorably reported a bill for said building, and also in the Fifty-third Congress.

Your committee further represent that since those reports the capital city of Oregon has increased largely in population, and there is a greater demand for such building, inasmuch as the postal business has greatly increased.

There never has been a public building constructed in this capital city by the General Government.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of H. R. 5523 with the following amendment:

Add after the word "purpose," in line 14, the following: "except for the ordinary preliminary expenses."

The amendment reported by the committee was agreed to; and the bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ST. CLOUD, MINN.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (H. R. 4113) for the erection of a public building at St. Cloud, Minn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by gift, purchase, or condemnation or otherwise, a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States land office, post-office, and other Government offices at the city of St. Cloud, in the State of Minnesota. The site and building thereon, with its appurtenances, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in the aggregate the sum of $100,000; that no money appropriated for the purpose aforesaid shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Minnesota shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the State and the service of civil process therein.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purpose of this act.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

In line 14 strike out "one hundred" and insert "fifty;" so that the limit of cost will be $50,000.

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 14.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MORRIS. There is an error in the bill which needs to be corrected. I move to amend by inserting after the word "Minnesota," in line 10, the words "the cost of," so as to read, "the cost of the site and building."

The amendment was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported favorably.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ABILENE, TEX.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I now call up for consideration the bill (S. 927) to provide for the erection of a public building at Abilene, Tex.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office, court-house, and other Government offices in the city of Abilene and State of Texas, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, not to exceed $100,000. No part of said sum shall be available until a valid title to the site for said buildings shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Texas shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein. The said building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommended the adoption of the following amendments:

Strike out the word "elevators," in lines 7 and 11.

Strike out "one hundred," in line 12, and insert in lieu thereof "seventy-five."

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 12, up to and including the word "therein," in line 19.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the reading of the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, having had under consideration the bill (S. 927) to provide for the erection of a public building at Abilene, Tex., adopt the following report, made by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds:

"Abilene, where it is proposed by the pending bill to erect a public building, is a city of recent origin. It is situated on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, in Taylor County, Tex., in a region rapidly settling up. A few years ago it was not in existence. It has to-day a population of about 5,000, and is increasing as the surrounding country increases from the influx of population from the other States of the Union. A term of the Federal court for the northern district of Texas is held at Abilene. This court was formerly held at Graham, but for the greater convenience of those interested in that court it was removed in 1896 to the city of Abilene. It is necessary for the accommodation of that court that a building should be erected in which to transact its business and also to conduct the business of the post-office."

Your committee recommend that Senate bill 927 do pass with these amendments:

Strike out the word "elevators," in lines 7 and 11.

Strike out "one hundred," in line 12, and insert in lieu thereof "seventy-five."

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 12, up to and including the word "therein," in line 19.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS].

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, Abilene, I will state for the information of the committee, is the largest city in the northwestern part of the State of Texas. It is a new city, with a rapidly growing population, situated 180 miles west of Fort Worth and between three and four hundred miles east of El Paso.

A term of the Federal court for the northern district of Texas is held there, and it is an important star-route center, a number of mail routes running from that point all through that region of country. There is also an agricultural experiment station. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

There is no Federal building in the city, and the buildings now rented by the Government and used by it are wholly unfitted for the purposes of a court-house and post-office, and the rents paid by the Government for the buildings used are heavy. This building is badly needed from every standpoint, and the bill should be passed.

Mr. MERCER. I ask a vote on the amendments recommended by the committee.

The amendments were considered, and agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, LEADVILLE, COLO.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 2879) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Leadville, Colo.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Leadville and State of Colorado, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, complete, not to exceed the sum of $100,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in said advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to the said proposed site.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall within thirty days after such examination make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken or submitted to them in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $5 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Colorado shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the report in that case.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2879) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Leadville, Colo., respectfully recommend the passage of said bill.

Leadville is one of the greatest mining towns in the world. It first sprang into existence in 1877, when the rich deposits of silver were first discovered in that locality. It has grown to be a city of from 12,000 to 15,000 population. It has passed the stage of a camp. It has now as many substantial stone and brick structures as any similar town of its size. It has always been recognized as being one of the permanent mining cities ever since the discovery of ore in its vicinity.

There has been produced in Leadville metals of the value of $253,000,000, which consist of gold, silver, lead, iron, iron sulphides, and siliceous ores. It was thought a few years ago that Leadville was purely a silver-mining district, but deep mining in Leadville has produced a large number of strikes of gold-bearing veins, and now the output of gold from Leadville is approximately that of the silver output. The Little Johnny mine in one day raised $100,000 in gold while it was being worked by a force of not to exceed 40 men.

Notwithstanding that during the year 1896 what are called the down-town mines, which generally produce a very large per cent of the ore mined in that section, were not worked on account of being filled with water, due to strike troubles, the total production for the district was $9,000,000.

As to the permanency of the ore veins in that district, and consequently of the city of Leadville, a committee of experts recently said:

"The continuous work of a century to come will not exhaust the Leadville mines; the productive area, as far as demonstrated, shows an extent of 28 square miles. The continuity of these ore channels has been proven; the future will be greater than the past has ever been."

Leadville has three trunk lines of railroad passing through it. They are the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and the Denver, South Park and Gunnison Railroad. These railroads operate daily trains over their lines. Surveys and part construction of other lines have been made.

It has also large smelting works, which handle thousands of tons of ore each year. Four thousand miners are continuously employed in the immediate vicinity of Leadville.

The gross postal receipts for Leadville in the year 1898 were $23,091.57. The report of the Auditor for the Post-Office Department shows that there have been constructed public buildings for the United States in 74 towns which have less postal receipts than the city of Leadville. A United States land office is also located at Leadville, which does a very large business and needs a good deal of office room.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of said bill with the following amendments:

Strike out the words "one hundred," in the eleventh line of the first page of said bill, and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty."

Also strike out lines 49 to 56, inclusive, on the third page of said bill.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was, on motion of Mr. MERCER, laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GROSVENOR having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill and joint resolution of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

S. 5388. An act granting the right of way through Indian reservations to the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad Company; and

S. R. 230. Joint resolution providing for the printing of the reports of Robert P. Porter, special commissioner of the United States, on the industrial and commercial conditions of Cuba and Porto Rico.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 11143. An act granting to the mayor of the city of Victor, in the county of El Paso and State of Colorado, the right to enter certain lands therein described for city purposes;

H. R. 10398. An act providing for the entry free of customs duties of certain bells presented by Edwin M. Stanton to the Iowa Agricultural College, of Ames, Iowa;

H. R. 8396. An act to correct the military record of William D. Kurfiss;

H. R. 5715. An act for the relief of Benjamin F. Jones;

H. R. 886. An act for the relief of Charles T. Plunkett, of Lynchburg, Va.; and

H. R. 375. An act to remove the charge of desertion standing against Dennis Fitzpatrick.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 12009) to provide for the removal of snow and ice in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

REMOVAL OF SNOW AND ICE FROM THE STREETS OF WASHINGTON.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, before the committee resumes its session I want to move to concur in two amendments of the Senate to the snow and ice appropriation, the bill H. R. 12009. Gentlemen understand the conditions that exist here, and I hope there will be no objection to the motion.

Mr. DOCKERY. It ought to be adopted. The amendment simply increases the amount for the removal of snow and ice, and I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The amendments will be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "two" and insert "ten."
In line 13 strike out "one" and insert "two."

The amendments were considered and agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CANNON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were agreed to was laid on the table.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWPORT, VT.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 2598) for the erection of a public building at Newport, Vt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, with fireproof vaults therein, for the United States courts, post-office, custom-house, and other Government offices, at Newport, in the county of Orleans and State of Vermont. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $50,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than 40 feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Vermont shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owners thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. GROUT].

Mr. GROUT. Mr. Chairman—— [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. MERCER. Then I ask a vote on the amendment.

Mr. GROUT. If the committee do not want any further information, I am ready for a vote.

Mr. DOCKERY. But we do want some explanation of this bill.

Mr. GROUT. Very well. I was just about to make it.

This makes provision for the erection of a building in the new collection district in what is known as the Memphramagog district, Vermont. The State was formerly a single district, but was found unwieldy and has recently been divided.

It is a very important district, and the first year the total duties assessed and collected amounted to $5,969,054.72. The total value of merchandise entering there was $10,949,747, and the total number of cars examined during the year was 19,977.

There are four great railways entering this district from Canada, namely, the Maine Central, the Grand Trunk, the Boston and Maine, and the Canadian Pacific. All of these empty their immense importations into this district, and make it in the volume of its imports the second collection district in New England; second only to Boston.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the population?

Mr. GROUT. The town itself, with its outlying suburbs partly in another town, has an estimated population of some five or six thousand people, say within half or three-fourths of a mile of the post-office.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there a Federal court established there?

Mr. GROUT. No; but there ought to be, and I will tell you the reason why: Because the business in that judicial district arises mainly from customs transactions on the frontier, and the witnesses and parties in many cases have to go from 110 to 150 miles to attend court in cases where prosecutions follow a violation of the revenue laws. There ought to be a court there to avoid this expense. It would be a great economy in the expenditure of public money to provide one, so that these suits could be settled at that point. It will be an easy matter to provide for a term of court there, the reasons for it are so abundant.

Mr. TAWNEY. What are the postal receipts?

Mr. GROUT. I can not tell you.

Mr. STEELE. Six thousand and ninety-six dollars.

Mr. GROUT. But the customs duties collected and assessed were over $5,000,000, almost six millions in a single year, and can the gentleman say that such a business is not entitled to a decent office?

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from Vermont [Mr. GROUT] is an old legislator, and he knows, without any statement on my part, that the customs receipts throw no light on this particular question. Of course, that is a point where goods from Canada come into the United States, and necessarily there is a large amount of customs dues, but what are the postal receipts?

Mr. GROUT. They say $6,000. I have not looked it up. I want to say to the gentleman from Missouri that I think customs receipts throw a very strong, clear light on this question. We are appropriating millions of dollars at this very time for a custom-house in New York, and you have just provided for a custom-house for Newport News, Va., where the business is less than at Newport, Vt.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman is certainly in error as to postal receipts, because he says, including the outlying districts, the population is only five or six thousand.

Mr. GROUT. I am giving the estimate as stated by a gentleman who appeared before the committee; also the statement of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. STEELE], who apparently spoke from the book, for he read from it just now.

Mr. DOCKERY. What is the salary of the postmaster?

Mr. GROUT. I can not tell you. It is a third-class office. But, I repeat, the main reason for this building is the large customs business transacted at that point, second in the volume of duties assessed only to that of Boston in all New England. The gentleman should remember that custom-houses, as well as post-office buildings, are erected by the Government. There are 11 customs districts in Massachusetts, and all of them, outside of the Boston district, put together do less than one-twentieth the business that is done in this district, and I presume every one has a public building—many of them certainly have. There are 13 customs districts in the State of Maine with, I presume, 12 public buildings, and the amount of imports in them all for the year 1898 was barely more than the imports into the Memphremagog district. Connecticut has five election districts, and the business in them all is less than half as much, and so I might go on, but enough.

The customs business creates the main necessity for this building, though the post-office furnishes considerable revenue and needs accommodations, now being in a private house for want of suitable accommodations; and it is plain that if the United States courts were held there, it would save large expense to the Government in witness debentures and marshals' fees. But a custom-house is the main thing wanted; and if a $5,000,000 business will not justify it, I do not know what will.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. GREENE of Nebraska) there were—ayes 73, noes 7.

Accordingly the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT EAU CLAIRE, WIS.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (H. R. 477) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at the city of Eau Claire, in the State of Wisconsin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, land office, and other Government offices in the city of Eau Claire and State of Wisconsin, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $150,000.

No site shall be purchased until estimates for the erection of a building which will furnish sufficient accommodations for the transaction of the public business, and which shall not exceed in cost the balance of the sum herein limited, after the site shall have been purchased and paid for, shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and no purchase of site nor plan of said building shall be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury involving an expenditure exceeding the sum of $150,000 for site and building; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet, including streets and alleys: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Wisconsin shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

In line 13, page 1, strike out the words "one hundred and."

In line 21, page 2, strike out the word "one," and in line 22, same page, strike out the words "hundred and;" so that limit of cost of site and building shall be $50,000.

Strike out all after the word "alleys," in line 25.

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRIFFIN].

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, the locality in which it is proposed to construct a public building under this bill had in 1880 a population of 10,177 and in 1890 17,000. A term of the Federal court is held in that city annually. It has a United States land office in which the records of four offices are kept. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT MACON, GA.

The next business was the bill (H. R. 10753) to provide for enlarging and improving the United States Government building at Macon, Ga., and to appropriate $25,000 therefor.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the post-office and court-house building at Macon, Ga., to be extended and enlarged so as to provide necessary accommodations for the post-office, courts, and other branches of the Government service, and to purchase additional ground on Third street, in his discretion, for this purpose, and that the total cost of all said improvements, changes, and repairs, including the purchase price of an additional site, shall not exceed the sum of $58,000.

Mr. DOCKERY. Let us have the report read, Mr. Chairman, if it is in order to hear anything at all about these bills.

Mr. MERCER. I will yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] to make a statement.

Mr. DOCKERY. I should be willing to hear a statement in lieu of the report, but over and over again gentlemen who have attempted to make explanations have been disturbed by the cry of "Vote!" I hope that will not be repeated, because if it is I shall have to insist on the reading of the report.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief. I assure the gentleman from Missouri and members of the House that this bill is a worthy one. This appropriation is asked for after a careful examination by the Treasury Department, through a special agent sent for that purpose, and the exact amount which he reported to be necessary has been recommended. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT MONMOUTH, ILL.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (H. R. 8587) for the erection of a public building at Monmouth, Ill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by gift, purchase, or otherwise, a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices at the city of Monmouth, in the State of Illinois. The site and building thereon, with its appurtenances, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed in the aggregate the sum of $50,000. That no money appropriated for the purpose aforesaid shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of the State and the service of civil process therein.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $50,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purposes of this act.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds recommended the following amendments:

In line 13 strike out the word "fifty" and insert the word "forty-seven."

Strike out all of line 13 after the word "dollars," and also strike out all of lines 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, in section 1.

Strike out all of section 2.

Insert the following after "dollars," in line 13, page 1:

"The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys."

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the report.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8587) for the erection of a public building at Monmouth, Ill., submit the following report:

Monmouth, Ill., is a city of between 10,000 and 11,000 people, situated in Warren County, on the main line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and also the Iowa Central, and the Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis branch of the Burlington system, with two more railroads in prospect for the near future.

Monmouth has now the largest pottery in the world, besides numerous other manufactories of large extent. Monmouth College, one of the best known educational institutions of the West, is located here, and there is every prospect that in the next ten years the city will have double its present population. Monmouth has also a beautiful new county court-house, completed two years ago at a cost of $140,000, a beautiful structure, and also has other fine private and public buildings. During the past ten years there has been an enormous increase of postal receipts at Monmouth, as the following figures will indicate:

Postal receipts, year ending June 30—

1888	$10,634.85
1898	16,667.85

The following letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury regarding the proposed building is here submitted:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., January 17, 1899.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 12th instant, requesting a report in connection with House bill 8587, providing for the acquisition of a site and the erection thereon of a suitable building for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices at Monmouth, Ill., at a cost not to exceed $50,000, I have the honor to advise you that from computations made in this Department, based upon data which have been collected with a view to ascertaining the requirements of the public service at Monmouth, it is estimated that a suitable building, about 80 feet by 50 feet in dimensions, consisting of basement and one story, of fireproof construction, including heating apparatus, fireproof vaults, and approaches, affording sufficient space for the post-office, can be constructed for $42,000, exclusive of the cost of site.

It is estimated that land suitable for a site of sufficient size to allow for the usual 40-foot fire limit, and for a 30-foot extension to the building in the future, can be secured for $5,000. In this connection you are advised that, as it is considered desirable that the building should be unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings, it is suggested that the following paragraph be added to the bill in question:

"The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys."

Estimated cost of site	$5,000
Estimated cost of building	42,000
Total	47,000

Your attention is respectfully invited to the prohibition contained in said bill, that "no money appropriated for the purpose aforesaid shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Illinois shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same," etc.

This prohibition will prevent the payment, until after the acquisition of a site, of the customary preliminary expenses, such as advertising, the traveling and subsistence expenses of the agent of this Department who may be detailed to examine and report upon the suitability of such sites as may be offered, etc. Unless it is intended that such items should not be paid promptly, it is suggested that the provision of section 355, Revised Statutes of the United States, are ample to prevent the purchase of a site until the State has ceded to the United States jurisdiction over the same, or the erection thereon of any building until the Attorney-General has passed favorably on the title thereto, and it is respectfully suggested, therefore, that the prohibitory clause referred to be stricken from the bill, or that the ordinary preliminary expenses be excepted from its operations.

Respectfully, yours,

O. L. SPAULDING, Acting Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives.

Therefore your committee recommend that the bill do pass, amended as follows:

In line 13 strike out the word "fifty" and insert the word "forty-seven."

Strike out all of line 13 after the word "dollars," and also strike out all of lines 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, in section 1.

Strike out all of section 2

Insert the following after "dollars," in line 13, page 1:

"The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys."

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

PUBLIC BUILDING, OSKALOOSA, IOWA.

Mr. MERCER. I call up the bill (H. R. 11919) to construct a public building at Oskaloosa, Iowa, and for other purposes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase or otherwise, a site and to cause to be erected thereon a substantial and suitable building, for use of the post-office and other Government purposes, at Oskaloosa, Iowa. The site and building, when complete, shall not cost to exceed $50,000. The site shall not be purchased until estimates for the erection of the building, suitable and sufficient for the public purpose, costing not to exceed the residue of the sum herein limited after the purchase and payment for the site, shall have first been approved by said Secretary; and the cost of building and site is limited to said sum of $50,000: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to said site shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Iowa shall cede exclusive jurisdiction over the said site to the United States, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the report, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, having had under consideration House bill 11919, report back the same with amendment and recommend that it do pass.

Oskaloosa is the county seat of Mahaska County, Iowa, in the center of a fertile region in the midst of the principal coal deposits of Iowa. The county of Mahaska is the leading coal-producing county of the State, and has a present population of about 33,000 souls. The city of Oskaloosa has a present population of 11,000, and is a prosperous and growing city with paved streets, electric lights, gaslights, waterworks, and all the modern conveniences of a city of its class. It is a railway center, having two lines of the Iowa Central, two lines of the Rock Island, and one line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway centering there. Its growth has been constant since the city was first laid out, but has been quite rapid for the last five years.

Its postal receipts for the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1898, were $18,530.80.

It has had the carrier system in operation for a number of years. It has 2 colleges, 6 large schoolhouses, and many manufactories. The yearly meetings of the Society of Friends for the State of Iowa is located there, and is annually attended by the people of that church from all parts of the United States.

The post-office facilities have been supplied in rented buildings heretofore.

The population in 1880 was 4,598; in 1890 it was 6,558, and the State official census in 1895 showed a population of 8,551, which has increased since that time to fully 11,000.

Amend by striking out the proviso.

The amendment recommended by the committee was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING, WINSTON, N. C.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1859) to provide for a public building at Winston, N. C.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Winston and State of North Carolina. The cost of said site and building shall not exceed the sum of $75,000; which sum is hereby appropriated for said purpose out of any moneys in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out the word "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifty," so that the limit of cost of site and building shall be $50,000.

Strike out all after "dollars," in line 10.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would like to have the report read.

Mr. LINNEY. I have a careful analysis of the report in my hand, which I will give to the House.

Mr. DOCKERY. If the House will hear it.

Mr. LINNEY. The population of Winston is 16,000. It has doubled since 1880. The internal-revenue collections this year were $1,000,000—larger than they have been in any one year. Winston has paid the United States Government in five years $3,380,164.33. The postal receipts are $26,000. The tobacco factories are 54, with an annual output of $5,000,000. The cotton factories have doubled since the passage of the McKinley bill. [Laughter and cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. KITCHIN. It had one before it passed and has two now.

The amendments recommended by the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING, COLUMBUS, GA.

Mr. MERCER. I now call up the bill (H. R. 1079) to enlarge and improve the United States public building at Columbus, Ga.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be appropriated the sum of $50,000, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of making betterments to the United States public building at Columbus, Ga., as follows: To purchase the necessary additional strip of ground east of the lot on which the present building stands and construct an annex, to enlarge the post-office on first floor, and correspondingly enlarge the court room above.

Mr. MERCER. I ask for a vote on the amendment.

Mr. DOCKERY. I would be glad to have the report read, or an explanation made.

Mr. MERCER. I beg pardon; I thought the report had been read. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. ADAMSON. I ask the Clerk to read the report.

The report (by Mr. BANKHEAD) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1079) to enlarge and improve the United States public building at Columbus, Ga., report as follows:

The committee finds that the present court room in this public building is wholly inadequate for the purposes intended. The arrangement of the building is faulty, and the accommodations entirely too small for the transaction of public business, making the improvements and additions asked for absolutely necessary. The office of the marshal is on the ground floor, the court room on the floor above, and the jury rooms on the third floor, all of which is exceedingly inconvenient. The western division of the northern district of Georgia, in which this building is located, embraces 18 counties, and the attendance upon the terms of the court from this large area is large and the business is important.

The committee recommend the following substitute:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause the post-office and court-house building at Columbus, Ga., to be extended and enlarged so as to provide necessary accommodations for the post-office, courts, and other branches of the Government service, and to purchase additional ground, in his discretion, at a cost not to exceed $50,000, including all necessary repairs to the present structure and cost of additional ground."

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Chairman, I have no doubt that this is a very meritorious bill coming from the great State of Georgia, and Columbus, no doubt, is a very important town; but the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. MADDOX] sought occasion to make some remarks in my absence——

Mr. ADAMSON. I am the gentleman from Georgia representing this bill.

Mr. BERRY. But it comes from the State of Georgia. I had no opportunity yesterday to explain to this House some assertions that were made against the town of Carrollton, and I want to say to gentlemen upon this floor [cries of "Vote!"] that the town of Carrollton is one of the busiest little corporations in the State of Kentucky, with two large national banks with deposits of $600,000. [Cries of "Vote!"] They have their waterworks, the finest in Kentucky, lifting the water 300 feet above the level of Kentucky River. They have electric lights; and I do not want it to be intimated that I endeavored to pass through this House a proposition not reasonable and fair as between the Government and the people in asking for the construction of a building costing $25,000. It is not half as much as they have paid for a court-house. In a county of 100,000 acres, with a hundred miles of free turnpikes, and with fine buildings scattered all over the county, I want to say, gentlemen, that it is a good proposition.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. I now move that the committee rise and report back to the House the bills and the several amendments, and with the recommendation that as amended the bills do pass.

PUBLIC BUILDING, LOCKPORT, N. Y.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Pending that motion, I ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 500 be taken up and considered and recommended to the House for passage.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 500 be taken up. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices, in the city of Lockport and State of New York, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $60,000.

Proposals for the sale of land suitable for said site shall be invited by public advertisement in one or more of the newspapers of said city of largest circulation for at least twenty days prior to the date specified in the advertisement for the opening of said proposals.

Proposals made in response to said advertisement shall be addressed and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall then cause the said proposed sites, and such others as he may think proper to designate, to be examined in person by an agent of the Treasury Department, who shall make written report to said Secretary of the results of said examination, and of his recommendation thereon and the reasons therefor, which shall be accompanied by the original proposals and all maps, plats, and statements which shall have come into his possession relating to said proposed site.

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after such examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all statements, maps, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them, in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses

No part of said sum shall be expended, except ordinary preliminary expenses, until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of New York shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein. The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet on each side, including streets and alleys.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend by striking out, in line 12, the words "one hundred" and substituting the word "fifty," and adding, in line 50, after the word "expended," "except ordinary preliminary expenses," and as so amended do pass.

Strike out the word "elevators" wherever it appears in the bill.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. From what committee does this bill come?

Mr. WADSWORTH. From the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. GROSVENOR. When was it reported?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The chairman can speak to that.

Mr. MERCER. It was reported yesterday; but the gentleman gets it up by unanimous consent.

Mr. DOCKERY. Is there any report on it?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The report has been printed, and all in due form.

Mr. DOCKERY. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] has a bill, and it seems to me——

Mr. GROSVENOR. There are a great many other bills. I have not any.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendments recommended by the committee.

Mr. KITCHIN. Pending that, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. CLARDY. I ask unanimous consent that this committee——

The CHAIRMAN. After we shall have disposed of this the Chair will submit the requests.

The amendments of the committee were agreed to.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I move that the bill as amended be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee of the Whole now rise and report back to the House the various bills acted upon by the committee with the action thereon.

Mr. KITCHIN. I ask the gentleman to withhold that motion for a moment.

Mr. MERCER. I desire to say to gentlemen that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds intend to ask for another day for that committee.

The question was taken on the motion of Mr. MERCER that the committee rise; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DOCKERY, Mr. KITCHIN, and others) there were—ayes 75, noes 68.

Mr. DOCKERY. Tellers, Mr. Chairman.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. MERCER and Mr. DOCKERY.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 79 noes 51.

So the motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SHERMAN reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration bills of the House of the following titles, had directed him to report the same favorably with amendment, and that as amended they do pass:

A bill (H. R. 11712) to provide a site for a building for the Washington Public Library;

A bill (H. R. 534) to erect a public building at Lawrence, Mass.;

A bill (H. R. 431) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Streator, in the State of Illinois;

A bill (H. R. 4313) for the erection of a public building at the city of Jamestown, N. Y.;

A bill (H. R. 84) to provide for the erection of a public building at Freeport, Ill.;

A bill (H. R. 414) for the erection of a public building at Tampa, Fla.;

A bill (H. R. 2314) to erect a custom-house and post-office building in the city of Bristol, State of Tennessee;

A bill (H. R. 10804) for the erection of a public building at Anniston, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 4595) for the erection of a public building at Norwich, Conn.;

A bill (H. R. 2056) for the erection of a public building at Menominee, Mich.;

A bill (H. R. 5528) to provide for the construction of a public building at Salem, Oreg.;

A bill (H. R. 4113) for the erection of a public building at St. Cloud, Minn.;

A bill (H. R. 2879) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Leadville, Colo.;

A bill (H. R. 2593) for the erection of a public building at Newport, Vt.;

A bill (H. R. 477) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at the city of Eau Claire, in the State of Wisconsin;

A bill (H. R. 8587) for the erection of a public building at Monmouth, Ill.;

A bill (H. R. 10753) to provide for enlarging and improving the United States Government building at Macon, Ga., and to appropriate $25,000 therefor;

A bill (H. R. 11919) to construct a public building at Oskaloosa, Iowa, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 1859) to provide for a public building at Winston, N. C.;

A bill (H. R. 1079) to enlarge and improve the United States public building at Columbus, Ga.; and

A bill (H. R. 500) for the erection of public building at Lockport, N. Y.

Mr. SHERMAN also reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration a bill of the House of the following title, had directed him to report the same favorably without amendment, and that said bill do pass:

A bill (H. R. 11882) to increase the limit of the cost for the erection of a public building in Stockton, Cal., and making provision for the acquisition of additional land or a new site therefor.

Mr. SHERMAN also reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, having had under consideration bills of the Senate of the following titles, had directed him to report the same favorably with amendment, and that as amended said bills do pass:

An act (S. 244) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Joplin, in the State of Missouri;

An act (S. 109) for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, S. Dak.; and

An act (S. 927) to provide for the erection of a public building at Abilene, Tex.

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOODY. Would it be in order for any gentleman, first obtaining the floor, to move that of the bills reported from the Committee of the Whole House those relating to cities and towns where the post-office is of the first class be first considered in the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California will state it.

Mr. LOUD. In what order would the bills come regularly before the House?

The SPEAKER. The impression of the Chair is that they would come in the order reported by the Journal of yesterday.

Mr. LOUD. Would that be the order in which they are reported from the Committee of the Whole?

The SPEAKER. In the order in which they are recorded in the Journal.

Mr. LOUD. That would be the order in which they were brought before the committee?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that that would not be the order, the bills having been classified in the Journal.

Mr. LOUD. In what manner of classification, may I ask?

The SPEAKER. The report will be found on page 1751 of the RECORD.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bills be considered in the House in the order in which they were recommended favorably in the Committee of the Whole. I think that is the fairest proposition.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks that the bills be considered in the House in the order in which they were recommended favorably by the Committee of the Whole House. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I ask to take up Senate bill 1964, for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office in the district of Newport News, Va.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the amendments.

The Clerk read the amendments.

Mr. MERCER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous question upon the bill and amendments.

Mr. MOODY. Will the gentleman from Nebraska yield for a suggestion?

Mr. MERCER. I will yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MOODY. It is evident that if there is resistance to all of these bills indiscriminately, very few of them can pass. Although I have no interest in any one bill, I do not want to bring about that result. The suggestion I make is that with respect to all bills the gentleman asks unanimous consent of the House that five minutes shall be allotted to explanation, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman himself and one-half by the gentleman in opposition, if he wishes, simply for the purpose of stating the salient facts—the population of the town, the receipts of the post-office, whether there is a session of the court, or a custom-house or not in the place. If that is done, I do not believe there will be any disposition to antagonize any bill that is meritorious, certainly not on my part.

Mr. HOPKINS. Let me suggest that the report in every one of these cases has been printed and shows all those facts.

Mr. MOODY. That is quite true; and although I have attended substantially the full two days, yet I can not carry in my mind all these facts. I for one propose to vote with some sort of a general system about it.

Mr. HOPKINS. The gentleman can take the RECORD and look at it.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I would like to suggest to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOODY] that if we allow five minutes on each side to each bill, only twelve bills can be passed before the special order elapses, and those, of course, will be the first twelve.

Mr. MOODY. Well, say two minutes.

Mr. MERCER. In reply to the gentleman from Massachusetts, I would say we have scarcely two hours to consider these bills.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The gentleman will appreciate the fact that if the yeas and nays are demanded we may not be able to pass more than three of these bills.

Mr. MERCER. That is true enough.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Will the gentleman from Nebraska allow me a suggestion?

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Does not the gentleman think he would save time by allowing five minutes on a side?

Mr. MERCER. There is not time.

Mr. GREENE of Nebraska. Does not the gentleman think he will pass more bills in that way than if he attempts to pass them without it?

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I will suggest that when we come to a bill that is objectionable, it will be in order to ask that that bill be laid aside temporarily. I will ask for the previous question on the bill and amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. Before the gentleman does that I would be glad if some arrangement could be made.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks for the previous question.

Mr. DOCKERY. Pending that——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Nebraska yield?

Mr. MERCER. I yield to the gentleman for a suggestion.

Mr. DOCKERY. Just a moment. It is obvious to me, Mr. Speaker, that some of these bills are entitled to the favorable action of the House, but I am fully satisfied that a good many of them should not be approved, especially in view of the fact that the deficiency in our current revenues for the present fiscal year will be perhaps $150,000,000, and our expenses during the coming year will amount to not less than $675,000,000. I hope, therefore, the gentleman will agree to the proposition that as each bill is reached three to five minutes be allowed on either side in explanation of the measure, if such time be desired.

Mr. MERCER. Well, Mr. Speaker, I wish to be fair in this matter. I have given all the leeway I possibly could in Committee of the Whole for the discussion of these bills. They have been thoroughly ventilated, both by the reading of the reports and by the statements of the members. In order to obviate any criticism, I will agree that in case it should become necessary on any bill, four minutes be allowed for the discussion of the bill before the previous question will be considered as ordered.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Allow me a suggestion. It is evident that only a few of these bills can be passed this afternoon. Now, to be perfectly fair toward all of them, why not let this business go over for to-day and attempt to pass none of them now, but ask for another day, and then take them all up and pass them?

Mr. MERCER. We will let that matter take care of itself later on.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. But if you go on now and pass a dozen of these bills to-day, we may not be able to get another day for action on the rest.

Mr. DOCKERY. I withdraw my suggestion.

Mr. MERCER. I ask the previous question upon the bill and amendments.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering this Senate bill as amended to a third reading.

The question was decided in the affirmative, there being on a division (called for by Mr. CLARDY)—ayes 107, noes 5.

So the bill was ordered to a third reading.

Mr. CLARDY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I demand the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. This is a Senate bill and does not have to be engrossed in the House. The Clerk will read the bill.

The bill was read.

The bill was then passed.

On motion of Mr. MERCER, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BLAIR, NEBR.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, in view of the criticism made in reference to the bill for a public building at Blair, Nebr., now pending before the House—and I will say that Blair is on an equal footing with a great many cities which have had public-building bills reported for them—I ask unanimous consent to publish in the RECORD as part of my remarks some statistics in regard to public-building bills which will be of considerable interest not only to members of the present Congress, but to members of future Congresses.

One word further, Mr. Speaker. Owing to misinformation given to me about the gross receipts of the post-office at Blair, I did make a misstatement yesterday. I withdraw the statement I then made in regard to gross receipts, because I find from the tabulated statistics that an error was committed, and I ask that the RECORD be corrected in that particular. The gross receipts are something over $6,000 for last year.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill be temporarily laid aside and that we take up the bill for a public building at Altoona, Pa.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks leave to print in the RECORD certain statistics, as indicated. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The gentleman also asks consent that this bill be laid aside temporarily.

Mr. LOUD. I object. I think this question might as well be determined now as by and by.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10909) for the erection of a public building in the city of Blair, Nebr.

The SPEAKER. The question is first on the amendments, which the Clerk will report.

The amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union were read.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would be glad if the gentleman from Nebraska would yield to me a moment for a personal matter.

Mr. MERCER. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, the suggestion of the gentleman from Nebraska about a mistake in figures reminds me that I ought to say to the House that having suddenly taken charge of a bill yesterday for an absent colleague, and having hurriedly read the report (I refer to the case of Canton, Ohio), I stated that the post-office there had been built twenty-five years ago, when the population was 25,000. In point of fact the post-office was built eight years ago, and at that time the population was 25,000. Twenty-five years ago Canton had not a population of 10,000.

Mr. MERCER. I move that the bill for the erection of a public building at Blair, Nebr., be laid aside temporarily; and on that I ask the previous question.

Mr. HANDY. I make the point of order that that motion is not in order at this time. If the gentleman requested a permanent retirement of the bill it would be a different matter.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that that is not one of the regular motions which the rules permit.

Mr. MERCER. Would it be in order to move that the bill be laid aside permanently?

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman can move to lay it on the table.

Mr. MERCER. The gentleman from Delaware seems to be in favor of having this bill passed. I therefore ask that the bill be placed on its passage. I call for the previous question on the bill and amendments. I have done all that I could to get the bill out of the way of other members.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska demands the previous question on the bill to its passage.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANDY) there were—ayes 114, noes 25.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER (having counted the House). One hundred and ninety-seven members are present—a quorum.

So the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The first question is on the amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the amendments.

The SPEAKER. A separate vote being demanded, the Clerk will report the first amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 5, strike out the words "cause to be erected thereon" and insert "to contract for the construction and completion thereon of a."

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANDY) there were—ayes 100, noes 1.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7, page 1, after the word "building," insert the words "with fireproof vaults therein."

The question was taken: and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANDY) there were—ayes 95, noes 1.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 12, strike out the word "fifty" and insert the words "forty-three" in lieu thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 8, strike out the word "fifty" and insert "forty-three."

The amendment was agreed to.

The question recurred on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The question was taken: and on a division (demanded by Mr. HANDY) there were—ayes 103, noes 34.

Mr. LOUD and Mr. HANDY. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 104, nays 81, answered "present" 10, not voting 156; as follows:

Mr. KETCHAM with Mr. BENNER of Pennsylvania.

Mr. MAHON with Mr. STARK.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. BAILEY.

Mr. ADAMS with Mr. CUMMINGS.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH with Mr. HENRY of Mississippi.

Mr. SOUTHARD with Mr. HINRICHSEN.

Mr. STONE with Mr. COCHRAN of Missouri.

Mr. WALKER of Virginia with Mr. LESTER.

Mr. BELKNAP with Mr. MAGUIRE.

Mr. BROMWELL with Mr. MEEKISON.

Mr. BRUMM with Mr. BREWER.

Mr. CONNELL with Mr. CATCHINGS.

Mr. OTJEN with Mr. MCRAE.

Mr. PEARCE of Missouri with Mr. TERRY.

Mr. CANNON with Mr. JONES of Virginia.

Mr. SHANNON with Mr. BODINE.

Mr. MCCLEARY with Mr. FLEMING.

The following pair was announced on this vote:

Mr. HARMER with Mr. MCALEER.

Mr. MCCLEARY (having previously voted in the negative). I find that I am paired, and I desire to withdraw my vote.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

Mr. ADAMS. I am paired with the gentleman from New York, Mr. CUMMINGS, and wish to answer "present."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will be recorded present.

Mr. SWANSON (having previously voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. LORIMER. I wish to withdraw my vote and answer "present."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's vote will be withdrawn.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The bill is ordered to be read a third time.

Mr. DOCKERY. Pending that, I move to recommit the bill to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill a third time.

Mr. LOUD. Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet in time to call for the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California calls for the reading of the engrossed bill. The engrossed bill is not here, and the bill will have to be laid aside.

Mr. DOCKERY. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. HICKS. Oh, no; let us take up the next bill. Altoona, Pa., is the next one. [Laughter.]

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, on a division (demanded by Mr. DOCKERY) there were—ayes 57, noes 103.

Mr. CLARDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

The following additional pair was announced:

Mr. KIRKPATRICK with Mr. BURKE for the remainder of this day.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. MERCER rose.

Mr. DOCKERY. I move that when the House adjourn to-day it be to meet on Friday next.

Mr. HOPKINS. I make the point that that is dilatory.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the next bill.

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska. I wish to have the roll call corrected. I answered to the first call, and I am told that my name was called on the second roll call.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STRODE] is not recorded. Did he vote?

Mr. STRODE of Nebraska. I did on the first roll call—voted "no."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will be recorded.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. STRODE of Nebraska, and he voted in the negative.

Mr. BELKNAP. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no" on this call, but I learn since that I am paired. I wish to withdraw my vote, if it is not too late.

The SPEAKER. The result of the vote has been announced. The gentleman from Nebraska——

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to know what the parliamentary situation is at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska has the floor. [Laughter.]

Mr. DOCKERY. I move that when the House adjourn to-day it be to meet on Friday next.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that that is dilatory.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska has the floor.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, if we can have some order I will try to be heard.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. QUIGG. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The House will first be in order.

Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the Senate bill 1273, reported favorably from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with the amendments, and ask the previous question on the bill and amendments to its passage.

Mr. DOCKERY. Pending that, I desire to submit a motion for the decision of the Chair. I move that when the House adjourn to-day it be to meet on Friday next.

Mr. HOPKINS. I make the point of order that that is a dilatory motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is.

Mr. DOCKERY. I will not deny that it is so intended.

Mr. LOUD. The bill has not been reported, so far as I have heard, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1273) for a public building at the city of Altoona, Pa., and appropriating money therefor, with amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask for the reading of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendments.

Mr. HANDY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HANDY. The gentleman submitted a motion for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman submitted a motion for the previous question, and the Chair is having the bill read as a guide to gentlemen how to vote on that question.

Mr. HANDY. Thank you, sir.

Mr. HENDERSON. Regular order.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Strike out, in line 5, page 1, the words "cause to be erected thereon a" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to contract for the erection and completion thereon of a."

In line 22, page 2, strike out all after the word "alleys."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks the previous question.

Mr. DOCKERY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DOCKERY. Are we entitled to the reading of the bills?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the bill has been read the proper number of times. The House is entitled to the reading of the amendments, because the House committed the bill to the committee, and it has reported it back with amendments. The bill has been technically read a first and second time.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am quite willing to accept the judgment of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the demand for the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DOCKERY, Mr. HANDY, and others. Division!

The House divided; and there were—ayes 125, noes 37.

Mr. HANDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.
The yeas and nays were ordered.
Mr. LENTZ. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that motion is dilatory.
The question was taken; and there were—yeas 153, nays 35, answered "present" 7, not voting 156; as follows:

So the previous question was ordered.
The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:
For this day:
Mr. ACHESON with Mr. FITZGERALD.
Mr. MESICK with Mr. WILSON.
Mr. SNOVER with Mr. STROWD of North Carolina.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. Speaker, I am recorded in the affirmative. I find I am paired with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. LORIMER, and I desire to withdraw my vote and vote "present."
Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have voted "present" on all three votes to-day upon the theory that I was paired. I have ascertained that I am not paired, and I now desire to be recorded in the negative on the votes to adjourn, and in the affirmative on the other votes.
Mr. SHERMAN's name was called, and he voted "aye."
The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.
The SPEAKER. The question is now on agreeing to the amendments.
The amendments were agreed to.
Mr. DOCKERY. One moment, Mr. Speaker. I understood that the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MERCER] was to make a motion that the House adjourn. The previous question having been ordered, the bill would come up to-morrow, would it not?
The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it would.
Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.
Mr. HICKS. If the House adjourns now, in what position will the bill be left?
Mr. HENDERSON. The previous question having been ordered.
The SPEAKER. The Chair has answered the question, that it goes over until to-morrow, the previous question having been ordered.
Mr. MERCER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.
The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska moves that the House do now adjourn. Pending that motion, the Chair will submit the report of the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. HAGER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title:
H. R. 12009. An act to provide for the removal of snow and ice in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia.
The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled joint resolutions and bill of the following titles:
S. R. 218. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Ricardo Yglesias, of Costa Rica.
S. R. 219. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the Naval Academy at Annapolis Alberto Valanzuela Montoya, of Colombia; and
S. 2768. An act to grant lands to the State of Alabama for the use of the Industrial School for Girls of Alabama and of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.

SENATE BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill and joint resolution of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:
S. 5388. An act granting the right of way through Indian reservations to the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad Company—to the Commitees on Indian Affairs.
S. R. 230. Joint resolution providing for the printing of the reports of Robert P. Porter, special commissioner of the United States, on the industrial and commercial conditions of Cuba and Porto Rico—to the Committee on Printing.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. ELLIS, indefinitely, on account of sickness.
The motion of Mr. MERCER was then agreed to; and accordingly the House (at 5 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m.) adjourned until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive and other communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:
A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Supervising Architect submitting an estimate of appropriation for additional accommodations for postal services in the custom-house and post-office building at Newark, N. J.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a communication from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting an estimate of deficiency in the appropriation for contingent and miscellaneous expenses—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.
A letter from the president of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Railway Company, submitting the third annual report—to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of the legislature of North Dakota, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution and memorial of the senate and house of representatives of the State of North Dakota, to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, asking for the election of a United States Senator by a direct vote of the people.

Whereas experience has demonstrated that the interests of the people would be best served by the election of United States Senators by a vote of the people of the various States: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives of the State of North Dakota (the senate concurring), That our Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to use all honorable means to secure the submission of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, providing for the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people.

Resolved further, That copies of this resolution, properly attested, be sent to our Representatives in Congress of the United States.

Resolved further, That a copy of the foregoing resolution, duly signed and certified, be sent to the proper officials of the several States in the Union, together with the request, hereby expressed, that such resolution be laid before the legislative assembly of each such State, to be by it approved at the discretion thereof, and notice of such approval communicated, when given, to the Senators and Representatives acting for such State in the Congress of the United States.

THOMAS BAKER, JR.,
Speaker of the House.

Attest:
J. G. HAMILTON, Chief Clerk.

J. M. DEVINE,
President of the Senate.

Attest:
J. O. SMITH, Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. HANSBROUGH presented a petition of sundry citizens of Milton, N. Dak., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of liquor in canteens of the Army and Navy and of Soldier's Homes, and in immigrant stations and Government buildings; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PERKINS presented a petition of the legislature of California, relative to the construction and ownership of the Nicaragua Canal; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint resolution No. 10, relative to construction and ownership of the Nicaragua Canal.

Whereas the construction of the Nicaragua Canal would be of immense value to the people of the Pacific coast, and especially to the people of the State of California, as it would afford greater protection to this coast in time of war, open new lines of trade and commerce in time of peace, tend to cheapen transportation to foreign and Atlantic seaboard markets, build up new enterprises everywhere within our State, and largely tend to maintain old ones, greatly increase our population, and thus enhance our wealth and multiply our resources, and establish a shorter line of oceanic communication between the United States and its po-sessions in the Orient; and

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a measure providing for the construction of the Nicaragua Canal by the United States Government;

Resolved by the senate of the State of California (the assembly thereof concurring), That our Senators in Congress be instructed, and our members of the House of Representatives of the United States be requested, to earnestly support the passage of this measure; and be it further

Resolved, That we favor the absolute ownership and operation of the said Nicaragua Canal by the United States Government.

Resolved, That his excellency, the governor, is hereby requested to forward to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of this resolution.

THOMAS FLINT, JR.,
President pro tempore of the Senate.
ALDEN ANDERSON,
Speaker of the Assembly.

Attest:
C. F. CURRY, Secretary of State.
Adopted in senate January 23, A. D. 1899.

F. J. BRANDEN,
Secretary of the Senate.
Adopted in assembly February 1, A. D. 1899.

C. W. KYLE,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

This resolution was transmitted by the governor this 3rd day of February, A. D. 1899.

W. I. FOLEY,
Private Secretary of the Governor.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, C. F. Curry, secretary of state of the State of California, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of Chapter VIII, being Senate joint resolution No. 10, legislature 1899, with the original now on file in my office, and that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Also, that this authentication is in due form and by the proper officer.

Witness my hand and the great seal of State, at office in Sacramento, Cal., the 3rd day of February, A. D. 1899.

C. F. CURRY,
Secretary of State,
By J. HUESCH, Deputy.

Mr. MASON, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5020) to revive and amend an act to provide for the collection of abandoned property and the prevention of frauds in insurrectionary districts within the United States, and acts amendatory thereof, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. MANTLE, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 1st instant, proposing to appropriate $75,000 for the purchase of a site for a public building in the city of Butte, Mont., intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it with an amendment, submitted a report thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported an amendment proposing to appropriate $4,350 for payment to the board of county commissioners of Custer County, Mont., in full settlement of all demands against the United States for the construction of a steel bridge across the Tongue River for the accommodation of the Fort Keogh Military Reservation, in that State, intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill, submitted a report thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report, accompanied by a bill (S. 5482) for the relief of the county of Custer, State of Montana; which was read twice by its title.

Mr. SEWELL, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 11717) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT OF INDIAN SCHOOLS.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 1,000 additional copies of the Report of the Superintendent of Indian Schools for 1898, the same to be delivered to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the use of his office.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING INVESTIGATION.

Mr. LODGE, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the resolution submitted by Mr. MASON on the 7th instant, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That 2,000 copies of the letters of transmittal, the report of the Treasury Department committee which investigated the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in 1897, the reply of the Director of the Bureau thereto, and the rejoinder of Mr. Lyman, chairman of the investigating committee, be printed for the use of the Senate.

SIOUX CITY AND OMAHA RAILWAY.

Mr. ALLEN. I should like unanimous consent to call up for present consideration the bill (S. 5076) authorizing the Sioux City and Omaha Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Omaha and Winnebago Reservation, in Thurston County, Nebr., and for other purposes.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I suggest to the Senator——

Mr. ALLEN. It will not lead to any debate.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Morning business has not yet closed, I understand.

Mr. LINDSAY. I shall not object to the bill being called up, but I wish to introduce a bill.

Mr. ALLEN. I was simply following the precedent of yesterday morning, when six bills were passed before the last order of business was reached. I withdraw the request, however, for the time being.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. LINDSAY introduced a bill (S. 5474) granting a pension to Ellen Hardin Walworth; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HARRIS introduced a bill (S. 5475) authorizing the Gulf and Northern Railroad Company to construct and operate a railroad through the Indian Territory and Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SULLIVAN introduced a bill (S. 5481) to correct the military record of H. L. B. Hovis; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PERSONNEL OF NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10403) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. MCMILLAN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $350,000 to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purchase of the real estate formerly the property of the Corcoran Art Gallery, at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street NW., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MCENERY submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $200,000 for extending the revetment in Lake Providence Reach, Louisiana, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for improving the mouth and passes of Calcasieu River, Louisiana, from $35,000 to $100,000, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BATE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $12,000 to purchase and equip a snag boat to be used in the Cumberland River above and below Harpeth Shoals, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to adjust and pay the accounts of the Cape Smythe Whaling and Trading Company for supplies furnished and services rendered in rescuing, housing, feeding, clothing, and caring for shipwrecked whalers in the Arctic seas in 1897 and 1898, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to permit the Batcheller Pneumatic Company, of the District of Columbia, on such terms as they may prescribe, to open and excavate the streets of Washington on such lines as the Postmaster-General may approve, intended to be proposed by him to the Post-Office appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LINDSAY submitted an amendment proposing to increase the number of locks and dams in the Big Sandy River, Kentucky and West Virginia, from one to two, and also to increase the appropriation for the construction of the same from $220,000 to $470,000, intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate and report on the cost of making tea and the best methods of cultivating and preparing the same for market, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Agricultural appropriation bill; which was ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed.

Mr. GEAR submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of War to accept on behalf of the Government for military purposes 400 acres of land within 5 miles of the corporate limits of Des Moines, Iowa, providing, in his judgment, it is suitable for an army post, intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FORAKER submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,230 for the office of assistant treasurer at Cincinnati, Ohio, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,500 for one assistant solicitor, Department of State, and also to reduce the number of clerks of class 4 in the office of the Attorney-General, Department of Justice, from 7 to 6, intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PERSONNEL OF NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

On motion of Mr. HALE, it was Ordered, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 1,000 copies of bill (H. R. 10408) to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States, as reported to the Senate February 8, 1900.

BOWMAN ACT AND OTHER CLAIMS.

Mr. TELLER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4926) for the allowance of certain claims for stores and supplies reported by the Court of Claims under the provisions of the act approved March 3, 1883, and commonly known as the Bowman Act, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have been unable to agree.

HENRY M. TELLER,
WM. M. STEWART,
S. PASCO,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
THADDEUS M. MAHON,
THEOBOLD OTJEN,
JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. TELLER. I move that the Senate still further insist on its amendments and ask for a further conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference; and Mr. TELLER, Mr. STEWART, and Mr. PASCO were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2673) for the relief of William A. Cowles.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1964) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Newport News, Va., with amendments in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 9946) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Muskogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;" and

A bill (H. R. 11495) to amend section 3 of an act entitled "An act to change the time and places for the district and circuit courts of the northern district of Texas," approved June 11, 1896.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CULLOM. If there is no further morning business, I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, which we were considering yesterday evening. When the bill is taken up, I will yield to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11414) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

Mr. CULLOM. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska, with the understanding that there will be no debate upon the bill he wishes to have considered.

Mr. ALLEN. There will be no debate whatever.

SIOUX CITY AND OMAHA RAILWAY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The legislative appropriation bill being temporarily laid aside, the Senator from Nebraska asks for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5076) authorizing the Sioux City and Omaha Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Omaha and Winnebago Reservation, in Thurston County, Nebr., and for other purposes. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 8th instant approved and signed the act (S. 5047) to revive, reenact, and amend an act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near the city of Lexington, Mo.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 5006) to restore to their original status as to promotion officers of the Navy and Marine Corps who lost numbers by reason of the advancement of other officers for exceptional and meritorious service during the war with Spain.

Mr. CULLOM. I will yield to the Senator from New Hampshire, with the understanding that if the bill leads to debate I can object later.

Mr. CHANDLER. This bill was considered on the 23d of January, and it was laid aside in order that some amendments might be suggested by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. He has made his suggestions, which have been submitted to the Navy Department and approved. I now ask for the passage of the bill with the amendments that I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be stated.

Mr. GORMAN. And then let the bill be read as proposed to be amended.

The amendments were, in line 9, page 1, after the word "advanced," to insert the words "to higher grades;" on page 2, line 1, to strike out the words "regarded as additional members of their grades and shall be appropriately so designated upon the official Navy list" and insert "carried thereafter as additional to the numbers of each grade to which they may at any time be promoted;" in line 5, page 2, after the word "him," to insert "and all advancements made by reason of war service shall be appropriately so designated upon the official Navy list;" in line 9, page 2, before the word "retirement," to insert "promotion;" and in line 10, before the word "retirement," to insert the word "promotion;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the advancement in rank of officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, whensoever made, for service rendered during the war with Spain, pursuant, respectively, to the provisions of sections 1506 and 1605 of the Revised Statutes, shall not interfere with the regular promotion of officers otherwise entitled to promotion, but officers so advanced to higher grades by reason of war service shall be carried thereafter as additional to the numbers of each grade to which they may at any time be promoted; and each such officer shall hereafter be promoted in due course, contemporaneously with and to take rank next after the officer immediately above him; and all advancements made by reason of war service shall be appropriately so designated upon the official Navy lists: Provided, however, That no promotion shall be made to fill a vacancy occasioned by the promotion, retirement, death, resignation, or dismissal of any officer who, at the time of such promotion, retirement, death, resignation, or dismissal, is an additional member of his grade under the provisions of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to restore to their original status as to promotion officers of the Navy and Marine Corps losing numbers by reason of the advancement of other officers for exceptional and meritorious service during the war with Spain."

CORPUS CHRISTI CHANNEL BRIDGE.

Mr. MILLS. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 5355) authorizing the Aransas Harbor Terminal Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Corpus Christi Channel, known as the Morris and Cummings Ship Channel, in Aransas County, Tex., reported a few minutes ago by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] from the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CULLOM. I will yield to the Senator from Texas with the understanding that there will be no debate.

Mr. MILLS. There will be no debate. If there is any, I will withdraw the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the act entitled "An act authorizing the Aransas Harbor Terminal Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Corpus Christi Channel, known as the Morris and Cummings Ship Channel, in Aransas County, Tex.," approved May 4, 1896, is hereby reenacted; and section 5 of the said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 5. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be not commenced within one year and completed within three years from May 4, 1899."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend an act entitled 'An act authorizing the Aransas Harbor Terminal Railray Company to construct a bridge across the Corpus Christi Channel, known as the Morris and Cummings Ship Channel, in Aransas County, Tex.'"

LIGHT VESSEL FOR CHESAPEAKE BAY.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5019) for a light vessel off Tail of Horse Shoe, Chesapeake Bay.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANCHISES IN CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, with the accompanying papers, ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed:

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit herewith, in response to a resolution of the Senate of the 2d instant, requesting information "whether any franchises or concessions of any character are being or have been granted by any municipality in Cuba and Porto Rico since the military occupation thereof by the United States," etc., a report from the Secretary of War and accompanying papers.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, February 9, 1899.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1964) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Newport News, Va.

Mr. MARTIN. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives and request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. WARREN, Mr. FAIRBANKS, and Mr. MONEY were appointed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 9946) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Muskogee, Oklahoma and Western Railroad Company to construct and operate a line of railway through Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 11495) to amend section 3 of an act entitled "An act to change the time and places for the district and circuit courts of the northern district of Texas," approved June 11, 1896, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CULLOM. I have agreed to yield to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCBRIDE]. I wish to state that I have tried to be as liberal in giving Senators an opportunity to have bills passed as I think I ought to be called upon to be, and I hope after the Senator from Oregon gets the attention of the Senate the Senate may allow me to go on with the appropriation bill.

LAUNCH FOR CUSTOMS SERVICE AT ASTORIA, OREG.

Mr. MCBRIDE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5086) for the purchase or construction of a steam launch for the customs service at and in the vicinity of Astoria, Oreg.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The amendments were, in line 5, after the word "suitable," to strike out "steam;" after the word "launch," in the same line, to insert "of such motive power as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury;" and in line 7 to strike out the words "four thousand dollars" and insert "$2,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to purchase or have constructed for the customs service a suitable launch, of such motive power as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, for use at and in the vicinity of Astoria, Oreg., and the sum of $2,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated and made immediately available to purchase or build such vessel.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the purchase or construction of a launch for the customs service at and in the vicinity of Astoria, Oreg."

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11414) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, and for other purposes.

Mr. CULLOM. While the Senate had the bill under consideration yesterday I think we reached the twenty-fifth page, including the first six lines on that page. Beginning with the Botanic Garden, I hope the reading will proceed.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator from Illinois in charge of the bill whether it would not be well to go back to the provision for the copyright department of the Library of Congress and strike out the proviso, so as to allow it to go into conference? Manifestly it must be amended, and there is no other way by which an amendment can be made.

Mr. CULLOM. I have determined to do that. I think that that proviso should be stricken from the bill, so that we may, in conference, ascertain exactly what kind of a provision ought to be placed there. I myself am not satisfied with that proviso.

Mr. GORMAN. Nor am I.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. That course will be entirely satisfactory to me. There is very short time when a bill is under consideration to fix up a matter of this sort and get it right.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the proviso in the provision relating to the copyright department beginning in the twentieth line of the twenty-second page be stricken out.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois moves to strike out the proviso beginning in the twentieth line on page 22 and ending with the third line on page 23, in the following words:

Provided, That on and after the 1st day of July, 1899, no person shall be entitled to a copyright, unless the copies deposited with the Librarian of Congress, of such copyright book or other article, or the photograph deposited of a work of the fine arts, shall be of such substantial and permanent paper or substance and ink or impression as shall be according to such standard as shall be from time to time established and approved by the said Librarian.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust that that proviso will be stricken out. The intention of the authors of the proviso is a very good one, so far as it relates to the character of paper upon which these things shall be printed. There can not be any question about the fact that, with the new processes we are having in the manufacture of all the paper which is used for Government purposes, one-third of it at least will absolutely decay and be gone in less than four or five years.

I do not oppose the proviso on account of the provision as to the character of the paper, because I believe it to be a wise one; but it is so broad, as was stated by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] yesterday, that it will probably impair the rights of people and put in jeopardy their productions.

I wish to say here, before the bill passes the Senate, that I trust some provision as to the character of the paper will be retained. I think that is eminently proper. I believe that on account of the desire for economy a great many of our public documents that are being printed will, in ten years from now, absolutely fall to pieces. Therefore I hope that provision in the proviso will be retained when the bill goes to conference.

Mr. COCKRELL. What was the suggestion of the Senator from Connecticut? He is familiar with questions of patents and copyrights.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes; that is on another matter.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. If the proviso is to go out now to be fixed up in conference, I will endeavor to look into it. It seemed to me there was trouble in providing that the right to a copyright should depend upon regulations to be fixed from time to time by the Librarian. It did not seem to me as if a man ought to be dependent upon certain rules published by the Librarian from time to time for his copyright and lose his copyright if those rules were not complied with. People who want to obtain copyrights will not know of those rules. The provision contemplates that the rules shall be changed from time to time, and that people shall lose absolutely their copyright unless such rules are complied with. I think the matter may be arranged so as to subserve the purpose in view.

Mr. CULLOM. My objection, upon looking into the subject, is that it leaves such a wide discretion in this appointee, the Librarian. He might change his purpose and idea from month to month, and we ought to pass some definite law upon the subject and not leave so much discretion in the officer. Therefore I am willing that the proviso shall go out and that it shall be subject to further consideration in conference.

Mr. PLATT of Connecticut. I should like in the meantime to have an opportunity of consulting with gentlemen who have given this matter of copyright the greatest consideration. There will be plenty of time when the bill is in conference.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then it is the understanding that there is to be some provision here, and that it ought not to be a rule of the Department, but there ought to be a law defining substantially what class of paper shall be used.

Mr. CULLOM. That is my view of the case.

Mr. COCKRELL. It is an outrage to accept some of the kinds that are presented.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope a vote will be taken on my motion to strike out the proviso.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Executive," on page 26, line 2, after the word "dollars," to strike out "one clerk of class 4" and insert "four clerks of class 4;" in line 3, before the word "clerks," to strike out "five" and insert "two;" in line 5, after the word "dollars," to insert "doorkeeper and messenger to the secretary to the President, $1,400;" in line 7, before the word "doorkeepers," to strike out "four" and insert "three," and in line 13, before the word "hundred," to strike out "forty-three thousand seven" and insert "forty-four thousand five;" so as to make the clause read:

For compensation to the following in the office of the President of the United States: Secretary, $5,000; two assistant secretaries, at $2,800 each; executive clerk, $2,200; executive clerk and disbursing officer, $2,000; four clerks of class 4; two clerks of class 3; steward, $1,800; usher to the President, $1,800; chief doorkeeper, $1,800; doorkeeper and messenger to the secretary to the President, $1,400; three doorkeepers, at $1,200 each; four messengers, at $1,200 each; two messengers, at $900 each; watchman, $900; fireman, $720; laborer, $720; in all, $44,540.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of State," on page 27, line 16, to increase the number of clerks of class 1 from sixteen to twenty-one; and in line 22, to increase the total appropriation for compensation of the Secretary of State, etc., from $125,270 to $131,270.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 2, to increase the appropriation for books and maps, and books for the library, Department of State, from $1,500 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Treasury Department, division of loans and currency," on page 32, line 13, to increase the number of assistant messengers from one to two; in line 14, to increase the number of laborers from five to six; and on page 33, line 1, to increase the total appropriation for the division of loans and currency from $67,649 to $69,029.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 12, after the word "dollars," to insert "clerk, $900;" and in line 14, after the word "thousand," to insert "nine hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Miscellaneous division: For chief of division, $2,500; assistant chief of division, $2,000; one clerk of class 4; one clerk of class 3; two clerks of class 1; clerk, $1,000; clerk, $900; and one assistant messenger; in all, $12,920.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 34, line 16, after the word "each," to strike out "one clerk" and insert "two clerks;" in line 17, after the word "four," to strike out "one clerk of class 3;" and in line 19, before the word "dollars," to strike out "ten thousand eight hundred," and insert "eleven thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

Offices of disbursing clerks: For two disbursing clerks, at $2,500 each; two clerks of class 4; one clerk of class 2; and one clerk, $1,000; in all, $11,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of the clauses making appropriations for "Office of the Supervising Architect," on page 35, line 12.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Illinois to what extent the provision on pages 34 and 35 has been carried out in the Treasury Department? The provision reads:

And the services of skilled draftsmen, civil engineers, computers, accountants, assistants to the photographer, copyists, and such other services as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem necessary and specially order, may be employed in the office of the Supervising Architect exclusively to carry into effect the various appropriations for public buildings, to be paid for from and equitably charged against such appropriations: Provided, That the expenditures on this account for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, shall not exceed $210,000; and that the Secretary of the Treasury shall each year in the annual estimates report to Congress the number of persons so employed and the amount paid to each.

To what extent has that been carried out? In other words, when a public building is authorized to be erected, does the Supervising Architect of the Treasury under this provision employ draftsmen to complete the drawings, the plans, the specifications, and the estimates, so that the Supervising Architect can advertise and make a contract for the completion of the entire building within a given reasonable time?

Mr. CULLOM. All that I know about the subject is found in the Book of Estimates, on page 353:

APPENDIX B.

In connection with the estimates for "Salaries, Office of Supervising Architect."

List of employees in Office of Supervising Architect, Treasury Department, and amounts paid each, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1898, from appropriations for public buildings, furnished under requirements of the act of Congress approved March 15, 1898, Statutes at Large, volume 30, page 288.

Then follows a long list of names, the positions the persons occupy, the salaries they get, and I think, if it could be run down to the end, it would show exactly where the money goes in connection with each public building.

Mr. COCKRELL. But what has been the effect of the requirement or authorization? Has it hastened the completion of public buildings?

Mr. CULLOM. I confess I am not able to state whether it has or not.

Mr. COCKRELL. We authorize the construction of a public building and limit the cost. The building goes on year after year, and there is no reason on earth why there should be such delay.

Mr. CULLOM. I agree with the Senator fully; but that seems to have been the state of the case for a good many years.

Mr. COCKRELL. It has been the case indefinitely—at least, for a long time.

Mr. CULLOM. I suppose if we had time to investigate the report in the Book of Estimates it might explain very much of this matter, but that is all I know about it.

Mr. COCKRELL. We have a public building on Pennsylvania avenue, the city post-office building; we have a building at Kansas City, which has been under construction I do not know how long; and there are other public buildings which will require years and years to complete. No individual and no corporation in this country which constructs a building of that kind ever lets it hang on their hands, year after year, with a superintendent and a parcel of employees drawing salaries out of the appropriation, thus reducing the amount that is actually put into the building.

Mr. CULLOM. I fully agree with the Senator that that has been the history of all our public buildings under the system which has been pursued for an indefinite time. I have myself always felt that when a building was begun by the Government its construction ought to be vigorously prosecuted until it is completed and the people who had been employed discharged. I suppose such employees will be discharged if they ever get a public building finished, but they never seem to succeed to that extent.

Mr. COCKRELL. They seldom get a building finished. I see in another branch having coequal authority with this body a large number of bills have been passed for the erection of public buildings. Those buildings cost from $50,000 to $100,000 or $200,000 or more. There is no reason in the world why a $50,000 building, a $100,000 building, a $150,000 building, or a $200,000 building should not be completed in one season. Any individual can do it, and if the Supervising Architect of the Treasury can not secure persons who can draw the plans, specifications, and details of such work we ought to take the construction of public buildings out of his hands and place it in the hands of somebody who will do it.

Mr. CULLOM. I agree to that fully.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, in that connection I wish to say that I have been very much interested of late to notice that when we propose to erect public buildings we now provide that private architects shall enter into competition in the matter of furnishing plans, as was provided in the case of the Library building, and I think a similar provision was made for the public building in Chicago. In other words, Mr. President, we have this bureau in the Treasury Department and we have a very expensive force there, and not only are we dawdling along in reference to the erection of public buildings, but we are now commencing the policy of taking from them the work which under the law properly belongs to them.

I recall the circumstance that when a Supervising Architect was recently appointed it was done under the civil-service rules. A man came here, a very distinguished architect, who has erected some of the finest buildings in this country. He had not written a letter with his own hand in five years, he told me, but he is one of the most distinguished architects in the United States. He was put down to a table and compelled to write without cessation seven or eight hours, and of course he did not pass a very good examination.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Do I understand that a civil-service examination was held for Supervising Architect of the Treasury?

Mr. GALLINGER. Certainly; and the man who occupies that position to-day is a product of the civil-service system of the United States. After obtaining that position by a civil-service examination, which, to my mind, is an absurdity, we are now discrediting him and saying that he is not competent to make plans for a public library in Washington or a public building in Chicago, but that we must let out the job to an architect who could not pass the civil-service examination. That is all I care to say on the matter.

Mr. CULLOM. I want to add to what the Senator has said that I tried very hard to bring about some sort of system by which an Architect could be chosen without going through that performance, because no first-class architect would agree to it. The result is that we have got the kind of a man who has been described—I do not know who he is—and no community as to which a bill has passed for the erection of a first-class public building is willing to trust to the Supervising Architect to build it. So it is in Chicago. We have an architect for the public building there who is a first-class architect, and he is in charge of that building because, so far as I was concerned, and so far as the people there were concerned, we were unwilling to leave it in the hands of an architect such as was usually selected by whoever might be the Secretary of the Treasury.

So I agree with all that has been said about this matter, and I sincerely hope that some of these days we may agree upon a plan that will result in securing an architect who is capable of taking charge of public buildings and constructing them within a reasonable time and in a proper way.

Mr. GALLINGER. Or else abolish the office.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes; or else abolish the office. I agree to that.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, judging from the declarations made in the Senate occasionally, and those made by my good friend from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], and those made in another body not a thousand miles distant, the civil-service law must be a terrible failure, for all the sins of maladministration are charged to that law. I want to defend that law, although it may not need a defense. It is not the civil-service law, I say to my friend from New Hampshire, that is to blame for a Supervising Architect being subjected to such an examination under it, but it is the President of the United States.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not know that I go that far in agreeing with my friend, but on general principles I agree with him that it is somebody outside of the law. I have never very seriously attacked the original civil-service law; in fact, I am in favor of it.

Mr. COCKRELL. All right.

Mr. GALLINGER. But what I have attacked has been this aggression, this reaching out, this grasping of power and bringing under the law classes and individuals who, in my judgment, never were intended to be included in the law and never ought to have been included in it.

Mr. COCKRELL. In that I heartily agree with the Senator from New Hampshire. He is exactly right. It is not the law, but it is the executive authority which takes these places and puts them within the provisions of the law. It is within the hands of the President at this moment to make any change he chooses.

Mr. ALLISON. Will the Senator inform the Senate when the Supervising Architect of the Treasury was placed under the civil-service law?

Mr. COCKRELL. I have no idea when, and it is a matter of profound indifference to me whether it was done by the predecessor of the present incumbent of the Presidential office or done by the present incumbent. By whomsoever done, it was unnecessary and unjustifiable, in my opinion.

Mr. GALLINGER. It was done for the first time, I will say to the Senator, when the present incumbent of the Supervising Architect's Office received his appointment. I know that from the fact that a friend of mine, a very distinguished architect, came here seeking that position, and, to his surprise, he found that he had to go through a civil-service examination.

Mr. COCKRELL. When was the present Supervising Architect appointed?

Mr. GALLINGER. I should say two or three years ago, I think, as I remember the matter.

Mr. CULLOM. This situation, I think, prevailed under the previous Administration, but I am not sure when it began.

Mr. GALLINGER. It never prevailed before the appointment of the present incumbent, I will say to the Senator, whenever that may have been.

Mr. COCKRELL. But the present incumbent, my recollection is, was appointed by the present President of the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. As I understand, he was appointed under an order spreading the blanket of the civil-service law over the Office of Supervising Architect.

Mr. COCKRELL. Under President Cleveland's order?

Mr. ALLISON. I think so.

Mr. COCKRELL. Then it was the duty of the present incumbent of the Presidential office, if he did not approve of that order, to refuse to carry it out, to rescind it. The orders of one President, under the civil-service law, have no binding force upon his successor, and his successor has ample authority to make any change or modification he may desire.

Mr. President, I desire to express my hearty approval of what the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has said in regard to the administration of the civil-service law. The order extending the operation of that law to its present scope is, in my opinion, the most deleterious action which could have been taken. The idea of putting a messenger, or a watchman, or a laborer, or a copyist, or a cook, or any employee of that kind under the civil-service law is to me supremely ridiculous. I see no justification for it. The selection of an officer of the character necessary to fill the position of Supervising Architect, with all his responsibility, should never be left to a mere technical examination. It is too important an office for that. There are millions and hundreds of millions of dollars intrusted to his expenditure, and in the large cities where public buildings have been authorized they are commenced and they are hardly ever completed. Before such buildings are completed they run almost through two or three Administrations. That is not done in the private affairs of individuals and corporations and bodies that erect large buildings, and there is no reason why it should be done by the Treasury Department of the United States.

It is just as easy in these buildings to draw the plans and specifications entire for the whole work, let it out by contract, and have it completed within a given time as it is to do it by piecemeal. Now a contract is let out for a part of a building, and when that part is done then a contract will be let out for another part of it, and so it goes, one part waiting upon another, instead of having a contract made such as can be made and such as is made by individuals and corporations in the construction of great buildings.

If there is not a change for the better, I shall insist that we devise some other plan of constructing public buildings than the plan we have pursued, which has proved such an ignominious and disgraceful failure.

Mr. STEWART. Mr. President, I never have discussed the civil-service law, but during the last twelve years I have heard it discussed almost every week, certainly every month, and sometimes every day. Senators get up and say that the law is all right, that it is a very good law, but it is always badly executed. A law that is always badly executed, a law that nobody can execute satisfactorily to the public, must be a very peculiar law.

The law has many defects, but the fundamental defect in this law is the secrecy with which it can be executed. I do not care what law you put upon the statute book, if the operations under it can not be viewed or understood by the public, if it is a secret operation, it will grow into corruption. That is human nature.

It is said that the examinations under this law are not honestly carried out. To say that is a reflection upon those who execute the law. There never was a system in human affairs which was secret, which conferred office or property upon men through secret operations, which did not grow into corruption; and I do not believe while human nature remains the same as it is now that this system of examination and arrangement, whereby persons can come under the civil-service law and get into Government employment, will be honestly administered or can be honestly administered. It is impossible from the very nature of things. Men will be dismissed who ought not to be dismissed. They will be dismissed under the pretense that there is no employment for them and others will be put in their places. That has been done by all Administrations.

Sometimes we find two or three hundred good clerks discharged because it is said there is no employment for them; but you go down to the Departments where they were employed and you find that others have got their places. In many cases worthy clerks have been reduced after they have won their way up, and, while they are doing the work, new clerks who have been appointed and who are occupying higher places are unable to do the work. In the very nature of the case, so much secrecy will lead to bad results; and it can not be prevented.

Another advantage is that of keeping people in office or having a pretext for keeping them in by spreading this law over them. You hear every Administration complained of. You hear it constantly; and it will always occur so long as this uncertain secret system prevails. We do not want any such secret system in our Government. It is against the genius of our institutions; it is unfair; it does not secure the best service.

Everybody says the way the law is administered is bad, but there is something good about the law itself. Why was the law passed? It was because there was a demand for something of the kind in the public press, and those who were out of power raised such a storm in favor of what they called "the merit system" that the politicians were afraid to criticise it; and when anybody does criticise it or the manipulators in office, the people who want to deprive others of influence will at once pounce upon them through the newspapers.

I do not believe this system is as good as the one it supplanted. That system had defects, and its main defect was the secrecy connected with it. When members of Congress recommended individuals for office, their recommendations were not submitted to the public. They were often verbal. If members of Congress were allowed to nominate the different officers, if those nominations were made public, and there was a period of thirty days in which they might be considered, so that protests might be made against such appointments by persons who believed the nominees were unfit, and then the Departments should decide, without any verbal communication between members of Congress and the Departments, all this scandal about officers would be entirely removed, or at least would be so modified as to be harmless.

I believe that members of Congress are the best judges of the qualifications of officers in their districts. They know the men best; and if they were held to public accountability, good members of Congress would be elected and they would be on a more independent basis than they are now. They should nominate, and the nominations should be published in the respective districts, so that the people would know all about them. If members of Congress were held to such accountability, we should have better government, better selections, and better officers. The incompetent and inefficient persons who come in under the civil-service law are too numerous to contemplate. Talk to the head of any Department, and he will tell you that.

I say the administration under the system is just as good as we could expect it to be. Those possessing executive authority do just as we would naturally suppose they would do. They grasp for power under the law, which affords them a shield, and the executive officer is enabled to cover his appointees with this blanket. They all do it. Our Executives have not been bad men. In ordinary business they have been alwayshonest men, but still this law is a temptation to do wrong, to circumvent somebody. If it is so at the top, what do you expect it is down at the bottom, where the subs are to determine in secret whether or not men are qualified for office?

What can you expect of them if you complain of the Chief Executive using his office to cover up and keep in power his friends? If he will do it, do you not suppose those below him, into whose hand no man can look and whose reasons no man can understand—for the work is done entirely in secret—will do wrong? Of course they will. The law invites it. It invites people to follow the instincts of human nature and covers them with a blanket of secrecy, so that they can indulge their desire for power and favoritism. The law ought to be openly executed, publicly executed, and it can not be publicly executed when it is full of secrecy. It is a bad law in a republic.

I am opposed to the civil-service law. I believe it has done more harm than good, and will continue to injure the Government, injure the service, so long as it remains on the statute books, building up an aristocracy of incompetents in the Departments, furnishing a cloak for keeping them in and furnishing machinery whereby suspicion is thrown upon the Departments all the while. Every man you meet complains of the injustice of the Departments, the injustice of the Administration. There is more heartburning against this Government, more keenly felt injury, on account of the operations of this statute than from any other statute. I hope the time will come when there will be courage enough to take hold of this subject and apply reforms so pressingly necessary to avoid these constant complaints on every side. It is said, "The law is good, but they do not execute it." The execution is just as good as the law is, and the execution of it is just as good as human nature is when it has a chance to do wrong without detection.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, there is no amendment before the Senate, and I hope we may now proceed with the reading of the bill.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, I wish to say one word in relation to the Supervising Architect; not to criticise civil-service reform or to criticise the qualifications of the Supervising Architect. I do not pretend to know anything about his qualifications, but it is the result to which I desire to direct attention. A tree is known by its wood or the fruit it bears.

Congress has appropriated a million and some odd hundred thousand dollars for a site for a building in the city and county of San Francisco. The building is to cost two or three million dollars or more. It is to contain the post-office, it is to hold the land office, the subtreasury, the different courts of California, and the circuit court in that city. The building should be an ornament to the city and a credit to the Government. The plans have been submitted to the judges who compose that circuit and judicial district, which embraces four States and three Territories. Their criticism of the plan is that it is not suited for the purposes of a court room; that the library room, the offices of the marshal, and the general arrangements of the building are such that they are not suitable to be occupied by our United States courts.

The plan was submitted to architects in San Francisco, and they revised it and made an estimate of the cost of changing the interior part of the building, and the estimate of its cost. That was submitted to the Supervising Architect in this city. He went over it and said he knew what they required better than the people did themselves. Yet these judges are appointed for life; they hold their positions, not as the result of civil-service examination, but by reason of their judicial knowledge, by reason of their high character and standing as lawyers and citizens of the country. They will now have jurisdiction of our new possessions in the Pacific Ocean as well as of Alaska and Arizona, the States of Washington, Oregon, and California. Yet the Supervising Architect, although they have sat upon the bench for years and years, says they do not know what kind of a court room they should occupy; that they have no knowledge of the requirements of the jury rooms, of the waiting rooms, of the marshal's room or the library; but they must take this plan, the Architect says, without any back talk.

Our people felt so wrought up and indignant at this action that they have said, "We will ourselves raise a fund and donate it to the Government for the purpose of planning a building whose exterior shall be pleasing to the eye and which shall compare favorably with the private buildings erected by private capital in our city. We will have the plan so arranged—we will have the architect so arrange the different court rooms, that they will be acceptable to the judges, convenient to the jurors and the litigants who there assemble from time to time to have their cases adjudicated." I have a picture of the building proposed, as it appears in the report of the Supervising Architect. I submit it to any impartial critic. I want to say parenthetically, although perhaps it is not necessary for me to say so, that I am not versed in architecture. Yet I know Grecian from Gothic; I know Byzantine from Moorish architecture; but I know, what is better than all, that which is agreeable and pleasing to the sight and the senses.

There are in San Francisco one thousand buildings whose exterior, as compared with the proposed building, are as a painting by one of the masters compared to a chromo, and yet we must take this. We can appropriate the money for this purpose, but the building must be constructed against the protest of the judges of the court, against the protest of our people. The building must be thus constructed, and we must make appropriations for it, because the Supervising Architect, who has passed a civil-service examination, says he knows what we want.

Mr. TILLMAN (examining picture). Is this the picture of the building which the Senator from California has so eloquently described?

Mr. PERKINS. That is the picture. It is in the Supervising Architect's report.

Mr. TILLMAN. It looks like a cotton factory.

Mr. PERKINS. Our jail in San Francisco is a pleasant picture as compared with that. We have a half dozen power houses that generate power to run printing presses more beautiful to the eye than that splendid picture here, submitted as a work of art by this architect.

I did not intend to say anything about this matter at the present time, as it is not the time or the occasion, but I could not resist, after hearing the remarks of my friend the Senator from New Hampshire. At the proper time I shall propose that the people of San Francisco, public spirited as they are, may raise the money by public subscription to pay an architect, one of our architects in San Francisco, who has grown up from an office boy to his present high position, and who has constructed some of those magnificent buildings, to design a building. The design shall not cost the Government a cent. I hope when the proper time comes that those of you who have looked at the picture of this beautiful structure will join me in saying that such a monstrosity shall not be erected in the great metropolis of the Pacific coast, where the Pacific Ocean sings the sunset song of the nation.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the reading of the bill will be proceeded with. There is no amendment pending before the Senate.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I have no word of criticism of the present occupant of the office of Supervising Architect of the Treasury. I know nothing of him. I take it for granted he is as competent a man as can be had for the compensation allowed for this office, $4,500 per annum. I had nothing to do with the mode of his appointment and I have no criticism to make upon it. But I think it would be a wise and proper thing if Congress at this session were to increase the compensation of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, and so enable the President or the Secretary of the Treasury, without regard to the technical examination by the Civil Service Commission, to appoint a proper man to that position, with sufficient power to control his office. I see no reason why we should not do it. I believe in economy at the right places.

Mr. President, this bill bristles from the first chapter to the last with increased appropriations for clerks. How many new men are provided for I do not know, and I think it would be a very difficult matter for any Senator or member to ascertain just the number of small offices it is proposed to increase.

The organization of the Office of the Supervising Architect has been imperfect for a long time. It is imperfect now. It stands with the second executive office in control held by a man whom the Secretary of the Treasury can not reach directly, nor can he select his successor without reference to examination.

I assert without fear of contradiction that there are but few men, sufficiently skilled, who would submit themselves to technical examination before the appointment was tendered to them. It is an embarrassment to the Government. I happen to be informed from some familiarity with that office, and I do not hesitate to say now, upon the floor of the Senate, that the man who is in charge of the executive branch of it—I do not mean the Architect, but his assistant—if he were in my employ, would not remain five minutes. Yet he is held there because he is under the civil service. That is one reason. There may be others of a general and political nature.

It is known to everybody that no such mismanagement has taken place in any other Department of the Government. Yet in this very bill you have an extraordinary provision, such as ought not to be found in any appropriation bill for any of these offices. It provides that the expenditures on account of those who will be employed in providing plans and for the superintendence of these buildings shall be paid out of the general fund, the appropriation for public buildings not to exceed $200,000 per annum. It is a lump appropriation. It is true it is always provided that the Secretary of the Treasury shall in his annual estimate report to Congress the number of men and the compensation of the persons so employed. But that ought to be placed upon a business basis, as every other Department of the Government is placed, making him estimate for the number of clerks, the number of draftsmen, the number of engineers he desires to employ, and let us appropriate for them and place them all under the Secretary of the Treasury, and then hold him responsible for the work.

I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill, as we are proceeding here to increase the number of officers, how many clerks and messengers and other small employees have we increased in this bill over last year, if he has the data before him?

Mr. CULLOM. As the Senator from Maryland makes an inquiry of me, I can read the report which has been made in connection with the bill. It does not give fully the number of clerks increased, but the statement is as follows:

Amount of estimates for 1900	$24,335,005.86
Amount of House bill	23,229,937.46
Increase recommended by Senate committee (net)	171,040.00
Amount as reported to the Senate	23,400,977.46

Then the increases by the Senate are as follows:

Senate	$3,400
Capitol police	17,280
House of Representatives	3,000
Library of Congress (net)	250
Executive Office	800
Department of State	7,500

So it goes on to state the increases. I do not know whether the Senator from Maryland desires that I should read all of the report.

Mr. GORMAN. No.

Mr. CULLOM. As to salaries increased, there are 20 by the House, concurred in by the Senate, making $5,120; 8 salaries increased by the Senate committee, amounting to $4,050; total salaries increased, 28; amount, $9,170; 4 salaries reduced by the House and concurred in by the Senate committee; net increase, 24 in number. There is what the Senator desires to know. The net increase in clerks is 24 in number, and it amounts to $8,470. Then I have a large number of other statements in connection with the subject, but there are very few increases of salary. There is a considerable increase in the number of clerks, as the result of appeals made by the heads of Departments and by the chiefs of bureaus, showing the condition of the work and the necessity for greater service.

As the Senator from Maryland is himself a member of the committee, I think he knows that the subcommittee and the full committee have tried to keep down the expenses of the Government in the branches to which this bill refers as much as we could, but we could not consistently close our eyes and ears to the statements of conditions in these Departments which seemed to demand that they should have more force or get further behind with the work as the result of duties that have come upon the Government within the last year. Is that satisfactory to the Senator?

Mr. GORMAN. I am very much indebted to the Senator from Illinois, so far as he has gone. That we have been increasing the compensation of some of the clerks and other officers already employed to the number the Senator has stated, I am aware. But the increased number of clerks and small offices authorized under the bill far exceeds, in my judgment, the number stated by the distinguished Senator from Illinois for the reason that we have provisions covering these appointments. Take the one before us now, where the number of clerks to be employed does not appear. It says:

That the expenditures on this account—

In the Architect's Office for the employment of persons—shall not exceed during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1900, $200,000.

How many that will employ is a matter as to which we can not form an estimate. I am aware that there is great pressure, and Congress has treated it liberally, for temporary clerks in the Departments, particularly the War Department and the Navy Department and the Treasury Department, growing out, as one of the provisions proclaims, of the conditions brought on by the war with Spain. A little later on as we proceed with this measure we will have to make provision for an extraordinary number of clerks for the Departments to adjust the accounts which are being kept of the collection of revenue in Cuba and Porto Rico, and, I suppose, in the Philippines. So we are going to have—we are beginning it now; we have begun it with a lump appropriation, growing out of the civil administration of these colonies of ours—large appropriations. Then will come the specific appropriations for them, all of which will swell up this bill. It is larger now than any bill of like character that has ever been presented to the American Congress.

Mr. CULLOM. The amount reported by the Senate committee is $23,400,977.46.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes; it is a greater amount than we have had at any time since 1886, and then it was $21,376,708.70. Now it is nearly $24,000,000. We have laid the foundation for entering upon a system which is largely to increase the appropriations from year to year. If it continues at the same ratio in which it has gone on for the last six months, I suppose the next session of Congress will present a bill of $26,000,000, or about $26,000,000. While doing all this, of which no complaint is to be made now, except to note the fact——

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator from Maryland allow me to interrupt him? The war created the necessity for some additional expense, clerical and all that.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes; the war has caused an expenditure of about $400,000,000 so far.

Mr. SPOONER. I mean that some of the items in the pending bill are attributable to that cause.

Mr. GORMAN. As a matter of course. We have liberally provided for them and have not finished providing for them, for I have no doubt that the Senator from Illinois a little later on will bring in another provision which will be necessary, growing out of our superintendence and our management of the business of the islands nearest to us—Cuba and Porto Rico. That will all come. It comes with an increased amount every time a new proposition is made.

Mr. FAULKNER. Is it not a fact that the increases caused by the recent war, for which appropriations are made in this bill, are really permanent and not temporary increases?

Mr. GORMAN. Part of these expenditures are permanent. How long they are to continue I do not know, but on the face of the papers and the estimates they are of a temporary nature. How long are we to continue the possession? I say to the Senator from West Virginia that the creation of these offices are all new, and in addition to that, as to the temporary appropriations—at least, I trust they are temporary—I do not know how long they are to continue. I think no man living can know. The auditing of every account of every military officer in Cuba has to be done. We are collecting all the revenues of that island. We have a most extraordinary condition of affairs for this country, that the War Department and its officers are supervising the customs and collecting the revenue and disbursing the money, I suppose, as they may be ordered. The accounts are to be audited by the Auditor of the Treasury for the War, State, and Navy Departments, and, of course, we are appropriating money to audit these accounts.

I do not know anything about the general scheme upon which we have entered. It is so thoroughly new to the American people and to the consideration of Congress that I confess I am in the condition of the gentleman who wanted to know where he was at. I confess that I do not know where the money in the Treasury of the United States, the money of the people of the United States, is going or how it is getting out of the Treasury. If money comes in, I am not aware of that fact, but I do know that we are called upon here, by the very provisions of this bill, to take the money of the people of the United States to pay for the auditing of accounts of money collected, as it is held, for the people who reside in the island of Cuba. Why this auditing and the expense of it should not be charged directly to the revenues that are being collected in the island I do not know. I believe that this case, like all others, will grow, taking from our Treasury money to pay for the clerks and auditors, and it will run up until we have another separate department for the adjustment of the accounts of all these islands that have come within our jurisdiction.

Now, while we are doing all that, spending our money liberally—to what extent to-day I do not know, and I am sure the Senator from Illinois can not know—we are confronted with a matter which comes home to our own people and in which everybody is interested. Are we to continue this system in the Treasury Department, lame and impotent as it is, and make no proper provision for the Architect of the Treasury and his assistants, or for putting it upon a business basis? I only wanted to call attention to the fact. I know the decree has gone forth. As I have stated heretofore, I have no criticisms to make. I call attention to the fact that we have entered into an entirely new line of action and thought in doing it. I should like to see greater attention paid to affairs in which the American people are so directly interested and as to which they have, for the time being, permitted the branch of the Government which assumes control of all these other matters to go on and pay out of our revenues the cost of collecting taxes and revenues in the island of Cuba.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, there is no amendment before the Senate, and I shall therefore say only a word. I appreciate the remarks of the Senator from Maryland, that when these appropriations are made it is difficult to cut them off, even after the occasion for them has in any degree passed away. The bill in many of its provisions has tried to anticipate the time when these extraordinary expenditures of money for clerks, etc., shall pass away. There are provisions limiting the appropriations to a given time. But we find ourselves involved in extra expenses on account of the war, on account of the general situation which is new, and which we all hope, at least, will pass by in a very short time, when much of the expenditures provided for in the pending bill for clerk hire and for other purposes to carry on the Government shall have passed away.

As to the Architect's Office, we all agree that that has been badly managed and that there ought to be a new law providing for the conduct of that office and getting rid of the present mode of selecting the Architect. I do not know who is in the office now, and if I have said anything which reflects upon any individual I hope it may be understood that I do not know the gentleman. I have had no occasion to have anything to do with the office during the present Administration, or at least since a very short time after the Administration came in, when I tried to bring about a general arrangement and secure the appointment of some man who would not have to go through a civil-service examination, because the very best architects in the country declined to do that.

Now, Mr. President, I hope the reading of the bill will be proceeded with.

Mr. COCKRELL. In response to what the Senator from Illinois said, I will state that neither do I know the Supervising Architect. I do not even know his name. I do not know that I ever heard it.

Mr. CULLOM. Nor I either.

Mr. COCKRELL. What I have said has no reference to him personally, but it is to the system of administration that has existed there ever since I have known the office.

Mr. CULLOM. That is my feeling about it.

Mr. COCKRELL. It has been one continuous system, and no one has made any improvement upon it.

The reading of the bill was resumed at line 13, page 35. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Office of Comptroller of the Treasury," on page 35, line 20, to increase the number of expert accountants from two to four; in line 21, to increase the number of clerks of class 4, from three to four; in line 22, after the word "two," to insert "typewriter and copyist, $1,000;" and in line 24, to increase the total appropriation for the Office of Comptroller of the Treasury from $44,760 to $51,560.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed; and the next paragraph was read, as follows:

Clerks and other employees provided for for the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury and for the offices of the six Auditors of the Treasury for the several Executive Departments shall be exclusively engaged on the work of said offices from the passage of this act and until the close of the fiscal year 1900.

Mr. CULLOM. I desire to amend the paragraph at the top of page 36 so as to read:

Clerks and other employees provided for the offices of the Comptroller of the Treasury and of the six Auditors of the Treasury for the several Executive Departments, etc.

I move to strike out "for" where it occurs the second time in line 1 and to add the letter "s" to the word "office," in the same line, striking out the words "for the offices," in the second line.

The SECRETARY. In line 1, page 36, strike out the word "for" where it last appears; in the same line strike out the word "office" and insert the word "offices;" and in line 2 strike out the words "for the offices;" so as to make the paragraph read:

Clerks and other employees provided for the offices of the Comptroller of the Treasury and of the six Auditors of the Treasury for the several Executive Departments shall be exclusively engaged on the work of said offices from the passage of this act and until the close of the fiscal year 1900.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator from Illinois will agree to strike out the entire provision embraced in lines 1 to 6. It is the first time that the provision has appeared in the law. It is an entirely new provision, and prohibits the transfer of clerks from one office to another. I do not know where it originated.

Mr. CULLOM. The purpose of the amendment I have suggested is to allow transfers between the office of the Comptroller and the offices of the six Auditors.

Mr. GORMAN. I know. I do not know where this provision comes from, but here is a prohibition generally upon the transfer of clerks.

Mr. CULLOM. Only as between themselves.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes, as between themselves; but that, I think, is a very unwise provision. Take the matter that we just passed through—the issuing of the bonds. Three hundred or four hundred clerks were employed, and the Secretary of the Treasury, under the general law, had a right to detail for the work skilled men whom he knew to be capable. So with the auditing of some of these accounts. Those skilled clerks were placed at the head of divisions which were composed of the new and untried clerks who came in. It seems to me there ought not to be any restriction placed on the head of a great Department to limit his right to transfer clerks to any office. If he finds a man in the Treasurer's office who is skilled in a particular branch, and it is necessary to have him audit the accounts in the Post-Office Department or the War Department, he should be free to make the assignment. It does seem to me that we had better leave the matter in the discretion of the Cabinet officers without this provision. It never has appeared before, and the result will be, I fear, that you will be compelled a little later on to increase the number of clerks.

Mr. CULLOM. I am unable to see that the provision which the Senator desires stricken out interferes with any part of the administration of the Treasury Department except as between the Comptroller of the Treasury and the several Auditors.

Mr. GORMAN. Very good.

Mr. CULLOM. The purpose is to allow the transfer as between themselves, so that they can catch up with their work in the different Auditors' offices and in the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury. I think it is a good provision as far as that goes.

Mr. GORMAN. It is restrictive. It provides, as the Senator proposes to modify it, that the clerks in the Office of the Comptroller of the Treasury and in the offices of the six Auditors shall be engaged exclusively on the work of one of those offices.

Mr. CULLOM. Yes; until the close of 1900.

Mr. GORMAN. Very good; until the close of 1900. I say that is a restriction upon the head of the Treasury Department that ought not, in my judgment, to be made by Congress as an ironclad rule. It is a matter which ought to be left to the head of that Department. He may have a skilled man in the Comptroller's Office whom he desires to put into the customs division temporarily or to assign to look after the adjustment of the accounts that are now coming up through the War Department, and he, of course, will exercise fair judgment, as I take it. I do not see any reason in the world except that two heads, the Auditor for the Post-Office Department and the Comptroller, may not want to be interfered with by their chief. I think it is unsafe legislation.

Mr. CULLOM. For the sake of looking into it more thoroughly I will consent to the paragraph going out of the bill.

Mr. GORMAN. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is moved to strike out from line 1 to line 6, inclusive, on page 36, in the following words:

Clerks and other employees provided for for the office of the Comptroller of the Treasury and for the offices of the six Auditors of the Treasury for the several Executive Departments shall be exclusively engaged on the work of said offices from the passage of this act and until the close of the fiscal year 1900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the clause "For Office of Auditor for Treasury Department," on page 36, line 13, after the word "each," to strike out "one clerk, $900" and insert "three clerks, at $900 each;" and in line 19, to increase the total appropriation for Office of Auditor for Treasury Department from $118,200 to $120,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause "For Office of Auditor for War Department," on page 37, line 10, to increase the number of clerks at $900 each from two to five; and in line 14, to increase the total appropriation for Office of Auditor for War Department from $297,200 to $299,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 24, page 37.

Mr. CULLOM. By direction of the committee I move to insert the following paragraph at the end of line 24:

For the temporary employment of such additional clerks and messengers as in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury may be required in the Office of the Auditor for the War Department for the prompt and efficient examination and auditing of the accounts of revenues collected and disbursed by military authorities in the West India islands occupied by the United States forces, $25,000, to be available from and after April 1, 1900: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall on the first Monday in January, 1901, report to Congress the number of persons employed and the amount paid to each under this appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not object to it, but I ask that the amendment may be read again. We have already one provision there.

The amendment was again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1575) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce."

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside until the disposition of the pending appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none. The unfinished business will be temporarily laid aside.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the clause for "Office of Auditor for Navy Department," on page 38, line 8, to increase the number of clerks at $900 each from 2 to 5, and in line 11 to increase the total appropriation for Office of Auditor for Navy Department from $62,720 to $65,420.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause for "Office of Auditor for Interior Department," on page 39, line 2, to increase the number of clerks at $900 each from 3 to 7, and in line 6 to increase the total appropriation for Office of Auditor for Interior Department from $157,040 to $160,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause for "Office of Auditor for the Post-Office Department," on page 39, line 25, to increase the number of clerks of class 1 from 90 to 92; on page 40, line 1, to increase the number of clerks at $1,000 each from 68 to 70, and in the same line to increase the number of clerks at $900 each from 11 to 16; in line 5 to increase the number of money-order assorters at $720 each from 22 to 23, and in line 10 to increase the total appropriation for Office of Auditor for Post-Office Department from $524,560 to $534,180.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause for "Office of the Treasurer," on page 41, line 8, to increase the number of clerks of class 2 from 14 to 16 and in line 20 to increase the total appropriation for Office of the Treasurer from $288,441.60 to $291,241.60.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause for "Office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue," on page 44, line 12, to increase the number of clerks at $900 each from 37 to 40, and in line 14 to increase the total appropriation for Office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue from $254,940 to $257,640.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause making appropriations "For Bureau of Immigration," on page 50, line 2, after the word "dollars," to insert "clerk of class 1:" and in line 8 to increase the total appropriation for the Bureau of Immigration from $12,934.44 to $14,134.44.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of the clause, from line 7 to line 23, on page 52.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not understand the last paragraph. I should like to have the Secretary read it again.

The Secretary read as follows:

For washing and hemming towels, for the purchase of awnings and fixtures, window shades and fixtures, alcohol, benzine, turpentine, varnish, baskets, belting, bellows, bowls, brooms, buckets, brushes, canvas, crash, cloth, chamois skins, cotton waste, door and window fasteners, dusters, flower garden, street, and engine hose, lace leather, lye, nails, oils, plants, picks, pitchers, powders, stencil plates, hand stamps and repairs of same, stamp ink, spittoons, soap, matches, match safes, sponges, tacks, traps, thermometers, tools, towels, towel racks, tumblers, wire, zinc, and for black, smithing, repairs of machinery, removal of rubbish, sharpening tools, advertising for proposals, and for sales at public auction in Washington, D. C., of condemned property belonging to the Treasury Department, payment of auctioneer fees, and purchase of other absolutely necessary articles, $8,000.

Mr. ALLEN. Is that an appropriation relating to the office of the Inspector-General of the Steamboat-Inspection Service?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is under the following head:

For contingent expenses of the Treasury Department, including all buildings under control of the Treasury in Washington, D. C.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not know, of course, what this paragraph means, but it seems to go into details quite extensively and to provide for a great many things for the various subordinate bureaus of the Treasury Department. I think it ought to be again emphasized, so that the people of the United States who read the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and who pay the taxes will be fully informed as to where their money goes, and will understand, if any surplus money comes into the Treasury, the debts of the Government are not paid with it, but that the money is expended—

For washing and hemming towels, for the purchase of awnings and fixtures, window shades and fixtures, alcohol—

It does not say in exactly what form, and I do not know whether it is pure alcohol or whether it is the different forms in which it appears in the market—

benzine, turpentine, varnish, baskets, belting, bellows, bowls, brooms, buckets, brushes, canvas, crash, cloth, chamois skins, cotton waste, door and window fasteners, dusters, flower garden, street, and engine hose, lace leather, lye, nails, oils, plants—

I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa what kind of plants these are?

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Nebraska has spoken so quietly that I did not quite catch his meaning.

Mr. ALLEN. I notice one of the items provided for in this paragraph is for the purchase of plants.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. ALLEN. And I wanted to know what kind of plants they are to be, whether ornamental house plants for the edification of clerks and the higher officers or whether they are something that are useful and necessary?

Mr. ALLISON. I understand that they are plants that are used in small spaces about the Treasury Department, and for public purposes.

Mr. ALLEN. That is, ordinary house plants, little shrubs, flowers, etc.?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir: that is what I understand.

Mr. ALLEN. I notice also——

Mr. CHANDLER. What clause of the bill is the Senator from Nebraska commenting upon, may I ask?

Mr. ALLEN. I am commenting upon the clause from line 7 to line 23 on page 52 of this bill.

I notice also, Mr. President, that the bill provides for "picks." I do not know whether they are toothpicks or what they are.

Mr. CHANDLER. "Picks" are undoubtedly to be used in weather of this kind. We do not have much such weather, but occasionally it is necessary to have picks.

Mr. ALLEN. I suggest to the Senator from New Hampshire that the word is very indefinite. There are a great many kinds of picks. There are picks and pickaxes.

Mr. CHANDLER. This means ice picks, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. ALLEN. I did not know but that it meant toothpicks. Then it continues:

Pitchers, powders—

That word "powders" is very suspicious. What is it, Mr. President?

Mr. ALLISON. It does look suspicious, Mr. President, but it has been in this bill for twenty years; even, I think—back to the time when the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. ALLEN. What kind of "powders" are these? I should like to have the Senator from Iowa explain.

Mr. ALLISON. I suppose they are powders for cleansing.

Mr. CHANDLER and Mr. GORMAN. Dover's powders. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. Does that mean insect powder, gunpowder, or what?

Mr. ALLISON. I take it they are insect powders—necessary things to maintain the purity of the rooms in that building.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Maryland suggests that they might possibly be Dover's powders.

Mr. ALLISON. It is possible, but I do not think so.

Mr. ALLEN. I suppose these powders are to be used by the clerks, of course.

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator wish to strike out "powders?" I think it will be unwise to do it.

Mr. ALLEN. I am in the very laudable occupation of seeking knowledge from those who possess it, and I have called upon the Senator from Iowa for that reason.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no doubt they are powders that are used in cleansing and keeping clean the apartments in the building. I suppose so, at least.

Mr. ALLEN. Why not provide for an apothecary shop there, and let the word "powders" go out?

Mr. ALLISON. Probably there is not room for an apothecary shop there.

Mr. ALLEN. The clause continues:

Stencil plates, hand stamps, and repairs of same, stamp ink, spittoons—

I admit that the spittoons are necessary [laughter]—

soap, matches, match safes, sponges, tacks, traps—

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator ought to dwell upon that word "traps." [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. There are a great many kinds of traps. There are some political traps.

Mr. ALLISON. I think those are included. [Laughter.]

Mr. ALLEN. I have no doubt of it, but I do not want any unwary constituent of mine to be caught in them.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator will notice also that "towels" are provided for.

Mr. ALLEN. If the towels and soap and sponges were all put together and could be used for political purposes, I have no doubt they would be necessary there. Then we find—

Thermometers, tools, towels, towel racks, tumblers—

There is a suspicious word, "tumblers"—

wire, zinc, and for blacksmithing, repairs of machinery, removal of rubbish, sharpening tools, advertising for proposals, and for sales at public auction in Washington, D. C., of condemned property belonging to the Treasury Department, payment of auctioneer fees, and purchase of other absolutely necessary articles.

That is still more suspicious. But, Mr. President, speaking seriously of this matter—and I desire to speak seriously if I am capable of doing so—it does seem to me as though we were going into the details here quite extensively, and it does seem to me that many of these things, while they are little things and while possibly they do not cost much, are absolutely useless, and their allowance is the setting of a bad example.

There are, however, certain questions which I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa, and which I think ought to be answered, and on which the country ought to have some information. What is the aggregate increase of clerks under this bill over the same bill of a year ago?

Mr. ALLISON. I have not the exact figures before me, but they are on the table, and I will submit them later. There are but few increases of clerks, except those temporary clerks, the necessity for whom has arisen owing to the war with Spain.

Mr. ALLEN. I ought to have embraced in my question the increase of employees and officers as well as clerks.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER. If the Senator from Iowa will allow me, a while ago, while the Senator was probably not in the Chamber, that question was asked by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] then in charge of the bill, and his explanation, after consulting the data given him by the clerk of the committee, was that the increase in the number of clerks was 24, I believe, and the aggregate increase of expenditure on that account was about $8,000.

Mr. ALLISON. I have not the report of the committee now before me.

Mr. ALLEN. I did not understand the statement to embrace the total increase of clerks, additional officers, and other persons to be given employment under the terms of this bill. I think the Senator from Illinois answered that question technically as applied to clerks alone, but I understand——

Mr. ALLISON. I will speak in a general sense now, because I do not have before me the increases in detail; but there are very few increases of clerks provided for in the bill, except the continuance until March, 1900, of those temporary clerks who were authorized by the act of 1898 providing for temporary clerks in the different Departments on account of the war.

Mr. ALLEN. What difference is there between the total appropriations under this bill and the like bill of a year ago?

Mr. ALLISON. What is the increase?

Mr. ALLEN. Yes; what is the increase?

Mr. ALLISON. There is a printed statement accompanying the bill showing the increases made by the bill.

Mr. ALLEN. That statement has not, I think, been laid upon the tables of the Senators.

Mr. ALLISON. I have the statement before me now. The amount of the estimates for 1900 was $24,365,005.86. The amount appropriated by the bill as it came from the House of Representatives was $23,229,937.46. The increase recommended by the Senate committee is $171,040.

Mr. ALLEN. There is an increase, I see here, of about a million dollars.

Mr. ALLISON. The amount appropriated under the act of 1899 was $21,625,846.65; the amount of legislative, etc., items in other acts, $1,328,526.50. The total of the legislative, etc., appropriation bill for 1899, this current year, was $22,954,373.15. Then follow the changes recommended by the committee and the amounts appropriated by the bill as it came from the House in detail. This is Senate Report No. 1525 of this session.

Mr. ALLEN. In 1899 the total appropriation was $21,625,846.65, and this year the appropriation amounts to $22,954,373.15—quite an increase in the amount.

Mr. ALLISON. There is an increase by this bill over the bill for the year 1899 of $446,604.31.

Mr. ALLEN. I should judge it was a little more from this statement, but I have not figured up the amounts. However, there is something of an increase. Now, the question in my mind is, What has arisen to make this increase necessary?

Mr. ALLISON. The increase is largely because of the war with Spain. There are some other increases, such as increases in the Post-Office Department, arising out of the fact that we have had two very prosperous years in that Department, requiring an additional force. There is also a slight increase in the Patent Office, arising from the fact that the number of applications for patents has increased during the last year or two. I do not recall any other Department where there are increases in the number of clerks.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] calls my attention to the fact that there is an increase here of over $2,000,000 as compared with the bill for 1899.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not quite understand where the Senator from Maryland gets his figures. The appropriation for the year 1899 was $21,625,846.65. Then there were other legislative appropriations in other acts amounting to $1,328,526.50, making a total of $22,954,373.15.

Mr. CHILTON. Will any of those things be in other acts this year?

Mr. ALLISON. No, sir; they are all in this bill because they relate to supplemental appropriations for clerical force arising out of the war with Spain. If Senators will examine the pending bill with care, they will discover that there are no considerable increases, except as I have stated, unless they have been made necessary because of the war with Spain.

Mr. ALLEN. How could appropriations in this bill be increased by the war with Spain?

Mr. ALLISON. It is supposed that the force in the War Department and in the offices of the accounting officers of the Treasury Department will require until the 1st of March, 1900, to close up the accounts of the regiments mustered out, those that are being mustered out, and all the settlements arising out of the enormous expenditures of the war with Spain.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the fact—I can not give him the exact numbers, but relatively the numbers—that to-day, with only three volunteer corps in the field (and I do not know but two and one-half, a fraction of a corps), we have some twenty-odd volunteer major-generals, drawing a salary of $7,500 a year each from the Government. I say "twenty-odd," but that is possibly too large. Certainly, however, we have more than twenty brigadier-generals, while we have no earthly use for more than eight or ten. We have nearly seventy extra paymasters, and there is not to exceed, as I am told, four of them in the field doing anything. They are drawing $2,500 a year each from this Government for sitting around Washington and other places toasting their feet at a good fire and eating and drinking and making merry at the expense of the Government. We have over fifty assistant adjutants-general, as useless as two tails to a cat, with no occupation for them whatever. We have got captains and commissary-generals and majors and lieutenants galore, enough to furnish officers for nearly all the armies of the entire civilized world, and not a single step is being taken to-day to muster these men out of the service of the United States. I suppose all these men are being fostered and fed by the provisions of this bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Well, Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, I will say to him that I have no special knowledge respecting the utility of the major-generals, the brigadier-generals, the paymasters, the quartermasters, etc., but I take it they are all engaged in the work laid out for them about a year ago. But, however that may be, not one of them is provided for in this bill in any way. They are not mentioned anywhere in the bill. When the Army appropriation bill comes up for consideration, it will be pertinent to make inquiry as to the number of major generals and other military officers provided for and the necessity for such provision; but in this bill I assure the Senator no provision is made for the salaries of any one of them. This is wholly a bill providing for civilian employees in the Departments at Washington.

Mr. ALLEN. I thought, however, if the major-generals, the brigadier-generals, and the other officers were reduced in number, we might curtail the number of clerks over in the War Office, and therefore I made the suggestion, thinking that they might be provided for in this bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Indirectly perhaps that might be done in time, but the major-generals who are mustered out must have their accounts settled——

Mr. ALLEN. That is true.

Mr. ALLISON. And the paymasters must have their accounts settled, and they ought to be settled promptly.

Mr. ALLEN. That is true; but it does not take seventy extra paymasters to pay them off.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know whether the paymasters are in excess or not.

Mr. ALLEN. They are largely in excess.

Mr. ALLISON. I am glad to have the information.

Mr. ALLEN. And the adjutants-general are largely in excess of the number required.

Mr. ALLISON. I am also glad to have that information.

Mr. ALLEN. And the commissaries of subsistence are also largely in excess of the number required.

Mr. ALLISON. I know incidentally that regiments are being mustered out, and I suppose the major-generals, brigadier-generals, quartermasters, etc., are being mustered out correspondingly; but I do not know.

Mr. ALLEN. There are a number of those gentlemen without commands to-day; their commands are mustered out, and they are not mustered out.

Mr. ALLISON. I was not aware of that.

Mr. ALLEN. No doubt they will all be mustered out in time, but does it take a year after the mustering out of a brigade of troops to muster out its commander?

Mr. ALLISON. I should think not, but I do not know.

Mr. ALLEN. It strikes me it could be done in fifteen minutes, and his accounts settled in an hour.

Mr. ALLISON. I should think it would take more than an hour to settle the accounts.

Mr. ALLEN. Not if it were done as it ought to be done. Here is a whole regiment of clerks provided for in this bill that it would be absolutely unnecessary to provide for if the Government would attend to its duty in mustering out these men.

Mr. ALLISON. I should be glad to have the Senator point out where a regiment of clerks is provided for in this bill.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator says extra clerks were made necessary by the war. I admit that; and when I go to the War Department I see them; I see strange faces. The building is like a hive of bees; they swarm there.

Mr. ALLISON. They are very busy bees in that building.

Mr. ALLEN. Very busy, no doubt, paying some of these gentlemen their salaries who have no commands.

I simply wanted to make these observations about this bill. It was passing through very quietly; and whenever a bill passes the Senate without eliciting any objection or any comment, it is, to my mind, a very suspicious circumstance. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM] was in charge of the bill. The Senator from Illinois is a diplomat, as is my amiable friend from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. This bill has been framed in the Committee on Appropriations, and not a living soul has been called in, so far as I know, to be consulted with as respects any of its provisions. I am not speaking for myself. I do not expect to be consulted. My politics are of such a character as to exclude me, except under great stress. If my vote was needed to carry out some of these measures, I might be talked with a little; but I would not be invited into the sanctum of sanctorums, where all these great schemes of taxation and appropriation originate.

I want to make this observation: There is a settled, fixed, unalterable purpose to increase the expenses of this Government as far as the taxpayers will submit to it. There has never been the slightest attempt by Congress since I have occupied a seat in this Chamber to reduce taxation. When a few of us have talked in favor of pursuing the same business methods as respects the public business that a prudent business man would pursue in the conduct and preservation of his fortune, we have been looked upon as greenhorns, if we have not been absolutely characterized as such. Here is this Government owing millions and hundreds of millions of dollars. The national debt, the interest-bearing debt, is increasing by the hundreds of millions each year. Is there any thought upon the part of the Committee on Appropriations of meeting these obligations as they fall due and thus ridding the taxpayers of this country of the incubus of an interest-bearing debt? Not the slightest, so far as anybody knows. It gives no concern. Nobody is interested in that.
